Dear Editor: If I were to try to tell what we have not done in the work of the Church this year, it would take too much space; so I will tell what we have done, as that will not take so much room. Rev. H. A. Gatlin of the Mississippi Conference assisted the pastor in a meeting at Meehan, April 22-29. Brother Gatlin's messages of love and warning, backed by his strong personality, found their way to many hearts, and the result was a revival in the church that spread out over the entire community, bringing others into the great "sheepfold" of God. The earnestness with which he pleaded with the unsaved appealed to the church members, causing many to think of their duty as "soul-winners." We consider ourselves fortunate in having had Brother Gatlin with us.

The regular appointments at some of the churches have been marked by the demonstration of the Holy Spirit and souls have been saved.

The number of prayer meetings in the charge is increasing. The Sunday school at Meehan observed May 27 as Children's Day; the program was enjoyed by all. We ask all of the brethren to remember us in their prayers. —G. L. McNeece, P. C.

Logansport, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: We began our meeting at Logansport on Friday, May 11, with Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, of Yazoo City, Miss., to do the preaching. The weather was ideal, and conditions generally were favorable. The meeting continued thirteen days and the interest increased from day to day to such an extent that the people did not want us to close out when we did. The congregations were good, especially at night. There were 21 accessions to the Church, all on profession of faith. Yesterday we observed Children's Day and had six more accessions, making a total of 27.

The whole town and community were spiritually uplifted by our meeting. Brother Norsworthy is indeed a great evangelist. He is a thoughtful, earnest, enthusiastic preacher, and has a passion for souls. He preaches the plain, simple gospel with the power and demonstration of the Holy Spirit. His presentation of the Word is convincing and almost irresistible. His arguments for righteousness are unanswerable, and his condemnation of sin is merciless; yet withal he is tender, sympathetic, and most helpful to those who are seeking salvation. He did us a great service and we love him for his work's sake. He is the pastor's friend and keenly and delicately appreciates his relation to the pastor and his flock and seeks to strengthen the pastor's influence in his church and in the community. I heartily recommend Brother Norsworthy to any pastor in need of an earnest, orthodox preacher.—H. B. Perritt, P. C.

Oak Ridge, Miss.

Dear Advocate: On Sunday, May 20, we observed Children's Day at Oak Ridge, and viewed from most any standpoint it was a success. Thirty-nine children and young people participated in the exercises and every one did his part nobly, for which we feel very thankful to the children and those who instructed them. The collection was $24.45. A large crowd attended, dinner was served on the grounds, and Rev. R. E. Selby, who is visiting his relatives near here, preached in the afternoon. We were glad to have Brother Selby with us and to preach for us. He is the successful principal of the high school at New Augusta, Miss.

In this connection, I might say there are some prospects of an Epworth League here in the near future. On the night of May 10, a large crowd of young people gathered at the parsonage and signified their desire and willingness to organize one. I ask prayer for the undertaking.

There are those who will read these lines who will be glad to know that Sister Williams (who resides in our midst), the wife of our lamented brother, Rev. F. M. Williams, is in fairly good health and is holding up fine considering her advanced years. Her prayers, benedictions, and presence mean much to this little preacher!

While the Kaiser is seeking to be a dominating world-ruler, we are seeking the unquestioned audience of Heaven's host in the behalf of our desired goal for this charge. God grant that it may be realized! "In the Haven of Rest." J. A. WELLS.

Gunnison, Miss.

Dear Advocate: We had engaged Rev. J. H. Bell to do the preaching in our meeting which began the second Sunday in May. Brother Bell not being able to come at the beginning of the services, sent Rev. W. V. Shearer, pastor of our Central Church at Columbus, Miss., who gave us some strong, able and effective gospel sermons. Brother Bell reached us on Wednesday, and his clear, simple, incisive, tender, loving sermons gripped our people from the start. The revival tide rose from then until the close Sunday night, the 20th. The whole town was stirred and revived as it has not been for years. While there were but few conversions, the work done was deep, far-reaching, and abiding. I know of no man in the evangelistic work who surpasses Brother Bell in the Scripturalness of his preaching, in tactfulness of application, completeness in winning the confidence and love of men, and successfulness in leading them to higher and better things. The brethren who secure him for revival work will not be disappointed. And the "powers that be" in the Church will render a great service to the Kingdom of God by keeping him in his present field of work. Brother Bell had with him to lead the singing Brother Paul I. Templeton, of Meridian, Miss., who won the hearts of our people and added greatly to the success of the meeting by his splendid management of the song services. We pray God's blessing on these faithful workers as they go to other fields, and cordially invite them to come this way again.—R. W. Evans, P. C.

CALOMEL SELDOM SOLD HERE NOW

Every druggist in town—your druggist and everybody's druggist—has noticed a great falling-off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no billousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

THE KNIFE.

By Rev. Bob Shuler.

Our streets partake of vandeville,
  Our lanes are lined with lust,
The animal with whip and spur
  Commands us and we must;
Behold the virtue of the world
  Is trailing in the dust!

Who knows but from this sea of blood,
  That washes Europe red,
Shall come a shaft of light and hope
  To those whose sons have bled,
And women lift aloft ideals
  Above their sacred dead?

And once again first things be first,
  And truth and merit reign,
And men go forth to face their tasks
  And women bear their pain?
Then shout aloud, America,
  Though yours, a million slain.

'Twill recompense, if lightness, ease,
  If pleasure's sensual lure,
If avarice, greed and selfishness
  Can find a lasting cure;
If blood can heal, thank God we bleed
  To make the nations pure!

If war be hell, perhaps its heat
  Will burn away the dross,
Will leave the gold of high resolve
  To pay us for our loss;
And we who worshiped gods of dirt
  May anchor at a cross.

Besotted London sobered stands
  About her malmed and dead;
The night owl of Parisian lust
  Displaces vice with dread;
The sensual, voluptuous,
  Are purged where Europe bled.

And thus we tread the path of death,
  To learn the way of life;
To purchase peace that will endure
  We pay the toll of strife;
For thus the cancer of the world
  Must feel the surgeon's knife.

EPWORTH LEAGUE PROGRESS.

The Epworth League work of the Church made a good showing during the past year. The report of the General Secretary shows a net increase of 144 in the number of Chapters, and in membership of 5299. Twenty-nine Annual Conferences show gains in the number of Chapters and twenty-eight in the number of members. The Central Office had chartered during the year 445 Chapters, with a membership of 10,111, which surpasses the record of last year by 55 Chapters. Gains were shown in every item of finance except the amounts contributed by the Epworth Leagues on the assessments for missions, which fell below the figures of last year by $2078.37; but this was more than offset by an increase of $5958 in the amounts contributed for missionary specials, making a total for missions of $33,946. The sum given for other purposes was $77,825.99, making a grand total of $111,771.99, an increase of $11,179.77. Interest in the Congo Mission, the Epworth League's special field, was evident in gifts for that field of $12,942.03 and in the assumption by the Leagues of Texas of the building of a missionary steamboat at the cost of $10,000 to ply on the Upper Congo in connection with our mission.

OUR PUBLISHING BUSINESS.

At the recent meeting of the Book Committee our Publishing Agents made the most satisfactory report of the business of the House for the year ending February 28 ever made by them. The exhibit of the Publishing Agents shows: Sales at Nashville, $742,030.50; at Dallas, $260,622.43; at Richmond, $138,826.98. Total sales, $1,141,479.91. This total compares with $1,029,906.31 for the year ending February 28, 1916, a gain of $111,573.60. As compared with the 1914-15 figures, the gain is nearly $150,000. The profits for the year, not counting losses on periodicals and depreciation of stock and machinery, were: Nashville, $113,838.53; Dallas, $20,545.34; Richmond, $19,030.77. Total gain, $153,414.64. This compares with a gain of $121,171.80 for the previous year, a most gratifying showing for the year's business. The losses on the Methodist Review, Epworth Era, and Christian Advocate were $8,904.82, as against losses of $11,353.97 for the year ending February 28, 1916. The deficits on the House periodicals are below the figures the Agents had reason to expect at the beginning of the year. And our Publishing Agents say: "Each of these publications has due it a considerable number of unpaid subscriptions which, if collected, would decrease the deficits shown." Deducting the losses mentioned, the amount charged for depreciation, and the amount of the subsidy to the Pacific Methodist Advocate, the net gain for the year is $112,474.58. This compares with a net gain of $100,715.83 for 1915-16. In each case there is another deduction of $15,000 for dividends paid to the Conference claimants of the Church, leaving a net balance added to the capital as follows: 1917, $97,474.58; 1916, $85,715.83. For the first three years of the present quadrennium the sales have been $3,164,522, as compared with total sales of $2,637,068 for the first three years of the preceding quadrennium.

PERSONAL.

Rev. C. E. Fike, of Rayne, La., sends us a list of the post-offices in his charge, and requests a copy of our mailing files for those places. He proposes to do what he can to place the Advocate in the homes of his people. We do not need to say that we appreciate Brother Fike's kindly interest in the Conference organ.

President Wilson has made Dr. J. C. Ballard, of Biloxi, Miss., a captain in the Medical Reserve Corps and ordered him to report at Honolulu for duty. Dr. Ballard was recently in New Orleans, and called at the Advocate office, but the Editor, being out, missed seeing him. He wrote us a brief good-by message and promised to write us upon his arrival at the Hawaian metropolis. May a favoring Providence bring him safely to his destination and shield him from harm in that far-away land!

It was Mr. C. W. Blair, who lately died at Shreveport, La., who some months ago gave to the Loan Fund of the Church Extension Board $10,000, the annual interest on which is to go to Granbery College, Brazil, and $50,000, the interest on which is to be yearly applied to the superannuates of the Louisiana Conference. These were noble benefactions, which will flow forth in blessings through the coming decades. We desired to tell whence these gifts came while Brother Blair was living, but were not permitted to do so.

Editorial

However much he may decry them, every normal human being has a creed.

The path of duty is the only upward way. It leads to the highest, both in time and in eternity.

There is a sweet peace that out-breaking conflicts cannot disturb—the peace of God in the soul. And all who will may have it.

A contemporary says: "The weakness of to-day is due to the loose ideas of right and wrong. Half the people mean by right only that which they think will help them." We fear that there is much truth in this observation.

Culture is desirable, but there is peril in it. Far too often it brings with it a feeling of superiority and aloofness which unfits one for the world's rough and commonplace work. Men prepared to grapple effectively with the heavy tasks of life have been the crying need of every age. There is something wrong with any kind of education that sets those receiving it to clamoring for soft and inviting places. Oh, that we had among us more of the spirit of John Fletcher who, with rich congregations seeking to engage him, toiled on in the taxing and unremunerative parish of Madely! God's best gift to any child of his is the opportunity to serve truly his fellow-men.

We frequently hear a person commended for "seeing nothing but good in any one." Such a commendation will scarcely bear analysis. A man should not be suspicious and unjust in his judgments, and he ought not to be blind to any good qualities that a fellow-man may possess; but it is a weakness not to be able to discern the deficiencies of people. These need to be known in order that we may intelligently strive to help them, and if we happen to be the guardians of important trusts, in order that we may not make the mistake of committing them to unsafe hands. The ideal thing is to see men as they truly are, along with the possibilities that may be in them. That was the way the Master saw them.

SOME WORDS OF A METHODIST SEER.

In 1905 there was issued from our Publishing House a small volume, entitled "The Christianity of Christ and the Apostles," which came from the pen of the late Bishop J. J. Tigert, who as a thinker and scholar was one of the foremost men that our Church has produced. In that interesting publication appeared the following statement:

"The primary redemptive movement of divine love manifested itself in the incarnation. Here lies the heart of the question in our day about the nature of Christianity. The dignity, the beauty, the purity, the intellectual originality and force, even the moral uniqueness and sinlessness, of Jesus are freely, nay gladly, recognized. All that realm, the Galilean has conquered. On this plane there seems the opportunity of reconciliation of the religion of Christendom with the science of Christendom, preparatory to universalizing Christianity. If the reality of the incarnation be surrendered, for theology itself, as well as general knowledge and common intelligence, there seems to be great relief: all the puzzles of the dual nature of the incarnate Person, all the mysteries of the Trinitarian existence of the Godhead, are eliminated at one stroke; and Jesus, as the fairest flower of humanity, diffuses his fragrance throughout the world. It is a tempting suggestion. If Christ and Christianity can be reduced within the limits of the human, amalgamation with all else that is human—science, ethics, social reform, political advance—immediately follows. Moreover, in many minds—let it be frankly acknowledged—the suggestion is not born of the spirit of compromise, but of dire necessity. The modern mind is really for Christianity, without miracle and dogma; but sophisticated by the conception of the universality and uniformity of law, by the reign of causality, and by the brilliant generalization that most men have agreed to style evolution, without raising further hard questions, it revolts fundamentally and almost instinctively at the notion of the incarnation—the living of the life of God within the limits of the life of even the wisest, purest, and most Godlike man. It is, therefore, not so much a proposal of compromise and surrender, a price to be paid for the allegiance of aliens, as it is a condition and demand created by the modern spirit, without which it seems unable to enter upon the path of religion. As such, we may sympathize with it. (Italics ours.)

"But let us reflect. Christianity without the incarnation ceases to be religion. It surrenders its distinction. Jesus, however, unique in the ethical realm, is no more a bond and mediator than Socrates, with whom he has often been compared. * * * Unitarianism may be comprehensible; it may be acceptable to the scientific spirit; as a simplification it may seem the better adapted to diffusion; we may even forgive the tortuous exegesis of professional theologians like Wednt, George Holey Gilbert, and others who, in this interest, would exclude the pre-existence from the sayings of Jesus recorded in the Gospel of John, or, what amounts to the same thing, reduce it to a purely ideal significance; but, when the last concession is made, the witness of the New Testament, of Christian consciousness, and of history is uniform, that without a Divine Christ his religion is powerless and dead. It might survive as ethics or as a program of social progress; hut the satisfaction of the scientific demand, thus conceived, is the denial of religious need; and Christianity is asked to survive by a sacrifice that involves its death."

In the light of much that is now going on about us, do not these strong words show that Bishop Tigert was a seer, as well as a philosopher? It certainly seems so to us. Well we may in this day when the spirit of concession is so widespread and insistent, and is seemingly on the increase, carefully meditate upon this remarkable utterance made more than a decade ago. As we see it, it is not necessary to go to the extent of actually denying the incarnation and Deity of Christ to strip Christianity of its vitality and power—merely to ignore, or cease to emphasize adequately, these essential truths and the recovering agencies that spring from them must have, proportionately at least, the same effect.

THE SUMMER REVIVAL SEASON.

Within the next two or three months revival meetings will be held in hundreds of our rural churches. This is a season of much interest and of vast possibilities for good. The saving and building up in Christ of human souls is still the chief work of the Christian Church. Other forms of benevolent activity are well enough, but none of them are so important and so far-reaching in their influence as this. If we were asked to name our greatest need as a nation, we should answer without hesitancy, a genuine and sweeping revival. It would do more toward correcting the many evils that are prevalent in our country than any other possible agency that might be brought into requisition.

The churches in the interior have long been the strongholds of Christianity, and still are. In such congregations, as a rule, there is found the least amount of worldliness, and hence more faith and more experimental religion. From them the town and city churches usually get their best members, and they also give us most of our preachers. But our rural churches are not generally as prosperous and vigorous as they once were. They have been affected adversely by the drift of population away from the farms, and the lack of spirituality that is so widespread in this materialistis age has also in some measure extended to them.

We wish our brethren on the circuits a large measure of success in the evangelistic labors that will soon be engaging them. Many of them have a number of churches and their work will be quite taxing. It would be a fine thing if our station pastors would volunteer, in so far as their circumstances will permit, to lend them a helping hand. Methodism needs to recover the aggressive evangelistic spirit, which was once alike her most outstanding characteristic and her crowning glory. A number of times before he passed from us, we heard Bishop Galloway express, with profound concern, the fear that our ministers were losing in ardor and effectiveness as soul-winners. This is the service in which we can least afford to have a declension in efficiency.

The present situation, both as respects the Nations and Churches, looks to us more like Armageddon than any other period in human history with which we are familiar. Corresponding to the mighty world-war between the powers of the globe is the vast conflict that is beginning to rage between a true and a counterfeit Christianity. Trojan horses have brought the enemy within the gates of Zion, and, while posing as her friends, they are seeking to undermine as rapidly as they can her foundation. But the living Christ will not forsake his Church. Still standing is his glorious promise, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

THE BURDEN-BEARER.

Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.—Matt. 11:28.

O the blessed promise given
On the hills of Galilee
To the weary heavy-laden.
Still is made to you and me.
Many a heart has thrilled to hear it.
Many a tear been wiped away.
Many a load of sin been lifted.
Many a midnight turned to day.
Many a broken, contrite spirit
Lonely, sorrowing and sad,
For the mighty consolation,
Heard the heavenly tidings glad
And the lyre gazed with rapture,
Trusting in the Savior's name
On the land of rest and refuge
When the Burden-Bearer came.

Lazarus lies untied and fainting.
Peter sinks beneath the wave,
Loving Mary lingers sadly
Near the Savior's planted grave.
Bartimeus by the wayside
Begs his bread disconsolate.
For the moving of the waters
At the pool the suffering wait.
In the wilderness the lepers
Wander outcast in their pain.
Paul and Silas in the prison
Bear the fetter and the chain;
Mary Magdalene is weeping,
Friendless in her sin and shame;
But their burdens all were lifted
When the Burden-Bearer came.

Every phase of human sorrow
Fills the path we tread today.
Harps are hanging on the willows,
Souls are fainting by the way;
But there still is balm in Gilead.
And though here on earth we weep,
God, within the many mansions,
Giveth his beloved sleep.
On the cloud his rainbow glitters,
Shines the star of faith above;
God will not forsake or leave us,
Let us trust his truth and love
And beyond the shining river
We shall bless his holy name.
That to bear our sins and sorrows,
Christ the Burden-Bearer came.

WHICH?

The flower has its fragrance, the object has its shadow, the lamp sends forth its light, the flame has its heat, the magnet its attraction; so every personality has its influence. It is a part of you and can neither be assumed at will nor cast aside at pleasure. It belongs to you, and with it you are helping to drag down to hell or lift up to heaven. Are you radiating death or life? Which?—Alabama Christian Advocate.

THE CHANGELESS CHRIST.

What fathomless reassurance and heartening there is in God's blessed revelation of the changeless Christ—the one fixed point among earth's ceaseless mutations! "We change, He changeth not." And how many driven, baffled weary souls have responded to His loving invitation, "Come unto Me and rest." Time hurries us onward relentlessly, but Christ is there to meet us and love us and help us at each successive stage of our almost breathless advance, and by His aid one learns the quiet lesson of trustful calm and serenity in the midst of life's hurry.—Christian World.

ONLY SAFE ON YOUR KNEES.

Principal George Adam Smith tells a tale of how, in his early Alpine-climbing days, he was climbing one of the Swiss Alps on the sheltered side. Though they did not know it, a great wind was blowing, and as they climbed to the topmost crag, the guide, who had been leading the way upwards, stepped back, as was his wont, that the traveler might have his foot first upon the top. Doctor Smith sprang to the top of the peak, and was almost blown back over the edge by the wind. The guide seized him and brought him down to his knees, crying in his ear: "Down! Here, on the summit, you are only safe on your knees." So with the heights of our gladness, when life is at its end, and the world is full of glory—we are only safe upon our knees.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

WHEN IS A REVIVAL TO BE EXPECTED?

From the Bible To-day.

A revival may be expected when Christian people unitedly pray in faith for a revival. Prayer which brings a revival has back of it much yearning of heart. Agony of desire is God's preparation of our hearts. Our Lord cried over Jerusalem. In Gethsemane He sweat great drops of blood. He was touched with the feeling of the infirmities of those whom He came to save. He spent whole nights in intercession.

When our hearts yearn for the salvation of souls so that we cry out to God in their behalf with tears and passionate pleading, there will be a revival and souls will be won to Christ. Jeremiah cried out, "Oh, that my head were waters, and my eyes a fountain of tears that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people!" What fervor, what zeal, what quenchless desire were shown by John Knox! He cried, "O God, give me Scotland or I die." Welch of Ayr, the son-in-law of Knox, had such a passion for the salvation of souls that he would rise from bed in the night, and wrapping his plaid around him, spend hours in prayer. Though the nights were wintry the perspiration stood out on him like beads.

God revives those who greatly desire to be revived. If we are content to be spiritually dead we will stay spiritually dead. If we are not deeply concerned because we are not the means of the conversion of souls, we shall not be used in bringing about conversions. It is those whose hearts are breaking for the salvation of others that the Lord uses to break the hearts of others.

Great revivals grow out of the vigorous prayer life of the church, as naturally as trees grow strong and straight by the water courses. Keep the tree of your life planted close to the water course of God's Spirit and you will be in a state of constant revival.

Expect definite answers to definite petitions. When you pray for a revival expect a revival. Pentecost came after eight days of definite prayer. Jacob prayed for one thing: "Deliver me, I pray Thee, from the hand of my brother." Elisha prayed a short and definite petition: "Lord, I pray Thee, open the young man's eyes that he may see."

Prayer for a revival, like some remedies prescribed by a physician, may not show results at once, but if continued, will work the desired cure. When the apostles began meeting in the upper room there were no visible proofs that a revival would come. But our Lord had said that He would send His spirit in power and soon great showers of blessing fell. Believing prayer is a seed that always brings forth a harvest.

When may a revival be expected? When the Lord's people are so filled with His spirit that they bear joyful witness to Him. A professing Christian who is without baptism of the Holy Spirit is like a Zeppelin without an engine.

It is the will of our Lord that His church shall be in a constant state of revival. He made no provision in the early church for stopping the revival.

True witnesses are indispensable to Christ. Our Lord wants to revive and save His Church through you. Every Christian disciple is a gospel herald: That is our Lord's purpose for each of His disciples.

Where must a revival begin? In you. Pray and speak and act as though there were no other Christians in the world but yourself. You are not accountable to God for the response others make to His demands. You are accountable to Him for your own response.

Has a revival started in you? If you are eager to tell others the story of Jesus' love and saving power, the revival fires are kindling in you.

It was when the Lord started a revival in Savonarola that all Florence was moved.

It was when a revival of the true faith blazed up in Luther, that the Church was saved from spiritual death.

It was when the revival fires broke out in Wesley and Whitefield, that all England was stirred.

If the revival spirit is in you, you will be used to convey it to others.

UNDER THE FLAG.

Dear Dr. Meek: It has been suggested in M. E. Church quarters that the M. E. Church and the M. E. Church, South, should "unite under the flag" and enter upon a "reconstruction." These expressions applied at the finish of the civil war, about the year of our Lord, 1864. The flag is all right and reconstruction is sometimes needful—specially so in the event of a breakdown—but this proposition would seem to carry an intimation that the people of the M. E. Church, South, are something less than "under the flag" and below the full meaning of a place "in the union."

Such a statement must be taken with a degree of mental questioning and awakens a suspicion that "under that chip" is a wrong impression and a defective type of ordinary politeness. The Master said, "My Kingdom is not of this world." The triumphing banner of the Divine Redeemer is supposed to be unfurled above every Militant Church of all the hosts of the Kingdom of God, and the angels are no doubt enlisted spectators, and also the millions without number in Heaven solicitous, as the army of Israel invests in the conquest of the salvation of the race, recognizing the fact that through this agency the kingdoms of the world are to become the Kingdom of Christ; but in every government under the sun these valiant and aspiring soldiers of the Cross render always unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are His.

Bishop Doggett, of the Southern Church, once said. "The Church needs the protection of the State and the State needs the blessings of the Church." No people of all the earth are more devoted to the flag of their own country than are these same adherents to the royal household of the King, wherever they have planted the standard of the Cross. Through these, in a very high sense, and the religion which they represent, it has become to be recognized that "righteousness exalteth a nation," and in Christian America it is imprinted upon the coin of the country that "in God we trust." These Christians and Christian churches have had vastly to do in promoting the best type of citizenship in many lands and most powerfully have they wrought for the good of humankind and for national upbuilding and safety, and always the true member of God's militant forces stands ready for the defense of his country and to die, if need be, in the last ditch rather than to see his nation dishonored or the flag of its army to trail in the dust.

By all signs it is less than a compliment to any self-respecting Christian to be invited to "unite under the flag" and to enter upon a commitment for "reconstruction," as though a sort of second "blood of sprinkling" was counted needful to make a good citizen and patriotic soldier of a member of the M. E. Church, South. Such people have a misleading impression of real conditions and certainly have misread the handwriting of history for the last sixty years, and speak without mature reflection in seeking to unite the Churches by calling up the experiences of 1864.

In this intimation would look to be found one reason at least for respectfully remaining apart. They are our people and good Americans, of course; and we are their people, supposedly, and we hope citizens alike of the big United States commonwealth, but the suggestions indicated are tinctured with the belated orders of post-bellum times 50 years ago.

Fortunately the great body of the wondrously successful and triumphant second Methodist Church of the world are by no means in distress on the question of union, nor even specially concerned for unification. A few deeply interested individuals, perchance, may cross the dividing Rubicon and take position with the M. E. people "under the flag;" but God has most compassionately sustained the workers of the M. E. Church, South, even from the experiences of "44" unto the present, and has assured that in the seventh time of distress the really faithful and true need fear no danger; and long since it has been learned by the individual Christian and by the different departments of the universal Church of Christ that "if God be for us, who can be against us? Even the smallest Christian has a mission to fulfil which an angel would covet, and to which no other agent in the domains of creation has been assigned. Much more must this be true of a great Church which has been sent of God and mightily instrumental as a factor in constructing a prosperous and powerful civilization, and selected also of Him as an agency in peopling Heaven with royal personages—many multitudes for number—who are to grace the household of the King and to enjoy the mansion city forever. Such a church has nothing to fear except grave mistakes and the things that are wrong.

Satan, of course, must confuse and antagonize the forces of God, and since we are human and not yet in heaven, even a Christian Church of the saints in fact might wish the "dismemberment" of the God-honored department of the Methodist movement known as the M. E. Church, South, and the greater the number of "regional sections" into which divided, the more certain the prospect of a speedy break-up, so far as goes Church identity and freedom of action in the great business of the kingdom.

Go teach all nations, "baptizing," was the command at the first and the marching orders for every division of the Church of Christ, and long will it be before this commission from "the Captain of Salvation" shall change so as to read, "Go teach" and capture whole Churches." Rather should the prophecy of the Savior prevail when he said his Kingdom should be as the mustard stalk and "shoot out great branches," the latest branch of the Methodist Church stalk being the "Japanese Methodist Church." And no special provisions were made in the commission for alliances at the top. Fraternity is good and neighborship Scriptural; co-operation is also "OK" at times, no doubt, but liberty of action must be guaranteed unto Churches just the same as to nations, and a union at a price so costly and doubtful could scarcely be God's chosen plan for the extension of his kingdom and the world's salvation

A DAY AT THE MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE.

A trip to Chicago would no doubt be considered incomplete by many people interested in active Christian work without visiting the Moody Bible Institute. This institution, founded by the world-wide Evangelist, D. L. Moody, in 1886, is located about eight blocks north of the center of the city, near the corner of Chicago Avenue and North La Salle Street. The main building faces on Institute Place, named in honor of the school.

The visitor finds a cordial welcome at the Institute, and is furnished with a guide who directs him about the building and explains the different departments and the daily life of the student body.

Upon entering the main building, the visitor is impressed with the stained-glass window at the head of the first landing, illustrating the sower striding across the plowed field sowing broadcast the seed. This is intended to be an object lesson to the students of what is expected of them during the time of their training and throughout their lives.

On the main floor the visitor is shown the library, the missionary museum, the lecture hall, and the accounting and printing departments. On the west wall of the corridor he finds the names of over 750 students who have gone to foreign mission fields—a roll of honor. Passing down-stairs, he next visits the power and heating plant, and the steam laundry, where all the laundry of the students is done at half price.

Through an underground tunnel, across Institute Place, the visitor reaches the Men's Building, with its gymnasium and dormitories. Then comes the Women's Building, with its large dining hall and kitchen, the Massey Chapel, reception room and dormitories for women. Visitors are impressed with the warm, homelike atmosphere of the Institute. The students, with the faculty, constitute one big family. Over 500 are seated in the dining hall at each meal—the women students occupy one side, the men occupy the other, and the faculty are seated in the center.

In the early morning, before breakfast, each student observes "The Quiet Hour" in personal Bible reading and prayer. After breakfast, while still gathered at the tables, a heart-to-heart talk or a Bible exposition is given by some member of the faculty or some visiting pastor, evangelist or missionary.

At 9 o'clock on Tuesday morning of each week the first general class convenes, and the entire forenoon of each day is devoted to lectures and classroom work. Some lectures are given in the afternoon, but a good part of the time each afternoon and evening is devoted to study and practical Christian work according to assignments made. Following the evening meal, fellowship meetings are held in the different buildings.

Proper consideration is also given to wholesome recreation. Monday is always taken as a rest day. The gymnasium in the winter and the tennis courts in the summer, with an occasional excursion on Lake Michigan, or a visit to some park, afford proper exercises for those who feel the need of it. At the beginning of each term a reception is given for new students. In these and other ways, the students at The Moody Bible Institute find themselves continually in a wholesome Christian atmosphere, which is conducive to physical, intellectual and spiritual development.

As the visitor watches the 700 or more students of the day classes and the 300 or more of the evening classes, and then thinks of over 3000 men and women taking the Correspondence Courses, with residences in all parts of the world, he begins to realize that Dwight L. Moody, the founder of the Institute, was a man of faith, vision and purpose, and that those who follow in his steps are following in the right direction. The visitor leaves the Institute with fresh courage for his own life, and the conviction that life is really worth while if spent in the right way. A VISITOR.

"THEY HAVE NO PRAYERS AT THEIR HOUSE."

By Rev. C. [illegible]

This was the reason which a boy gave for the wickedness of his schoolmate, than which nothing could be more philosophically correct. He was himself a proof of the truth of it, for he had felt the restraining power of family religion.

What a tremendous responsibility do we here discover resting upon professedly Christian parents! They have consecrated their children to God from their birth, and are under the most solemn obligation to use every available means for their conversion. There is no means more effectual than this. God has ordained it and blessed it. It was in the family that he first planted his Church, and it is by the family relation that he has extended it.

Family worship is the nucleus which gathers around itself all other means of grace. Where there is family worship there will be family instruction, parental authority, regular attendance upon the Sabbath school, and children seated with their parents in the house of God every Sabbath day. Thus, from the hour of their birth until they go out into the world they are brought up in the nurture of the Lord.

Such parents can confidently commend their children thus leaving them, even if still unconverted, to a covenant-keeping God. They feel that they have endeavored to train their children for his service to whom they have been given, and cannot but hope that to his service they will be called. Such children God will take and use for his own glory. They have been educated for him, and he appreciates the gift.

The Baron Rothschild said he could not allow his children to think of religion: it would be fatal to their success in business, because, to get and keep a fortune required all of one's time and efforts. What a horrible consistency is this! Yet consistency it is. He had dedicated his children to the service of Mammon, and Mammon they must serve. They could not be allowed to think of, much less to worship, any other god. Where are the Christian parents who act with equal consistency concerning the dedication which they have voluntarily made of their children to the Lord? If we may argue from our own observation, it is to be feared they are lamentably few. It is a fact, that multitudes of Christian parents are so much engaged in making money, or self indulgence, that they have no time to attend to their children.

The neglect of family worship is the real source of all other neglect of parental duty. If this were attended to at stated seasons, in a proper manner, the effect would be most salutary upon parents as well as children. It is this which has distinguished the families of the pious amid abounding wickedness, from the earliest times. It is by this means that the worship of the true God has been preserved in the world, while the families of unfaithful professors of religion have degenerated, generation by generation, into utter godlessness, though surrounded by all the other means of grace.

Christian parents, do not think that the maintenance of family worship is simply a privilege, which you may forego, because your own piety is at so low an ebb that you can get along comfortably without it. It is a duty which you owe to God, in your children's behalf a means of grace to them, which you are doubly bound to use: God requires it of you, and they themselves require it of you. It is that solemn, habitual appeal in behalf of your household, in the name of the Redeemer, to Almighty God, which furnishes the most powerful motives to filial obedience and affection, as well as to their conversion. If you neglect it, you cannot complain if your children not only remain unconverted, but even bring your gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.

DR. EDGAR BLAKE'S REVISED PLAN OF UNIFICATION.

By Rev. C. A. Battle.

With the next meeting of the Joint Commission on Unification scheduled to take place June 27 at Traverse City, Michigan, the Northern Methodist press is carrying much matter bearing upon the subject of unification with the apparent intention of concentrated influence upon the Commissioners that they may be spurred into an agreement upon some plan to bring the Churches together, and all the suggestions are made, of course, from the view-point of the Northern Methodist Church. An article written by Dr. Edgar Blake, entitled "The Unification of Methodism," has received widespread and simultaneous publication throughout Northern Methodism, attended by editorial comments which show sympathy with Dr. Blake's attempt to put through some sort of scheme, or which, by guarded remarks, indicate that Dr. Blake may have overstepped Northern sentiment in even suggesting a separate jurisdiction for the Negro. Among the papers falling under the writer's observation which bore, at the same time, Dr. Blake's article are Zion's Herald of Boston, the Northwestern Christian Advocate of Chicago, and the Christian Advocate of New York. Now is the time for those who do not favor unification from the Northern Methodist view-point to express themselves, for these powerful publications of the North are a solid and an aggressive phalanx in their endeavor to consummate such an end. The Northern Church is nearly twice the size of the Southern Church, has nearly three times the number of Annual Conferences, is shot through with the Negro and Negro sentiment, and has nothing to lose and everything to gain in an amalgamation movement, hence the expression of the Northwestern's editor falls smoothly from his pen: "We are confirmed in our belief that now is God's time to bring his severed people together in one Church;" and that of the Herald's editor is equally easy of remark: "We look to Traverse City confident that the statesmanship of the Churches as represented in that gathering will find a way out of the difficulties that confront us and present to American Methodism a plan upon which the family may be reunited." The New York periodical is insistent upon full and free discussion of the question in its pages, and states: "The Christian Advocate invites discussion from every point of view, and, so far as space will allow, will print representative articles from now until June 27, when the Joint Commission reassembles at Traverse City, Mich." Surely no loyal Southern Methodist could wish this discussion, from the Southern Methodist view-point, at this momentous time, curtailed when all the concentrated fire of pro-union artillery is being trained on the Joint Commission. Zion's Herald's words, making unification a matter of great "statesmanship" on the part of the Commissioners, may be taken for what they are worth; but it is rather a matter of possibilities standing for agreements, or impossibilities standing for disagreements, from the Christian view-point, instead. In referring to the Southern Methodist position of eliminating the Negro, at a previous time the Herald remarked: "As Bishop Berry declared in his address (at a recent meeting of the Board of Bishops), we will still hold to the doctrine of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man." This is a demonstration of the rock-ribbed sentiment of the North to incorporate the Negro into the proposed unified Church, or to go to the extent of letting unification fail.

Dr. Blake on the Status of the Negro.

In the revised plan of unification which Dr. Blake offers to Methodism he seemingly contemplates the use of his former scheme, embracing the establishment of six Regional Conferences for whites, but in addition stipulates two jurisdictions, with the Negro occupying one of these and the whites the other. Dr. Blake says:

"The Negro can never reach his highest estate so long as he is kept in an inferior relation with his white brethren. I believe that there is a solution of the problem much more honorable to the Negro and much more promising for his future. It is the logical outcome of the suggestion made in my Boston address:

"a. Create two general jurisdictions, one composed of the colored membership in the United States and Liberia, and the other made up of the remaining membership in America and the foreign field.

"b. Give each general jurisdiction a General Conference of its own, which, under the provisions and limitations of the constitution, would have full control of the affairs of its jurisdiction, without interference from the other.

"c. Create a constitution which would be the fundamental law of both jurisdictions and which would define and fix the powers of each, which constitution could be altered or amended only by a reasonable majority of the Annual Conferences or the membership thereof of the entire Church.

"d. Create one set of connectional boards or societies, which would have supervision and control of the missionary and benevolent work of the whole Church, and upon which each of the two general jurisdictions would have representation proportionate to its membership and interests.

"e. Create one supreme court as the final authority on all connectional matters, upon which each of the two jurisdictions would have representation proportionate to its membership and interests.

"f. Create one Board of Bishops, in which the Bishops of both jurisdictions would sit together for conference on all connectional matters.

"In such a plan we would have one Church, one constitution, one supreme court, one set of connectional organizations, one Board of Bishops, and two general jurisdictions, each having its own General Conference, which, under the limitations of the constitution, would be supreme in its jurisdictional affairs. Such an arrangement would give us one Church—inter-racial, international, world-wide in its activities and sufficiently flexible in its form to provide for the requirements of every racial and national unit that may arise in the future."

1. Dr. Blake proposes to leave the Negro in the Church, which plan is out of harmony with the views of the General Conference of the Church, South, expressed at Oklahoma City in 1914. The representatives of the Southern Church in that General Conference acted upon the suggestions of the report of the Joint Commission which included the Negro, but they foresaw the impossibility of any such plan ever being successfully consummated, realized its undesirableness, and expressly stated that any steps on unification must be made with the Negro forming an independent organization. So forcibly has the Southern Church realized that the Negro must be in an independent organization that even those Negroes most closely allied to it, which now form the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, were set up, both at the will of the Negroes and the white people, in a separate body. All the traditions of the South point to the fact that any plan with even the suggestion of social identity between the two races, which must characterize all proposals of union where the Negro is included, cannot be acceptable to the Southern Church. The Baptist Church, which is the only other denomination in the South with a large Negro constituency, operates upon the principle of complete separation of the Negro and white races. The white people of this denomination form their conventions, and the Negroes meet in their separate assemblies with absolutely complete autonomy.

2. Dr. Blake's plan of including the Negro in the one Church is out of accord with independent race organizations, which is the only line of procedure yielding good results. The Negro Year Book, edited by Monroe N. Work, of Tuskegee Institute, is authority for the statement that in the United States of America there are only 5,375 Negro churches and only 477,720 Negro members of white denominations; while there are 32,985 Negro churches and 3,779,681 Negro members in independent Negro denominations. Those prounionists who are continually referring to the fact that the Roman Catholic Church includes the Negro within its folds, and accordingly desires the proposed unified Church of Methodism to follow this example, may be interested to know that the Negro Year Book states that there are only 38,235 Negro Roman Catholics in the United States, while this great organization claims a constituency of about 15,000,000 members. These statistical references are proof that the Negro does not flourish in an organization dominated by whites, and that Christian work in his midst only finds true expression when he is allowed the freedom to govern his own organization. There are only 350,000 Negroes of the Methodist faith in white organizations, while the membership of independent Methodist denominations reaches the high mark of 1,437,021. After the gigantic labor of the Northern Methodist Church in the South, including its spending of vast sums of missionary money among the Negroes, that denomination has only about 340,000 Negro members. The plan for the amalgamation of all the Negro denominations with the white organization would be calculated to kill effectively the Methodist Church among the Negroes.

However much Dr. Blake may desire his scheme of race jurisdiction to give the Negro freedom to develop race consciousness, the fact that he would be in the same organization with the white people is evidence that his Church affairs would be under white supremacy. Besides thus hindering the religious development of the Negro, for the same Church to shelter both races would render social conditions intolerable in the South.

3. The situation of infeasibility in Dr. Blake's idea of two jurisdictions instead of complete separation is augmented by the proposal to "create one set of Connectional boards, which would have supervision and control of the missionary and benevolent work of the whole Church, and upon which each of the two general jurisdictions would have representation proportionate to its membership and interests." The boards would naturally be composed of more Northern members than Southern members because of the preponderance of membership of the Church in the North, and when their views were re-enforced by the Negro members siding with them in politics relative to activities in the South, the unified Methodist Church would stand for procedures in the Southern portion of the organization which would be ruinous. Methodist boards are powerful organizations; they practically shape the policies of the Church in missionary activities, Church extension labors, educational matters, and, in the Northern Church, the work among the Negroes. In the interim of the General Conference they plan and conduct the great causes committed to their charge, and at the meeting of this important legislative body the action upon the recommendations of the various boards for modifications in policy constitute a large portion of the business. For the Southern Church to commit itself wholly into the hands of an organization which could have no appreciation of its delicate social problems, and whose policies would be shaped by boards the majorities of which would be composed of Northern and Western and Negro members, would be Church suicide.

4. So closely has Dr. Blake identified the Negro with the new organization he is endeavoring to form that he actually proposes to place Negroes upon the bench of the Supreme Court of Methodism. There must be, he says, "one supreme court as the final authority on all connectional matters, upon which each of the two jurisdictions would have representation proportionate to its membership and interests." Such a body would have the power to pass upon the constitutionality of all legislation coming before the two General Conferences of Methodism, and the Southern portion of the organization would have the knowledge that every piece of legislation shaped by the General Conference which controlled it must necessarily have had the positive, or passive at least, approval of a high judiciary composed of a vast majority of Northern and Western members, with a good sprinkling of Negroes. Those who know Southern conditions will realize the impossibility of such a plan. Perhaps the part of the constitution of the United States most jealously guarded by Northern sentiment is that comprised by the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments, and the laws which some of the Southern States have been forced to conceive to save themselves from being dominated by Negroes are well known. A church cannot become a political machine; it is impossible to think of the Southern portion of the organization being put to it to concoct schemes to save its moral and social life; and Southern Methodists may well be thankful that they cannot be forced into a union which would be so ruinous.

5. The Negro, according to Dr. Blake, would be upon the Board of Bishops of the unified Church. This Board of Bishops would not be merely an aggregation of individual Bishops met together for the purpose of discussing problems and advising with one another; but the Board controls the actions very largely, and fixes the responsibility, of the individual Bishops; it appoints the members of the Board to the various fields of activities, and doubtless could change the plans of individual Bishops at its will. The Southern portion of the Church would be helpless in the hands of a Board of General Superintendents whose policies would be completely dominated by Northern and Western sentiment, assisted by a large number of Negro Bishops.

6. Though planning a separate jurisdiction for the Negroes, Dr. Blake says: "Create a constitution which would be the fundamental law of both jurisdictions and which would define and fix the powers of each, which constitution could be altered or amended only by a reasonable majority of the Annual Conferences or the membership thereof of the entire Church." "There could be no question of a constitutional nature, then, settled, no matter how trivial, without the Negroes having a vote upon the matter. If a proposal for a constitutional change, arising out of social necessity in the South, met with the disapproval of the Negro element and was fought by the Negro vote, very likely the Negro sentiment would be backed by the great Northern vote, and Southern necessity would go begging unnoticed. Upon serious reflection this condition is found untenable, and the objection will doubtless appear reasonable even to some Northern folk who have some inkling of Southern conditions.

The Regional Conference Plan.

It is remembered that Dr. Blake's former plan, of which his latter proposals relative to the Negro are modifications, provided for six Regional Conferences among the whites in the United States. These regional divisions were called the Northeastern, Southeastern, North-central, South-central, Northwestern, and Southwestern Conferences, with a General Conference composed of equal representation from these great sections. According to Dr. Blake's revision, this formation is to compose a jurisdiction, while the Negro is to form a separate jurisdiction with the close relationships between the races that have been noticed above. Relative to the white jurisdiction, Dr. Blake states that Southern identity in that portion of the Church would be protected by his proposal of equal representation of the Regional Conferences in the General Conference. In the first place, democracy demands equal representation according to numbers, and the plan would not continually hold without change, because the Regional Conferences extending into the South would contain far less numbers than others. In the second place, the Regional Conferences spreading throughout Northern sections would be solid in Northern sentiment and would always send men to the General Conference with a strong Northern bias; while in Southern sections many Northern and border folk would be found whose vote would weaken the protection of Southern interests in the General Conference. A Regional Conference embracing portions of the South would extend over sections where sentiment has been warped by Northern ideas, and nothing short of a political machine organization, which is unthinkable in Church polity, could send a solid delegation true to Southern ideals to the General Conference for proper protection. The great North and West would send men stamped with their life, knowing nothing and caring less about Southern protection relative to the Negro and other problems, while the South, coupled with territory of varying sentiment, would be compelled to have some representation—not all, of course—out of harmony with its problems. The territory of the Southern Church is not bounded by hard and fast lines of a definite nature, but they often wind about among people who are not in sympathy with its conditions, and in many instances sections of Northern Methodism overlap into Southern territory, which would render a Regional Conference containing a portion of the Southern Church helpless to remain true to essential conditions. Dr. Blake's plan of dividing the strength of the Southern Church among several Regional Conferences, nearly all of which would contain a large number of Northern people and Northern sympathizers, would soon, if put into operation, wipe out the control of the Southern Methodists living in the heart of the South.

But granting that Dr. Blake's proposition of equal representation from each Regional Conference in the General Conference would, without other consideration, give opportunity for the conservation of Southern ideals—which, of course, could not be true in fact—his plan would utterly break down as a means of guaranteeing the South equality of strength and protection, because of the foreign vote, which would naturally take sides with the North, for the representatives from the vast mission fields in Asia, Europe, and South America, would know nothing of the acute and perplexing problems of the South and could have no proper appreciation of them. This great element alone, combined with the delegates in the General Conference from the North and West, would so outnumber the representatives from the South that the Southern portion of the organization would have no identity whatever.

It has been stated by several Northern Methodist periodicals that if the Negro problem could be agreed upon by the Joint Commission the two organizations would be brought together "to-morrow," inferring that the other divisive factors are of minor importance or have been settled by the Commission; but the writer is prepared to say that the Committee of the Joint Commission upon the Regional Conferences and their powers have reached no conclusions of consequence, and the problems of these divisions do not directly bear upon the Negro question. There are many weighty and vital matters to be settled before unification is probable or possible.

The Tendency to Break Down Denominationalism.

While it is noted that only a few in the North have endorsed either Dr. Blake's former or revised scheme of unification, yet it is safe to say that the Northern Church is heartily in favor of unification according to the plan put forth at Saratoga. Many of that denomination will not be willing to lessen connection with the Negro, even upon the compromise basis of some of its leaders, for the sake of unification. Dr. Blake's proposal to incorporate the Negro in the unified Church will meet the unqualified disapproval of the conservatives in the Southern Church, and must also endure the frown of a great element in the North for the reason of the apparent curtailing of the Negro's powers. The view-point of the Northern Church is more in accord with that utterance of Dr. Blake which evidences a tendency toward the breaking down of all denominational lines and the incorporation of all denominations and races into one organization. Dr. Blake says: "And if the Methodists and Presbyterians and Baptists can unite among themselves, they can all unite together and ultimately will unite.... Eventually the major evangelical bodies must and will come together. Ultimately the prayer of Jesus that they all may be one will find its fulfillment.... I am profoundly convinced that God has made it possible for the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to pioneer the way in a most far-reaching movement, not only in American Methodism, but in evangelical Christianity as well." Such discussion, which this unification movement has instigated, has caused men to dream wild and fanciful dreams, involving earthly power and glory. In this the effect has been evil and, perhaps for a time, irremediable. It may be the beginning of a discomfort, or the initial expression of a deep-seated disease, which means a dark period in the history of the kingdom of the Father, and which only time and great suffering can efface. Bishop Candler, in a powerful sermon which recently appeared in the Christian Advocate (Nashville), said: "The unity for which he (Christ) prayed is oneness of life in all Christians, not sameness of ecclesiastical organization. The thought of any sort of organization does not appear even remotely at any point in his sublime intercession. He pleads for the experience of an invisible life, not for the realization of a visible system of any sort whatever.....The world can be saved, and doubtless will be saved, by a Church divided into many distinct ecclesiastical bodies; but the world will never be saved by Christians who substitute unity of organization for union with Christ. Nor does this Scriptural view of the subject contravene the catholicity of the Church. The catholicity of the Christian Church is not so much a matter of its geographical extension as it is of its genuine participation in the life of its risen Lord and its uninterrupted enjoyment of the communion of the saints."

Dr. Blake on Wastage.

The Northern view-point seems to be that the matter of "erecting altar against altar," of "occupying the same territory," of "unholy rivalries," must be settled only by the Southern Church turning over to the larger organization its field of operation, and thus terminating any conflict between the denominations. Some blame for friction may be attached to the Southern Church, but the facts show that most of the trouble, and all of the very serious trouble, is due to the activity of the Northern Church. Dr. Blake states that "these Churches are now competing with each other in an unholy rivalry for territory and members in literally hundreds of neighborhoods in the South and West." The West was never partitioned between the two organizations, but the South is the just and equitable territory of the Southern Church, or else it must move out into the Atlantic Ocean to operate. The work of the Southern Church in Illinois came to it under exceptional conditions and we are not spending missionary money to extend it.

For Dr. Blake and other Northerners to speak of "unholy rivalry for territory and members" without lifting a finger to prevent such in the South by their own Church is almost a sacrilege. The New York Christian Advocate of May 31, 1917, contains the following notice: "Nine new white churches in Alabama, Georgia, and Florida have recently been dedicated by our (Northern) Bishop. The total value of these churches is in the neighborhood of $50,000, all provided for within $2,000." This is brotherhood with a vengeance. These figures might lead one to believe that the Northern Church may be insincere in its offerings along the lines of unification, having known all the while it would not succeed, and is laying the basis for calling out of the Southern Church any who favor unification when the negotiations terminate. A Northern Methodist Bishop is in Atlanta, in the heart of the South, the very center of Southern Methodism, furthering Northern Methodism there among the white people with much missionary money, when the Southern Church would gladly and could more easily take care of the field. A Northern Methodist Bishop is actively circulating in and about New Orleans among the white people, in direct opposition to the Church, South, furthering the Northern Church's interests there. These are only illustrations of a general status quo. For men of the Northern Church to talk about "unholy rivalry" with a view to bringing about union, when they themselves are consciously, purposefully, and aggressively prosecuting a mission of conquest in the South, in the very bosom of the South, far away from the borderland, is enough to stir up a resolution upon the part of the Southern Church never to unite with the Northern organization. Let the Northern Church leaders never mention the subject of "unholy rivalry" until they purge their souls of Southern propaganda made in the name of that unworthy shibboleth, "A World-wide Church," let them hide their heads in shame when they think of using such argument (knowing the present positive character of their activities) to bring about the union of God's sacred organizations, let them spend some time in sackcloth and ashes and in rectifying Southern Church wrongs before extending the hand of welcome in the name of a united organization, and then, and not until then, can they find a gracious and full response in the warm-hearted Southern denomination. The Church of God should be no power to crush a foe; it should be no force for a career of worldly satisfaction; it must ever be a House of Righteousness and Brotherliness to labor with like organizations to spread the teachings of a crucified Lord.

These "unholy rivalries" may be eliminated at the moment that it is determined to take advantage of the Church machinery already provided for such purposes. The Joint Commission on Federation in 1910 organized the Federal Council of Methodism, which action was approved by the General Conferences of the Southern and Northern Churches, and "it is charged with advisory powers in regard to world-wide missions, Christian education, and the evangelization of the unchurched masses; and it also has power to hear and finally determine, without appeal from its decision, all cases of conflict or misunderstanding

The Great Battle

A SALOONLESS STATE.

(We Need You to Help Us Make Louisiana Such.)

By "Evelyn."

Somebody said that it couldn't be done,
But he with a chuckle replied
That maybe it couldn't, but he would be one
Who wouldn't say so till he'd tried.
So he buckled right in with the trace of a grin
On his face. If he worried he hid it.
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done, and he did it.

Somebody scoffed, Oh you'll never do that,
At least nobody ever has done it;
But he took off his coat and he took off his hat,
And the first thing he knew he'd begun it,
With the lift of his chin and a bit of a grin.
If any doubt rose he forhade it;
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done, and he did it.

There are thousands to tell you it cannot he done;
There are thousands to phophesy failure;
There are thousands to point out to you, one by one,
The dangers that wait to assail you.
But just buckle in with a bit of a grin,
Then take off your coat and go to it;
Just start in to sing as you tackle the thing
That cannot be done, and you'll do it.

NOTES.

Have you written your Congressmen and Senators in favor of stopping the manufacture and sale of all liquors during the war? If not, it would help the cause if you would do so at once.

Hon. William J. Bryan said the other day in Washington: "I am in hearty sympathy with the effort to conserve the food supply by not allowing the bread supply to be shortened in order to lengthen the supply of alcohol. It is not wise to starve the people in order to make them drunk."

For a second time in a little more than a year a Philadelphia jury awarded damages to the wife of a man injured as a result of liquor sold him, taxing the keeper of the saloon at which he obtained it to pay the sum adjudged to be proper. Having accompanied a fellow-workman to a dramshop, the man in question drank to excess, and, falling upon the street, fractured his skull and died. The widow was given $5000 by the jury.

The Alabama Advocate says: "A Washington saloon has in its window the following sign: 'In This Saloon John Wilkes Booth Took His Last Drink.' Booth went with that drink in him to kill a President. If every saloon whose drinks have fired men to crime would confess it, as does the brazen sinner in Washington, there would hardly be a one in the land that would not he bulletined with the badge of some heinous offense. And yet some so-called Christians will vote to retain these dens of iniquity."

IS THIS THE DRIFT?

President Charles M. Melden, of New Orleans College, in a communication to Zion's Herald says among other words these:

"The Methodist Episcopal Church has conceded about everything else that the Southern Church has demanded—Regional Conferences, a Supreme Court. But this, it seems, is not sufficient—the Negro must be degraded or excluded. We are to have an ecumenical Church with a great division of the human race unrepresented in our highest council. Negroes in America may well refuse to be a party to such an unholy arrangement. Negroes in Africa may well turn from missionaries who are sent to them from such a Church. Not until the Bible is rewritten and the Great Commission to make disciples of all nations is withdrawn, will the majority of us consent to it.

"That the advocates of separation are moved by an unselfish motive to do what is best for the Negro is difficult for one who has lived in the South to believe. We have seen too much of the unselfish and self-sacrificing toil of the Southern people for the elevation of the Negro to be much impressed by this argument. The opposition to the Negro is based upon an unchristian race prejudice, which is a survival of slavery. It refuses to see in him a man and a brother, but considers him an inferior and an underling who must be kept in "his place. If unification fails, whose is the responsibility?"

By reference to the recommendations adopted by our General Conference at Oklahoma City and those adopted by the General Conference of the Methodist Church at Saratoga Springs, it will require a curious sort of mental performance to see what concessions the Methodist Episcopal Church has made to our Church for the sake of unification. If that Church has made one single concession, we would be glad for President Melden or any other to point out what this concession is.

The intimation of insincerity on the part of the Southern Methodist Church in what it has stood for as regards the Negro membership in the reorganized Church is hardly gracious. It certainly is not, according to the facts, in so far as the record of our acts can show the spirit of our Church.

The question which closes President Melden's article as quoted above, we answer with perfect candor and faithfulness, to the records of the two Churches. If unification fails the responsibility for the failure will not rest upon the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The ardent advocates of union among us may see in the drift of what President Melden has written what at least some in the Methodist Episcopal Churches are striving to do. And that is just what we have for some time been inclined to believe, namely, put the responsibility for failure, which now seems certain, on our Church.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

By the Editor.

Dr. Lovett is eminently correct in his position. The Northern Methodist Church has made no concession of consequence in the interest of union. Dr. Melden's effort to cite such concessions is puerile and pitiful. Apart from the union negotiations, the Northern General Conference has two or three times declared by a large majority in favor of establishing a tribunal with power to veto unconstitutional acts; so it can hardly he contended that the suggestion of their Commissioners that they might he willing to have such a court, thus going as far as two or three of their General Conferences have gone, was a great concession. What have they proposed as to how this court is to he constituted? Nothing that would not give them the domination of it. The latest proposition of Dr. Blake, who is said to be about the most liberal man among them, is to bring the 1,750,000 colored Methodists into the proposed new Church and give them a proportionate representation on this tribunal—an arrangement that would be utterly out of harmony with the spirit of the South, and which it would likely ruin our Church to accept. There is not a colored judge in any Southern State; nor is there, for that matter, one on the Supreme Bench of the United States. And the Northerners want practically all legislative power centered in one General Conference, which they would inevitably control.

Neither has the Church, North, come to the position of the Church, South, respecting the matter of Regional Conferences. The plan of the original Joint Commission, which our Church endorsed, was to have only three such Conferences for the whites, each of these being largely autonomous, electing its own Bishops and being served by them, and the Southern Methodists in the South proper being kept together in one jurisdiction. The proposal of the Northern Church is to have six white Regional Conferences, which would cut the Church, South, into four or five segments; these Conferences having a very small measure of self-government and being served by a general episcopacy—the avowed object of this arrangement being to shatter "sectional solidarity." Such are the facts.

Dr. Melden's statement (which many are given to ringing the changes upon) that the status of the Negro in the suggested new Church is the only barrier to unification is not justified by the existing conditions. WE HAVE IT ON DEPENDABLE AUTHORITY THAT, ENTIRELY APART FROM THE NEGRO QUESTION, EXCEPT AS HIS RESIDENCE IN THE SOUTH MUST INDIRECTLY AFFECT NEARLY ALL PHASES OF THE ISSUE, THE COMMITTEE ON REGIONAL CONFERENCES MADE PRACTICALLY NO HEADWAY IN ITS MEETING AT ATLANTA LAST SPRING. Is it not about time to quit talking recklessly and tell the truth? If unification fails, as now seems probable, the colored people will not be to blame in any culpable sense, and such talk is a gross injustice to them. There is no good reason to believe that anything they could do would make union possible, unless they should migrate to some other country; and surely no one can reasonably demand that they sacrifice their homes and other property and make aliens of themselves in the interest of this cause.

POWER IN DEEP CONVICTIONS.

There is a marvelous power in a message that comes out of a deep conviction on the part of him who delivers it. Even those who may not agree with such a speaker can not fail to he impressed by what he says. Joseph Hume, the infidel, was fond of going to listen to John Brown, the godly Scotch minister of Haddington. Being charged by some of his free-thinking friends with inconsistency in so doing, he replied: "I do not believe all he says, but he does, and once a week I like to hear a man who believes what he says. Whatever I think, that man preaches as if he thought the Lord Jesus was at his elbow." More conviction on the part of the preacher would mean more interest on the part of those to whom he preaches.—Unidentified.

IS THIS COMING?

A writer in the "Christian Register" advocates "Sunday school clubs" instead of Sunday school classes. There is, he says, a vast difference between these. The class meets only once a week for religious study. The club includes educational, social, recreative, and character-building activities during the week. The programme of one such club includes Bible study, educational work, Boy Scout activities, hikes, picnics, socials, entertainments, father-and-son banquets, missionary work, social service, etc.—"the real stuff," as one boy put it.—The Outlook.

Conditions in China still seem to be quite unsettled, and there is some talk of the restoration of a monarchical government.

A HINT FROM JAPAN.

Baron Sakatani, one of the leading merchants of Japan, is visiting in this country. He said in Philadelphia, "The cause of the great war now raging in Europe was caused by nations putting too much weight upon the material, and forgetting the spiritual. Japan has been making the same mistake for the last sixty years, but now leading Japanese are feeling the necessity of emphasizing the spiritual."—Christian Intelligencer

BIRDS THAT NEVER GET TIRED.

Perhaps you have read about the birds that make their summer home far up in the north around the Arctic Ocean and then, when the summer is over, fly out to the southward and scarcely stop until they have reached lands that are only a few hundred miles from the South Pole. In making this wonderful journey they each and each travel in a year more than half around the world, or about 11,000 miles. These are the terns or sea-swallows and they are the greatest long-distance travelers among all the birds. So much do they like the long bright days that they have been called the "summer birds."

Another of the tireless bird travelers is the storm petrel, which sailors call "Mother Carey's chicken." These birds fly so close to the water that at times they seem to be walking on and down the waves. An interesting story is told about a storm petrel that followed a steamer all the way across the Atlantic. One of the passengers had brought the bird on board and put a ribbon around its neck, and released it. So soon was it out of sight of the passengers, who could easily distinguish it among others of its kind, when only a few miles from New York, the little petrel was neared, perhaps to follow another steamer back again to the other side.—Our Dumb Animals

BOBBY'S CONFESSION.

Willie Conger Page.

It was Eleanor's duty after school had been dismissed, to water the flowers feed the chickens and fasten them up for the night, for which her mother paid her thirty cents every month for her own use.

One afternoon Annie Wills, Eleanor's dearest friend, called for Eleanor to ride in her new cart.

The children had named their Shetland pony and he knew his name. Annie waited at the gate while Eleanor ran home to do her work.

She took the watering-pot from the hook, ran to the hydrant and soon every flower had a refreshing drink.

She scattered some food in the coops and it was not long before every hen and downy chick was safe and secure for the night.

Almost through called Eleanor to Annie, as she ran across the yard into the orchard where Lady Gray the motherly hen, and her brood stayed during the day.

Eleanor looked behind the hedge, under the raspberry bushes, and peeped over the fence but not a trace of the little turkeys could be found.

"Hurry Eleanor," called Annie, "it's getting late."

Eleanor went to the little house that had been built for the turkey family. In the corner of the yard. There she found Lady Gray, cooing and calling as if her throat and heart would break.

Eleanor went quickly to the house where her mother was sewing. "Oh mother I can't find the little turkeys at any place. They were all there at noon. Bobby helped me to feed them, and I left him watching them so!"

"Bobby, do you know where the little turkeys are? Tell sister."

Bobby crawled under his mother's bed and would not answer.

"Mother," said Eleanor, "I believe that Bobby knows something about them. He was [illegible]."

Bobby" [illegible] away the sewing. "Tell me [illegible] little turkeys are."

"He feels very [illegible] sad."

"Yes, mother, [illegible] mother."

"Now, [illegible] and feel [illegible] looking as he can."

"He washed [illegible] sorry tears."

"He put [illegible] by the [illegible]."

"What [illegible] washed their feet [illegible]."

"He [illegible] Eleanor [illegible] so angry."

"Now we will [illegible] Christmas [illegible]."

"We will [illegible] long [illegible]."

"You can," replied Eleanor [illegible] heart."

"Run along for your [illegible] Bobby."

"Son," said mother taking the little [illegible] arms, "you did wrong, but you are sorry, and [illegible] and were truthful about it. When [illegible] that you will never be anything [illegible] but feel everything will [illegible] and good."

"We will," said Bobby sobbing. [illegible]ington, Mass.

THANK YOU.

This story comes from the battle-front in France. A young officer was brought into the base hospital, shot in the throat, and with other serious wounds. After long treatment in France he was ordered home for the journey to England. In what it was in readiness the nurse noticed, that he still bore signs of uneasiness. She drew from his piteous eyes that he wished to say something. His right hand was wounded and his left was so helpless that it could not point a pencil. So the nurse questioned him, for he was [illegible] and understood. The doctor [illegible] asked and had an inspiration. "Is it Thank you?" he whispered. The boy's eyes gleamed, as he tried to nod, and he lay back [illegible] for the journey to another hospital.

This story reached the home of the mother in Scotland, and a loving sister went at once to their old nurse who lived near the "Big Wigan" mines. "Isn't it lovely, Nannie, that it was 'Thank you' Dick wanted to say?" she asked. But Nannie was not at all pleased. "Deserve ma bonnie man like that, an him the weak' ane to a', Missy." "Ah dinna think much [illegible] common sense. Gin I had bin there I wid ha kent fine what he wuz meanin'. Ay, it's true it will be 'Thank ye.' Thank ye' wuz the [illegible] first learnt. Maister Dick ever said in ween he left [illegible] them iver since."

Expression of appreciation had [illegible] the rule of life with the young officer. Even in the midst of suffering he was not unmindful of kindnesses shown.—Presbyterian Journal.

THE BANANA TREE.

The banana tree is a wonderful thing. Every part of it serves some good use. The long leaves work up into a fine excelsior. The juice, rich in tannin, furnishes a fine indelible ink and a good shoe polish. The stems yield a fine-grass quality of hemp from which can be made fine handkerchiefs, cords and ropes to any number of mats and brushes. The oil is used for giving banana flour, of nutritious quality, a taste by grinding the dried fruit. In fact, it is said that the natives of Jamaica could scarcely exist without the banana tree.—The King's Own.

Editorial

NO SUCH CONSTRUCTION ADMISSIBLE.

The view is now being put forth in certain quarters that our General Conference at Oklahoma City did not declare in favor of having the Negroes, in the effort to unify American Methodism, placed in an independent Church, but merely in some kind of separate organization within the new ecclesiasticism. A weaker piece of special pleading than this we do not remember ever to have seen.

Here is the language used by our General Conference: "We recommend that the colored membership of the various Methodist bodies be formed into an independent organization, holding fraternal relations with the reorganized and united Church." Obviously there are two things here: (1) "The reorganized and united Church; (2) an "independent organization, holding fraternal relations" with it. By no fair rule of construction can it be held that this "independent organization" was meant to be WITHIN the "reorganized Church." The fact that only "fraternal relations" are mentioned clearly excludes any connection of an organic character. The whole setting of the clause sustains this view.

This language of our General Conference has until now been universally interpreted, both in the North and in the South, as a declaration in favor of an independent CHURCH for the Negroes. There had not been, so far as our watchful observation has extended, a single variation from this construction, with the exception of a few cryptic expressions that have lately crept into some of our Southern Methodist papers, until this new interpretation blazed forth a few days ago. Can any one believe that the whole of American Methodism has been blundering up to the present time as to the meaning of this pronouncement?

But, after all, the best interpreter of the intent of any statement is the man who wrote it. The author of this declaration was Dr. James Cannon, Jr., and in discussions of it he has clearly shown that he designed it to mean an "INDEPENDENT CHURCH." He affirmed it to be a pronouncement for a relation like that sustained toward the Negroes by the Southern Baptists, which he set forth as follows: "The Southern Baptists have a clear-cut division. .....There is no mixing ecclesiastically among the white and Negro Southern Baptists." He also likened the suggested relation of the new Negro "organization" to the entirely independent Negro Methodist bodies. Again he thus asseverated: "We believe that it would disrupt our Church to change our policy. We set the Negroes apart in 1870 in a SEPARATE CHURCH, because we believed it was best for them and best for us, and we are satisfied that we did right. We hold exceedingly sympathetic relations with them. We visit their schools and their Conferences and do all that we can to help them. We do not think it wise to change our policy;.....a change in that policy would disrupt our Church." (See Dr. Cannon's recent address before the Laymen's Association of the Philadelphia Conference.) Similar statements have also been made by him as to the meaning of this provision in his own paper, the Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate.

If there be those on our Commission who see little else in the Oklahoma plan except the word, "TENTATIVE," and who feel that they are at liberty to disregard the expressed will of our Church, let them do so and take the consequences; but let them not try to write into a clear, unequivocal pronouncement what is not there, and was never intended to be. By the way, it would be interesting to see a statement by some of these loose interpreters of what they conceive to be the "basic principles" in the Oklahoma plan beyond which they may not go.

But why worry now about anything that the Commissioners may do? Will it not all have to come back to the Conferences? To be sure, this is true; but this lacks much of being an adequate safeguard for the welfare of our Church, for the reason that a controversy over a plan that would not keep our own people united would be exceedingly harmful, if not positively ruinous. One of the ablest and most practical of our connectional officers made substantially this statement to us a few months ago. The agitation of this union issue has been going on for over six years, and during the past twelve months it has been extremely harmful. It has revived old differences that were being allowed to rest, and has brought to the fore again the South's delicate and vexatious race problem in a way that has been not a little injurious. In the present unsettled conditions of things all the disaffected elements in the Church are breaking forth into activity and are making their vicious influence felt. Disintegrating forces are at work both from within and without. Our people are becoming disturbed and restless. Some presiding elders have lately told us that there are members of the Church in their districts who have stated that they will not contribute a dollar to any Church enterprise, local or connectional, until this movement has come to an end. If this agitation should go on and it should become manifest that there is really a possibility of our Church becoming disintegrated and absorbed (and all the plans that have been proposed except the Oklahoma scheme amount to that), the property question is certain to bulk increasingly large, and our schools, hospitals, and other interests may find it necessary to call in their agents and await the outcome of the terrific struggle that will follow.

Well may our Commissioners beware of precipitating such a storm and thus paralyzing the activities of Southern Methodism. The matters involved in this project are too vital and precious to imperil them in fanciful experimentations to see whether this or that scheme would command support. There has already been upon the part of Commissioners too much campaigning of this sort through the Church papers. Unless there is good reason to believe that it would keep our more than 2,000,000 members substantially united, no plan of union should be submitted. As is well known, the Oklahoma plan, in all its essential features, is utterly unacceptable to the Church, North; and the action of the General Conference does not require that some other kind of scheme be formulated, regardless of its effect upon our Church. We are not afraid that our people would not stand for the preservation of the integrity of Southern Methodism and defeat the entangling arrangements that are being proposed by vagarists; but the contest that would inevitably take place would, in our opinion, do great damage. It is for this reason that we hope our Commissioners will take steps to terminate these irritating negotiations, without kindling further the flames of discord among American Methodists, and especially among our own communicants.

SOME UNDERPAID WORKERS.

In an editorial on the need of a better support for the ministry, a contemporary gives out the following figures: "The pay-rolls of 1915 show that engineers of passenger trains received an average of $1796 for the year, and that engineers on freight trains received an average of $1526. According to the United States religious census taken in 1906, the results of which were published in 1910, an estimate on reports from 20,000 churches showed the average salary of a minister of the gospel in our country to be $663. In cities from 50,000 to 100,000 it was $1062; in cities of 25,000 to 50,000 it was $972, and in the remainder of the United States it was $573. There doubtless has been some appreciable increase in the average salary of our ministers within the past decade, but it is undoubtedly yet painfully small and inadequate.

There is only one other class of useful workers who are in the same category with ministers respecting the matter of insufficient pay, and they are the school teachers. According to the New York Independent, the average salary of all the school instructors in the United States is $525 per anuum. Which of these two occupations is least remunerative is a matter of some doubt. The ministers have the advantage in that most of them have homes furnished them and that they receive some perquisites; but, on the other hand, school terms seldom last longer than eight or nine months and teachers perhaps have more opportunity to pick up side earnings.

No class of toilers contribute more to the real upbuilding of society than thoso engaged in these two callings, and by every token the indispensable service which they are reudering should be more generously rewarded.

WISE AND TIMELY WORDS.

Bishop Candler's article in last week's issue of the Advocate in which he pointed out that the student bodies of our institutions of learning will be heavily drawn upon for soldiers in the great European war, and showed the importance of getting all our young people who are prepared to enter college to matriculate this fall, thus filling up this gap, was certainly wise and timely. In full accord with the Bishop's utterance is the following statement by Dr. P. P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education: "When the war is over there will be such demands upon us for men and women of knowledge and training as have never before come to any country. There will be equal need for a much higher general intelligence for citizenship than has been necessary until now. The world will have to be rebuilt and American college men will have to assume a large part of the task. * * * To what extent and how well we may be able to do this will depend upon the young men and women who are this year graduating from our high schools, and upon those who will follow in the next few years, to a larger degree than upon any other like number of people."

So, it behooves us as Methodists to see that our institutions of learning are well attended this fall. Nothing possible should be left undone toward filling their dormitories with students. Parents should be willing to make any reasonable sacrifice to educate their sons and daughters in this most crucial period, and our schools should strive to open the way for them to do this at the minimum cost. This is a work which cannot be neglected without irremediable loss.

TWO DANCES AND FIVE THEOLOGUES.

The "Commencement Program" of Vanderbilt University, which lies before us, shows two dances, and five theologues on the class roll for this year. Two dances and five preachers! What a perversion of the toils of McTyeire and the gifts of the Church! The sacrificial things which devout souls laid on the altar of the Church are used to serve the dancing devil! Hophni and Phinehas never did worse! And yet some would have our Bishops countenance the immorality by appointing Methodist preachers as professors to Vanderbiit. Why should they thus dishonor themselves and degrade the Church?

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Hugh K. McKee, of Foxworth, Miss., has brought us under obligations to him for a good list of subscribers from his charge. His work is progressing favorably.

Rev. T. L. Oakes, of McCool, Miss., in a letter bringing us several subscriptions, thus refers to his charge: "All is going well with us. Our people are kind and loyal."

Rev. E. G. Wood, of Standard, La., reports that his work is in fine shape, but that he finds quite enough to keep him busy. The Editor appreciates his generous words of commendation.

Rev. H. T. Carley requests us to state that his postoffice address during the summer will be Satartia, Miss. He expects, however, to be at the Seashore Divinity School, June 26-July 5.

At the recent Commencement of Mississippi College, at Clinton, Miss., the degree of LL.D. was bestowed upon President W. H. Smith, of the Mississippi A. & M. College, one of the most distinguished educators of this section.

Rev. G. W. Warren, Lefay, La., in a business communication to our office, makes the following reference to his field of labor: "My work is moving along nicely. The general interest is increasing and the people are getting closer to God."

We have in hand a program of the Aberdeen (Miss.) District Conference, which will be held at Amory, June 19-21. Obviously the presiding elder, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, has planned well for this occasion, which promises to be an interesting one.

Among those who have lately sent us encouraging lists of subscribers is Rev. J. H. Grice, of Bay Springs, Miss. Brother Grice may always be counted upon to take care of all the interests of the Church. He is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

Mrs. M. B. Dottery, formerly of Okolona, Miss., is now sojourning in Carbondale, Illinois; but she is still true to the South and her Church. She writes us most interestingly of matters pertaining to Southern Methodism. We dare say that she is much missed in Okolona.

Mr. W. A. Mouldin, of McCool, Miss., in renewing his subscription, says: "I like your paper. Your stand on the Vanderbilt and union questions has been all that we could ask. I am a Southern Methodist, first, last, and all the time. No union for me on any conditions."

We have learned with sincere regret that Mr. L. P. Brown, of Meridian, Miss., has been in rather feeble health for some weeks. Brother Brown is one of the most devout and useful laymen in Mississippi, and we earnestly pray that his health may soon be fully restored.

Rev. W. W. Nelson, the energetic pastor of the Scotland Circuit, Mississippi Conference, is leaving nothing undone to keep the Advocate going into the homes of his people. His work is making good headway, and he expects a satisfactory rounding out of his labors this fall.

Dr. S. A. Steel, of Shreveport, recently visited Minden, La., where he addressed a large audience under the auspices of the Wesley Bible Class. Referring to Minden in his monthly paper, "The Messenger," he says: "What a pretty little city it is, with its clean streets, smooth lawns, and green parks."

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of Macon, Miss., Treasurer of the Board of Education of the North Mississippi Conference, writes as follows: "Brother J. J. Baird, of the Ripley and Blue Mountain charge, is the first this year to send in the money to cover his educational assessment." Good for Brother Baird!

Dr. J. W. Beeson writes that Meridian College, Meridian, Miss., has had one of the most successful session in its history, and that the recent Commencement occasion was one of great interest. Having already announced the speakers who took part in the exercises, we will not repeat them in our crowded columns.

We are in receipt of an attractive card which reads as follows: "Mr. and Mrs. Percy Saunders announce the marriage of their daughter, Lucy Virginia, to Mr. Allen Strong Weissinger, on Monday, June 4, 1917, Greenville, Miss. At home after June 12 at Hillhouse, Miss." We congratulate the happy young couple and wish them much happiness.

The many friends of Gov. G. D. Shands, formerly of Mississippi, but who now resides in New Orleans, will regret to know that his health of late has been far from good. He is at this time undergoing treatment in the Presbyterian Hospital of this city. As we understand it, his condition at present is not considered serious and his recovery is expected.

Rev. James W. Rogers, of Tahlequa, Oklahoma, who formerly was a North Mississippian, has received 76 new members during the first five months of the Conference year, an average of four each Sunday. A new $3000 parsonage has also been constructed under his efficient leadership. We rejoice in the success of our worthy young friend.

Rev. C. T. Barton, of Ansted, W. Va., who is known to some of the Advocate's readers, is having a great pastorate in his present field. He has recently held four revival meetings in which there were 100 conversions and 64 additions to the Church—55 on profession of faith, and 9 by letter. He has also lately organized three Epworth Leagues.

In a "personal" concerning Rev. J. B. Randolph, of the North Mississippi Conference, recently carried in the Advocate, there was an error. It was the A.B., not the B.D., degree that he received at the Millsaps Commencement. The latter degree was awarded him by Vanderbilt University in 1909, when that institution was thought to belong to the Church.

Mr. B. C. Lee, of Coushatta, La., was in New Orleans Monday of this week and paid the Advocate office an appreciated call. Brother Lee had attended the Confederate Reunion in Washington and was en route home. He stated that he had greatly enjoyed his visit to the National Capital. He is a reader of the Conference organ and is interested in its circulation.

Be sure to read Rev. C. A. Battle's masterful analysis of Dr. Blake's latest proposed entanglement concerning unification. He shows what a ruinous mistake it would be for the Church, South, to enter into such an arrangement in a manner so clear that not "a peg or loop is left for the hanging of a doubt." Yet we dare say that there are some so blind that they will not see.

We are informed that Bishop E. R. Hendrix was present at Vanderbilt University when the Cole lectures were recently delivered and introduced the lecturer. It may be well, in this connection, to remember that our College of Bishops last fall refused to exercise longer the accorded privilege of confirming the men chosen to lecture on this foundation. More than this we do not care to say now.

Rev. C. B. Powell, of Plain Dealing, La., writes: "We are having a great revival here which has been in progress about a week. Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, of Yazoo City, Miss., is doing the preaching. He keeps in touch with God and is a power in his hands. I will write you more fully of our meeting later. We ask the readers of the Advocate to join us in praying that the revival fire may sweep this town."

Miss Elizabeth Streater, who for some years has been doing mission work at Guadalajara, and who has remained continuously there in spite of the Mexican war, passed through New Orleans a few days ago en route to Meridian, Miss., where she now is visiting her sister, Mrs. L. P. Brown. She will later go to Black Hawk, Miss., to spend some time with her brother, Mr. J. B. Streater. This gifted Christian worker is a woman of unusual consecration and has long been accomplishing much for the Master.

Brother B. S. Elliott, of Holcomb, Miss., sends us $4.50 to extend his subscription to 1920, remarking that many laymen might do this if they would. Brother Elliott is one of the livest district lay leaders of whom we have any knowledge. He refers in his communication most interestingly to the late session of the Holly Springs District Conference, complimenting highly the wide-awake presiding elder, Rev. J. H. Feits. We will let our readers see what he has to say in the next issue of the Advocate.

We make grateful acknowledgment to the following friends, whose kindness has not elsewhere been mentioned, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. C. A. Schultz, Gallman, Miss., 4; Rev. J. H. Smith, Carrollton, Miss., 4; Rev. W. W. Hartsfield, Rienzi, Miss., 2; Dr. B. F. Jones, Moss Point, Miss., 3; Rev A. J. Gearheard, La. Ave., New Orleans, 3; Rev. Paul M. Grice, Wiggins, Miss., 7; Rev. J. B. King, Florence, Miss., 4; Rev. C. A. Battle, Baton Rouge, La., 10; Rev. T. J. Warlick, Columbia, La., 9.

Rev. W. W. Drake, Secretary of Education of the Louisiana Conference, has sent us a paper of much interest dealing with recent educational events in the State, which reached us too late for publication in this number of the Advocate, but which will appear in our next issue. The late Commencement of Centenary College was a great occasion in every respect. The $100,000 Endowment Campaign is in fine shape, and never was the outlook for this historic institution so bright as it is now. Dr. R. H. Wynn, the gifted President, has a right to feel happy over the situation.

In last week's issue of the New York Christian Advocate Dr. E. B. Chappell, of Nashville, Tenn., had a strong article on unification, in which he ably argued for an Independent Negro Church. Obviously the Doctor does not think that the Oklahoma plan of union, that was so laboriously wrought out by some of the strongest men in American Methodism, is "a mere scrap of paper." That able utterance was worthy of a Bishop, and who knows but that it may help to bring its distinguished author to that position? Southern Methodists are casting about in this unsettled time for leaders of strength, conservatism, and courage. The Church is getting tired of men in high places whose "natural gait is a runaway pace."

Dr. Munhall, Editor of the Eastern Methodist (Philadelphia), who had been urging the Negroes in the Northern Methodist Church to withdraw and open the way for union, now that the Northern Bishops have approved the new rationalistic Course of Study for young preachers, writes in his paper as follows: "But if our colored members would withdraw from us, yet would we remain apart. I have twice incidentially in our columns called attention to an insuperable obstacle to unification, viz.: Our new Course of Study that the propagandists have illegally foisted upon us. Our Southern brethren are not in darkness as to the facts in the case, nor insensible to the revolutionary character of the Course itself." Dr. Munhall is right; Southern Methodists would be utterly foolish to enter into organic union with a much larger Church committed to the rotten "new theology." Yet it must be said that there are many among us who do not seem to care what kind of theology is taught our ministers and people. They appear to be utterly indifferent to this awful peril. For instance, the Editor had some time since a letter commending him for his vigorous defense of our doctrines, yet finding fault with him for opposing union. How strikingly inconsistent! The worst blow that could be struck the doctrinal soundness of Southern Methodism would be to unite with the Church, North.

SPURGEON'S CONVERSION.

As is very generally known, Dr. Charles Haddon Spurgeon, perhaps, with the exception of John Wesley, the greatest preacher of modern times, was converted under a sermon by an obscure Methodist minister whose name no one knows. Dr. Spurgeon thus describes this interesting event which exercised so far-reaching an influence in the world:

"I sometimes think I might have been in darkness and despair until now, had it not been for the goodness of God in sending a snowstorm, one Sunday morning, while I was going to a certain place of worship. When I could go no further, I turned down a side street and came to a little Primitive Methodist chapel. In that chapel there may have been a dozen or fifteen persons.....At last a very thin-looking man, a shoemaker, or tailor, or something of that sort, went up into the pulpit to preach.....The text was, 'Look unto me, and ye shall be saved, all the ends of the earth'.....The preacher began thus: 'My friends, this is a very simple text indeed. It says, Look. Now lookin' don't take a great deal of pains. It ain't liftin' your foot or your finger; it is just, Look. Well, a man needn't go to college to learn to look. You may be the biggest fool on earth and yet you can look'.....Then, lifting his hands, he shouted, as only a Primitive Methodist can shout, 'Young man, look to Jesus Christ. Look! Look! Look! You have nothing to do but look and live.' I saw at once the way of salvation.....There and then the cloud was gone, the darkness had rolled away and that moment I saw the sun; and I could have risen that instant and sung, with the most enthusiastic of them, of the precious blood of Christ and the simple faith which looks alone to him."

CORNS LIFT OUT WITH FINGERS

You simply say to the drug store man, "Give me a quarter of an ounce of freezone." This will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn from one's feet.

A few drops of this new ether compound applied directly upon a tender, aching corn should relieve the soreness instantly, and soon the entire corn, root and all, dries up and can be lifted out with the fingers.

This new way to rid one's feet of corns was introduced by a Cincinnati man, who says that, while freezone is sticky, it dries in a moment, and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

Don't let father die of infection or lockjaw from whittling at his corns, but clip this out and make him try it.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. Otherwise the obituaries will, without correspondence about them, be edited down to 200 words. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

Mrs. LOVICY ANN REBER, better known in this community as "Grandma Reber," died on Wednesday afternoon, May 30, having been confined to her bed six weeks. Sister Reber was born on November 13, 1835, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the age of 18 years. She was married to George Reber in 1866, and immediately moved to Covington, which had been her home up to the time of her death. The death of Sister Reber was the fourth in point of age of four of the old members of our church who have died in the past twelve months, Sister Wilson's age being 99 years; Sister Lacroix's 92, and Sister Clark's 82. The interment took place on Thursday afternoon in the Covington Cemetery, Rev. T. J. Embree, of Slidell, assisting the pastor in the burial service. Those who are left to mourn Sister Reber's going are two daughters and one son—Miss Mary Reber of Covington, Mrs. M. J. Carpenter of Slidell, and Mr. G. T. Reber, of Hattiesburg, Miss.—a number of grandchildren and a host of friends. My prayers are for those who are left behind. Sister Reber is safe, I have no doubt. J. M. BOYKIN.
Covington, La.

GUY E. FORMAN, son of Hon. Ed. J. Forman, was born in Amite County, Miss., on Oct. 31, 1875. He joined the Methodist Church when 16 years of age, and married when about 21. He finished the public school course of Amite County, and attended Johnson Institute, Greensburg, La., one session. He farmed and taught in public schools for a number of years, after which he took a course in law at the University of Mississippi. He was admitted to the bar in 1912, and was rapidly moving toward the front in his profession. He was stricken with paralysis, as a result of a brain tumor, on November 23, 1916, and, after lingering four months, died on March 23, 1917. As a layman in the Church, he was serving as a steward, Lay Leader, and Sunday school superintendent at the time of his death. In all of these offices he was both loyal and efficient. He was devoted to his family, being a good husband and a noble father. He belonged to one of the noblest families in Amite County, and was a good citizen. He died in the faith and hope of a child of God and we all expect to meet our friend in heaven. He leaves a wife, four daughters, an aged father, five brothers and a sister and many loved ones and friends who expect to join him again in the better land. His friend, J. E. WILLIAMS.
Sumrall, Miss., May 30, 1917.

SARAH LOUISE CROSSLEY was born on July 23, 1896, and on April 6, 1917, our Heavenly Father, in his wisdom, called her to come and dwell throughout eternity with Him. Her sweet nature was indeed one fashioned after His own image. There was not an object of the asthetic kind that did not appeal to her responsive nature; never did a flower, a bird-song or a beautifully colored sunset fall to bring to her bright face a responsive smile of recognition. Her remarkable life, though short, was unmistakably one of the most beautiful and finest of God's creations. She was an earnest Christian; and, though she is sorely missed from her earthly home, we are happy to know that our Lord loved her enough to take her early to a home so beautiful that her admiration and sweet smiles need never end. How God must have loved and trusted her when he deprived her in early childhood of an active life such as most of us enjoy; yet, with this affliction, she was an inspiration to her loved ones and many friends. Her appreciation of any kindness shown her by her friends and the daily blessings sent her by her Savior, was far beyond ordinary. Though she could not render service requiring activity, she was always thoughtful of others and ever found a way to help some one. She loved her Sunday school class and was a regular attendant both at Sunday school and on the Church services. We are happy to know that the beauties and joys of Heaven must grow constantly more beautiful to our loved sister, Louise. HER SISTERS.

IN MEMORIAM.

Whereas, God in His wisdom has seen fit to call from our midst to live with Him and His redeemed one of our beloved members, Mrs. A. J. Graves, on the night of April 1, 1917, we, the Woman's Missionary Society of Main Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., do hereby adopt the following resolutions:

1. That we sorrow greatly because of the going away from us of this gentle, refined, consecrated Christian woman and co-worker.
2. That we shall miss her kindly smile and goodly influence.
3. That we extend to her husband, children, and others of the family our sincere sympathy in this great bereavement, and pray God's blessings upon them.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our deceased sister, a copy forwarded to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy spread upon the minute book of our Society.

Signed: Mrs. A. A. Foote, Mrs. V. E. Hobgood, Mrs. H. Stuart Stevens.

HOLLY SPRINGS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Holly Springs District Conference was convened on March 3 at Coffeeville, Miss., in that district made delightful by its rolling plains, its historic associations, and its genial folks. The memories of Lamar, Walthall, and that gallant company of Mississippi lawyers of the Coffeeville Bar who were wounded and killed in the Battle of Shiloh, have conspired to make association with the people there a genuine joy and their hospitality a refreshment.

Rev. Ed. S. Lewis, of Oxford, preached the opening sermon from John 3:16 on Tuesday night, and on Wednesday morning, after the communion service was held, Rev. J. H. Felts, presiding elder, took the chair, and Rev. E. R. Smoot of Holly Springs was elected Secretary.

The Conference was a supreme benediction from start to finish. Brotherly love, Christian fellowship, and deep spirituality were manifested in all reports, prayers, sermons, and especially so in our presiding officer, who, by the way, is a genius of the deepest dye and a star of the first magnitude.

I have never attended a Conference where all got closer together and where we so well understood each other's problems, and rejoiced more in each other's successes. It was a great Conference — great in attendance, great in enthusiasm, great in reports par-excellent, and great in the stamp of God's approval. May God give us another when we come together again!

Brothers J. R. Countiss, T. M. Brownlee, Hicks Ellis, J. B. Randolph, R. H. B. Gladney, and Dr. Black were all present and gave an account of their stewardship, which was all full of success, teeming with optimism.

In order that the work of the Sunday school might progress still more the Conference elected the following district officers: Prof. J. R. Brinsom, President; Mrs. Chas. Partee, Secretary and Treasurer; Miss Lizzie Horn, Missionary Superintendent; Mrs. Lester G. Fant, Elementary Superintendent; Mrs. W. S. Tunnage, Superintendent Home Department; Julian S. Duncan, Superintendent Teacher-training Department; Mrs. F. E. McCutchan, Superintendent Wesley Bible Class Department.

Brother B. S. Elliott of Holcomb, our Lay Leader, made his report, which showed that he had conscientiously done all in his power to assist the brethren in their charges, and at the conclusion of the report he was unanimously elected to succeed himself.

The following lay delegates to the Annual Conference, and alternates, were elected: Delegates: R. M. Sharp, Judge J. G. McGowen, D. H. Bishop, J. N. Balley. Alternates: J. R. Brinsom and R. X. Williams.

The preaching of the Conference was done by Brothers E. S. Lewis, T. H. Porter, E. R. Smoot, A. H. Williams, and Dr. Black, of the Mississippi Conference.

Brother Julian Smith Duncan, of Oxford, was granted license to preach the Gospel and was extended the good-fellowship of the fellows.

Resolutions of high regard and esteem and deep gratitude were extended to the pastor, W. L. Storment, and his church, and also to the whole of Coffeeville, who so graciously opened to us their hearts and homes.

E. R. SMOOT, Secretary.

THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON COMMITTEE.

By Charles D. Bulla.

The total circulation of Sunday school literature in the United States and Canada is about twenty-five million copies annually. In the light of this statement it may be said that no other body of similar size exercises a greater influence in the program of Protestantism than the International Sunday School Lesson Committee.

The new International Sunday School Lesson Committee met in Washington, D. C., December 29, 1914, at which time a permanent organization was effected. Membership on the committee is composed of three classes: (1) Eight members elected by the International Sunday School Association; (2) eight members elected by the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations; (3) one member selected by each denomination represented in the Sunday School Council and having a lesson committee. The membership at present is forty. The officers of the committee are: Chairman, Elson I. Rexford; Vice Chairman, Henry H. Meyer; Secretary, Ira M. Price; Treasurer, W. O. Fries. Dr. E. B. Chappell is a member of the Subcommittee on Improved Uniform Lesson Courses, and Charles D. Bulla is a member of the Subcommittee on Graded Lesson Courses.

PALPITATION AND OTHER DISORDERS OF THE HEART.

Weak hearts are exceedingly common. Directly you are conscious of the fact that you have a heart, it means that your heart is not acting normally and that it needs attention.

Every time your heart misses a beat its efficiency is lessened.

Heart trouble, taken in its early stages, may not be difficult to relieve; but the more the treatment is delayed the harder it is to obtain permanent relief. If there is the slightest symptom to show that your heart is weak or diseased you should not delay taking treatment.

Dr. Miles' Heart Treatment has been the popular choice for more than twenty years. It has stood the test of time in a manner that forbids any doubt as to its efficiency. People who praised this remedy twenty years ago still believe in it and are only too glad to state that the trouble has never returned.

Any of these symptoms may indicate heart trouble: Shortness of Breath, Fluttering or Palpitation; Choking Sensation; Irregular Pulse; Weak or Hungry Spells, Swelling of Feet or Ankles, Pain under the Left Shoulder Blade.

If you notice any of these symptoms get a bottle of Dr. Miles' Heart Treatment. You risk nothing, for if the first bottle fails to benefit you, you have only to return the empty bottle to your druggist and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

OLD TRUTHS.

They talk foolishly who prate about the discovery of new religious truths. Deeper insight into the meaning and reach of revealed truth there probably will be as the Church gains more of the life which flows from her union with the person of the living Christ. But the truths by which she is to attain to higher purity, and by which the world is to be saved, are as old as the time of Christ. What the age needs is not new truths, but the old, old truth earnestly spoken in the language of the present time. There is eminent suggestiveness, therefore, in these words of Professor Shairp: "The deepest truths are always becoming commonplaces until they are revivified by thought. And they are true thinkers and benefactors of their kind who, having thought them over once more and passed them through the alembic of their own hearts, bring them forth fresh minted and make them tell anew on their generation."—Eastern Methodist.

Why Don't You Smile?

Are you melancholy, and pessimistic, wearing a disagreeable frown on your face? The trouble is with your liver. If you had an active and healthy liver you would be cheerful and happy. The well-known reliable remedy, Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Regulator makes lazy livers active and restores that smile to your face. If you have a sluggish liver, Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Regulator will rectify the trouble, relieving you of the possible dangers of auto-intoxication or self-poisoning which is the inevitable result of habitual constipation. For sale by druggists, price 50 cents. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

INTENSITY IN PREACHING

Intensity of feeling, which is something different from explosive utterance or rhetorical pyrotechnics, is the really moving element in all good preaching. In Yorkshire, England, there are many keen sermon-tasters among the Nonconformists, and they are not averse to expressing their opinion of "pulpit performances." One of these pious appraisers of homiletic efforts said to an occupant of the pulpit on a certain occasion: "Ah, say, Mister, you preached a goodish sermon to-night, but if it had been cut short at beath ends and set afire in the middle, it wad a dean ns mare good." It will be noted that the critic said "fire," not "noise." What he wanted, with a sure intuition of the excellent in Gospel pleading, was heat—as well as light. Not all pulpit themes may, of course, induce in the speaker this intense emotional mood, but, when it comes to appealing to men to give their hearts to God—and all sermons should have that end in view—the very soul of the preacher should burn itself through the tissue of his discourse.—Zion's Herald.

"Some people believe in nothing—or, at least, in only what they can understand, and it may amount to the same thing."

The Root of Skin Troubles

Skin diseases are caused by parasitic germs, and unless these germs are killed your skin trouble will last indefinitely, growing worse each day. These parasitic germs may be killed and without any injurious effect by simply applying Tetterine, a fragrant salve. It is commended highly by the best physicians. Former United States Senator Mason

Pioneer in Pure Food and Drugs Legislation, Father of Rural Free Delivery System

Takes Nuxated Iron

to obtain renewed strength, power and endurance after the hardest fought political campaign of his life in which he was elected Congressman from the State of Illinois. The results he obtained from taking Nuxated Iron were so surprising that

SENATOR MASON NOW SAYS

Nuxated Iron should be made known to every nervous, run down, anaemic man, woman and child.

Opinion of Dr. Howard James, late of the Manhattan State Hospital of New York, and formerly Assistant Physician Brooklyn State Hospital, who has prescribed and thoroughly tested Nuxated Iron in his own private practice.

WHAT SENATOR MASON SAYS:

"I have often said I would never recommend medicine of any kind. I believe that the doctor's place. However, after the hardest political campaign of my life, without a chance for a vacation, I had been starting to court every morning with that horrible tired feeling one cannot describe. I was advised to try Nuxated Iron. As a pioneer in the pure food and drugs legislation, I was at first loath to try an advertised remedy, but after advising with one of my medical friends, I gave it a test. The results have been so beneficial in my own case I made up my mind to let my friends know about it, and you are at liberty to publish this statement if you so desire. I am now sixty-five years of age, and I feel that a remedy which will build up the strength and increase the power of endurance of a man of my age should be known to every nervous, run-down anaemic man, woman and child."

Senator Mason's statement in regard to Nuxated Iron was shown to several physicians who were requested to give their opinions thereon.

Dr. Howard James, late of the Manhattan State Hospital of New York, and formerly Assistant Physician Brooklyn State Hospital, said: "Senator Mason is to be commended on handing out this statement on Nuxated Iron for public print. There are thousands of men and women who need a strength and blood-builder, but do not know what to take. There is nothing like organic iron—Nuxated Iron—to give increased strength, snap, vigor, and staying power. It enriches the blood, brings roses to the cheeks of women and is an unfailing source of renewed vitality, endurance and power for men who burn up too rapidly their nervous energy in the strenuous strain of the great business competition of the day."

Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York physician and medical author, said: "I heartily endorse Senator Mason's statement in regard to Nuxated Iron. There can be no vigorous iron men without iron. Pallor means anaemia. Anaemia means iron deficiency. The skin of anaemic men and women is pale; the flesh flabby; the muscles lack tone; the brain fags and the memory fails and often they become weak, nervous, despondent and melancholy.

In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated corn-meal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste-pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked are responsible for another grave iron loss.

Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe old age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron—Nuxated Iron—just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."

Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician who has studied abroad in great European Medical Institutions said: "Senator Mason is right. As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders.

Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking organic iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in—and now at 50 after taking nuxated iron, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change your food into living tissue. Without it no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly-looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next, take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of dyspepsia, liver and all symptoms of other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is, alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete and prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray; while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City, said: "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But in the case of Nuxated Iron I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach, on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take an ailing man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

From the Congressional Directory, published by the United States Government—"Wm. E. Mason, Senator from Illinois was elected to the 50th Congress in 1887, to the 51st Congress in 1891—defeated for the 52nd Congress 189 —Elected Senator to the 55th Congress 1897 to 1903."

Senator Mason's championship of Pure Food and Drugs legislation, his fight for the rural free delivery system, and his strong advocacy of all bills favoring labor and the rights of the masses as against trusts and combines, made him a national figure at Washington and endeared him to the hearts of the working man and the great masses of people throughout the United States. Senator Mason has the distinction of being one of the really big men of the nation. His strong endorsement of Nuxated Iron must convince any intelligent thinking reader that it must be a preparation of very great merit and one which the Senator feels is bound to be of great value to the masses of people everywhere, otherwise he could not afford to lend his name to it, especially after his strong advocacy of pure food and drugs legislation.

Since Nuxated Iron has obtained such an enormous sale—over three million people using it annually—other iron preparations are often recommended as a substitute for it. The reader should remember that there is a vast difference between ordinary metallic iron and the organic iron contained in Nuxated Iron, therefore always insist on having Nuxated Iron as recommended by Dr. Howard James, Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York, and other physicians. In this connection Dr. Howard James says:

"Iron to be of the slightest value to the human system must be in a combination which may be easily assimilated. In the case of metallic salts of iron, iron acetate, etc., it is very doubtful if sufficient actual iron can be taken up and incorporated into the blood to be of any service, especially in view of the disadvantages entailed by its corrosive action upon the stomach and the damaging effect upon the dental enamel. When, however, we deal with iron in organic combination, such for instance as albuminate, or, better still, Nuxated Iron, a far different story is told. We will observe no destructive action upon the teeth; no corrosive effect upon the stomach. The iron is readily assimilated into the blood and quickly makes its presence felt in increased vigor, snap and staying power."

A Message from the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America in Special Session assembled at Washington, D. C., May 8-9, 1917.

The following message on the duty of the Church in this hour of national need has been issued by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America now in special session in Washington:

After long patience, and with a solemn sense of responsibility, the government of the United States has been forced to recognize that a state of war exists between this country and Germany, and the President has called upon all the people for their loyal support and whole-hearted allegiance. As American citizens, members of Christian Churches gathered in federal council, we are here to pledge both support and allegiance in unstinted measure.

We are Christians as well as citizens. Upon us, therefore, rests a double responsibility. We owe it to our country to maintain intact and to transmit unimpaired to our descendants our heritage of freedom and democracy. Above and beyond this, we must be loyal to our divine Lord who gave His life that the world might be redeemed, and whose loving purpose embraces every man and every nation.

As citizens of a peace-loving nation, we abhor war. We have long striven to secure the judicial settlement of all international disputes, but since, in spite of every effort, war has come, we are grateful that the ends to which we are committed are such as we can approve. To vindicate the principles of righteousness and the inviolability of faith as between nation and nation; to safeguard the right of all people, great and small alike, to live their life in freedom and peace; to resist and overcome the forces that would prevent the union of the nations in a commonwealth of free peoples conscious of unity in the pursuit of ideal ends—these are aims for which every one of us may lay down our all, even life itself.

We enter the war without haste or passion, not for private or national gain, with no hatred or bitterness against those with whom we contend.

No man can foresee the issue of the struggle. It will call for all the strength and heroism of which the nation is capable. What is the mission of the Church in this hour of crisis and danger? It is to bring all that is done or planned in the nation's name to the test of the mind of Christ.

That mind, upon one point, we do not all interpret alike. With sincere conviction some of us believe that it is forbidden the disciples of Christ to engage in war under any circumstances. Most of us believe that the love of all men, which Christ enjoins, demands that we defend with all the power given us the sacred rights of humanity. But we are all at one in layalty to our country, and in steadfast and whole-hearted devotion to her service.

As members of the Church of Christ, the hour lays upon us special duties:

To purge our own hearts clean of arrogance and selfishness.

To steady and inspire the nation.

To keep ever before the eyes of ourselves and of our allies the ends for which we fight.

To hold our own nation true to its professed aims of justice, liberty and brotherhood.

To testify to our fellow-Christians in every land, most of all to those from whom for the time we are estranged, our consciousness of unbroken unity in Christ.

To unite in the fellowship of service multitudes who love their enemies, and are ready to join with them in rebuilding the waste places as soon as peace shall come.

To be diligent in works of relief and mercy, not forgetting those ministries to the spirit to which, as Christians, we are especially committed.

To keep alive the spirit of prayer, that in these times of strain and sorrow men may be sustained by the consciousness of the presence and power of God.

To hearten those who go to the front, and to comfort their loved ones at home.

To care for the welfare of our young men in the army and navy that they may be fortified in character and made strong to resist temptation.

To be vigilant against every attempt to arouse the spirit of vengeance and unjust suspicion toward those of foreign birth or sympathies.

To protect the rights of conscience against every attempt to invade them.

To maintain our Christian institutions and activities unimpaired, that the soul of our nation may be nourished and renewed through the worship and service of Almighty God.

To guard the gains of education, and social progress and economic freedom, won at so great a cost, and to make full use of the occasion to set them still further forward, even by and through war.

To keep the open mind and the forward look, that the lessons learned in war may not be forgotten when comes that just and sacred peace for which we pray.

Above all, to call men everywhere to new obedience to the will of our Father, God, who in Christ has given himself in supreme self-sacrifice for the redemption of the world, and who invites us to share with Him his ministry of reconciliation.

To such service we would summon our fellow-Christians of every name. In this spirit we would dedicate ourselves and all that we have to the nation's cause. With this hope we would join hands with all men of good-will of every land and race, to rebuild on this war-ridden and desolate earth the commonwealth of mankind, and make of the kingdom of the world the Kingdom of Christ.

The Blood and the Brain.

Among the many important physiological facts that should be as well known by people generally as they are by physicians, is the dependence of the brain for its proper action on the vitality of the blood. If this is impaired, the blood affords an imperfect stimulus to the brain, and, as a necessary consequence, languor and inactivity of the entire nervous system follows, and a tendency to headache or faintness makes its appearance.

It is probable that no other medicine ever produced has done more in the way of revitalizing the blood, making it pure and rich, than Hood's Sarsaparilla, which should certainly be given a trial where there is any reason to believe that the blood is defective in quality or deficient in quantity.—Adv.

A REMARKABLE STATEMENT

Mrs. Sheldon Spent $1900 for Treatment Without Benefit. Finally Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Englewood, Ill. — "While going through the Change of Life I suffered with headaches, nervousness, flashes of heat, and I suffered so much I did not know what I was doing at times. I spent $1900 on doctors and not one did me any good. One day a lady called at my house and said she had been as sick as I was at one time, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made her well, so I took it and now I am just as well as I ever was. I cannot understand why women don't see how much pain and suffering they would escape by taking your medicine. I cannot praise it enough for it saved my life and kept me from the Insane Hospital."—Mrs. E. SHELDON, 5657 S. Halsted St., Englewood, Ill.

Physicians undoubtedly did their best, battled with this case steadily and could do no more, but often the most scientific treatment is surpassed by the medicinal properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complication exists it pays to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special free advice.

Rheumatism Should Be Nipped In The Bud

Rheumatism in its early stages may delude you into believing that it is a disease of a purely local and temporary nature. Beyond a slight numbness of the limbs and pains in the joints or back, there may be no outward indications of it, but if you do not heed these warnings, or if you rely upon liniments to cure you, it will grow rapidly worse until you have Rheumatism in its most violent form.

These symptoms, mild in the beginning but growing steadily worse, indicate that your blood is impregnated with Uric Acid, which, if not eradicated, will contaminate your entire system. The results will be racking pains in the joints, muscles and limbs, chronic stomach troubles ,and a sluggish liver.

The only relief is in the restoration of the blood to its normal, vigorous condition, which can be accomplished by taking S. S. S., the unfailing remedy for rheumatic troubles. Our Medical Department is at the disposal of all users of S. S. S. Swift Specific Co., 303 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga.

What Is Uric Acid?

Everyone has uric acid in the system, but naturally in small quantities. Excessive amount is caused by eating too much meat and foods that ferment in stomach. The kidneys, being the filters of the blood, are supposed to separate and throw the poisons out of the system. Weak, tired and overworked kidneys fail to do this, hence the uric acid accumulates and the urate salts are carried by the blood to the solid tissue structure, causing backache, lumbago, rheumatism, dropsy, drowsiness, and tired feeling.

To overcome the trouble is only a matter of toning up the kidneys, and this is best done by a treatment with Anuric, three times a day. Anuric is a recent discovery of Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., and can be obtained at any drug store.

Experience taught Doctor Pierce that Anuric is a more powerful agent than lithia in dissolving uric acid, and it is then carried out of the system.

In those scrofulous conditions of the blood which invite Consumption; in severe, lingering Coughs, and Weak Lungs, which threaten you with this fatal disease, and when other help has failed—this medicine is a proved remedy.

As a blood-cleansor, strength-restorer, and tonic it is sure to benefit. In all lingering Bronchial and Throat affections, and in every disease that can be reached through the blood, it never fails to benefit or cure. In tablet or liquid form.

The machinery of the body needs to be well oiled, kept in good condition just as the automobile, steam engine or bicycle. Why should the human neglect his own machinery more than that of his horse or his engine? Yet most people do neglect themselves. Clean the system at least once a week with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

From the Field

Mantachie, N. Miss. Conf.

We have written nothing about the Mantachie charge this year. We are out here in the quiet, old-time country, where people live in the old-time way. We have as fine a type of people as can be found anywhere. "Times are hard," they say; and I really believe it. We have filled and supplied all our appointments except two this year. I have had good health, being able to meet all calls except at one time, when I had a chill in the early spring. Our church work is not as "booming," as some of the preachers report; but we are praying, preaching and working hard, and we truly hope to be able to make a good report at Oxford. We are seeking to put on an "every-member" canvass for our benevolent claims. We have never tried this before, and we should be glad to hear from some of the brethren as to methods that they have found effective. Our revival campaign will soon commence. We will begin at Mantachie on the fourth Sunday in July.—A. J. Henry, P. C.

Seminary, Miss.

We have just closed one of the best meetings that has been held at our church here at Seminary for several years. The meeting began on the third Sunday in May. Rev. W. B. Jones, our presiding elder, preached for us at both services on the opening day. On Monday, Dr. H. F. Tolle of Biloxi, came to us, and stayed through the fourth Sunday in May. Dr. Tolle certainly brought us great messages. He is one of the best revivalists in our Conference. All pleaded with him to stay and run the meeting another week. There were two features of the meeting that deserve special mention: One was the co-operation of the other denominations, who joined in with us and helped as true Christians. The other feature was the real awakening that took place among the cold, backslidden church members. Dr. Tolle preached the entire week to the church, only opening the doors of the Church once, and then by request. He said that he felt his mission was to the church. We certainly had a good meeting.—J. H. Jolly, P. C.

Bucatunna, Miss.

Brother Thompson, our presiding elder, assisted us in an enjoyable meeting at State Line some weeks ago. Brother Thompson captured all of us by his faithful and very safe work during the meeting, especially with his good, clear and deep theological preaching. Good was accomplished that will abide.

Rev. J. M. Smith, of Rose Hill, Miss., a local preacher in our church, was with us in a meeting at Chicora last month for eight days and he proved to be the very man for that place. Brother Smith is a very strong preacher, especially for a young man (he is not much more than a boy). He captured the people from the beginning and our attendance was very gratifying at each service. Likely 200 or more were definitely touched for a better life and 50 came for membership in the different Churches; and the revival continues. More have come for membership, and we have begun a prayer-meeting, the attendance at which has grown to over 100. Quite an interest is manifested at each meeting. These good people have made arrangements for a car to transfer me over to Chicora to attend the prayer-meeting, and I am always glad when the time comes to go to this prayer-meeting—not on account of the car ride, which is by no means unpleasant, but to worship God in a mid-week prayer-meeting with so many good people.

We have a new cover on our parsonage and hope to make more improvements soon. We are very glad that it has fallen to our lot to labor in a field where there are so many good people.—D. E. Vickers.

CALOMEL MAKES YOU SICK, UGH!

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Better Than Calomel and Can Not Salivate.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for 50 cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the net day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

A Godsend to Rheumatics.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold, rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts, which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood. The cause of rheumatism is uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expels the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of your rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh, of the Nashville Railway and Light Company, says: "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. Ask your druggist for it, or write WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Adv.

between the two branches of Methodism." Harmony upon a vaster scale, brotherliness with a more serene basis, unity with a greater meaning, will be the characterization of that day when the two denominations determine to "deal gently" with one another, "in honor preferring one another." But it cannot be one-sided. Let the difficulties be settled, let the problems of the other be studied, and let love and unity prevail.

SPECIAL DAYS.

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

The subject indicated in the above caption is one which, in my candid opinion, deserves not only serious consideration but some adverse criticism as well. We are overdoing the thing in our Church. There is, Missionary Rally Day, Decision Day, Children's Day, Temperance Day, Father's Day, Mother's Day, Go-to-Church Day, Go-to-Sunday School Day, and a score of others. Take the calendar as announced by the Mississippi Conference Boards at the last annual session and you will find that nearly every Board and some of the committees are asking for the observance of a day for some special interest. Yes, even the committees are beginning to ask for Special Days. Looking over the reports of the committees and Boards of the Mississippi Conference, I find the Hospital Committee asking that the fourth Sunday in January be observed as Hospital Day. Next on the calendar is the Board of Education setting apart the fourth Sunday in February as Vocation Day. The Board of Missions recommends the observance of Easter Sunday as Missionary Rally Day. The Epworth League Board, determined that it will not be outdone by the other Boards in asking for Special Days, names certain dates as Quiet Hour Covenant Day, Epworth Era Day, Fellowship Week, Anniversary Day, Education Day, Epworth League Rally Day, and Missionary Study Rally Day.

Other interests are also calling for Special Days. For instance, there is Anti-Tuberculosis Day, and last year the A. & M. College sent out a circular asking the pastors to observe Home-Water-Works Day, inclosing an outline sermon, prepared by a Methodist preacher, as a model for other preachers. Thus it goes—ad infinitum, ad nauseam; and the patient pastor who, of course, is expected to see that all Special Days are observed, has to keep his mouth shut because those "higher up" have decreed that it shall be done. In the meantime, the pastor silently groans under the burden of it all.

Now, let me ask, Whereunto shall this thing grow? May we not expect, after awhile, to have Don't-Lie Day, Be-Honest Day, Don't-Gossip Day, and, while we are at it, why not have Poor-Overburdened-Pastor Day, and Preach-the-Gospel Day?

There is another feature about this Special Day business that I must not overlook: Every one of these Boards, committees, and various interests has its secretaries to send a circular letter to all the pastors, calling special attention to its particular Special Day, innocently ignorant of the fact, apparently, that the pastors toss all such letters into the waste-basket unread. This must involve, in the matter of postage, a considerable expenditure of money which, being diverted from its legitimate channel for which the donors intended it, is wasted. The secretaries of some of these Boards and committees have the courage to ask the pastors to reply to their communications without the courtesy of inclosing postage.

Well, what are the pastors going to do about this Special Day craze? I can speak for myself—I am going to do precisely what I have been doing: cast all such communications into the waste-basket unread, and let the Special Day pass unobserved; and I suspect that is what all other pastors are doing. The truth is, the Boards have multiplied these Special Days until there are two or three for every Sunday in the year, and if the pastors were to try to observe them all they would have left not even one Sunday for preaching the gospel. The multiplicity of these Special Days has resulted in making them so common that but few of them receive any attention. They have passed into boredom, where, I trust, they will receive a decent burial.

AN IMPORTANT MEETING.

At a joint meeting of the presiding elders of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, held at the Seashore Camp Ground in 1916, it was agreed that a like meeting be held, during the session of the Divinity School at Biloxi, Miss., in 1917. As chairman of the meeting of 1916, I have been requested to announce that the meeting this year will be held June 28. The presiding elders of the Alabama Conference are cordially invited to meet with us.

Editorial

"Be thy duty high as an angel's flight,
Fulfill it, and a higher will arise,
Even from its ashes. Duty is infinite,
Receding as the skies.
Were it not wisdom, then, to close our eyes
On duties crowding only to appall?
No; duty is our ladder to the skies,
And climbing not, we fall."

Times of depression or upheaval are seasons of great danger. People are peculiarly susceptible to being misled when such periods come, and even the noblest institutions are liable to be undermined and destroyed. Such a time is now upon us, and all kinds of wild theorists are abroad in the land with their preachments. The would-be saviors of civilization are numerous, and many are the priceless things that they would tear up and mold into something else in their experimentations. Well may we pray for common sense now, when the reign of hysteria is so widespread.

How many of us believe that the human soul is "the thing of greatest price the whole creation round," according to the testimony of our actions? Are we as Christians making the salvation of the lost the flaming passion of our lives? Oh, in ministering to the needy bodies of men, which is a good work, let us not forget their far more needy spirits, to which such service may in many cases give us access. This is one of the perils of the present age. Physical ministrations are comparatively easy and the results are visible and cheering; but spiritual ministries are exceedingly difficult and often the fruits are not discerned by human eyes in the present life. But it is the latter that count for most in far-reaching effects, both in time and in eternity.

THE CHURCHES AND THE GREAT WAR.

Have the Christian Churches of the United States a part to perform in the vast world-war into which our Nation has entered? Of this there can be no doubt, and the service which it is incumbent upon them to render is a large and important one. It is not to become recruiting camps to bring men to the colors, not to stir up from the pulpit a feeling of bitterness against the Germans, that they are, in our opinion, called, though the atrocities committed by the armies of the Central Powers are enough to make the feelings of every civilized man flame forth in indignation. In a quiet and orderly way, we think that the Churches should stand emphatically for loyalty to our Government and support it with the full weight of their influence; but we do not believe that in this appalling hour their chief function has ceased to be a ministry of love to the spiritual and physical needs of men. In many congregations there are persons that were born in the countries that are now at war with our land; their kindred are in the armies on the other side, and, though they are obedient to the mandates of our Government, their hearts are anxious and weighted down, and it partakes of the nature of cruelty when they go to the house of God seeking comfort, for a minister to pour out fiery philippics of a kind that cannot but sting and wound them at a time when they need the tender messages of the Gospel. Surely our commission is to strengthen and help all the needy sheep of the great Chief Shepherd, whatever may be their nationality and natural ties. To speak in accord with the feeling of the majority and appeal to the popular sentiment may win applause for the present; but the question really to be considered is, What would the Master have us do?

Moreover, our own American people never needed to have the great spiritual truths of the Gospel faithfully proclaimed to them more urgently than they do in this oppressive and painful crisis. Our young men may soon be bleeding and dying upon cruel battlefields, and our young women and others will be ministering to the wounded in hospitals. Should we not, therefore, drive home, as never before, the fact that the greatest of all questions in war, as in peace, is that of one's personal relation to Christ? Valor, however splendid, cannot save the soul of the soldier—faith in the crucified but living Lord alone can do that. This is the witnessing that the followers of Jesus should faithfully speak out as our brave sons go forth to face the awful storms of shot and shell, from which many of them will never emerge. And oh, how the anxious and suffering ones that are to be left behind need to be led into a more conscious touch with the all-sufficient Savior, that he may sustain them amid the trials and sorrows that are to come! Certainly if any conditions could incite ministers to break away from the formal and transient things of time, and set them to dealing in dead earnest with the awful realities of this earthly life in its relation to eternity, the appeal which the present situation makes to them should have this effect.

But there are other duties of a specific nature that are now incumbent upon the Churches. One of these is to look after the religious welfare of the soldier-boys while they are in camp, both here in the homeland and when they go abroad. We are glad to see the different denominations bestirring themselves to provide in adequate numbers chaplains for the great army that is in the process of being made. We trust that many of our best young preachers—men who are not only physically fit, but who are also strong spiritually—will find their way into this service. Should we not pray that God may guide in their selection?

The Christian people of the Nation should also see that our troops, wherever they may be quartered, are surrounded by wholesome influences. This they should demand at the hands of our legislators. The dramshop and the scarlet woman should be absolutely barred from any contact with any portion of our army. The Churches should co-operate heartily with the Young Men's Christian Association in its efforts to be of helpful service to our soldiers and make their camp life more pleasant and attractive. And, of course, the matter of providing Bibles and good literature for those in the ranks must not be overlooked.

Still another thing that we think should have the immediate and energetic attention of the Churches, is the task of raising funds for the Red Cross work. In our opinion, every Christian congregation in the land should insist upon having a part in this needed and nobly benevolent movement. Here is a great opportunity also for our Sunday schools and adult Bible classes. Undoubtedly it is eminently fitting that the followers of Christ, in whose teachings philanthropy had its birth and has found its chief inspiration, should contribute largely to the service of caring for the sick and wounded wherever our flag may be borne. We would urge our pastors to get into touch with those charged with the promotion of this cause in their various sections and lend it a strong helping hand. The amount to be raised at present for this purpose in the United States is $100,000,000.

AN ILLUMINATING ARTICLE.

We trust that none of our readers will overlook the article entitled "Japanese Methodism and Unification," from the pen of Prof. Arthur D. Berry, which appears in this issue of the Advocate. Prof. Berry analyzes the wild dream of a world-wide Methodism under one government, and shows how utterly impracticable and absurd it is. The truth is, there is no likelihood of any such scheme ever being wrought out, and in our opinion the parading of it is being done with the hope that it may tend to dazzle Southern Methodists and lure them into the net which has been spread for them. Note how amazingly illogical the advocates of such an arrangement are. In one paragraph of an utterance they will plead earnestly for the building up of a closely related and enduring Methodism all over the world, and in another they will affirm that the day of religious denominations will soon be at an end, and that all the Protestant Churches will be merged into one—the two programs being completely contradictory. The "great" Dr. Blake did precisely this thing in his latest deliverance, which some of the ultra-unionists in our Church have been making such an ado over.

The following words of Prof. Berry especially deserve careful consideration: "Should we not frankly admit that the realization of an imperialistic dream of a world-wide Methodism by means of the Methodist Episcopal Church and its foreign missions is an impossible thing? In its place should we not encourage the formation in each of the mission lands of a strong, united national Methodist Church? And then we can get at the imperial, world-wide Methodism by strengthening and deepening the Ecumenical Methodist Conference (already in existence), which alone is entitled to be called world-wide." (The first of the above statements would apply equally to a united Methodist Church in America.)

A Methodism under one constitution, extending into various lands, but largely governed by the people of one country, would be a new ecclesiasticism of the Romish type, and would doubtless soon be animated by a like spirit. Such a scheme is thoroughly unworthy of the followers of the spiritual and apostolic Wesley.

"IF I COULD ONLY SURELY KNOW!"

If I could only surely know
That all these things that tire me so
Were noticed by my Lord—
The pang that cuts me like a knife,
The lesser pains of daily life,
The noise, the weariness, the strife—
What peace it would afford!

I wonder if he really shares
In all my little human cares—
This mighty King of kings!
If he who guides through boundless space
Each blazing planet in its place
Can have the condescending grace
To mind these petty things.

It seems to me, if sure of this,
Blent with each ill would come such bliss
That I might covet pain;
And deem whatever brought to me
The loving throb of Deity
And sense of Christ's sweet sympathy,
Not loss, but richest gain.

Dear Lord! my heart shall no more doubt
That thou dost compass me about
With sympathy divine!
The Love for me once crucified
Is not the Love to leave my side,
But waiteth ever to divide
Each smallest care of mine.

A WISE PRAYER.

"Guard me when I am off guard," prayed one the other day. It was a wise prayer, for it is not the danger against which we have fortified ourselves, the temptations which we know and are watching, which are so likely to compass a fall as some unthought-of point where no peril was suspected.—J. R. Miller.

TRUE SUCCESS.

"St. John the Baptist did no miracles." And he died, apparently midway in his work. He died in prison. Murdered! A failure! No, as God lives, no! For what says the Master above that butchered corpse? "Verily, I say unto you, among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist." And why, O Lord? "Because fidelity is success! Fidelity is success."

A CITIZEN OF HEAVEN.

A Christian does not turn his back upon the fine things of this world, because he has no natural capacity to enjoy them, no taste for them, but because the Holy Spirit has shown him greater and better things. He wants flowers that will never fade; he wants something that a man can take with him to another world. He is like a man who has had notice to quit his house, and having secured a new one, he is not anxious to repair, much less to embellish and beautify the old one; his thoughts are upon the removal. If you hear him converse, it is upon the house to which he is going. Thither he sends his goods, and thus he declares plainly what he is seeking.—From "My Mother's Scrap Book."

A REMARKABLE TREE.

There is a singular tree in Cuba—the yaguey tree—that affords a striking illustration of the progress and fatality of sin. This tree begins to grow at the top or midway of another tree. The seed is carried by a bird, or wafted by the wind, and, falling into some moist branching part, takes root and speedily begins to grow. It sends along a kind of thin string-like root down the body of the tree that is occupied, which is soon followed by others. In course of time these rootlings strike the ground, and growth immediately commences upward. New rootling continue to be formed and get strength, until the one tree grows as a net with the other inside. The outside one surrounds and presses the inner, like a huge girdle of snakes, strangling its life and augmenting its own power. At last the tree within is killed, and the parasite, that has taken possession becomes itself the tree. What a picture of the enslaving and fatal power of sin as it attaches itself to a man, and with his consent is allowed! It may have a small beginning, but soon binds him as with cords, gains increasing mastery, and presses upon his very life. He is held in fetters by its powers, till at last the tyrant overcomes the victim and triumphs over its prey. —Reformed Church Messenger.

EMORY UNIVERSITY COMMENCEMENT.

By Bishop W. A. Candler.

The scholastic year at Emory University has just closed with the Commencement of the Collegiate Department.

The reports made to the Board of Trustees by the Chancellor and the Deans showed that the year had been quite successful. The number of students enrolled was 654, and the students came from many quarters. The following States were represented in the student body: Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Kentucky, Virginia, Mississippi, Arkansas, Missouri, West Virginia, Texas, California, Connecticut, Kansas, Illinois, and Wisconsin. There were also students from Brazil, Porto Rico, Korea, China, Japan, and Egypt.

Emory University is not local in its influence, but is already world-wide in its relations and service. A student in Emory University contracts friendships and establishes connections of the most interesting and advantageous character by reason of this fact.

Four departments are in operation, namely, the School of Liberal Arts, the School of Theology, the School of Medicine, and the School of Law.

The School of Liberal Arts is Emory College, located at Oxford, Ga., where it will remain until suitable buildings have been erected on the campus in Atlanta. It is an old and well established institution, and was never more prosperous.

The School of Medicine was founded in 1854, and was given to the University two years ago. During the past year it had an enrollment of 156 students, and graduated a class of 63. It goes without saying that it is an A-grade school of medicine. It holds membership in the Association of American Medical Colleges. For its use four new buildings are approaching completion, and will be ready for use with the opening of the next session in September. These buildings, together with the buildings which it has had heretofore, make it one of the best equipped medical schools in the South. Among the new buildings is the "J. J. Gray Clinic," which competent authorities who have inspected it recently say is the best arranged clinical building in America. Besides this clinical building, the School of Medicine has teaching privileges in the Wesley Memorial Hospital, which is a part of the University system, and the Grady Hospital, which is the municipal hospital of the city of Atlanta. A new Wesley Memorial Hospital will be erected soon on the grounds of the Medical College, near the center of the city, and it will be as nearly perfect in its appointments as it can be made.

The School of Law was opened in the fall of 1916, and has been in operation only one scholastic year. It is housed in a magnificent building, and has a superb library. Among its most attractive features is a portrait gallery of celebrated Southern lawyers. In this gallery may be seen portraits of Judge L. Q. C. Lamar and Judge Jos. R. Lamar of the United States Supreme Court, Chief Justice Jas. R. Dowdell of the Supreme Court of Alabama, Chief Justice Jos. H. Lumpkin of the Supreme Court of Georgia, Judge Wm. M. Byrd of Alabama, Judge J. A. McCullough of South Carolina, Colonel Spain of South Carolina, Hon. S. S. Dibble of South Carolina, Hon. Albert W. Biggs of Tennessee, Judge J. E. Cockrell of Texas, Hon. R. W. Peatross of Virginia, Chief Justice Hiram Warner of Georgia, and Judge Richard H. Clark of Georgia. The faculty of the School of Law is composed of nine able men, every one of whom has won with distinction his literary and legal degree in some one of the great universities of the world. The case method of instruction is used, and the splendid library makes this method of work at Emory University extremely successful. During the first year of the School of Law there has been but one class, namely the first-year class, and in it has been enrolled 27 students. The promise of a very much larger enrollment during the next year is bright, despite war conditions.

In the School of Theology during the past year there was an enrollment of 134 students, 117 of whom had enjoyed advantages of college training, and 59 of whom held degrees from the leading colleges of the country.

Besides these ministerial students in the School of Theology, there were above 40 young preachers taking courses in the School of Liberal Arts. It thus appears that during the year there were something like 175 ministerial students in these two departments of the University, and several medical students who are getting ready for service in the Church as foreign missionaries. This record of ministerial education surpasses anything of the kind made in any school of our Church.

The Commencement exercises of both the professional schools and collegiate department were extremely interesting. Among the speakers were Rev. Henry Churchill King, D.D., of Oberlin College, Ohio; Dr. Victor Clarence Vaughan, of the University of Michigan; Bishop Wm. B. Murrah, Dr. M. M. Parks, and Dr. E. B. Chappell. The discourses of these eminent men were of the highest order, and gave great satisfaction to the audiences who heard them.

In all the departments of the University, there were 199 students receiving degrees. There were three to receive the degree of Master of Arts, 13 who won the degree of Bachelor of Arts, 9 who were given the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy, and 6 who were given the degree of Bachelor of Science. In the School of Theology there were 15 graduates, and in the School of Medicine there were 63.

Besides these degrees in courses, the University conferred upon Bishop Jas. H. McCoy the degree of LL.D., and upon Rev. Wm. B. Taylor of Nashville, Tenn., the degree of D.D.

The Board of Trustees of the University have established the Emory University Academy, to fill a place in the South something like that occupied by the Phillips-Exeter Academy in Massachusetts, and this new institution has started well. It is possible to do this in view of the fact of the splendid plant already in existence at Oxford, Ga., for such an establishment. It was felt that there was a need of such an institution, which was not being met by the municipal high schools of the country. Municipal high schools, being supported by public funds, naturally and rightly adapt their courses of study and methods of instruction to the needs of the majority of their patrons, and the overwhelming majority who enter them do not expect to enter college at all, but to enter commerce and other lines of livelihood when their courses in these high schools are completed. Such being the case, the minority who expect to enter college are at a disadvantage, being forced to take some work which they ought not to carry if they are to enter a college or university, and being denied the advantage of other courses, which they ought to have as a preparation for their college or university work. Hence the need of just such institutions as Emory University Academy.

The buildings and other equipment of the Academy are of such a high order, its location so admirable, and its surroundings so wholesome, it cannot fail to render high service and receive a very large patronage. With the opening of the fall term, military training will be included in its scheme of instruction, in addition to the well-arranged courses of study which have already been fixed.

The Mississippi Diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church is to have a Bishop Coadjutor as soon as the necessary funds have been provided to maintain this additional official.

JAPANESE METHODISM AND UNIFICATION.

Prof. Arthur D. Berry,

In Dr. Edgar Blake's very interesting address on "The Unification of American Methodism," printed in your issue of January 31, the following remarkable statements in regard to our Methodist work in Japan are found:

When the Japanese Methodists requested to be set apart as an independent Church, if they could have been given home rule in Japanese matters through a Japanese Regional Conference, they would doubtless have been satisfied with such an arrangement and would have remained an integral part of the denomination. And there are few who will deny that Japanese Methodism would have been far stronger to-day had it remained in the Methodist Episcopal Church. There have been few greater mistakes in our history than the erection of Japanese Methodism into an independent Church.

The first two sentences I have quoted are based upon an ignorance of the facts surprising to be found in Dr. Edgar Blake. How could "Japanese Methodism" have remained in "the Methodist Episcopal Church" when only a portion of it was ever a part of our Church? The Japanese Methodists who "requested to be set apart as an independent Church" were made up not only of members of our Church, but also of members of the Methodist Church of Canada and of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. It is manifest, then, that an arrangement of a Regional Conference in the Methodist Episcopal Church would not have met the situation at all.

It seems impossible to make some of our leaders at home realize the simple fact that the erection of Japanese Methodism into an independent Church was as much a matter of Methodist union as a matter of independence. The two main motives in the whole movement for the formation of the Japanese Methodist Church were the desire for Methodist union in Japan and the desire for a national Church. The mere wish for "home rule in Japanese matters" had little, if anything, to do with the movement.

I suppose that Dr. Blake has a right to his own personal opinion, expressed in the last sentence quoted above. But over against his opinion so positively expressed I will state the fact that I do not know of a single Methodist missionary in Japan who feels that the erection of Japanese Methodism into an independent Church was a mistake. Judged from the standpoint of the evangelization of Japan and the success of our Methodist share in that evangelization, it cannot be too emphatically stated that the formation of the Japan Methodist Church was not only not a mistake, but a piece of necessary and wise Christian statesmanship.

In regard to the imperialistic vision of a world-wide Methodist Episcopal Church, so fondly held by many of our leaders at home, as a foreign missionary I would submit the following comments:

1. Much of the imperialistic vision seems to depend upon a provincial confusion of Methodism with the Methodist Episcopal Church. In the address quoted from above Dr. Blake says:

Through the Regional Conference with its provisions for home rule we may hope to hold all of our fields intact in one world-wide aggressive Church. Without such an arrangement, Methodism will eventually disintegrate as a world movement.

He means, of course, Methodist Episcopalianism. This is a very common mistake of our imperialistic brethren. They seem to think that if only the Methodist Episcopal Church can hold its scattered missions throughout certain parts of the world loyal to itself, then we shall be a "world-wide Methodism." But a "world-wide Methodism" which cannot enter the British Isles, Australasia, South Africa, Canada, not to speak of Japan and other smaller Methodist portions of the earth's surface is a ragged vision which needs a change of terminology.

2. How much does the foreign missionary zeal of the leaders of our Church at home depend upon the ambition to extend the world-wide membership and prestige of the Methodist Episcopal Church? In the quotation above Dr. Blake expresses the judgment that "Japanese Methodism would have been far stronger to-day had it remained in the Methodist Episcopal Church"—he means, remained attached to the three home Churches. Upon what does Dr. Blake base such a judgment? Our Methodist work in Japan has prospered as much and more since the formation of the new united Church than it ever did before. Does Dr. Blake mean that there would have been a greater warmth of sympathy in America toward our work in Japan and a better support if our share of Japan Methodism had remained in the Methodist Episcopal Church? Does he mean that our missionary passion toward the people of Japan, for whom the Savior died, has grown cold because we can no longer extend the membership and prestige of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Japan? If the missionary passion of our Church at home is entangled to any such vital extent with the imperialistic vision of a world-wide Methodist Episcopal Church, then the sooner we lay aside that vision the better.

3. The insistence upon the realization of the imperialistic vision of a world-wide Methodist Episcopal Church seems to put a perpetual obstacle in the way of a united Methodism in our various mission lands. The Japanese Methodists withdrew from their relation to the three home Churches in order that they might become one in Japan. How else could they have become one? Shall we insist that there shall remain a divided Methodism in China and in India in order that our Methodists in those lands may be kept a part of the Methodist Episcopal Church? This imperialistic vision of a world-wide Methodist Episcopal Church threatens to be a permanent divisive force throughout all our mission fields.

4. Do our imperialist brethren really mean what they say when they talk about a world-wide Methodist Episcopal Church? Or are they really thinking of a Methodist Episcopal Church in America with big foreign attachments throughout the world?

In a few years, if our prayers are answered, there will be millions of members of our Church in India. And if our faith is great enough and our prayers are answered, there will be millions in China. There may be millions in Africa. When that time comes the vast majority of the membership and the ministry of our Church will be outside the United States. Do our imperialist brethren contemplate with pleasure the holding of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in a city in China or in a city of India? In such a General Conference the language would properly be Chinese or a language of India, and the delegates from the Conferences in America would listen and speak only through interpreters. Do our imperialist brethren contemplate giving to a General Conference in which the majority of the delegates are Chinese or Indian or African Methodists the rights and powers which Dr. Blake has suggested—for instance, as property belonging to the General Conference? Would the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States be cheerfully governed by such a supreme legislative body?

In his address Dr. Blake suggests an arrangement whereby our colored membership in the United States shall be organized into a Regional Conference and shall not form a part of the General Conference of the whole Church. Is some such permanent arrangement as that in the back of the minds of our imperialist brethren for our foreign membership—the beneficiary group, as Dr. Blake calls them? By such an arrangement, soberly proposed for our colored membership in America, extended to our foreign membership abroad, the white portion of the membership of the Church at home could keep its fond dream of a world-wide Methodist Episcopal Church and still retain the supreme authority of that Church in their own hands.

Is this the nature of the imperialistic dream of a world-wide Methodist Episcopal Church? Or, on the contrary, do our imperialist brethren really face the problems involved in the realization of their dream in a profounder, more Christian, and more democratic way?

5. Should we not frankly admit that the realization of the imperialistic dream of a world-wide Methodism by means of the Methodist Episcopal Church and its foreign missions is an impossible thing? In its place should we not encourage the formation in each of the mission lands of one strong, united, national Methodist Church? And then we can get at the imperial, world-wide Methodism by strengthening and deepening the Ecumenical Methodist Conference, which alone is entitled to be called world-wide.

I do not make these comments in a carping spirit. I confess to an imperialistic fang in my own blood. But before a true world-wide Methodist imperialism can be attained the considerations I have named above must be faced and answered. And as a foreign missionary, used to sitting down as a minority in the kingdom of heaven with brethren of an alien race, I feel that one of the most essential conditions in the attainment of any true and permanent world-wide Methodist imperialism is that that imperialism should be a democracy in the absolute world-wide meaning of that great Christian word.—Zion's Herald, April 11.

JEWELS FOR THE CROWN OF GLORY.

I read lately of a young disciple. In her dying moments she had no doubt as to her personal interest in Christ. She had the comfortable assurance that she was just about to enter into "the rest that remaineth for the people of God." Yet a dark cloud passed over her countenance, and a heavy weight lay on her heart. What was the occasion of her grief? It was this. She had lived mainly to herself. She had not been the blessed instrument of leading one soul to Christ. She trusted that, through God's grace, she herself would be permitted to enter the kingdom, but she feared that hers would be a starless crown.

A starless crown! That I reckon to be the meanest crown in heaven; the crown that belongs to the lowest grades of the redeemed. The glory of the brightest crown in heaven consists not in its weight of finest gold. It consists in the number of its stars—in the luster of its jewels. But where are these jewels to be gathered, and when? Not on the golden pavements of heaven, when the watches of the dark night are past, but here, in this lower world, perhaps amid the dens of deepest and of darkest infancy; amid the filth and the offsprings of your very streets; amid the vilest sinks of pollution into which our poor humanity can fall.

Disciples of Christ! the jewels are there. They are lying in thick masses around you, and they are as precious as the brightest gems in heaven. But their luster is all dimmed. Gross darkness covers them. They are concealed and lost amid the dirt and mire with which they are overlaid. But they are not lost irrecoverably. If you search for them, as for hidden treasures, you may find them; and through God's grace, by means of your strong faith, your heroic efforts, and your bowels of mercy, the lost may be found, the ruined outcast may be saved.

Let that noble work be yours. Live not unto yourselves. Live evermore unto Christ, and for Christ. If there be in the neighborhood in which you dwell one poor ragged child, one homeless orphan, for whose soul no one seems to care, take upon yourselves the burden and the responsibility. If he be hungry, feed him. If he be naked, clothe him. If he be sick, visit him. If he is ignorant, instruct him. If he be far away, and ready to perish, bring him to the loving Savior, and guide his wandering footsteps into the path that leads to heaven. And verily you shall not lose your reward. What you have done to the least of the little ones for whom Christ died will be reckoned as if it had been done unto himself. And the very jewel which you have drawn from the mire and lifted from its low estate, will pass ere long to a higher destiny; and while plucked like a brand from the burning, and set like a polished gem in the Savior's blood-bought diadem, it will add a star to your own crown, which, like the great lights of heaven, shall shine forever, and forever, and forever!—American Tract Society.

A PROCLAMATION BY GOV. PLEASANT.

Knowing that the Red Cross renders great service both in the Field and in Civilian Relief;

That it is the only experienced organization officially recognized by the International Convention as a public instrumentality for this purpose;

That the appointment by the President of a War Council consisting of some of the best known business men of the nation, and the designation of Honorable W. G. McAdoo as treasurer of the Red Cross fund, assures the people that their contributions will be properly audited and judiciously expended;

That the campaign now being carried on for the benefit of the Red Cross fund is not charitable in its nature, but is a duty which we owe to our own boys and to our allies;

That this money will be particularly to benefit our soldiers who cannot, like the soldiers of our allies, return immediately to their homes after being wounded on the battlefield and receive the comforts and sympathies of loved ones;

I, Ruffin G. Pleasant, Governor of the State of Louisiana, hereby designate the week ending June 25, 1917, as Red Cross Week, and call upon our people to generously contribute to this noble organization.

RUFFIN G. PLEASANT, Governor.

THE GRENADA EFFICIENCY CONFERENCE.

By Rev. Olin Ray.

The Annual Conference of North Mississippi, at its last session, passed resolutions perpetuating the mid-year meeting held at Grenada College in May of 1916, and the presiding elders were appointed to serve as a committee to arrange a suitable program for the occasion, with the expenses met by the Conference Boards.

The Conference met on June 5, with a decidedly larger attendance than at any previous meeting of its kind ever held in the Conference. One hundred preachers and quite a number of laymen registered for the full session of four days. Besides these, many visitors, both from within and without the Conference, dropped in for a day or so.

Through the efforts of Rev. J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College, and his helpers, excellent board and the best of entertainment were furnished at the College at a cost of $2.25 per capita, for the full time. No other place can offer better entertainment, with such a spiritual feast, at such a nominal cost.

The spirit of the meeting was delightful throughout. The fellowship and brotherly love that prevailed among the brethren was an inspiration within itself. The preachers were in good spirits, in spite of the talk of war and hard times, and their hearty laughs, heard on the campus and in the dining hall, indicated that every care had been left behind.

The thrilling messages delivered by such speakers as Bishop W. B. Murrah of Memphis, Tenn.; Dr. E. B. Chappell and Dr. H. M. DuBose of Nashville, Tenn.; Dr. Geo. R. Stuart of Birmingham, Ala.; Dr. H. C. Howard of Atlanta, Ga.; and Dr. F. P. Manget of Hoochow, China, stirred the hearts of all who heard them. Each man was at his best and his message was deep and powerful. Every service of the day, from the 6 o'clock hour in the morning, was attended by a splendid audience.

The music rendered by Miss Grace Wright of Columbia, Miss., soloist for the Conference, and Miss Katie Lou Countiss of Grenada, Miss., was delightful and appropriate.

On Thursday afternoon, at an old-time experience meeting and Methodist hand-shaking, conducted by Rev. J. H. Felts, the Holy Spirit fell in power, and there was great rejoicing throughout the congregation.

The real value of such a mid-year meeting for the preachers and laymen was evident to those in attendance; therefore, the brethren saw fit to plan for this now permanent fixture of the Conference, and discussed methods for increasing the attendance in the future. The preachers were asked to bring their wives and to urge the attendance of laymen as far as possible, Grenada agreeing to take care of the overflow from the College.

At the evening service on Thursday, resolutions were offered expressing thanks to Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Countiss, host and hostess of the Conference, for their splendid entertainment; to Rev. R. A. Tucker, pastor at Grenada, and Rev. T. M. Brownlee, Commissioner for Grenada College, for their untiring services in arranging and caring for the visitors; to Misses Wright, Countiss, and Gibbs for their delightful solos; to the people of Grenada for supplying necessary furnishings for the guests at the College, and to the Committee for providing such a helpful and inspiring program.

The last hour of the session was spent in discussing plans for a greater Grenada College. Here the administration was commended and loyal support was pledged by the Conference.

Every phase of the meeting was a decided success. Not one thing marred the joy of it, and no greater corps of speakers could have been gotten together in the whole Church.

Dr. DuBOSE'S ASTOUNDING POSITION.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have read in the Nashville Christian Advocate of June 8 the article by Dr. H. M. DuBose and am amazed that he should regard the action of our General Conference so lightly. Dr. DuBose says the text of the resolutions adopted was "not a mandate, or an irreducible minimum," and then adds that "an ideal was indicated and a minimum of concessions implied." It seems to me the General Conference wanted the Commission and all interested to understand that there are some things too sacred to be trampled upon and some concessions that were not to be made.

Dr. DuBose says: "The General Conference at Oklahoma City said nothing about a separate Church; it only asked for an independent organization for the colored race." The Methodist Episcopal Church, by resolution at Saratoga Springs, only recommended the reverse. Now he turns on the light and says, "Many of its leaders have since shown a willingness to agree to a broader and safer basis of a General Conference for the colored membership, which, while being independent in law-making and administration, will still be an integral part of the Church."

He says further that the General Conference of our Church "did not demand a separate Church, but a separate organization." As a matter of fact, the General Conference was openly and emphatically dissenting from having the Negro Methodists kept WITHIN the united Church in a separate Regional Conference—a body which Southern Methodists then understood would be largely independent and autonomous, with its own Quadrennial Conference of extended powers, Bishops, etc.—thus rejecting an arrangement very much like that which Dr. DuBose now seems to favor. The truth is, Dr. Blake's revised plan is very largely the original scheme that was proposed for the Negroes, somewhat differently presented—the scheme upon which our General Conference put the stamp of its disapproval. About the only difference is that "Liberia" is added, and that colored men are not to sit in the white General Conference. But they are everywhere else—on all the General Boards, in the College of Bishops, with authority to aid in the consideration of all connectional matters; on the Supreme Bench to aid in construing all legislation, for whites and blacks, and with a vote on all constitutional questions that may arise. The powers the Negro would exercise in the General Conference would be little, if any, more objectionable than those which Dr. DuBose seems to desire to accord him.

I fail to see how "its leaders" or the Commission can set aside our recommendations when such plain language is used, and find a different basis of union without doing violence to the spirit and letter of the General Conference's pronouncements.

The duty of the Commission is thus clearly defined: "The representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are hereby instructed and empowered to act as Commissioners with like commissioners of the Methodist Episcopal Church in elaborating and perfecting the tentative plan that has been proposed and in carrying forward such negotiations as have for their purpose and may result in the consummation of the proposed unification IN ACORDANCE WITH THE BASIC PRINCIPLES ENUNCIATED IN THE SUGGESTIONS WHICH WERE ADOPTED BY THE JOINT COMMISSION AND REPORTED TO THE GENERAL CONFERENCE."

May we be delivered from an unwise and hurtful unification, effected because "the men to whom these weighty and distracting matters have been committed" regarded the pronouncements of the General Conference simply as mere "recommendations," carrying little weight, and not as words of serious import. Our General Conference did not simply mark time, waiting to see what the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church wanted. It set the metes and bounds, and, if unification which retains the colored contingent as an integral part of the new Church is consumated, the Southern Church will then soon be known only in the record of its glorious past, and thousands of the choicest spirits of earth will be scattered like sheep without a shepherd, homeless, disappointed, and despondent.

A NOTED CHURCH TO BE MOVED.

The Napoleon Avenue Presbyterian Church has sold its chapel property at the corner of Napoleon Avenue and South Robertson Street, fourteen blocks from its present main site and twelve blocks from the site on which it is building a splendid new church, to the Northern Methodists. The latter have sold their church on St. Charles Avenue at the corner of Calliope Street and will consolidate the congregation worshiping there with the South Franklin Street Church. The St. Charles Avenue enterprise has not flourished for many years and has run down to a membership of about sixty. It was started, we have been told, in the days of the Federal Military occupation, by Ben Butler's brother-in-law, for whom it was named, when, by Butler's order, most of the New Orleans churches were closed because they would not pray for the success of the Northern arms. Until a few years ago its name was "The Ames Memorial Church."—Presbyterian Journal (New Orleans).

Unsatisfied spiritual hunger is liable to lead people into strange temples and faiths. The lack of spirituality in churches has doubtless contributed many votaries to Christian Science and other cults.

THE ASBURY STATUE.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am informed by a letter from Smith & Lamar, Treasurer, that the sum of $250 has been assessed against the Louisiana Conference for the Asbury Memorial Statue in Washington, D. C. Of this amount, $18.70 has been paid.

May I earnestly request through your columns that the pastors and presiding elders give their prompt personal attention to the raising of the rest of it?

The sum is such a small one, when distributed among the various charges, and the cause is so altogether worthy, that I think there would be no difficulty in securing the balance by even the slightest appeal to the congregations.

ARE WE ON THE EVE OF ANOTHER HUMILIATION?

Dear Mr. Editor: When Vanderbilt University was first established we were uniformly told that it was founded and owned by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and that the Trustees were only holding it and operating it for her. But about 1905 Mr. Carnegie's pension fund for teachers, which was not open to Church schools, came into existence, and we began to hear from the Trustees that they were a self-perpetuating body; that the "Memphis Resolutions were mere surplusage," and that the Bishops had no charter right entitling them to be on the Board, but were only there by sufferance. The next thing that followed was that these Trustees came into court and swore to things contrary to what they had been telling the Church in official communications for forty years, and on these representations she was ejected from the institution.

A plan looking to the unification of Methodism in the United States was carefully wrought ought in 1911 by some of the ablest and best known men in America, embracing representatives of three denominations; that plan was endorsed by our last General Conference, with an amendment that the Negroes should be placed in an "independent organization, holding fraternal relations with the reorganized and united Church;" this scheme being declared to be "tentative" within the limits of the "basic principles" underlying it. All through the Church, in the discussions that arose before the Annual Conferences and other bodies, this plan was held up as if it were something which, in its essential features, the Church was expected to stand for, and under the influence of such representations the movement was very generally endorsed throughout the Connection. It was not suggested by anybody that practically the whole scheme, with the exception of a few nomenclature terms twisted into another significance, might be abandoned at the pleasure of the Commissioners, and there was not the faintest intimation that our General Conference had not stood by its historic policy and declared for having the colored Methodists placed in an INDEPENDENT CHURCH.

But it has now clearly developed that the Northern Methodist Church will accept practically none of the Oklahoma plan, and strange expressions are beginning to appear in the public prints. We are now told that our "whole economy is negotiable"—PRACTICALLY EVERYTHING WIDE OPEN; all the labors of the antecedent Joint Commission amounting to little or nothing, the "basic principles" referred to in the plan that it formulated being too nebulous to be definable, or to exercise any restraint of consequence. Furthermore, we are commencing to hear about "THE SPIRIT" of the Oklahoma plan, as distinguished from "ITS LETTER," and it is even claimed that our General Conference did not declare for having the Negro Methodists placed in an independent Church, but merely in a separate "organization" of some kind within the said unified Church.

What does all this mean, Mr. Editor? Is Southern Methodism to be again betrayed and outraged—another "stunt" similar to that in the Vanderbilt case being pulled off? The most humiliating feature of the Vanderbilt spoliation was not the loss to the Church of her rightful property, but the fact that there were Methodist preachers and laymen who were capable of standing sponsor for the unscrupulous processes by which her legitimate possessions were wrung from her. Are there others with little enough honor to invoke similar tactics in connection with the unification proceedings? Are the most important instruments of writing that the Church can put into shape to be treated as "mere scraps of paper?" What must the world think when professed ministers of Christ, who ought to stand for the highest things, exhibit such ideals and such conceptions of honesty and integrity?

May God forbid that any such developments as are possibly foreshadowed in the expressions that I have mentioned should take place! But if they do, my dear Doctor, I hope that you will hold those responsible for them unsparingly up to the public gaze, calling them by name, that the Church and all straightforward and high-minded men may fasten upon them the reproach and stigma which will be justly due them. Sincerely yours,

B. J. DODSON.

SOME OF SO-CALLED SCHOLARSHIP'S LATEST OUTPUT.

From the May-June number of The Bible Champion, we take the following:

"Here is the latest light on the Wilderness pillars. It is from Chicago, and is contained in the Biblical World of Dec. 1:

"'With what natural phenomenon can the pillar of cloud and of fire be connected? There is only one, and that is the zodiacal light. Bearing in mind that the zodiacal light is seen in the western sky after sunset and in the eastern sky before sunrise, we can understand the significance of the chronicler's statement that at night the pillar of fire encamped over against the Egyptians, that is to the west of the Israelites' camp, like a protecting screen between them and their enemies. Early in the morning, very early, before sunrise, the camp would be astir with preparations to renew the march during the morning hours, because the excessive heat of noon and afternoon necessitated rest at that time. And there, not in the west, but in the east, toward the sunrise, the pillar of cloud was seen beckoning them, as it were, to resume their march and symbolizing to them the Divine Presence and protecting care. This interpretation of a beautiful Bible idea is submitted as reasonable and true to the appearance of the zodiacal light in Arabia. I commend this interpretative note as well worthy of consideration. Should it win acceptance, we shall be justified in regarding the Book of Exodus as containing the earliest reference in all literature to this interesting spectacle of the night sky.'

"We are glad for Exodus. It is no longer condemned to pillory in the scientific expurgatory. We like this zodiac interpretation; it is such an improvement upon Prof. Kent's explanation, viz.:

"'The early Judean narrative gives a vivid picture of the way in which the Hebrews marched. The underlying historical facts are suggested by the way in which caravans still journey through the wilderness. The leader who goes in front often bears aloft, on the end of a long pole, a brazier filled with smoking coals from which rises a column of smoke. In the clear light of the desert this column of smoke can be seen by the different members of the caravan, even though they lag many miles behind. By night these glowing coals held on high, accomplish the same end and make possible the long midnight journeys. In the inimitable language of the early story-tellers, the fundamental truth that Jehovah through his prophet was ever leading them by day and by night on to their destiny is forcibly set forth.'

"The zodiac, to our mind, is far away ahead of the brazier of coals. It may be scientific in both cases, but the original story is much simpler and easier to be believed."

The Biblical World, if we mistake not, is the religious (?) organ of the University of Chicago, where some of our preachers and theological teachers go to get their finishing touches. That men who thus prate should be in theological schools and even in pulpits is a sad commentary upon the condition of some of the Churches of our time.

It was of this class of men that Dr. L. W. Munhall wrote some time since: "They are wolves in sheep's clothing. They are worse than Bob Ingersoll ever dared to be. He stayed out of the Church. He was not a hypocrite, but an infidel. These latter day men are hypocrites and infidels, too. * * * Many of them would have hard rooting if they did not live on the money of the Church."

HOW TO SHOW OUR LOYALTY?

Loyalty and patriotism may be shown elsewhere than on the battlefield. The man who works in the munitions factory is just as loyal as is the man who uses the munitions on the battlefield, if he is doing what the government wants him to do. So is the man in the mines, the man on the railroad train, the merchant, the banker, or the man in any other profession or business. The thing for the man to do is to put himself at the disposal of the Government and then do what is assigned to him, no matter whether the service be pleasant and agreeable or not. The work of every man is needed; let us all be faithful. The stoker down in the hold of the vessel shoveling coal is just as important as the captain on the bridge.—The Presbyterian of the South.

UNITARIANISM.

The Christian Register, a Unitarian paper, wonders why Unitarianism does not grow. The Unitarians number seventy-one thousand. Considering the noise they make, one would naturally think they were ten times as numerous. It does not appeal to the people because it is a gospel of self-conceit. It denies the divinity of Christ, which sane men know to be true. It denies that man is a sinner, and offers no salvation to those who want and need it. There is nothing in the doctrine to meet the needs of humanity. As there is no life in it, it fails to grow.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

The Great Battle

IF A BONE-DRY ARMY, WHY NOT A BONE-DRY NATION?

Announcement has been made by the Federal authorities that the provision of the new military law, which forbids the sale of all intoxicating liquors, including wines, beers, and ales, to officers or soldiers of the United States in uniform, is now in effect and will be enforced. Liquor dealers have been warned. Though not specified in the law, it is understood that "treating" a sailor is also a violation of the intent as it certainly is of the spirit of the law. The purpose of the law is plain—the nation wants a sober army in this war. The infamous suggestion of the president of the National Model License League that a drink of whiskey will insure steadiness of nerve in battle is in keeping with the propaganda of the traffic, but will be resented by the informed citizens of this country as an insult both to intelligence and valor. Since officers and soldiers are compelled to wear their uniforms on all occasions, the law virtually enforces abstinence upon all of them. But if abstinence is to be enforced in the case of men who give the hazard of their lives to the cause in which we are now engaged, should not prohibition be made general for the period of the war that the whole nation may be the better fitted for the mighty task before us and no discrimination be made against the men in uniform?—N. W. Christian Advocate.

A MERITED REBUKE.

Colonel Hisada, of the military college at Tokyo, visited Moscow. On his arrival he was saluted by Russian officers. Colonel Yanoff, of the Russian army, took Colonel Hisada in charge. Arrived at a hotel, Colonel Yanoff said:

"You will need refreshment after your long journey. Although vodka may not be sold now, I can get you some here."

"Your emperor has forbidden the use of vodka, has he not?" inquired Colonel Hisada.

"Yes, that is so. But there are ways of overcoming that little difficulty on occasions."

"I should not wish to disobey such an excellent rule. Japan was your enemy once, but vodka was a greater enemy still. Your emperor has made a wise order. You will do well to obey it. As for me, I do not drink."—The Presbyterian.

SOME RECENT EDUCATIONAL EVENTS.

This is the season of Educational happenings, and I should like to record several such which will be of interest to many of your readers.

Centenary Commencement.

On account of several circumstances, the 78th annual Commencement of Centenary College was attended by unusual interest. The recent campaign in Shreveport for endowment which added some $60,000 to the resources of the College, called the attention of the community more generally to its closing exercises. The program for Commencement also was an interesting one; beginning with the sermon on Sunday morning at the First Methodist Church, preached by Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker, and said to have been a splendid effort. Dr. Parker also delivered the same evening at the Noel Memorial Church a fine and effective address under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. on "The Call of Christ to Youth."

On Monday evening a number of the Alumni and former students of the College sat down to a banquet in the banquet hall of Noel Memorial Church, at which Rev. C. D. Atkinson, President of the Alumni, presided, and a number of brief addresses were made. In one of the toasts, attention was called to the fact that nearly $2500 of the amount raised in the campaign was contributed by graduates or former students of the institution who are local citizens, and plans were laid for appealing to all old students to add to these contributions and build up a special fund to be set apart as a former students' endowment or scholarship foundation. If all whose lives have been blessed by the work of the College will contribute to this fund, it will become a substantial part of the resources of the institution.

Following the banquet, Dr. J. M. Sullivan of the class of 1887, and now Professor of Science in Millsaps College, delivered an able and enthusiastic address. This was followed by the baccalaureate address delivered by Dr. S. A. Steel in his usual happy vein. In a few well chosen remarks, Dr. Wynn presented diplomas to five young men, calling attention to the interesting fact in reference to two of them, sons of Rev. Paul M. Brown, that their mother's father graduated from Centenary in 1853, their father's father in 1850, and their father just forty years later, in 1890. Two of the other graduates, Revs. T. J. Holladay and F. R. Power, are active members of the Louisiana Conference, while the fifth, Prof. H. J. Smith, who, though for several years a successful educator, and for the past year Principal of the High School Department at the College, had not previously completed his college course, and finished the necessary work in connection with his teaching work.

A very interesting feature of the Commencement was a barbecue, given by some of the successful workers in the endowment campaign, in the grove immediately in front of the campus, in celebration of the success of the campaign. This was given on Wednesday, immediately preceding the meeting of the Trustees, and was participated in by several hundred citizens, visiting trustees and members of the Efficiency Conference, which was in session. Short and enthusiastic addresses were made by Dr. George S. Sexton, Prof. J. M. Sullivan, and Mr. T. W. Holloman of Alexandria. The Trustees' Meeting, which followed, was by far the most successful and enthusiastic in the recent history of the College. In addition to the improved financial condition resulting from the campaign, the advertising given to the College throughout North Louisiana promises to increase considerably the attendance of students at the next session. Facing such hopeful conditions, the Board took steps toward continuing the campaign for endowment and improvement throughout the Methodism of the State. Surely Shreveport's response to the appeal of our College is a ringing challenge to the Methodists of Louisiana which can not honorably be ignored.

Another interesting development in connection with the close of this session is the opening of the Centenary Summer Military Camp and School on the campus with an enrollment of about 50. The introduction of some military training during the past session has been an attractive and helpful feature, and this summer school, during which students will live in tents, will attract to the College many boys who will seek its advantages.

Centenary Efficiency Conference.

Immediately following the graduating exercises, the first session of the Centenary Efficiency Conference was opened, lasting three days. This conference was planned with the endorsement of the presiding elders of the Shreveport, Ruston, Monroe, and Alexandria Districts. It was not designed in any sense to come into competition with the Seashore Divinity School, and does not propose to cover the same ground; but to furnish to the preachers of North Louisiana, many of whom cannot attend the Divinity School, an occasion of inspiration and mental and spiritual refreshment, in easy reach and at a reasonable cost. The sessions were held in the College Chapel, except the evening addresses, which were at the Noel Memorial Church.

Those in attendance who so desired found board in the College. One or more addresses were delivered by each of the following speakers: Dr. F. S. Parker, Rev. Emmett Hightower of the Sunday school force, Dr. W. W. Pinson, and Dr. Paul B. Kern of the Southern Methodist University, Rev. Geo. S. Sexton, and Rev. J. G. Snelling of the Louisiana Conference.

Very interesting round table conferences were held each day in which vital problems of ministerial efficiency were fully discussed. It is not too much to say that in the entire program there was not a dull or unprofitable hour and some of the addresses were of a very high order. Thirty or more of our preachers were registered as members. This first session was such a decided success that the organization of the Centenary Efficiency Conference as an annual event was effected with apparent unanimity and success.

Southern Methodist University Commencement.

Our University for the Western section has just closed another wonderfully successful session. The attendance was an increase over the unprecedented record of the opening session.

Among the graduates granted an A. M. degree was Paul M. Brown, Jr., who had practically finished an A. B. course at Centenary a year ago. He is said to have made a very fine record for himself and for Centenary in his post-graduate work. Another Louisiana student who is in attendance at the School of Theology is Rev. R. A. Bozeman, who is preparing himself there for the ministry. The University in its post-graduate departments, and particularly in the School of Theology, offers a splendid opportunity for our young men from Louisiana to pursue their studies after taking the Bachelor's degree, and the Louisiana Conference is vitally interested in its success. This institution, while it has not yet secured a large productive endowment, has an admirable location, large potential resources, and is moving rapidly into the class of "great universities."

A Helpful Article.

Before closing this article I should like to call the attention of all the preachers to a study in the May number in the Bulletin of the Board of Education, entitled "Is the Church College a Necessity in Our Present System of Education?" by Prof. W. E. Hogan, Assistant Secretary of the Board.

This article states so thoroughly and forcibly the grounds of our position in reference to the Church college, that its careful study would be very helpful to any preacher in preparing his annual sermon on "Christian Education."

Conference Secretary of Education.

Church News

At the recent Commencement of Wofford College 60 young men were awarded the A.B. degree, five received the A.M. degree, and three were awarded department certificates.

The Southern Christian Advocate, issued at Anderson, S. C., has inaugurated a movement to acquire a building as a permanent home for that paper.

The Southwestern University, Clarksville, Tenn., has conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity upon Rev. T. L. Haman, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Vaiden, Miss. This honor was well merited.

Hon. W. J. Bryan is quoted as having said: "I consider Billy Sunday the strongest personal spiritual force in America to-day." It is stated that Mr. Sunday may conduct a series of evangelistic services in Atlanta next fall.

The Mississippi campaign which the Southern Presbyterians are conducting to secure an endowment for their correlated schools in that State has thus far resulted in pledges amounting to $110,000. The goal in view is $150,000.

A writer in the Woman's Department of the Central Methodist (Lexington, Ky.) states that there is only one self-sustaining Southern Methodist Church in New Orleans. This is an error. We have in this city three churches which support themselves, and several others which very nearly do so.

DAVID'S COCOANUT.

David was playing ball with Ralph and Charlie when his mother asked him to stop long enough to run an errand.

"I want you to take fifty cents down to Mrs. Eddy, the butter-woman, and ask her to send me in her account soon."

"May I take along that five cents I earned this morning pulling plantain weeds, and spend it just as I like?" David asked.

"Yes, if you promise not to stop at the store more than ten minutes."

So a very happy boy started whistling down the street. He wondered what he should buy. Five cents would pay for a pencil, or a tablet, or some peanuts, or a sack of candy. He might even get a small cocoanut. Yes, that was what he must have—cocoanuts were so good!

But when he inquired at the store, he learned that all the small cocoanuts were gone. How disappointed he was! He didn't know until then how much he really wanted a cocoanut.

"You couldn't break one for me, could you?" he suggested.

But Mr. Andrews was not eager to sell half a cocoanut. And David was turning sadly away from the enticing brown nuts when a thought came to him.

"You have fifty cents here. Why not borrow five cents of this, and buy the cocoannt? It wouldn't be really stealing, for you could give mamma a good half of the nut."

Now David did not like the suggestion. He said to himself that he could not do such a thing; the fifty cents was all for Mrs. Eddy, and he must take it to her.

He started to open the door. Then Mr. Andrews called after him:

"Too bad you can't take one to-day; I've just opened a crate from Cuba."

Just from Cuba! Could he resist? He must have one, even if he had to take a part of the fifty cents. So he said, quickly:

"All right. May I have my pick?"

He turned over the contents of the box, and at last selected a fine-looking specimen, and handed over the half-dollar.

It was not until the change was put in his hand that he realized what he had done. Then how he hated himself!

He was turning sadly away, when he decided he must do his best to set things right.

"Mr. Andrews," he said, "it isn't right to go back on a trade, but I'm going to ask you to take back the nut and give me the very same fifty-cent piece I gave you."

"Why, surely!" was the answer. "Don't want a cocoanut after all, hey? Well, I was young once, so here's your money, and off you go to the candy shop, I guess?"

But David did not go to the candy shop. He ran as fast as he could to Mrs. Eddy's home. But, fast as he went, he had time to think. "Thief! thief!" The word kept sounding in his ears. It was uncomfortable. He must do something to wipe out the awful thing he had almost done—the thing he had done; for didn't he take the five cents which was not his, even if he did afterwards give it back?

When he saw Mrs. Eddy he decided what he would do. He would give her fifty-five cents. That would punish him for being a thief.

When he reached home his mother asked him what he had bought with his nickel. He said he had bought nothing, and asked if he might keep still about what he had done with the money.

Wondering, his mother decided to let the matter rest. But a few days later, when Mrs. Eddy sent in her account, she was puzzled by the last item, "Received fifty-five cents by your little boy, David."

Then she called David, and asked him about the extra five cents. He colored, hesitated, then told the story of his temptation and of the atonement he had tried to make. "I thought it would make me feel all right, mamma, but it didn't. I know now there was something else for me to do, and that I couldn't feel right until I did it."

"What was that, David?" mamma asked.

"Confessing all about it, mamma," he answered. I've told you now, and, oh, I feel so much better! I feel as if I must tell you everything after this!"—Sunday-school Times.

THE FACT OF CHRIST.

Two famous scientists, who were Christians, used often to talk with each other about religious subjects. There were a great many things about Christ and His religion which perplexed them very much, and which they discussed over and over again without coming upon any explanation which perfectly satisfied them.

One day, as they were walking in the country near the city in which they lived, they came to a large boulder different in its formation from any of the other rocks in the neighborhood. The two stood for a time on the boulder, discussing the question how it came there, but without arriving at any satisfactory answer.

As they were walking homeward, one of them suddenly exclaimed: "I have it," and, in answer to his friend's questioning, said something like this: "We cannot explain how that boulder came to be in its place, but we can stand upon it and it holds us up. So in Christ there are many things which perplex us and cause us difficulty. But, after all, we can trust Him, we can rest on Him, and He does not fail us. We are not able to explain Christ, but the fact of Christ remains unshaken."—Canadian Churchman.

THE PLEDGE-KEEPER.

God is the great Pledge-keeper. "The mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear Him, and His righteousness unto children's children; to such as keep His covenant, and to those that remember His commandments to do them." The pledge of life is a mutual agreement of love and loyalty between God and man, and the failure of either party to keep the pledge breaks the current of fulfillment. God always keeps His pledge, whether it be based on mutual or independent grounds. He is always the same loving, loyal Pledge-keeper, while we sometimes lose our vows under the spell of worldly influence, selfish ambition, the sordid pursuit of gain, or the lure of open sin. When we thus fall away from grace we forfeit our claims upon God for the fulfillment of certain promises; but when we turn again to Him, His pledge then becomes available. —Religious Telescope.

MOTHER-LOVE.

By Rev. W. S. Harrison.

A restless, nervous, moving mass of life!
The men of business, quick, alert and sane;
The children, youths, the husband and the wife—
All eager, anxious, pushing on the way,
As if life's fortunes hung on single day.

There stood among the throng a year-old bride;
She fondly held her infant in her arms;
The fairest of her chums, she was their pride;
But better far than all her other charms,
She wore the sign of Heaven's finest art—
The mother-angel born in woman's heart.

The creed attested well that angels true.
The messengers of God from world unseen,
Are kindly sent as aids to me and you,
And to our darkened night bring Heaven's sheen;
They feed our faith, bring help from world above;
But help most dear to sense is mother-love.

She first from out the shade of threatened death
Hugs baby form, and kisses velvet cheek;
She gladly notes first step with bated breath,
And first to hear when baby tries to speak.
This love is surest help in childhood's days,
And still is strength in manhood's harder ways.

This mother-love is vital force ordained
In Heaven's council wise, supremely wise,
By which the infant mind is safely trained;
Thence noble manhood's conqu'ring virtues rise.
Thus mother-love in seeming feeble hand
Holds destinies of universal man!

'Tis mother-love that gives initial bent
To infant's mind that shapes the future man;
That love, when true and wise from Heaven sent
Most surely trains the soul on Heaven's plan,
And holds the man to Heaven's noble weal
By tie of love more firm than cord of steel!

"TRYING TO GET BACK HOME."

Thousands of Negroes who were enticed from Mississippi by specious promises are now trying to get back to their old homes, while many others are writing piteous letters to former employers asking for sufficient money to buy railroad tickets back to Dixie. The intelligent Negroes of Mississippi realized long ago that they are better off right here than they could possibly be anywhere on earth. It has been the unthinking class of blacks who have yielded to the blandishments of labor agents. And, if it didn't contain some serious aspects, there would be a vein of real humor in the frantic appeals now being sounded by officials in Northern cities asking us not to permit any more Negroes to leave the South, and to help them to get rid of those now in their midst. We will welcome the Negroes back home, of course. They will all get their old jobs, at good wages, and we will continue to deal with all social and political phases of the so-called race problem just as we have always dealt with those questions, with full justice to the Negro, and to our own satisfaction.—Jackson (Miss.) COLORED MEMBERS OF SOUTHERN WHITE CHURCHES.

As is well known most of the colored people in the South who are members of the Church are Baptists and Methodists and an overwhelming majority of these are in entirely independent Churches. The number of colored communicants in white Episcopal Churches is given as follows in the Year Book, Yearbook, edited by Rev. Morris M. Dyer, of Galveston, Texas: Southern Presbyterian Church, 1916 (the Presbyterians themselves claim a little more than 2000), Cumberland Presbyterian Church, 91 (there is an independent colored Cumberland Church numbering more than 12000), Churches of Christ (for the entire United States), 3165, Protestant Episcopal (for the entire U. S.), 11000.

Attention has lately been called in the public press to the fact that the Negro Episcopalians are within the white Church, though in separate congregations, and have been given Negro Suffragan Bishops, the suggestion being that our Church could, consistence, vary from her historic policy and adopt some similar plan in the interest of the union of American Methodism. In this connection, it may be well to note how few colored communicants the Episcopal Church has—less than 20,000 out of more than a million members. Moreover, that denomination is diocesan in its government. For instance, no man could become the white Bishop of Mississippi and serve that diocese without being elected by the Church members in that State, nor could there be any Suffragan Bishop who would not be so elected, and the latter Bishop would have to work under the direction of the former. On the other hand, the proposed united Methodist Church would be connectional, and served by a General Episcopacy, which would be liable to place any kind of a white Bishop in charge of affairs in the South. The North would dominate in everything and the Southern white people would have no adequate protection. It is well to keep clearly in mind this distinction: the question before us at this time is not what shall be the relation of Negro Methodists to the Southern Methodist Church, but what shall be their relation to the suggested unified Church, dominated by the North. We say this, carefully weighing our words, because all the schemes now being proposed would give Northern Methodism the controlling ascendency in the General Conference, on every General Board, and even in the suggested Supreme Court.

But what about the Roman Catholics? If they can keep colored communicants in their congregations, why cannot we with propriety alter to some such [illegible]. In the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, we have [illegible] Church, minister to the M. E. Church and be elder of the Annual Conference, but we cannot elect a Negro bishop to preside over the white Church. The Roman Catholic Church does not do this. It has a Negro priest in the white Catholic seminary at Amherst and the Catholic Church is the only religious body in America that has a Negro priest in a white seminary. Moreover the vicar has a Negro priest in the Catholic Church at Natchez. There was a time when the Catholic Church would receive a Negro, but not now. In St. Joseph's Church, New Orleans, a few years ago the Negroes had to sit in the rear on certain seats for the whites. The American prejudice has crept in, even in the Catholic Church.

The truth is, the white people never dare unless driven to it by the Southern Baptists and Methodists a the only straightforward and consistent one—the only one which does not keep up constantly irritating discriminations against the black man in the administration of Church affairs—and as we have many times said, that is the policy which has yielded the largest results in the way of Christian achievements among the Negroes of the United States.

In Addendum.

Since writing the above which we did last week, we have seen the following in Zion's Herald:

"In the issue of last week the Nashville Christian Advocate, official organ of the Southern branch of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, gives attention to the action of the Southern Presbyterian Church. That body has authorized the organization into four Presbyteries under a separate synod, coordinate with the other synods, with the ultimate aim of organizing a separate and autonomous General Assembly for the colored churches. This is practically the plan advocated in these columns by Dr. Elias Blake and outlined a plan which commends itself to many as being not simply a solution of the immediate problem confronting Methodism, but as offering a means of meeting world conditions that are certain to arise with the return of peace."

This is an utter misrepresentation of the purpose of the Southern Presbyterian Church. We have it on the authority of Dr. George Summey, the distinguished Editor of the Presbyterian Journal of New Orleans, than which there is none better, that the plan of his denomination is to place the Negroes in an entirely separate and independent CHURCH, maintaining fraternal relations with them and giving them financial assistance. When this scheme is consummated, the colored contingent will have no organic connection of any kind with the white Church, but will sustain precisely the same relation to it that the C. M. E. Church does to our Church. The two Churches will not be under the same constitution; nor will the colored members have representation on any General Board, nor in any Church court, nor in any department of the white Church whatever—which are outstanding features of the Blake plan.

We suppose it would be charitable to take the view that Zion's Herald was misinformed in making the statement which it did; but it is so persistently given to distorting facts in connection with the unification movement that it is difficult for us to acquit it of culpability in so glaring a misleading of the public. And we dare say that it will not now correct its error—if it should, it would be the first time, in connection with the unification propaganda, that it has shown the moral capacity to rise to that height.

THE ITAILIAN WAR MISSION IN NEW ORLEANS.

The members of the Italian War Mission to the United States, with the exception of the Prince of Udine who was ill in Washington, spent last Thursday in New Orleans. The following composed the party of distinguished visitors: Senator Guglielmo Marconi, the famous inventor of wireless telegraphy; Signor Enrico Arlotta, Minister of Transportation, the head of the delegation; Dr. Pescarolo, Asst. Professor of Financial Jurisprudence in the University of Naples, the Hon. Luigi Barzilai, who is Baron di Petretto; Hon. Augusto Ciuffelli, General Guglielmotti, the naval builder, Cavalier G. Paris and several secretaries. A great many present were commissioners from the Italian government when they landed from their boat, committees from eighteen Italian societies in the Italian Band, and several thousand Italian people joining in the demonstration. The guests were seated in automobiles and a great procession quickly formed and wended its way to the City Hall, where an address of welcome was made by Mayor Behrman in the presence of an immense audience, to which there were fitting responses by several members of the Mission. As the party left the City Hall to be escorted to the Grunewald Hotel, where they were entertained, a number of cannons that had been massed in Lafayette Park by the Washington Artillery roared out a noisy salute, which shook the buildings in that section of the city. Many other courtesies were shown the famous party, including a boat ride around the New Orleans harbor in the afternoon, and a brilliant banquet at the Grunewald in the evening, at which Governor Pleasant was one of the speakers. One of the interesting and happy features of the occasion was the conferring by Tulane University at Gibson Hall of the degree of Doctor of Laws upon the members of the Mission: Messrs. Arlotta, Barzarelli, Marconi, Ciuffelli, and Nitti. The same degree was conferred in absentia upon the Prince of Udine, and a silver loving cup was presented to Signor Marconi by Mrs. Benjamin Saxon Story.

Altogether, it may be said that the coming of these official representatives of Italy to the Crescent City was a notable event that will long be remembered, nor was it without a practical value, since there are many Italians in this section, and it tended to bring them into closer touch with other citizens and to emphasize impressively the fact that their mother country and the land of their adoption are standing shoulder to shoulder in the present great world-war.

SENATOR GUGLIELMO MARCONI.

Of the members of the Italian Mission, which visited New Orleans last week, Signor Marconi attracted by far the most attention. This was not strange, though there were other men of unusual renown in the company. The man who gave to the world wireless telegraphy could hardly be second in any group of celebrities that could be brought together on the planet, for that was a service to mankind such as it has been the high privilege of but few individuals to render in the history of the race; and in comparison with such a distinction, inherited titles and political honors fade away into insignificance. Like our own Edison, Signor Marconi is a thinker in the true sense of that term—a pioneer in the wide-reaching fields of truth—and he belongs not to Italy alone, but to all nations.

A few facts concerning the life of this remarkable man will doubtless prove of interest at this time. He is a native of Bologna, Italy, being the son of an Italian father and an Irish mother. He is said to have begun his electrical researches in his native city under the direction of the noted Professor Righi, and soon began to evince the genius which has since won him imperishable fame. He began to experiment with wireless telegraphy in 1895 and it was put to practical use in England in 1896. Signor Marconi was made a Senator in the Italian Parliament about two years ago, and has shown unusual ability as a lawmaker, having made a number of speeches pertaining to the European war that have attracted wide attention in his own and other countries. He is about 43 years of age, and speaks fluently both English and Italian. He has only one eye, the other having been lost as a result of a motor accident, which came very near costing him his life. His wife, as was his mother, is a daughter of the Emerald Isle, and the family are Protestants. He has a son and daughter in a Methodist Mission school in Rome, and a missionary is said to have referred to them in a recent letter sent to the United States as "such dear, bright children."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, of Hattiesburg, recently assisted Rev. W. B. Alsworth in a good meeting at Purvis, Miss. The singing was led by Rev. A. C. Watson, of Greenwood, S. C.

Rev. C. A. Parks, our gifted young pastor on the Kosciusko Circuit, says: "We are planning big things in this charge. Our people are working and expecting a great revival season this summer. Pray for us."

In a letter bringing us 3 subscriptions, for which he has our thanks, Rev. W. B. Baker, of Sherman, Miss., thus refers to his charge: "Our work is moving along very nicely. We are planning for great revivals this summer."

A Young Woman's Christian Association building costing $45,000 was recently dedicated at Bogalusa, La. It is constructed of Southern yellow pine, of which Bogalusa is the largest producing center in the United States.

Dr. John T. Sawyer, who is "the noblest Roman of them all," did his full duty last Sunday, preaching for Brother Morris at Epworth Church, this city, at 11 o'clock a.m., and for Brother Brown at Felicity at night. There was a good service at each of these points.

Dr. U. G. Foote, pastor of the Rayne Memorial Church of New Orleans, has issued a card specially inviting the soldiers and sailors of the United States Army and Navy and their families and friends to worship with his congregation next Sunday, June 24, at 11 o'clock a. m.

The following friends, to whose kindness no reference has been made elsewhere, have our thanks for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. C. A. Battle, Baton Rouge, La., 5; Rev. J. C. Ellis, South McComb, Miss., 3; Rev. J. R. Bright, Friar's Point, Miss., 6.

Dr. E. K. Guinn, an esteemed layman of the Buena Vista (Miss.) charge, at the request of his pastor, Rev. W. R. Williams, has been doing some good work in behalf of the Advocate, a recent letter from him bringing us 4 subscriptions. We scarcely need to say that we appreciate this helpful service to the Conference organ.

Rev. A. A. Sims, of Carthage, Miss., writes as follows: "The cougregations at most of my churches have been growing with every service. We are to begin our revival meetiug at Carthage on the third Sunday in June. Rev. J. V. Bennett is to be with us. We ask the brethreu to pray that success may crown our labors."

Rev. H. W. Bowman, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, in sending in his appointments for his third round of quarterly conferences, remarks as follows: "I am resting here at Zwolle by holding a meeting and preaching twice a day." Brother Bowman is a diligent toiler for the extension of the Master's Kingdom.

Mr. Dabney A. Thomas, who until recently has beeu in business at Gulfport, Miss., has accepted a position at the New Orleans Naval Station, thus becoming a resident of this city. He did us the kindness to call at the Advocate office last Saturday and we greatly eujoyed his visit. He is a son of Rev. J. E. Thomas, of the North Mississippi Confereuce.

Correspondents have written us most enthusiastically of the impression made by Dr. Fred P. Magnet, a returned medical missionary from Huchow, China, at the Grenada "Efficiency Conference." His presence there is stated to have done much for the cause of missions in North Mississippi, his consecration and devotion being an inspiration to the brethren.

The honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon Rev. J. M. Gleun, presiding elder of the Macon (Ga.) District, at the recent Commencemet of the Meridian (Miss.) College. It will be remembered that Brother Gleun conducted a revival at Meridian College this year, accomplishing a great work among the students. He took a course at Southern University, Greensboro, Ala., and has been a hard student ever since. This honor was worthily bestowed.

Rev. W. W. Woollard, presiding elder of the Columbus District, in sending in his third round of appointments, says: "The work of the Columbus District for the first half of the year is closing out in good shape. We have had a number of good revivals, with a goodly number of accessions to the Church. The pastors are all in favor with their flocks and are faithfully at work. The stewards of the district have made some advance over last year in their collections for the preachers."

"The Love of God—Its Meaning, Nature, Regulation, and Greatness," is the title of an excellent pamphlet from the pen of Dr. I. L. Peebles, of Meridian, Miss. This great theme is ably and luminously handled in this discussion, and one cannot read it without profit. Dr. Peebles knows the Scriptures as but few men do, and he is gifted in unfolding the rich truths contained in them. We wish for this little publication a large circulation. Send the author ten cents and secure a copy.

In the Bulletin of Centenary Church, McComb, Miss., of June 3, Mr. J. B. Alford, the Treasurer of the Board of Stewards, made the following statement to the congregation: "The Board of Stewards are not quite able to report in full for the first half of the year. However, this is the best financial report that we have ever made for the first six months. Let every member do his part and all our assessments will be met with ease." Rev. J. Lloyd Decell is the gifted young pastor of this flock.

A brother complained some time since that there has been so little in the Advocate in advocacy of organic union with the Church, North. The Editor has published every scrap that has come to him in favor of the movement from Mississippi and Louisiana, and also nearly all the articles that have been offered him from outside our territory. He announced in the beginning that the columns of the Advocate were wide open to all in the patronizing Conferences who had anything to say on this vexatious issue.

Rev. E. D. Fayard was in the city last Saturday and made the Advocate office an appreciated visit. He was en route to his home at Springfield La., where he is assistant pastor to Rev. H. C. Murphy. He had been on a two weeks' visit to his brother, Rev. Louis Fayard, pastor of the Back Bay and Wolf River charge, Mississippi Conference, whose home is at Biloxi. Brother Fayard stated that Rev. J. B. Williams, of Pontchatoula, La., had been stricken with illness, and that he is at the Seashore Campground trying to regain his health, which we trust he will soon do.

Our gifted young pastor at Jonestown, Miss., Rev. D. R. Wasson, sends us two subscriptions to the Advocate, and in his business letter appends the following note: "I have just closed a good meeting at Dundee. Brother J. H. Bell and his singer, Mr. Templeton, were with me. Brother Bell is a fearless preacher of the gospel, and a good, true man. He strives not only to bring men into the Church, but also to make those in the Church better praying and working Christians. He has done us great good, and we shall remember him affectionately for his work among us."

The New Orleans Epworth League Union held an interesting meeting at Rayne Memorial Church on Tuesday night of last week. We take the following item from a newspaper report of the proceedings: "Rev. W. E. Thomas made a short talk, discussing the work that the churches of the city are doing among the soldiers, in the course of which he told of a fund being raised to supply them with Bibles. The Union authorized the Treasurer to turn over to Mr. Thomas $10 for this fund, and to furnish a rubber stamp for marking the Bibles purchased "From the New Orleans Epworth League Union.'"

Prof. D. J. Savage, in sending in his subscription to the Advocate from Columbia, Mo., says: "I am now doing graduate work in English in the University of Missouri; but, as you perhaps remember, I am to be at Millsaps next session as Headmaster of the Preparatory School. Anything that you may say for the Preparatory School will be appreciated." The Editor truly wishes that he could say something that would impress the Methodists of Mississippi with the importance of patronizing this fine training school. Millsaps College is to be congratulated upon having again secured the services of Prof. Savage.

Rev. J. T. McVey, of Mayersville, Miss., writes: "This is undoubtedly one of the best charges in the Mississippi Conference. I think that at least two-thirds of the families belonging to our church are subscribers to the New Orleans Advocate. The preaching and mid-week prayer services are well attended. We have a live Woman's Missionary Society and the Epworth League has been reorganized and is doing well. This week nearly all the (white) citizens, and several people who do not reside in town, came to the parsonage and gave us the greatest 'pounding' that we have ever received. To say that we appreciated it, is hardly adequate."

A rather unusual thing happened at the Advocate office Monday of this week. Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Greenhaw and their little sons, of Clarksdale, Miss., and Mrs. Greenhaw's sister, Mrs. H. F. Rector, of Arkansas, with her little son, drove up in their motor car and paid us an appreciated call. They had been on a touring and camping trip on the Mississippi Coast and were passing through New Orleans on their way home. Brother Greenhaw stated that this outing was in commemoration of the tenth anniversary of his and Mrs. Greenhaw's marriage. Mrs. Greenhaw and Mrs. Rector are daughters of Rev. T. W. Dye, who is well known throughout North Mississippi and other sections of the Church. The Editor scarcely needs to say that he was glad to see these friends.

While recently in Jackson, Miss., attending the Commencement exercises of Millsaps College, we learned with sorrow that the Hon. Edward Mayes of that city had been forced by feeble health to give up a large part of his extended and lucrative law practice. Mr. Mayes is a son-in-law of the late Justice L. Q. C. Lamar and his brilliant biographer. In our opinion, it would scarcely be saying too much to call him the most accomplished man in Mississippi. But, better still, he is a stainless Christian gentleman, and has long been widely known as a Methodist layman. We hope that there will soon be an improvement in his physical condition.

Rev. W. W. Hartsfield, of Rienzi, Miss., thus reports concerning the work in his field: "This charge is in a good condition. Our Sunday School Field Secretary, Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, recently spent two days with us, the results being that one school was raised to the standard of efficiency, and we adopted as our goal, 'Every School up to That Standard Before the End of the Year.' And we expect to reach that goal. The artisan is beautifying the interior of our church at a cost of $125. Rev. T. M. Brownlee, Commissioner for Grenada College, was recently with us long enough to consume a few 'pimentos sandwiches.' The success he is meeting with is proof of his efficiency, but we thought it would do no harm to 'pepper him a bit.' He says he is coming again. We anticipate a year worth while."

ACCIDENT TO THE ALEXANDRIA CHURCH.

We greatly regretted to learn of the unfortunate collapse of the vestibule of our church at Alexandria, La., which occurred last Sunday night, and which was thus reported in Tuesday's Times-Picayune:

"Eighteen persons were injured, including several women, in the collapse Sunday night of the floor of the vestibule of the First Methodist Church. At least a thousand people, who had been attending revival services conducted by Evangelist Thurston B. Price, of St. Louis, were leaving the church when the accident occurred. The vestibule was crowded. The sills which held the floor gave way, precipitating about fifty people into the basement about eight feet deep. The injured are Mrs. J. L. Wilson, wife of Coroner Wilson, right ankle seriously sprained; Rivers Wilson, her son, leg injured; Mrs. J. S. Butler, leg broken; Miss Mary Tullis, severe cut in the back of the head and body bruised; Mrs. John S. Smart, of Leesville; Miss Mary Peart and Miss Tabitha Holstein, of Pineville; Misses Sadie and Ruby Haygood, of Kent Addition; Gustine Scallan, Mrs. M. C. Rigsby, Mrs. L. Lawrence, Mrs. Luke Roberts, Mrs. Homer Hirster Mrs. King Rand, Mrs. Jeff Davis, and Mr. Daspit. The accident created great excitement, and a panic was only averted by the ministers, who appealed to the crowd to be calm, assuring the people that there was no further danger. The injured were reported on the road to recovery Monday night."

Dear Brethren: There was a resolution passed at our last district conference, asking that the lay leader and stewards of each charge and station send their preacher, free of expense, to the Divinity School on the 26th of June. Now, brethren, I hope you will do this. It will be a great blessing to your preacher, and I am sure you will get a blessing also. I intended writing to each one of you, but I failed to get your names, though I sought to do so. It is nearing the date for the meeting of the Divinity School, so I have decided to try to reach you through the Advocate.

C. L. RAY.

Hurrah! How's This

Hospital records show that every time you cut a corn you invite lockjaw or blood poison, which is needless says a Cincinnati authority, who tells you that a quarter-ounce of a drug called freezone can be obtained at little cost from the drug store but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You simply apply a few drops of freezone on a tender, aching corn and soreness is instantly relieved. Shortly the entire corn can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

This drug is sticky but dries at once and is claimed to just shrivel up any corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

If your wife wears high heels she will be glad to know of this.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles as the prescription othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. Otherwise the obituaries will, without correspondence about them, be edited down to 200 words. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

Uncle JOHNIE THOMASSON was born in Tennessee on February 4, 1852, and departed this life on May 31, 1917, being a little more than 65 years old. He moved to Alabama early in life and was married there. Shortly after he was married, he moved to Mississippi, where he lived until God called him to come up higher. Too much cannot be said in commendation of Uncle Johnie. He was a good man, loved by everybody who knew him. He professed faith in Christ when only 16 years of age and joined the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. He served as ruling elder in same for several years. Later he decided to join the M. E. Church, South, of which his wife was a member, and he was a consistent member thereof until death. When the Civil War broke out Uncle Johnie offered his services, and served as a private soldier in the Eastern Army until he was captured and sent to Fort Delaware, where he was kept until the surrender. As a soldier he was brave; as a neighbor he was good and true, and as a Christian he never faltered. His body was laid to rest in the Fairfield Cemetery, the services being conducted by the writer, who was his pastor, assisted by Rev. S. V. Gullett. W. B. BAKER.

Shannon, Miss.

ELLIS CLIFTON PICKETT was born near Carpenter, Miss., on Feb. 11, 1896. On May 16, 1917, the whole country was shocked to hear of his tragic death, caused by being accidently hit by a chain while hauling logs near Carlisle, Miss., and everyone came to offer what consolation he could and mingle his tears with those of the heart-broken mother and father. Ellis was the third grown son. How desolate and dreary the once happy home and how pathetic the cry of her hungry heart! "Oh, for the touch of a vanished hand or the sound of a voice that is still!" He was large and handsome, with the most beautiful blending of manly dignity and childlike simplicity. He never spoke unkindly of any one and was ever cheerful and pleasant when one met him. He leaves a father, mother, six brothers, and two sisters to mourn their loss. Surely, we live in a world where dark shadows are continually falling across our pathway, reminding us that here there is no abiding stay. How forcibly was it realized that in the midst of life we are in death. We commend the loved ones left behind to our Heavenly Father, who alone can comfort them in this sad hour. May we all live in the hope of a happy reunion in the sweet by-and-by.

AUNT MARIA.

Brother W. W. WORTHY was born at Centerville, Miss., on Feb. 2, 1849, and died on May 1, 1917, aged 68 years and 3 months. On Dec. 16, 1874, he was happily married to Miss Emma Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Taylor, at their beautiful plantation home in East Feliciana Parish, near Jackson, La. Some years of his life were spent in Jackson, La., but most of his career was spent in Ethel, La., where he had resided continuously for more than forty years. The Methodist Church at Ethel was the object of his deep affection, where he served for 25 years as steward, 15 years as superintendent of the Sunday school, and as president of the Epworth League. He was the leading spirit in the church, and it was largely through his instrumentality that the Church work at Ethel was carried on. His home was always open to welcome any servant of God, and many preachers throughout Louisiana enjoyed the hospitality of that Christian home. It was to him not only a pleasure but a delight to give his time and money for the upbuilding of God's kingdom. He was a good citizen and an affectionate husband. The community sustained a great loss in his going, but the fruits of his good example remain. He leaves a devoted wife and a good name, which is "rather to be chosen than great riches." May the Lord raise up more like unto him! His life was above reproach. His remains were laid to rest in the old Taylor cemetery amidst a host of friends and relatives. Brother S. S. Bogan, a former pastor, assisted the writer in conducting the funeral. Brother Worthy is not dead, but still lives in the hearts and minds of those who knew him, and his influence will be felt for all time. May God comfort his devoted wife who mourns because of his going.

His pastor,
J. J. KELLY.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, our lamented brother, G. W. GALLOWAY, who for many years was a faithful servant of the Church in this charge, and was in every relation of life a true exemplar of Christ, left a bequest of $1000 to Millsaps College, to be known as the Marvin Galloway Scholarship, to be applied to the education of worthy young men in that institution, preferably from Madison County;

Be it resolved, that we voice the sentiment of the people of this charge in declaring that this final act of Brother Galloway was in keeping with the whole tenor of his life—a sure indication that greatness of heart, Christliness of soul, and benevolence of life which shone throughout his long and honorable career. We may well repeat the statement once made of him by his lamented nephew, Bishop C. B. Galloway, who said: "He is the salt of the earth." We sorrow that he is gone from us, but we rejoice that, by this scholarship, his memory and that of his devoted son, the late Marvin Galloway, whose name he willed it should bear, are perpetuated, and that in this substantial way the power of a good man's life will go on.

Resolved, further, that we convey to his son, Hervy Galloway, and to his daughters, Mrs. H. G. Hawkins, and Mrs. N. R. Reid, this token of appreciation of their father's bequest, of our sorrow that he has gone from us, and of our sympathy and prayers in their behalf.

Signed for the official board of the Sharon Circuit by: W. H. Coulter, W. C. Joyner, Committee.

Hair Needs Food

just as every other living thing does, and, just as every other living thing, it will die if it is not fed. Hair food takes the form of the natural oil on which it subsists. Fifty years ago the Creoles of Louisiana, who prided themselves on their hair, discovered a recipe for beautiful hair. By the use of this natural hair oil, "La Creole," they kept their hair beautiful, light and fluffy. This secret has been handed down through generations and presents the very best hair food and hair disease remedy. Does your hair fall out? Is it coarse? Is it stiff? Has it lost its natural luster? Then ask your dealer for a bottle of "La Creole" hair dressing. The price is only $1.00 and it will be the life of your hair. If he can't supply you, write at once to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

CONSTIPATION, BILIOUSNESS, AND LIVER DISORDERS.

Cleanliness is the first law of health and it means more than keeping the hands and body clean. It demands that the inside of the body shall be kept clear of impurities. It demands that the waste products be not allowed to stay any longer in the body than Nature normally provides.

The importance of keeping your bowels normal is seen when it is remembered that there is not a solitary disease in the entire list that does not demand as one of the first requisites in its treatment the thorough elimination of waste matter from the bowels.

Two of the commonest causes of constipation are wrong diet and irregularity in going to stool. The liver failing to secrete enough bile is another potent reason.

Dr. Miles' Liver Pills are an ideal remedy for such a condition. They gently stimulate the action of the liver and the bowels, and with careful attention to habits of stool and diet, insure their proper and regular action.

The following are some of the reasons why we so strongly advocate the use of Dr. Miles' Liver Pills in cases of torpid liver, biliousness, constipation and indigestion: Because they do not cause griping or other unpleasant sensations like ordinary pills. Because their use does not derange the stomach, liver or bowels. Because they are a very gentle laxative and if properly used cause natural movements of the bowels. Because they are small, mild and sure.

The Composition of Coca-Cola and its Relation to Tea

Prompted by the desire that the public shall be thoroughly informed as to the composition and dietetic character of Coca-Cola, the Company has issued a booklet giving a detailed analysis of its recipe which is as follows:

Water, sterilized by boiling (carbonated); sugar, granulated, first quality; fruit flavoring extracts with caramel; acid flavorings, citric (lemon) and phosphoric; essence of tea—the refreshing principle.

The following analysis, by the late Dr. John W. Mallet, Fellow of the Royal Society and for nearly forty years Professor of Chemistry in the University of Virginia, shows the comparative stimulating or refreshing strength of tea and Coca-Cola, measured in terms of the refreshing principle:

Black tea (hot)—1 cupful (5 fl. oz)	1.54
Green tea (cold)—1 glassful (8 fl. oz. exclusive of ice)	2.02
Coca-Cola (bottlers)—1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.12

From the above recipe and analysis, which are confirmed by all chemists who have analyzed these beverages, it is apparent that Coca-Cola is a carbonated, fruit-flavored modification of tea of a little more than one-half its stimulating strength.

A copy of the booklet referred to above will be mailed free on request, and The Coca-Cola Company especially invites inquiry from those who are interested in pure food and public health propaganda. Address

More than half of the district is making a new record. There must be a reason. Will not the stewards and pastors look for that reason?

Recuperation—there is not so much in the ordinary vacation as there is in a single bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which refreshes the tired blood, sharpens the dulled appetite, restores the lost courage. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla this summer.—Adv.

EXTRACTS FROM JUNE LETTERS

The first college I remember hearing of in my early childhood is WHITWORTH of Brookhaven, and during the thirty-five years or more I have known the institution I have yet to hear a word disparaging of the place.

What I value most, personally, of Whitworth is the high class culture the girls receive there. They are taught to disapprove of the worldly conduct of the ordinary and to take upon themselves a dignity becoming the Godly character of the True Christian Southern Womanhood and Manhood which has for years distinguished our beautiful Southland in poetry, song, and history, as to nobility, faithfulness, virtue and chivalry. I would not exchange alone the culture my daughter has received during the four years she spent there for the time and money it cost, to say nothing of the superior literary and scientific training and general education she received.

Q. D. SAULS.

* * * *

I regard Whitworth College as an ideal educational institution for young ladies. I am highly gratified at the progress made by my daughters, and shall continue to patronize your school.

A. M. DOTY, M.D.

* * * *

I think I have never been more pleasantly impressed with the general surroundings and the influence of a school. Home life and personal attention seems to be the keynote for all that is done for the girls. This, I am sure, is what we mothers appreciate when we send our daughter away from us.

MRS. JNO. L. SUTTON.

* * * *

Whitworth College has my hearty support, and I know it is doing a great work among the girls who are fortunate enough to attend.

My daughter took the complete course at Whitworth and thinks very highly of the school. The influence for good thrown about the girls is a great factor and ought to come in for first consideration at the hands of all who contemplate placing their daughters in a school away from home.

SILVER CITY, MISS.

Dear Brother: We closed a good meeting at Louise on June 1, with 7 accessions on profession of faith, and the church greatly revived. Rev. J. V. Bennett did the preaching and did it well. Any one needing a good helper in a meeting will not make any mistake to secure his assistance. We closed a really good meeting at Silver City last night, with 9 additions on profession of faith. Revs. O. S. and B. W. Lewis did the preaching and it was well done. They did for us good work, and we feel that it will be lasting. Our church here was most wonderfully revived. To God we give all the praise. The card table and the ballroom, we feel sure, are things of the past here—at least all our young people pledged themselves against it for all time to come. Pray for us. Your brother in Christ.

J. H. FOREMAN.

QUEENSBOROUGH, SHREVEPORT, LA.

Queensborough is a small mission station, near the Fair Grounds, in Shreveport. We have about 130 assessable members. We have received 30 this year, and have organized a Woman's Missionary Society and a Junior League. We now have on foot a program to raise our Sunday school to a 100-per cent standard of efficiency. The stewards and committees are organized. Queensborough does not afford an opportunity for pastoral work among the men during the daytime, as the men are on trains, street cars, on the road drumming, working as insurance agents, in shops, etc., in different parts of the city. Nor have the women the chance to make money that they have in most towns, as no business is done in this residential part of the city. We have only 20 grown male members, and but one of these is able to pay over $25 a year to the Church. The Fair booth, by means of which they cleared nearly $600 last year, is not open to them this year because we will not agree to the demand to run on Sunday. We owe $400 on the church and we need some Sunday school rooms badly. We have no parsonage and not enough space to build one on. The membership, with their environment, is unable to meet this need. The Baptists have put twice as much money into their plant here as the Methodists have put into theirs. They have twice the results. The Baptitsts of Shreveport take an interest in their missionary church here. I think less of the missionary spirit of our large city churches since becoming pastor of a struggling mission church under their eyes. We left a good parsonage in our preceding charge, built while we were there. Here we must both cook and eat in a small bathroom with only one window, doing this through the summer. It is hard sometimes to keep up courage under certain circumstances, but we shall refrain from mentioning these lest we appear to grumble. Mr. Editor, we shall thank you to publish this, as we no longer report in the Annual Conference, nor in the district conference, nor even in the city Methodist Preachers' Meeting. We have two new subscriptions which we will forward as soon as we collect, and we hope to get others.

A BEAUTIFUL WEDDING.

A beautiful wedding was celebrated in the Methodist Church at Nettleton, Miss., on the morning of June 12, 1917, at 10 o'clock, when Mr. W. S. Young and Miss Milledge Ried Wygul were made man and wife, the Rev. W. M. Young, pastor of the Methodist Church at Pontotoc, who is the father of the groom, saying the solemn service. The church was handsomely decorated for the occasion, and a large company of kindred and friends were present. Peter Callis, of Germantown, Tenn., was the best man, and Miss Annie Belle Quillian was the maid of honor. Mr. J. E. Wax and Mr. Sam McDuffie were the ushers. The bride is the accomplished daughter of Mr. W. E. Wygul, a merchant of Nettleton. She taught in the Durant public school this year. The young couple will make their home in Chattanooga, Tenn., where the groom is a teacher in the Baylor School.

BIBLE TEACHERS' TRAINING SCHOOL.

The present Commencement season has closed a year of unusual prosperity at the Bible Teachers' Training School of New York. A class of 35 members was graduated, and included representatives of the four schools into which the institution is sub-divided—the School of Theology, the School of Religious Pedagogy, the School of Missions, and the School for Bible Teachers. The Commencement address was delivered by Dr. Edwin M. Poteat, President of Furman University. The School has had over three hundred students, and, in addition to its regular budget, has raised over $200,000 to apply on its realty holdings. Under its revised charter it has recommended to the Board of Regents of the University of the State of New York its first candidate for a degree of B.D. The outlook, in spite of the present international situation, is bright and the School looks forward to another great year.

Freckles—

The fairer the skin the more ugly it is when marred by freckles; and they are not necessary at all. As soon as the warm sunshine or the hot winds bring them out, and with the natural embarrasment that every woman feels, get a package of Kintho; this is the easy way to remove them. If Kintho is used at the first sign of the ugly spots, they'll sometimes disappear overnight. Any druggist has or can get Kintho for you. Use Kintho soap too. It's astonishing how it helps keep the freckles away once Kintho has removed them.

NEED OF PROHIBITION AS A WAR MEASURE.

If there was ever a season when mothers of the land ought to speak through their Representatives and Senators at the National Capitol, it is now, when the question of total prohibition, or taxation of the liquor traffic, is proposed as war legislation. The auxiliaries of the Woman's Missionary Society have been requested to petition their National Representatives to vote for total prohibition as a war measure. Let each auxiliary act promptly, so that their leaders may know that there is conviction and demand for prohibition as a war measure.

DISTRICT MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Corinth District was held with the New Albany Auxiliary, May 3 and 4. New Albany proved herself an ideal hostess and every moment spent there was one of pleasure. The Young People's rally, under the leadership of Mrs. Baker, on Thursday afternoon and evening was very interesting, and it was a matter of rejoicing to note the response from the young people of this district. The report of the Council meeting, given by Mrs. Hobbs of New Albany, at this time was much enjoyed. Friday was given over to business and institutes on our department work, all of which were instructive. The Corinth District may well be proud of its women. One had but to listen, as a number of them appeared in discussion in the institutes, to realize that North Mississippi affords no ahler women. It demonstrates, too, that our educational campaign is doing quiet but effective work. Junior rallies and organization plans were discussed and decided upon, and Corinth was selected as the next place of meeting. It has never been my pleasure to attend a more interesting meeting than this one. The attendance was fairly good, about 35 delegates and visitors being present, while the attendance from New Albany was splendid. Noonday lunch was served by the ladies, with a most charming hospitality, at a down-town cafe. MRS. S. F. RILEY.

JAPANESE WOMEN LIBERATED.

"Of all the signs of progress in present-day Japan, none is more startling than the rise of woman," says an editorial in the English Japan Advertiser of July 28. "After centuries of inferiority in a country that until the last few years has always subordinated the position of woman, self-realization among the Japanese fair sex, the dream of ages, is becoming a fact among the more advanced. As yet there are no suffragettes in the land of Nippon, nor cries of votes for women; but there are many movements which show that the time has arrived for an improvement in the position of woman.

"Instances of revolt from the bondage of Old Japan are not wanting among Japanese women. A few weeks ago Miss Tokutomi, the daughter of a member of the House of Peers, joined the Salvation Army. Her father is famous in Japan as a writer, and also as editor and proprietor of the Kokumin Shimbun; but his pleadings availed nothing in keeping his daughter from leaving her home and entering active work for Christ.

"Several daughters of well-to-do families have refused to marry by the aid of go-betweens, and have asked their parents to allow them a year's acquaintance to determine whether the young men selected are satisfactory. Recently the daughter of a wealthy government official was matched to a young man whom she flatly refused to marry. She is a member of 'The New Woman,' an association which has as its organ a magazine edited hy women and known as the Joo (Queen). Although only twenty years old, she has translated a great part of the works of Ellen Key, and has imbibed her ideas."—Missionary Review of the World.

RUTH HARGROVE INSTITUTE MERGED INTO A SETTLEMENT.

Because of the splendid development of the public school system of Key West, Fla., it has been decided to merge the Ruth Hargrove Institute into a settlement. The public schools now provide educational opportunities for our Methodist people, as well as for the Cubans, for whom the institute was inaugurated. Two deaconesses, or home missionaries, are to carry on the work at this place.

NEW AUXILIARY AT McCOMB.

Miss Bessie Kearney, the wide-awake Secretary of the Brookhaven District, has recently organized at Centenary Church, McComh, an auxiliary of young married women, and writes that they start out very enthusiastically in the work.

We give the names of the officers elected, thus enabling our Conference officers to secure the information sooner than they would otherwise do:

Mrs. J. A. Hart, President; Mrs. C. O. Stevens, 1st Vice-President; Mrs. W. H. Galloway, 2d Vice-President; Mrs. E. Rohinson, Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. M. B. Turner, Superintendent of Study and Publicity; Mrs. John Godbold. Recording Secretary; Mrs. Chas. Rohinson, Treasurer; Mrs. D. J. Wall, Superintendent Socisl Service. A superintendent of supplies will he elected later.

ATTENTION, MISSISSIPPI AUXILIARIES.

Have you received your Conference Annual? If so, have you read it? On page 44 you will find the report of the Committee on Finance, and the fourth recommendation from that committee reads as follows:

"That each auxiliary treasurer make a definite effort to have her membership roll and dues correspond, and pay one-fourth of the pledge and other specials assumed quarterly."

We are urged to call attention to the last clause, "Pay one-fourth of the pledge and other specials assumed quarterly." At the Council meeting in New Orleans, Mrs. Lewis, our Corresponding Secretary, pledged $5500 for our Conference. We authorized her to do it, and now it is "up to us" to see that this amount is paid in regular quarterly payments. Half of the year has passed and we should have paid into the treasury $2750 at the close of this month.

Auxiliary Treasurers, will you not put forth every effort to see that your half of the pledge is paid? If you do your part, then our Conference Treasurer can do hers, and the Mississippi Conference can meet its obligation in full. Don't let us fail at this time, for the third quarter is always a slack one as far as finances are concerned. If we fail hehind now, and fail again next quarter, the hurden will indeed he heavy for the fourth quarter. Why should we talk of failure in the Lord's work when with His help we can accomplish all things? Now let us remember this, and let every woman put her shoulder to the wheel; and when our reports go in they will show that the Mississippi women have been true to their trust..

WHY WE LOST OUR POWER.

By Billy Sunday.

We have lost our power because we have failed to insist on the separation of the Church from the world. You have lost. The Church is a separate hody of men and women; we are to be in the world, hut not of the world. Neither in your methods or impressions; the Church is all right in the world, all wrong when the world is in her, and the trouble with the Church to-day is that she has sprung a leak. The flood-tides of the world have swept it until even her pews are engulfed; yes, even the choir loft is almost submerged. No more hrilliant man ever stood on two feet than the Apostle Paul, and yet he was consecrated soul and hody to the cause of God. The world has got to see a clean-cut line of demarcation between the Church and the world.

"It is the law of this world that environment answers to need. The eye needs light and finds it; the hody seeks food, and finds it; so with the hungry soul; it can he satisfied."

From the Field

Vernado, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: Since having taken charge of the Angie-Talisheek Circuit, on April 1, we have been devoting a large part of our time in building up the Sunday schools. The assistant Field Secretary, Miss Nell Richardson, has visited each of them and was very helpful in increasing the interest as well as the efficiency of our schools. We have observed Children's Day in each Sunday school. Viewed from almost any standpoint, these occasions were all a success. Great interest was manifested by the children, and large congregations attended each service. As a part of the program at two services, we baptized several infants and received several children into the Church.—C. A. Massey, P. C.

Plain Dealing, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am very happy to have the pleasure to report some things concerning the meeting which has just closed. It was a most delightful one. We began on Sunday, May 27, and closed on the following Wednesday night week. The fight continued eleven days. Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, of Yazoo City, Miss., did the preaching. In some way I felt from the very beginning of the first service that we would gain a victory. Doctor, as I write these few lines, I desire to write as I try to preach, that is, out of my heart.

First, the meeting was well attended, and beyond a doubt it was a success. Brother Norsworthy is a wonderful fellow; he undoubtedly is a man of God. He preaches with great power and is one of the most zealous men I ever saw. He won the hearts and confidence of the people and held them spellbound through every service. His sermons were simply fine, being deep and spiritual. He preached once to men only, and twice to women only—these were great discourses. Our church is small and it was packed full, including as many extra seats as we could provide. A good many people stood on the outside, and sat in their cars and listened to the man of God as he told the beautiful story of Salvation, picturing also damnation and hell for the sinner if he failed to accept Christ. It was a most wonderful meeting; people of all denominations came and were very loyal all the way through. The influence was good, for it reached the entire town. We had several accessions to the church, in all about 19; the church was built up and strengthened spiritually. I am so glad and thankful for men who are not afraid to preach the whole truth, and tell people of their sins, for be well assured that the only way to get people to God is to uncover sin. May God bless Brother Norsworthy and make him a mighty power for saving souls. If any of the brethren feel that they need a man of real ability who has a passion for souls, Norsworthy will bear the test and be found worthy. May God bless the editor, who is giving us a good paper. Pray for us.—C. B. Powell, P. E.

A LAYMAN SPEAKS.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have been reading very closely everything that I have seen on the subject of unification. I have been with you all the way through, and will be with you to the end. I cannot see how any true Southern Methodist could be otherwise. We have a great Church and cannot afford to give our all to an oppressive majority to rule over us—never! You are giving us a good paper. Our pastor, Rev. C. A. Schultz, is in fine favor with everybody.

A MISSISSIPPI LAYMAN.

Boils Disappear.

Away back in 1820 a North Carolina physician compounded an ointment for treating boils and other affections of the skin. So successful did this preparation work that its fame soon spread. To-day it will be found in a vast number of homes. If you suffer from boils, carbuncles or other skin eruptions, ask your druggist for a 25c box of Gray's Ointment. It is also an effective protection against blood poison resulting from abrasions of the skin, cuts, sores, bruises, burns, etc. If your druggist does not sell Gray's Ointment, send us his name and we will send you a generous FREE sample postpaid. Address W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

FROM BROTHER ELLIOT.

Dear Brother Meek: I am just back from our "Efficiency Conference" at Grenada. We had a great time.

I wish that you could have been with us at our district conference, recently held in Coffeeville. It was the best one that I have ever had the pleasure of attending, and I will tell you why it was so: It was because Brother Felts, our able presiding elder, stressed the spiritual side of the work. Why, he actually in the regular business sessions at times suspended business and turned the proceedings into experience meetings. Too much could not be said in praise of Brother Felts and the work that he is doing. Keep your eye on the Holly Springs District. I wish that all the people in our district who claim to think that our preachers are preaching only for money could have been at our conference when Brother Felts called for volunteers to go with him this summer and hold revival meetings in sections where they have had no such services in years. (We have many miles of such territory in our district.) I believe that every preacher stood up in response to this call, and most of them had tears in their eyes. May God bless the preachers! They are the best men on earth. May the Lord continue to guide and sustain you in your great work!

B. S. ELLIOTT,
Lay Leader, Holly Springs Dist.

MORNING IN THE HEART.

Morning in the heart is a more wonderful thing than morning in the heavens. God can give daybreak along the horizon to anybody. Indeed, day succeeds night with such clock-like regularity that we lose sense of the wonder of it. But morning in the heart is a still greater thing. It may come at midnight and amid pain. Sometimes pain is God's call-boy to "stab our spirit wide awake." But whenever it comes God always gives it. He may use human ministrants, but He is the renewer of the morning of the heart. Thank God for day, whether it comes over the hills of difficulty or mirrored in the river of doubt, or flashed back to us from the eyes of our friends. Morning in the heart is a miracle. There are few greater that God can give.—George Clark Peck.

UGH! A DOSE OF NASTY CALOMEL

It salivates! It makes you sick and you may lose a day's work.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful to-night. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling great. It's perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate, so let them eat anything afterwards.

THE ADVOCATE OF JUNE 14.

To the Editor: Whether from within myself, or from the character of the issue, I want to express my appreciation of the Advocate which came in the morning mail as one of the very best which has come from the press, even if it did lack one of Sam Steel's spicy contributions (he ought to write more). While Ramsey's article on "Special Days" occupied the last place, it is up towards the first in suggestiveness, for most assuredly have these special days been multiplied, and the pastor who regards them is so denied the right to exercise any initiative, that he can scarcely open a copy of his Minutes without recalling the sentiment of the Psalmist, "Mine enemies reproach me all the day long," and doubtless Ramsey has written the experience of nearly every pastor when he says, "most of these calls for extra days find their way into the wastebasket;" for even Daniel's "time, times, and a half time" would not suffice to provide for all these days. Whether they find their way to other parts or not, this pastor finds that calls (oftener than weekly) from Bureaus, Boards, and charities, if responded to, would exhause the treasury of most churches beyond ability to support the home fields.

Dr. Battle's contribution, whicb covers two pages, is good reading, according to my thinking; and, while it will doubtless be turned aside by some because of its length, he who does so will be the loser. I like "Under the Flag," by Williams, too. Such contributions as these two are edifying to helpfulness upon the burning question of unification. And Dr. Lovett "plows close the corn" in his suggestion that all of the concessions have hitherto been required of the Church, South, and reminds us of the admonition in Matt. 5:23 and 24. Dr. Battle's paragraph on "Dr. Blake on Wastage" would suggest that consistency which is a jewel.

Unless we can have a unification which casts out all fear, it would be better not at all. More than once in my life I have been charged with being unnecessarily candid; but, Doctor, this very delicate and momentous question demands the severest candor. I recall a statement of Bishop Turner, of the A. M. E. Church, who, when responding to a speech of welcome made by the pastor of the white church of the city, said: "While we appreciate your words of welcome, we don't want white folks in our churches; we are willing to be distinctly a church of Negroes." In explanation, he made it plain that no offense was intended, but that for the Negro's greater development they counted it a necessary position for their Church to take, and the statistics both in membership and property (they exceeding every other Negro branch) justify their position.

At this very writing there is being held in the city of Nashville a great gathering of colored Baptist Sunday school workers, which is a separate body from that of the white Baptists of the South, and which represents the only Church among the colored people that at all approaches the Methodist branches. If I have received the correct idea of the Church in any or all of its branches, it is, above all, a social organization, and through this medium is the salt of the earth; therefore, that which produces the closer bond socially will do the greater work religiously.

Last, but not least of your contributors, is Rev. C. Huntington in his appeal for the Christianity of the home in the article entitled "They Have no Prayers in Their House." The Methodism of to-day is suffering more at that point than any or all others. Other suggestions from this copy are worthy of emphasizing, but I must quit or run the risk of the waste-basket.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

Nuxated Iron Should Be Used in Every Hospital and Prescribed by Every Physician

Says Dr. Howard James, late of the Manhattan State Hospital of New York and formerly Assistant Physician Brooklyn State Hospital.

It quickly enriches the blood, strengthens the nerves and puts most astonishing youthful power and vigor into the veins of both men and women. It often increases the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous, run-down folks 100 per cent. in two weeks time.

Opinions of Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York, Dr. A. J. Newman, late Police Surgeon of the City of Chicago and former House Surgeon Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, and other physicians who have tested Nuxated Iron in their own private practice.

In a very interesting and instructive discourse on the great values of plenty of iron in the blood, Dr. Howard James, late of the Manhattan State Hospital of New York and formerly Assistant Physician Brooklyn State Hospital, said:

" 'Say, Doctor, that there stuff is like magic.'

"Previous to using Nuxated Iron, I had been prescribing the various mineral salts of iron for years, only to meet complaints of discolored teeth, disturbed digestion, tied up, hardened secretions, etc., when I came across Nuxated Iron, an elegant, ingenious preparation containing organic iron, which has no destructive action on the teeth—no corrosive effect on the stomach, and which is readily assimilated into the blood and quickly makes its presence felt by increased vigor, snap and staying power.

"Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron.

"As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak or run down, instead of dosing themselves with habit-forming drugs, stimulants and alcoholic beverages, I am convinced that in this way they could ward off disease, preventing it becoming organic in thousands of cases and thereby the lives of thousands might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, kidney, liver, heart trouble and other dangerous maladies. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by a lack of iron in the blood."

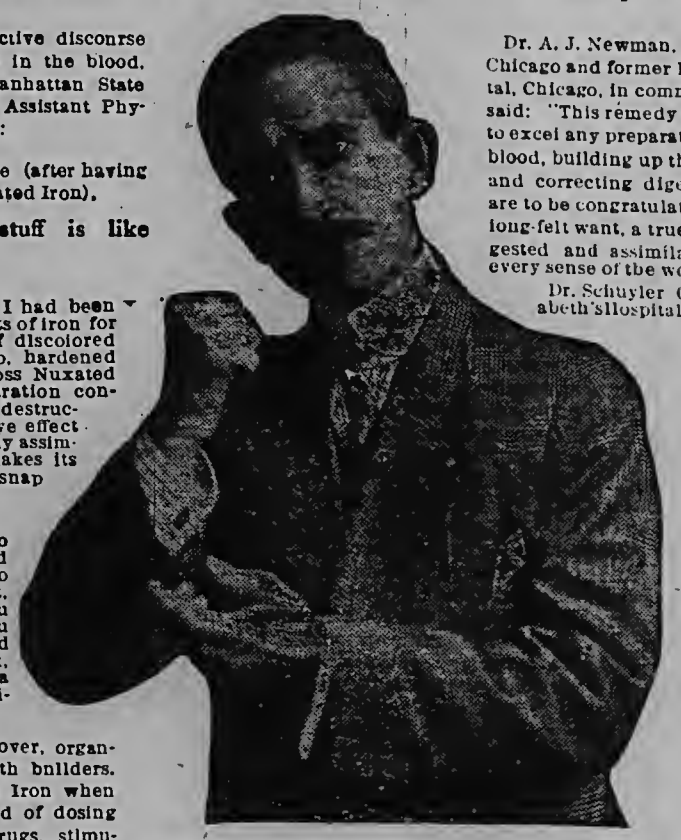
"If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of nuxated iron, three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. From my own experience with Nuxated Iron, I feel it is such a valuable remedy that it should be kept in every hospital and prescribed by every physician in this country."

Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician, who has studied both in this country and great European Medical Institutions, was asked what he thought of Dr. James' remarks. In reply, he said: "I fully agree with Dr. James. People need more iron. There can be no strong, vigorous iron men and beautiful, healthy women without iron. Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact, a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in—now at 50, after taking nuxated iron, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the bouyancy of youth."



Dr. Howard James, late of the Manhattan State Hospital of New York and formerly Assistant Physician Brooklyn State Hospital tells physicians he believes that more Nuxated Iron should be prescribed to meet the great problem of iron deficiency with its attendant symptoms of weakness, nervousness, lack of vitality, paleness, and generally rundown conditions.

Dr. A. J. Newman, late police Surgeon of the City of Chicago and former House Surgeon, Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, in commenting on the value of Nuxated Iron, said: "This remedy has proven through my own test of it to excel any preparation I have ever used for creating red blood, building up the nerves, strengthening the muscles and correcting digestive disorders. The manufacturers are to be congratulated in having given to the public a long-felt want, a true tonic supplying iron in an easily digested and assimilated form. A true health builder in every sense of the word."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York, was also asked what he thought of Nuxated Iron. In reply Dr. Jaques said:

"I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But in the case of Nuxated Iron I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

The next to be consulted was Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York Physician and Medical Author, who said:

"I heartily concur in all that Dr. James has said, only in some respects I would go further. Dr. James forgot to mention how foods lose their iron value by improper methods of cookery. In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated cornmeal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked are responsible for another grave iron loss. Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe age you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron—Nuxated Iron—just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

THE BURNING BUSH.

By James M. Hayes.

(From the author's lately published volume, "The Grave of Dreams and Other Verses.")

Strange thoughts are ever in my mind,
Strange doubts that grieve me when I pray;
In faith I can not comfort find.
And God seems very far away.
In days long dead He spoke to men,
O, would that I were living then!

A rose-tree in my garden grows,
Its perfume is as incense rare;
It bends with many a scarlet rose
That speaketh of a Presence there.
O, bright red lamps, you seem to say
That God is not so far away!

And so before my rose-tree bright
My sorrows and my doubts give way;
No longer twilight, gloom, and night,
But sunrise, glory, and the day.
My garden-walk His feet have trod;
This burning bush enshrines my God.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S APPEAL TO THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

To the Officers, Teachers and Scholars of the Sunday Schools of the United States of America:

The present insistent call of our beloved country must be heard and answered by every citizen of the United States in proportion to his or her ability to maintain the national power and honor. Many citizens will render their aid by force of arms on the battlefield, while others will make the Nation strong by their patriotic gifts and support to the common cause. It is therefore highly fitting that the Sunday schools of the Nation should observe a special patriotic day, and on this occasion should make a special contribution to the American Red Cross for the alleviation of the suffering entailed by the prosecution of the present war. It is my earnest hope that your generosity may be unstinted in this, the hour of the Nation's need, and that this special day may mean much to you in the understanding of the cause for which our beloved land now contends.

WOODROW WILSON.

THE MOST IMPORTANT FACTOR.

There have long been many who seem to think that education and culture can transform and uplift humanity. They apparently proceed upon the theory that the diffusion of knowledge will rid a people of their vices and ills and fit them for high living and noble doing. But this is an entirely mistaken conception, which is being constantly disproven by the developments in actual life. A striking illustration of this is seen in the breakdown of German "kultur," which for decades was applauded by the whole world. Not only did it permit the millions of Germany, with all their efficiency, to become dominated by ideals of such a character as to plunge nearly the whole planet into the most colossal war of all the ages, but this highly educated people have, furthermore, shown themselves capable of perpetrating cruel and shocking barbarities, scarcely surpassed in the annals of the race. The Literary Digest of June 23 shows that among those who are intoxicated with amazingly arrogant notions of Germany's superiority and right to dominate other nations are included practically all her men of greatest distinction in the realms of art and letters, such as Wilamowitz-Mollendorf, Harnack, Wundt, Oncken, Eucken, Haeckel, Naumann, Rohrbach, Sombart, and Listz.

But we do not need to go abroad to find an illustration of the fact that learning and culture do not necessarily give rise to a high and vigorous type of religion. New England has long been the literary center of the United States, and yet perhaps we find there to-day the most anaemic type of Christianity to be discovered within the bounds of our Nation, existing side by side with more cults and unsound faiths than any other section of the American Union can furnish. The right kind of education must have respect to the three-fold nature of man—his mind, his body, and his moral powers. Hence only an education that is pronouncedly Christian can do for a human being that which needs to be done, namely, to strengthen and build him up in all his possible capacities.

But it should be kept in mind that all education that claims to be Christian is not truly so. Christianity is something more than a mere name. Many Church institutions are but feeble promoters of the Christian religion; they contribute very little toward a true and vital spiritual upbuilding of their students. Doctrines, however sound, cannot of themselves renew the moral natures of men and make them robust and vigorous. The utmost that they can do is to lead those who accept and act in harmony with them to the living, transforming agencies of redemption. These are the Father and Son, working through the Holy Spirit, whom they have sent forth into the world.

This Dynamic Power of religion is the great need of mankind—the only force that can regenerate and uplift the fallen millions of the race. Other agencies may help to make a people better, but left to themselves they can but fail, even when at their best. A Divine quickening and strengthening of the soul alone can produce noble, unselfish, Christlike men and women. The strange thing is that we are so prone to forget this fact and turn to other expedients in our efforts to help those about us. He does the most for his fellowmen who brings them into conscious touch with the living God. Any church that is a vehicle for the working of Divine power, whatever may be its human equipment and resources, will accomplish on earth results that will outlast the stars. A deep and controlling conviction that this is true would soon usher in a brighter and better day for our own land and all the world.

WE KNOW BUT LITTLE OF THE FUTURE.

It is quite the fashion nowadays for speakers and writers to tell what we shall find to have come to pass after the present mighty war has ended. It is proper for us to consider what will likely be the needs of our own country and the world after the cannons shall have ceased to roar and to try to be ready, in so far as we can, for the most important demands that we think may be made upon us. But while there are some things that may be foreseen, we have but little faith in the copious predictions that are now poured forth as to the results that will be achieved by the vast and bloody conflict now raging. The finite mind can see but dimly into the future. A few years ago we heard one of the ablest ministers in the Nation, in delivering a public address, sneer at military schools, saying that there was no need for them in this age of the world and that they would all soon go out of business. Yet to-day even all our Church colleges are having to add military training to their curricula. What the coming years have in store for humanity only God can tell. As the Wise Man said, We do not know what a day may bring forth.

THE SUBMARINE VS. THE AIRSHIP.

The Outlook of June 20 declares that if Germany wins the war, which it thinks is scarcely possible, it will have to do so by means of submarine boats, while if the Allies conquer, which it is declared they must, they will find their victory in the air. It may seem to some at the first blush that this claim is somewhat fanciful, but it ceases to appear so when one realizes that in this modern day aviators are the eyes of an army. So if one side can dominate the atmosphere above the battle lines it has two great advantages: It is able to discover the maneuvers and weak points of the opposing forces, while, on the other hand, the enemy can discern nothing and has to fight, so to speak, like a blind man. It is in recognition of these facts that the United States has set herself energetically to the task of producing a large number of air machines and the training of thousands of aviators. The Outlook advocates the spending of a billion dollars in the development of this arm of military service, which would be a tax of $10 per capita on the population of the United States. This would be money wisely expended if it would help to save the lives of the thousands of our brave boys who will soon be on the firing line. Truly, we are living in a wonderful, as well as perplexing, age.

BY WAY OF SUGGESTION.

The following from the Presbyterian Journal applies as well to Methodist as to Presbyterian pastors; so we pass it on:

"Are our Churches carefully considering the duty they owe their pastors, in these times of high cost of living, by adding something to the salaries which they are paying? Many of our noble pastors are undergoing real trial. We know this to be a fact. They are naturally reticent about the matter. They will be the last to make any request or suggestion concerning a more adequate income. Let the people take the initiative and help their faithful, uncomplaining servants."

MUCH FROM LITTLE.

The Rev. Hunter Davidson.

Just a seed—it fell to earth,
Full rich it grew and came to birth
In greening stem and gorgeous bloom—
Then beauty blessed the saddened room.

Just a thought—but power it had
To make a heart full sweet and glad,
Because it pulsed of love and life,
And sang of hope amid the strife.

Just a word—'twas sweetly said,
A downcast soul it comforted,
And then, like light, it sped along—
An echo from an angel's song.

—Southern Churchman.

THE LAW OF ENLARGEMENT.

Doing nothing for others is the undoing of ourselves. We must be purposely kind and generous or we miss the best part of existence. The heart that goes out of itself gets large and full. This is the great secret of the inner life. We do ourselves the most good by doing good for others.—Horace Mann.

"KNOW THYSELF."

Here is the prayer which every Christian ought often to make: "Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me and know my thoughts, and see if there be any evil way in me; and lead me in the way everlasting." It is the part of cowardice and of criminal indifference to disregard the tendencies in our lives that are destructive. We may well welcome anything whatever that points attention to the defects and indicates the remedy.—Southern Churchman.

AN UNFAILING SOURCE OF HOPEFULNESS.

Fellowship with Jesus Christ is the best possible means of preventing depression, discouragement or worry. "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength." When a man's mind and heart are full of faith he is in a healthy condition. It is a matter of common observation that despair and suicide prevail more among the utterly irreligious and the infidel than among those who with all their shortcomings still have trust in Christ.—Presbyterian Journal.

INTELLIGENT BIBLE READING NEEDED.

One of the most fruitful causes of poverty of Bible knowledge on the part of many who pose as Bible students is their study of the word in detached passages. It is a method applied to no other book. It grows out of an exaggerated way of putting the principle of plenary inspiration. That inspiration applies to the smallest parts of the Bible in their relations to their context or to the whole book of which they are a minor part. The plenary inspiration principle shows out more fully and beautifully in the reading and study of whole books than in the attention to isolated passages. An earnest plea should be made everywhere for the reading of the Bible a book at a time. Some portions of the Scriptures are so constructed that only such a reading can be truly intelligent and helpful.—The Presbyterian.

THE POWER OF PRAYER.

"Praying always." (Eph. 6:18.) The soul of man is like a kindled brand; so long as the air breathes on it, it will retain till the last its genial warmth and crimson glow; but let the air stagnate around it, and flake on flake the white ashes will gather over it, and the fire will die away within it, and under those ashes it will be left black and charred, a cold and useless log. What the breath of wind is to the glowing brand that prayer is to the soul. Let the man or the woman live a prayerless life, and all the light and the fire and the glow, all the wisdom and generosity and love will die from it, because these are the result of spiritual grace from above; and covered with the dead, white embers of its own selfishness and pride, it, too, will be cold and dead and hard—a useless thing, half consumed with impenitence and sin.—F. W. Farrar.

THE WAR AND THE COLLEGES OF THE UNITED STATES.

By Rembert G. Smith, D. D.

The entrance of the United States into the war which has been raging in Europe for nearly three years marks the beginning of an epoch of tremendous changes in our national life, changes which are as yet but dimly seen by many. It is of the highest importance, however, that we discern the signs of the times and draw from them the correct deductions. If the stars of our duty, which should also be the stars of our destiny, are not clearly envisaged there is no hope that the Ship of State can be safely guided through the perilous seas into which she is now sailing. We need nothing more than the clear insight of the true prophet by which he can see through the thick clouds of war the abiding principles of our national life which shine serenely on in the heaven of our steadfast hopes.

The war means vast changes in all phases of our nation's life, and these are assuredly inevitable; and while this should be faced, at the same time every effort should be put forth to see that there be no impairment of our ideals and no adjournment of any activities necessary to secure the gains of the past and to promote the progress of the future. War is waged at a tremendous material and spiritual cost; its debentures can only be defrayed by the arduous and bitter toil of our children and of our children's children; but it is a crime approaching in heinousness that of infanticide to impose upon them any heavier burden than is absolutely necessary.

One of the first as well as one of the most far-reaching changes in our life which the war will bring will be in our educational activities. For nearly three years the universities and colleges of Europe have been empty and scholars have been changed into soldiers. It is true that thousands of our college students will go into our army, indeed have already gone as the conscription bill calls for the registration of men from twenty-one to thirty years old, and the large majority of the men in the junior and senior classes in our colleges and universities are twenty-one or more years old. It is not improbable, however, that the Government, in recognition of the need for trained men, will exempt many college students from service in the army or navy. General Wood has recently said that a college student can best serve his nation, at least in the near future, by giving himself with all possible diligence to his college work. In fact, there is as yet no real reason why our colleges and universities should be emptied so that our training camps and cantonments be filled. If we have this result soon, it will probably be not because of the selective draft, but because of a kind of stampede on the part of our young men and their parents. This stampede will result in the premature enlistment in the military arm of thousands of our young collegians or in their taking the places in our commercial and industrial life made vacant by the response of men to the demands of our army and navy. It is certainly very desirable that such a stampede be prevented.

Not only our own welfare, but the welfare of the world demands that our educational life be interfered with as little as possible. In a day the United States has become the educational center of the world, and the guidance of the race into enlightenment, both scientific and religious, will devolve upon us in a large degree at the end of this war. We should shake off our spirit of subserviency to European education and assert our intellectual independence, and we have the chance to do it, but the time grows short. As it is now, even in our theological seminaries, we are drearily and dryly debating the impotent irrelevancies of German criticism while an insurgent and self-indulgent luxuriousness and a Christless commercialism ignore the Church or laugh her to scorn. In Germany the powerlessness of von Harnack as representative of German so-called Christian scholarship has resulted in the unrestrained power of von Hindenburg as he incarnates materialistic militarism. The nation that in its speculative life rejects the authority of the Decalogue, and, as it were, crucifies Christ afresh upon the cross of rationalistic doubt and sceptical criticism, will connive at the martyrdom of Armenians by Turks, tear up its own solemnly signed treaties, overrun and ravage helpless Belgium, sink hospital ships, and murder with bombs and torpedoes defenseless women and children; and call it all the program of Kultur. All of this is the result of a loss of faith. Faithlessness is the forerunner of frightfulness; error evolves into terror. A church anaemic in agnosticism and apostate from the authoritative affirmations of God's Word is a weak witness of a world rushing to ruin under the momentum of forces of darkness so mighty that only a pure and powerful Church could have restrained them.

Nor should we forget that in the long run truth alone can destroy error. It will not be on bloody battlefields or ensanguined seas that Germanism will be defeated. Evil practices proceed from evil principles, and no sort of force can prevent the tragic sequence. To the colleges and universities of the United States has come the great opportunity and the manifest duty of leading the world out into the light of a really Christian education, and there should be no cessation of our educational activities. The continuity of American culture is necessary for the crushing of Prussian Kultur. If need be, let the sacrifices of parents and of their sons be greater than ever in order that the bloodless battles against error may be waged without surcease in our colleges and universities; and while patriots buy Liberty Bonds, as well they may, let them give with patriotic liberality to our institutions of learning, which are not only our hope but the hope of a race ravaged and desolated by the bloody Myrmidons of modern error.

"THE CRUX OF UNIFICATION."

An Open Letter to Dr. J. J. Wallace, Editor.

(This "Open Letter" in reply to Dr. Wallace developed the recent discussion in the public prints concerning the restrictions in the Oklahoma plan of unification. We are reproducing it by request.—Editor of Advocate.)

Respected Sir: In the "Pittsburgh Christian Advocate" of April 12, 1917, of which you are the editor-in-chief, appeared an elaborate editorial on "The Crux of Unification." That number of your "Advocate" presumably at your instance, was mailed to me for my consideration, as a member of the Joint Commission, of said editorial, I assume. I have read the editorial more than once with deep interest. I make reply thereto in an open letter to you, which, if published by you, as I desire, may then be copied by other papers.

The editorial is, to my mind, more hortative than argumentative; in fact, is so cock-sure declarative, and is so bottomed on naked assumptions as to leave little room outside for argument of the "Crux," or Negro problem. No two human minds have been cast in the same mold. The differences are as multiplied as the minds, and out of these differences have originated multiplied churches, or church organizations. They are the products of diverse, not preverse, views. And it stands to reason that the various churches, fitted for and to varying minds, succeed more abundantly than if all minds had to square themselves with one iron-clad rule, or church organization. I assume that no one knows, nor can know, whether the consolidation or unification, of any two church organizations would or would not produce larger desired results than if operated independently of each other. Persuasive reasons for and against can be adduced, but knowledge not obtained. Now, if my reasoning be sound, your opening declaration—"The unification of Methodist Churches now under way is an imperative demand of the age, of the kingdom of God and of the teaching and spirit of Jesus Christ"—is a dogmatic assertion unsupported by proof. Whether the kingdom of God, if personified, is, or is not, making any demand at all as to the organic union of the two Methodist Churches, themselves not divine but human institutions, no mortal knows nor can prove; and if so, whether pro or con, no one knows nor can prove. Your assumption is mere declaration, manifestly lacking proof. Therefore, to assume that Jesus Christ taught that the unity of the Spirit demands the unification of church bodies is a glaring perversion of the Scriptures, I maintain.

A church organization is either divine, or it is not. We know it is not, for it is human made. It is a business association and should be conducted on business principles like other lawful organizations designed for profit or pleasure, though striving for higher ideals; but in this it is made no less human, nor by it made divine. The Church of God comprises all the saints of all races, whether in a human organized church or not. Therefore, if the effort of the two Methodist Churches to unify shall fail, that the failure of these two human inventions to work as a unit instead of separately, will inflict "deep wounds in the body of Christ," is a far-fetched conclusion; is simply an "ipse dixit," unsupported by a known fact, and resembles much a product of emotional insanity.

You state that the "crucial difficulty" is "the status of the Negro membership in the United Church," then, on the assumption that the Negro should and must be an integral part of the Unified Church, you leave nothing for controversy as to that problem, but treat it as soived. Then, very consistently and in a fatherly way, you proceed to inform us "that the difficulty which involves sacrifice and painful experiences Christian people must face. It is in bravely meeting and overcoming such difficulties, in bearing the cross, that we should show ourselves to be worthy of Christ." And then you sternly notify us that any solution offered of the problem other than the inclusion of the Negro in the United Church must be "resolutely rejected," for it would be the practical denial of the fundamental fact that men are one in Christ. "But so far as the Church is concerned the races thus brought together for weal or woe must be included in the one fellowship; for in Christ Jesus there can not be white nor black, etc."

The purely ethical principles announced I am not controverting, but he it remembered, that a total misapplication of sound principles as certainly leads to error as do unsound ones. About half a century ago the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, had in her membership a large colored contingent which had just emerged from bondage into freedom and citizenship, and, logically, while retaining membership those newmade freemen should exercise all the rights of other members in church government. On account of racial differences a Negro problem arose which was solved by the separation of the colored contingent from the whites into the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, which solution proved to be an unmixed blessing to both races. The tenor of your argument is that our Church should have remained a mongrel church; and that because of the happy solution of the problem, as it was solved, it was a "practical denial of the fundamental fact, that men are one in Christ." And you wrench the ethical principles into a misapplication to prove that the organization of that colored church, which has been one of the world's most potent agencies for the uplift and the Christianizing of the Negro race, was conceived in sin and born in iniquity; and that the act was so heretical as to cut both churches off from being "even a branch of the holy catholic Church." So runs the editorial into bald absurdity. One in Christ—in the Church of God—and a oneness in a human organization, are so different it makes me wonder why intelligent persons, not a few, use the two as meaning the same.

The Oklahoma plan for a solution of the Negro problem is grounded on racial differences and distinctions. These are recognized throughout all nations both civilized and uncivilized. They are founded on the immutable and inexorable laws of Nature. The whites and the blacks are the two racial extremes. God made them white and black, and purposely so. And while in Christ Jesus there is neither white nor black, yet on this habitable globe anywhere, everywhere, in any human organization or out of it, both races exist distinctively, polluted in part, it is true, on account of the violation of Nature's law by miscegenation.

The Oklahoma plan is not only in accord with the highest ideals of elevated social conditions, but also with the civil laws of the Southern States, where intermarriage between whites and blacks is made a felony; where mixed schools and intermingling of the races in travel on the railroads and in street cars are prohibited. Experience has taught that each of these laws is wholesome and beneficial, and as much so for the Negro as for the white person. The first conserves the purity and integrity of the races, which should be preserved, or else the index finger of Nature points in the wrong direction, and is misleading. Miscegenation, even when permitted in wedlock by local law, is revolting to the Southern mind and heart, and instinctively so.

The law segregating the two races in railroad and street car travel, derisively called the "Jim Crow" law, protects the Negro from the rude insults of the ruffian element of the whites, and saves the white women from the impudence of the insolent class of the Negroes which so often provoked conflicts in which the weaker race was always the sufferer. The racial separation in schools prevents friction and stands as a bulwark against the social equality of the two races, a thing intolerable to the typical Southerner, as well as to Caucasians generally everywhere. Every one of these laws is written in Nature's code and is founded in common sense, and is buttressed by and hedged about with a convincing experience. A colossal hybrid Unified Church might approve and teach those things at variance with the laws of God, as interpreted by the Southern folk, and hostile to the civil laws of the Southern States, but only friction would result, for it is a condition, and not simply a theory, that can no more be changed than you "can bind the cluster of the Pleiades, or loose the bands of Orion." And yet, your editorial means nothing less than to present such a dilemma. The Southern Church shall "bear the cross"—the Negro cross sought to be profanely substituted for the Cross of Christ—or is to be anathematized as not having "received the commission of the holy catholic Church, and is not even one of its branches." If that be not fanaticism gone to seed I have never witnessed a crop of that pernicious thing.

My dear sir, the Methodist Episcopal Church has taken one step towards the Oklahoma platform. That one step was to separate the Negroes of that Church into separate Annual Conferences. One more stride would put it squarely on the Oklahoma platform, and then we would be brethren in unity. The one step as clearly recognizes the racial distinction as would two. In reason how can you escape the logic of the argument? You segregate the Negro, but give him only partial liberty of action, and stunt his growth in race consciousness; we also segregate him but concede full liberty of action that would develop racial pride and manhood. But, as the lecture runs, the last is hostile to "the fundamental fact that men are one in Christ," while the first does not "wound the body of Christ!" If there be consistency or logic in such reasoning it lies so deep as to be far beneath the depth of my mental penetration.

As already stated, the Southern Methodist Church is wisely in accord with the social and civil conditions in our Southland, and so are the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South; and Doctor Blake represents them as more strenuously so than are the Southern Methodists. But as a condition precedent for entrance into the Unified Church it is demanded that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, shall stultify herself as to her action of half a century ago, and falsely and hypocritically admit that it made a sinful error in setting apart her Negro members into an independent Negro Church, and being thus qualified she will be privileged to join in organizing a mongrel Unified Church whose basic principles, or one of them, would be to antagonize the entire civil and social conditions in the South. Can any one be so insanely credulous as to believe that the great body of the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, can be duped into such a trap by the specious declaration that "God is behind the unification movement and it can not fail?" What his will is in the premises I do not know, and I guess I know about as much about it as does any one else. If the Unified Church is ever built it will have to be constructed and conducted on business principles, just as other human organizations are, or it will be a stupendous failure.

But you set the lines hard and fast and tell us what the admission terms are; and you are doggedly joined in your demands by the editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, who frankly and bluntly informs us that we must take the Methodist Episcopal Church just as it is, regarding the Negro, "or not at all." Very well, brethren, wo are thankful that our will is a determining factor still, and rejoice that the religion of Jesus Christ imposes no such impossible conditions, nor ever demands a sacrifice of self-respect and manhood; nor makes itself a thing to be despised and loathed, but is gentle, pure, refining and elevating, and accords with the highest ideals of our God-given natures when they are not corrupted by a vicious education that would destroy the comely order of things arranged by Omniscience on the trestle-board of Nature!

You state that the Negro can not be forced out. That is true; he must go voluntarily if he goes at all. That is your problem, not ours. Many years ago we had a similar problem and settled it beneficially to all concerned, and, therefore, wisely. In reason we can not unsettle it and stupidly involve ourselves in afflictive entanglements from which we happily extricated our Church in the long ago. I dare say, that you, like the editor of the Northwestern, do not expect the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to comply with your demands. And you frankly say, that you will not even suggest to the Negroes a separation into an independent Negro Church. No, no, for "Ephraim is joined to (his) idols" as the body of your editorial shows.

You assert that the Commission was appointed to devise a plan for uniting two churches, and not for the construction of two. In this you err as to the Southern Commissioners, for they are under instructions not only to unify two churches, but to provide for an independent church for the colored Methodists.

I am so devotedly attached to my Church, in whose communion I have been for sixty-nine years, that no ingenuity of mortal men can ever construct another Church I will love so well. I have my prejudices, for I am human; but when I accepted a place on the Commission I got upon the Oklahoma platform which stands for unification on the conditions therein expressed. I stand there loyally, as in duty and honor bound, and will obey the instructions given me by the General Conference of my Church to the letter and in the spirit of that body as I understand them, and will aid, so far as I may be able, in the organization of a Unified Caucasian Methodist Church, and in promoting an independent Colored Methodist Episcopal Church which would foster Christian manhood in the African race and develop leaders of men and in thought such leaders by force of intellect as have been produced by the independent Colored Churches in the United States, and thus throw "wide the door of hope" to every Negro child living and yet unborn. If this offer, in the Oklahoma platform embodied in substance, be rejected by your Church, as advised by you, and by all of your church papers, so far as I am advised, I will regard the rejection as in conscience done, for I charge not insincerity of purpose to you or to your great Church. But if the two Churches reject each other's propositions, after the earnest and prayerful efforts made to unify, it will be proof conclusive that the move for unification was premature, if not indeed illogical and impossible so long as millions of people have differing minds which can not be herded into one human organization as a unit.

The foregoing are my individual views; I am not authorized to speak for any other but myself.

Most respectfully and cordially,

E. C. REEVES.

THAT SOUTHERN METHODIST "ULTIMATUM."

By Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon.

Has the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, delivered an "ultimatum" to the Methodist Episcopal Church? Emphatically no! In that case all conference touching unification would have been out of place, and nothing would have remained but for the Methodist Episcopal Church to surrender. An "ultimatum" is the last word.

However, it needs to be kept in mind that the two great branches of Methodism are working on a certain plan of unification by reorganization—not just any plan of unification. Both commissions are working under instructions. They have been appointed to perfect the details of a general plan already, in its broad outlines, agreed upon by the General Conference at Oklahoma City and the General Conference at Saratoga Springs. The interpretation which the Northern commissioners put upon the action of their General Conference at Saratoga Springs was so liberal that the Southern commissioners felt greatly encouraged. The interpretation which the Southern commissioners put upon the action taken at Oklahoma City encouraged the Northern commissioners to believe that there was ground for hope.

In view of some things that have been said, it is proper that the whole Church should know just what interpretation, by unanimous vote, the Southern commissioners put upon the limits of their authority. Here it is:

Whereas, The resolutions adopted by the General Conference of 1914, under which we hold our commission, set forth certain principles as basic to a genuine unification of American Methodism,

Resolved 1, That we consider ourselves bound by the basic principles therein set forth;

Resolved 2, That we interpret these basic principles to be—

A. That neither the General Conference nor any of the Jurisdictional Conferences shall be vested with final authority to interpret the constitutionality of its own actions;

B. That the Jurisdictional Conferences shall have full legislative powers over matters distinctly jurisdictional;

C. That the colored membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church and such colored churches as may elect to take part in the reorganization of American Methodism are to be dealt with in such a manner as shall give full recognition to race consciousness while at the same time offering to them the largest possible co-operation.

The resolution bearing on the status of the colored people in the reorganized Church was framed very carefully so as to offer an opportunity to devise some plan which would satisfy brethren North as well as brethren South; and was adopted by the Southern commissioners with this very purpose in view.

Frankly, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, does not believe that the Methodist Episcopal Church is dealing with the colored man in the wisest and most Christian way. The Southern Church does urge that a separate ecclesiasticism is best for the colored man. We have wondered how long the colored man, with developing race consciousness and with growing sense of manhood, will be content to remain in his present ecclesiastical household. We have no sort of notion that it will be "until the crack of doom." When we urge that a separate ecclesiasticism is best for the colored man, we speak as the friend of the colored man. We do not mean that we must throw the colored man overboard to sink or swim by himself alone. We desire not to do less for him, but to do more. We would offer to him the largest possible co-operation. He is our brother—either our brother in Christ, needing our sympathy and prayers, or our human brother in degradation and sin, needing the saving power of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. We are unwilling to have our brethren of the North suppose that we of the South are for casting him aside and treating him as a mere Pariah—an outcast from human society. We believe that we know the colored man and love him better than people living elsewhere who have never had our opportunities for knowing and loving him. We feel profoundly that we have not done our duty by the Negro. We seek for larger opportunity to serve him. We believe that the methods used by our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church must be disappointing to those of the North who have the best interests of the Negro at heart. We wonder if it has ever occurred to any of our brethren of the North that possibly certain aspects of their work among the Negroes have served to keep alive the suspicion and antagonism brought about by the terrible "reconstruction" days. One is compelled to mention these things, because every aspect of the situation must be carefully studied, else we shall not come to wise conclusions.

And let it be insisted once more that any plan of union which respects only the small number of Negroes belonging to the Methodist Episcopal Church is entirely inadequate. The call is for a broader vision and a larger statesmanship. We must find a way which promises to lead at last to the union of all the colored churches of American Methodism. Of course we must begin where we are—we must begin with the colored membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The problem before us is to deal with the colored membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church and such colored churches as may elect to take part in the reorganization of American Methodism in such a manner as shall give full recognition to race consciousness, while at the same time offering to them the largest possible co-operation. The two elements of the problem are: (1) race consciousness; and (2) the largest possible co-operation. Race consciousness must be respected; you can no more disregard it than you can disregard the winds and the tides. The largest possible co-operation must be given, else we shall be false to the Christ who loved us and gave Himself up for us.

But what I desired to make plain was that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has not delivered an ultimatum, but, on the contrary, has distinctly declined to do so.

The Wilmington Star gives the following figures pertaining to the Negro exodus from the South, showing the estimated number who have gone North, by States: Virginia, 49,768; Georgia, 48,897; North Carolina, 35,576; Mississippi, 35,291; South Carolina, 27,560; Arkansas, 23,628; Tennessee, 22,632; Kentucky, 21,835; Louisiana, 16,912; Florida, 10,291; Texas, 10,870; Oklahoma, 5,836.

The total registration of males in the United States between the ages of 21 and 30, inclusive, was 9,649,938. It must not be inferred that this represents the Nation's fighting strength, as many of these are not fit for service. But, on the other hand, there are millions not included between these age limits who would doubtless make equally as good soldiers as those who are.

The Chief Signal Officer of the War Department has requested Tulane University, this city, to add an aviation school to its several departments next fall. The letter of the official mentioned, among other things, says: "The object of these schools is to teach the students military regulations and drill in the ground work and technical end of flying, thus preparing them for further training elsewhere that will enable them actually to operate machines in the air."

The situation in Russia seems to be steadily improving, the visit of the Commissioners under Mr. Root, as well as the work of the practical engineers and specialists who have gone there from our country, apparently having had a most salutary influence. The outlook for the suppression of internal disorder, so far as one can tell at this distance, is much brighter than it has been, and there is talk of a new military offensive in the near future.

The Memphis Commercial Appeal thus refers to the new official head of Greece: "The young Greek king, Alexandros, was born in 1893, and consequently is 24 years old. He is a grandson of the Grand Duchess Olga of Russia and a nephew of the German Kaiser. With two strains like that in his blood, he is not likely to be a milksop, and hence Greece is due some marked activity from the throne. The probability is that this activity, for a while at least, will be either pro-Ally, or else directed solely to the rehabilitation of the country's condition."

The total subscription to the two-billion dollar Liberty Loan was $3,035,226,850. These figures are quickly called, but the average reader, we dare say, has but little appreciation of what an enormous sum of money this is. If memory serves us correctly, the entire Civil War in the United States cost something like $4,000,000,000; so it will be seen that our country's first call for funds in the present conflict was about three-fourths of the total expenditure in that fierce four-year struggle. New Orleans was asked for $6,000,000 toward the Liberty Loan, and she took considerably more than $11,000,000, thus leading by long odds all the cities south of Baltimore and St. Louis.

A BACKWARD GLANCE.

By the Editor.

In the Nashville Christian Advocate of June 27, among other things, Dr. John M. Moore, in referring to the report on Methodist Unification, which was handled by the Committee on Church Relations, of which he was a member, says: "After the adoption of the report of the Sub-Committee, it was presented to the Committee on Church Relations, where it was explained, discussed, and then adopted, item by item, without the change of a single word. The report contained no reference to the Negro membership involved, as it was the view of the Sub-Committee not to refer specifically to any one item of the suggestions, but to leave all to the Commission on Unification, who, by declaration, were empowered to enter negotiations and work out a plan to cover all the suggestions and were required to report in full their findings to the next General Conference for its consideration and final determination. While the report as a whole was being considered, Mr. Thomas Whitehead, of Lynchburg, Va., insisted that the report declare for a separate organization for the Negro membership. After some discussion a resolution was orally offered by Rev. James Cannon, D. D., of the Virginia Conference, and it was adopted. I was asked to formulate it and incorporate it at the proper place in the report. This I did after consulting with Dr. Cannon. Had I understood it to be an ultimatum, I would not have said, 'We recommend,' but 'We demand,' or 'We require.' Neither Dr. Cannon, nor Mr. Whitehead, nor any one else raised any objection, public or private, to the language used.' * * * What did the 'recommendation' call for? Evidently it called for a separation of the membership from the rest—and yet not absolute. Holding fraternal relations with the reorganized and united Church was meant to imply more than good will to be exhausted in fraternal phrases and courtesies. It was meant to be a link that binds, a substantial nexus."

So far so good. But let us take a glance at some of Dr. Moore's past utterances. In a letter written to the Editor from the Maryland Hotel in St. Louis on August 22, 1916, just after we had turned the light on the famous Evanston (Illinois) meeting held in February of the same year and had shown how (in the presence of the Northern brethren who had subsequently largely shaped the Saratoga action) he had dissented at every essential point from the enactment of his own General Conference, Dr. Moore wrote as follows: "By the way, do you know that I wrote the report adopted at Oklahoma City (this, though at Evanston he had dissented from it.—Ed. Ad.), and that my first draft was not changed a particle except to put in the sentence about the Negro. I was not opposed to that, but thought it might be left to the Commission to work out. * * * I believe in the Oklahoma Plan, thoroughly, of course, as I wrote it. I believe that the Negroes should be in a separate CHURCH, with a council made up of both races to administer the funds, which the white Methodists will set apart for missionary, educational, and publicity purposes."

Dr. Moore also made the following deliverance in an article which he had published in the Nashville Christian Advocate of November 3, 1911, and which he has had republished in the Texas Advocate within the past twelve months: "A union of white and Negro Methodists into one Church, however large or small the Negro element, would not be desirable, or scarcely possible, at this period of our social, political, and religious life. Any negotiations for union should proceed upon the plan of having a united Negro Methodism, as well as a united white Methodism. Any other plan will encounter grievous difficulties and fail to achieve the results for which union is contemplated."

Again, Dr. Moore, in his notable address at Evannston, Ill., declared: "The establishment of a united Negro Methodist CHURCH into which the four leading Negro Churches would be merged should have primary consideration in the thought and planning of both races. * * * Will the leaders of the two independent Churches, with their century of history, and the third, with almost a half-century of commendable development, be inclined to consider a union that will make them a part of a mixed Church whose leadership can necessarily never be of their own race? Will not the union of all Negro Methodists nearly, two million strong, into a great, vigorous body of their own, with their own leaders, Church polity, and activities, ready to stand side by side with their mighty Baptist sister, present to them a stronger appeal, a more reasonable action, and a more alluring outlook for them as a religious people?" (See "A Working Conference on the Union of American Methodism, Page 424.)

The first and last of these utterances were made by Dr. Moore since the occasion upon which he says he wrote for Dr. Cannon the pronouncement concerning the Negroes in the Oklahoma enactment in May, 1914, to which he and some of his associate liberal unionists NOW seem to give a new interpretation, holding that it was not intended to mean "a separate Church," and the second utterance was republished since that time as expressive of his views.

The Doctor goes back and quotes what Bishop Denny said about the scheme wrought ought by the original Joint Commission in 1911, before it had ever been to any General Conference, and tries to make it apply now, after our highest legislative assembly has passed upon it and it bears the stamp of its approval. This strikes us as rather limping logic for so distinguished a man as Dr. Moore.

Why, he even affirms, with much insistence, that the Oklahoma enactment is no plan at all—being just a few indefinite suggestions. Note the following statement in last week's Nashville Advocate: "The General Conference at Oklahoma City did not indorse, adopt, or propose a plan of Methodist union or unification." Now re-read the quotation from the Doctor's letter to the Editor, written from St. Louis, and you will see that he then called it "A PLAN." And when he was making his illuminating address before the Northern brethren at Evanston, he repeatedly called it "A PLAN." Note for instance the following emphatic flourish: "I have now set forth in simple terms my understanding of the Commission's suggestions and some reasons for my approval of the PLAN OF UNIFICATION which has been endorsed by the General Conference of the Church, South." (See Book "A Working Conference," etc., page 425.) We should like for some of the ultra-unionists to tell us what has happened to the Oklahoma enactment since the Evanston meeting that has caused it to lose the dignity of being "A PLAN." We crave information on this subject.

Dr. Moore seemed to have lost to some extent his usual sweetness of spirit when he wrote the following: "The resolution has never been interpreted as a mandate except by outspoke anti-unionists. They have been quite ready at all times to accept and promulgate any interpretation of any action or statement that would seem to obstruct or make impossible a union of the Churches." Col. E. C. Reeves, a member of the Commission, has publicly declared that he considers himself bound by this pronouncement of our General Conference, but making in doing so the following impressive statement: "When I accepted a place on the Commission I got upon the Oklahoma platform which stands for unification on the conditions therein expressed. I stand there loyally, as in duty and honor bound, and will obey the instructions given me by the General Conference of my Church to the letter and in the spirit of that body as I understand them, and will aid, so far as I may be able, in the organization of a Unified Caucasian Methodist Church, and in promoting an independent Colored Methodist Episcopal Church which would foster Christian manhood in the African race and develop leaders of men and in thought—such leaders by force of intellect, as have been produced by the Independent Colored Churches in the United States, and thus throw wide the door of hope to every Negro child living and yet unborn."

When so majestic, sincere, and conscientious a man makes such an utterance, we respectfully submit that Dr. Moore's asservation is scarcely courteous, or kind, or just. He should not blame others for holding to the construction of this feature of the Oklahoma plan, to which he himself seemed to subscribe, at least as to its meaning, until recently. Let him submit to us that plan perfected "IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE SUGGESTIONS WHICH WERE ADOPTED BY THE JOINT COMMISSION AND REPORTED TO THE GENERAL CONFERENCE," as they were uniformly interpreted in the beginning, and see whether or not it will be accepted by his conservative brethren, before he reads them out of the synagogue. He should not blame Southern Methodists for becoming a little apprehensive as to where he is trying to lead them, when with his own hand he set down the duty of the Southern Commissioners as that "of elaborating and perfecting the TENTATIVE PLAN that had been proposed" (according to certain basic principles), and he now faces about and tells us that there was no such thing as "a plan" passed upon or "proposed" at Oklahoma City.

Bishop Mouzon has been considered a pretty ardent unionists, but even he does not seem to be able to keep step with Dr. Moore, for he declares in the article from his pen which we are carrying in this number of the Advocate: "However, it needs to be kept in mind that the two great branches of Methodism are working on a certain plan of unification—not just any plan. Both commissions are working under instructions." (All the italics used in the foregoing discussion are ours.)

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The Historical Society of the North Mississippi Conference wants the assistance of every one in the endeavor to secure data concerning churches which have ceased to be, or whose names and locations have been changed; also information concerning camp meetings that have been abandoned. This might be called lost history.

When we have secured this lost history, the foundation will have been acquired on which to build a more complete history of Methodism within the bounds of our Conference.

We urgently request every one who can to assist us in this work.

The Great Battle

A CENTER SHOT.

Judge Lindsey, of Denver, was lunching one hot day when a politician paused beside his table. "Judge" said he, "I see you're drinking coffee. That's a heating drink. In this weather you want to drink iced drinks, Judge—sharp iced drinks. Did you ever try gin and ginger ale?" "No," said the judge, smiling; "hut I've tried several fellows who have."

O THOU DEMON RUM!

The Missionary Review of the World in a recent issue says: "The amount of liquor passing Maderia, a port of registry for the coast of Afrlca, in one week is reported as follows: 28,000 cases of whlskey, 30,000 cases of hrandy, 30,000 cases of Old Tom, 36,000 harrels of rum, 800,000 demijohns of rum, 24,000 butts of rum, 15,000 harrels of absinthe, 960,000 cases of gin.

"In Sierra Leone during one-fourth of a year, 250 tons of liquors were unloaded at a 'dry town' to be transported to towns of the interior."

Who is doing this devil's work? They teli us that conditlons there are worse than the old slavery days. "Slavery slew its thousands; hut the rum traffic is slaying its millions."—Central Christian Advocate.

DOCTORS HIT J. B. A BODY BLOW.

The action of the American Medical Association in ruling out alcohol from the practice of medicine and declaring that it has no drug value either as a tonic or stimulant hastens the doom of John Barleycorn. No Intelligent layman will attempt to refute the opinion of these physicians of nation-wide, and many of them world-wide, reputation.

The Association deciared that alcohol has no food vaiue in the treatment of diseases and that its only legitimate use in medicine is as a presrvative. It has already been harred from the pharmacopoeia and thus is entlrely eliminated as a legitimate remedy.

The president of the association, Dr. Charles H. Mayo, the noted Minneapolis surgeon, deciared that "national Prohibition would he welcomed hy the medicai profession."

The medical profession certainiy delivered a solar plexus blow to J. B.—The American Issue.

CHANGING PENNSYLVANIA'S MAP.

Poor Pennsylvania! How black—deeply, darkly, densely black—the temperance maps used to paint her. And how those of us squirmed wno really were whlte, but had to be black, hecause we were so few and far between, that llttle speckles on the map did not show. But now is coming a great change. Five years ago Pennsylvania had two dry counties, now she has eleven; then there were ahout 700 square miles of dry territory, now 12,300; then 60,000 of the State's population lived In no-license terrltory, to-day there are 1,500,000, or nearly one-fifth of the total population. The leopard cannot change his spots, but old Pennsylvania ls changing her color. On behalf of us tongue-tied Presbyterlans, will not some good, old-fashioned Methodist hrother shout, "Glory he to God!"—The Preshyterian (Philadelphia).

METHODIST WOMEN AND THE WAR.

Mrs. R. W. MacDonell.

Within a few weeks after the United States declared war, the Government created the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense, to serve as a clearing-house, to give advice and information regarding every form of woman's work for our soldiers, and for defense of home. Representatives of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, National Civic Federations, the International Council of Women, the National Suffrage Association and the Anti-Suffrage Association, and the Women's Trade Unions, constitute this committee, with Dr. Anna Shaw as Chairman.

The divisions of work of this committee, as listed so far, are the registration of women for service, food production and consumption, storage and distribution of foods; work along industrial lines to prevent injurious legislation for women and chiidren in the industries, training for special service and preserving the resources of national life, hy safe-guarding the education of chiidren, moral standards, and upholding the normai home-life. Each State ls made a division of this committee, with a chairman appointed by the generai committee. State organization can thus render war relief work without duplication.

Through the Suffrage Association, 2,000,000 women have volunteered for service for whatever line of work may be needed, and 500 different City Boards of Trade or Commerce have agreed to cooperate in securing reasonahle hours and equal pay for equal work, when women fill the places of men in offices or factories. The Trade Union women, through the Committee of Women in Industry, are planning to supervise location and condition of women and children in Industry, and to prevent legislation which will lower the standards of labor, for which we have worked a quarter of a century. That such immediate vigilance is necessary is found in the fact that "sweatshops" have multiplied since there is demand for such quantities of flags and khaki uniforms. The factories contracting with the Government for these have sub-let to factories in States where there are no child or woman labor laws, and these have sublet to home workers. Vermont has ahrogated all its laws for women and chiidren, while New York has suspended its compulsory education iaws to five months' session of schools, at the discretion of the Commissioner of Education, to permit food production on farms and gardens. It also permits its State Industrial Commission to suspend any labor laws which ohstruct, hamper or interfere with the successful prosecution of the present war.

The Bureau of Registration and Information of the National League for Women's Service is to work in conjunction with the Department of Lahor, through Miss Grace Ahhott, the recently appointed Federal Chiid Labor Commissioner. This section of the Woman's Commlttee of the Council of National Defense will dlstrihute the woman lahor supply throughout the country through public and private employment bureaus.

This magnificent work of the women of the clubs challenges the women of the Church to no less definite a program, for ours ls the douhle task of caring for our young men in the camps and at the front, and maintaining our Christian institutions and activities unimpaired, that the soul of our nation may be nourished. To neglect our social and religious safeguards at this time is to neglect a most vital element of national service. Every phase of church and missionary work which the women have enterprlsed these many years must go forward as though there were no war. The Woman's Mlssionary Council signified its determination to serve also at the front, when the deaconesses and home missionaries offered their service to the Government for assignment to works of mercy and social service, should there be need. The Committee on Chaplains of our Church has headed its work in the Home Department of the Board of Missions; therefore, the Woman's Missionary Council ls also calling upon the Woman's Missionary Societies to mobilize for specific action. This program, which outlines but the beginning of organized effort, shapes itself under three definite heads: The individual woman's personal relation; the local church and auxiliary effort; and the activities of churches and auxillaries near the mohilization camps.

The followlng plans have heen forwarded to the Woman's Missionary Societies and those churches where there are no societies:

I. The Church Woman's Personal Relation:

"1. In these times of strain and sorrow, keep allve the spirit of prayer, that men may be sustained by the consciousness of the presence and power of God.

2. Every woman ls urged to have membership in the Red Cross Soclety.

II. The Church at Home:

"1. Organize prayer circles for definite prayer, that the soldiers may be fortified in character and made strong to resist temptation.

2. List all soldiers and officers, including physicians and chaplains, who go out from the Church membership or congregation, giving name of regiment ,company, and home address, and send to Mrs. R. W. MacDoneli, Secretary Woman's Home Work, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

3. Place scrolls with these names in the church, that they may be followed by definite prayer at ali services.

4. Appoint letter-writers to send regular messages from the church and congregation to the soldiers in camp and at the front.

5. Have the letter-writers keep the home church informed concerning these men.

6. List the trained nurses who go out from the church or congregation, and follow them with earnest prayer for their physical strength and spiritual health. Register the names of these trained nurses with the Home Secretary, Mrs. R. W. MacDoneil.

7. Let each church make an urgent cail to its membership to assist in preparation of materials needed in sickness, suffering, and travel. This to be done according to government reguiation.

III. Activities for Churches near Mobilization Camps:

1. There shall be a committee composed of one representative from each auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society, or from the churches where there are no auxiliaries, within the city in which a mobilization camp is located. This committee shall direct the work done hy the various auxiliaries or churches for the Methodist soldiers in that camp. The District Secretary, who shall be Chairman of this committee, will he furnished the names of the soldiers in the camps who are Methodists, or of Methodist affiliation.

2. This committee shall arrange for scrolls to be placed in the Methodist churches, upon which are listed the Methodist men in that camp, and those names reported hy various churches, in order that they may he known and have personal Introduction.

3. In harmony with the plans of the chaplains, arrangements may he made for "Pleasant Sunday Afternoons," where these men will be invited for a quiet social hour and definite religious messages. These occasions should be magnified.

4. Give Sunday dinners to these soldiers at the church, when practicahle.

5. Have special mid-week social occasions, in co-operation with these religious and social workers who are directing such activities at the camp.

6. Select some judicious persons of experience to send mesages to the parents and loved ones at home concerning their loved ones In the camp.

7. Endeavor to make all activities personal, and not institutional.

8. Let none forget those ministries of the Spirit to which the Christian is committed.

THINGS THAT COUNT.

What is it that counts here? Only that which is truly given; only that which is done for the love of doing it; only those plans in which the welfare of others is the master thought; only those labors in which the sacrifice is greater than the reward; only those gifts in which the giver forgets himself—these are the things that the King never forgets.—Henry Van Dyke.

The Home Circle

THE RAINBOW FAIRIES.

Two little clouds one summer's day
  Went flying through the sky.
They went so fast, they bumped their heads,
  And both began to cry.

Old Father Sun looked out and said:
  "Oh, never mind, my dears;
I'll send my little fairy folks
  To dry your falling tears."

One fairy came in violet,
  And one in indigo,
In blue, green, yellow, orange, red—
  They made a pretty row.

They wiped the cloud tears all away,
  And then, from out the sky,
Upon a line the sunbeams made,
  They hung their gowns to dry.

HOW BILLY WAS A SOLDIER.

By Kate S. Gates.

"My, hut I just wisht I was growned up so I could be a soldier!" said Billy as he and his father passed a little group of soldiers on the street. "I s'pose by the time I'm a man the war will be all over."

"I sincerely hope it will, my boy," answered his father gravely, "and that there will never he another; hut if there should he I trust you will be ready to do your duty, though you will find it far from pleasant."

"Isn't there any way little boys can hurry up and grow faster when they want to, Papa?"

"Not that I know of, but let me tell you, my son, a good soldier has a great many hard lessons to learn before he is fit for service. You can be learning many of them while you are growing up if you will, and you can find all the fighting you want to do every day of your life."

"Why Father Baker, I'd like to know how," said Billy, stopping right where he was to stare at his father in amazement.

"One of the first and most important lessons a soldier has to learn is to obey promptly and without a question. I think I know a little boy who is very apt to question why he must do things he is told to do. And very often, I am sorry to say, he disobeys father, mother and teacher."

Billy looked rather discomfited.

"That's different," he said, "If I was a soldier of course I'd obey."

"I'm afraid not unless you had learned to do so before. Suppose you hegin this very day to try to do just as you are told every time without one question or murmur, will you? You can imagine that you are in a training camp if you like."

"That will be sort of fun," said Billy, "but I don't see what chance there is for me to do any fighting."

"Don't you? Well we are all encountering enemies every hour of our lives, and either we overcome them—or they conquer us. Sometimes we have to make a pretty stiff fight if we want to come off victorious.

"Every time you are tempted to say or do anything that is not strictly true you are face to face with the enemy. Deceit. When you are tempted to think of your own pleasure first, or to keep things for yourself, and not share with others—Selfishness is trying to get the best of you. When there is work you ought to do and you try to shirk it—Indolence is the foe. Then there is Disobedience, Ill Temper and——"

"Don't tell any more, please—that is enough for once; it sort of makes me tired to think of so many things. But I guess it will he easy enough to conquer 'em. I can do most anything if I just make up my mind to it."

"Billy," said mother that very afternoon, "I want you to look after baby while I go down the street to do an errand."

"Oh, dear!" exclaimed Billy fretfully, "I was going over to Tommy's, and we were going to have lots of fun. But that's always the way; when I want to go anywhere I have to stay home to do something."

"I thought you were going to be a little soldier-hoy," said mother gravely. "Isn't this a good time to hegin fighting? Here's disohedience and selfishness trying to overcome you; are you going to let them conquer? I shall not make you stay home—go to Tommy's if you wish, but I shall he disappointed not to he able to do my errand, and I shall be even more disappointed to have my soldier-boy defeated."

Billy felt very uncomfortable. He wished that mother had not such an unpleasant way of making him decide things himself.

"I told Tommy I'd he sure to come," he said; "he will be 'specting me."

"Very well," said mamma.

Billy waited a few minutes, hoping she would say more, but she did not.

"You most generally say I must keep my promises," he continued, hut there was no reply to this.

He waited a few minutes, then he slipped out of the room, took his cap and went outdoors.

"Aren't you ashamed of yourself?" something kept saying inside of him, "You're a pretty soldier to he beaten the first thing like this. You are selfish not to be willing to give up your play when mother does so much for you. And you are disobedient because if you go you are doing what you know mother does not want you to do. You're no soldier at all unless you can fight better than this."

Billy was almost to the gate when, all at once he squared his shoulders and marched back double-quick.

"I most got heated," he said, "but not quite. You go right off, and I'll take care of haby. But I wish it was as interesting and easy to be a soldier as it is to think about heing one."—Christian Intelligencer.

"SHE WILL COME."

An exchange tells the story of a lady who went out one afternoon, leaving her little boy at his grandma's and saying she would call for him when she returned home, which she expected would be at six o'clock.

The time passed till it was nearly six, and his grandma said perhaps his mother was not coming for him that night.

"Yes, she will," replied the boy.

Six o'clock came, and grandma said, "Well, I guess your mother will not come for you to-night."

"I know she will," said the boy, confidently, and he watched patiently for her.

It was getting toward bedtime, and grandma was pretty sure his mother would not come, and he would have to stay all night with her.

"Well, I know she will come," was still his confident reply.

"Why, what makes you so positive?" asked his grandmother.

"Because," said the boy, "she said if she was not here by six o'clock she would certainly come, and my mother never told me a lie."

In a few minutes his mother came and took him home.

A HAPPY HOME.

Rev. E. N. Evans.

It was not a home of "old-time family prayers" when the longest chapter in Deuteronomy was read and all knelt till their knees ached, while the head of the family prayed all over the world the same monotonous words and forms, but a modern busy home, where yet the husband-father stood each morning thanking God for his care and asking grace for each day's work. Yet it was not altogether a happy home. There were some fretting and chafing over the daily tasks and burdens to he borne; the children hurrying through their tasks to seek pleasure elsewhere—just an average home. One morning the father looked especially serious, yet smiling, as he prayed thus:

"And Lord help each of us this day to contribute our bit to the happiness of our little home. Bless our labors for the provtding of food and raiment for all our material wants and comforts here. And may we each contribute something to the pleasure and happiness of the family by word, thought, or deed to be mindful of each other and give cheerfully our bit to the common good of all. God bless our little home and help us to grow strong and good that we may help others. Make us to be helpful to this community and to thy Kingdom."

On his return in the evening the mother and daughter greeted him with a kiss and the house looked clean and cheerful.

The mother said: "My dear husband, your prayer this morning gave me a new vision of my home life and this has been such a happy day."

After supper, as they gathered in the little sitting room the daughter said "Would it give you all pleasure for me to play and sing?"

The father replied, "If you have time, we would so much love to hear you play and sing." There was a new touch on the keys of the piano, and real life in the song. Her brother stood by timing the music, as her beau was wont to do, and when she had finished, he kissed her and said, "Sister, you have improved so much." They all smiled as she rose to her feet and said, "God has given me a new purpose in life, and I am so happy to give my bit to make the home happy."

The son, with moistened eyes ,said, "I have good news for you all. My salary has been raised, and I have resigned at the club to spend my evenings at home; I want to help to make the home happy."

After they all had kissed good night, the father said, "Wait a moment, I must tell you something. I thought I had made a discovery, and now I am quite sure its true. Happiness is not an accident." We make or unmake it by our words or acts. It's not hard to make, if we all do our bit. Let's thank God and try it over each day. Good night!"

SELLING ODD BOOTS.

An English paper states that selling odd boots to sailors and soldiers who have lost a leg or a foot, has come to be a regular feature in London's retail boot shops. The one shoe dealer in Bath Street, E. C., who for years has monopolized the city's one-legged trade, now has a number of competitors. Since there are as many calls for rights as for lefts, dealers have little trouble in carrying on the odd boot business.—King's Treasuries.

ARMENIA'S TRAGIC STORY.

It would be difficult to show in words the horrors that the Armenians and other people in Bible lands have and are now suffering. Their appeal for help is urgent.

From sections of the field come the following messages:

"In these districts one hundred thousand look to us for bread, while large numbers, which cannot yet be approximately estimated, are coming from the desert seeking food, shelter and clothing."

"For a distance of fifteen miles the road, even after a year, is strewn with all sorts of garments, shoes, headgear, bones, skulls and entire skeletons of what a year ago had been human beings."

"The poor people, for lack of funds, are unable to buy the smallest amount of food necessary to keep body and soul together, and in consequence are dying off."

"We wait in intensest expectancy for reassuring reports from America. We are in a position of terrible responsibility. Hundreds of thousands are dependent on us for a little bread day by day. We have brought these thus far. Any let up now would mean indescribable suffering, defeat and disaster. We cannot hesitate. Rather must there be larger contributions and increased activities to partially meet the needs."

BISHOP MOUZON ON "THE ULTIMATUM."

The Editor has been not a little amused by the discussion that has been going on in the Church press, North and South, as to whether or not our General Conference laid down an "ultimatum" as to the status of the colored contingent in the suggested new Church, this discussion being chiefly participated in by the more liberal members of the Southern Commission. It has seemed to us to be a case in which Dr. Joy, the Editor of the New York Advocate, sought to have a little fun out of these brethren, and right well apparently did he succeed. Their papers were quickly flung, face up, upon the table, even resolutions that were supposed to have been adopted in an executive session fluttering forth into print. The truth is, we have never heard of an "executive session" like this new kind that seems to have been developed by our Unification Commission. We should think that even Dr. Cannon would withdraw his objection to it.

But, speaking seriously, we think that Bishop Mouzon has made some very suggestive discriminations in his article which we are publishing this week. We concur in his definition, "An ultimatum is the last word." We also commend his statement: "The two great branches of Methodism are working on a certain plan of unification by reorganization—not just any plan of unification. Both commissions are working under instructions."

To our mind, there are clearly "basic principles," restrictions, beyond which our Commission may not go. Such limitations certainly exist, though there may be differences of opinion as to precisely what they are.

The resolution as to the status of the Negro in the proposed new Church that Bishop Mouzon has adduced, though unanimously adopted, falls far short of settling the question at issue. It is too indefinite—too much like the answer of the famous Oracle consulted by Pyrrhus: "You the Romans can conquer." Bishop Mouzon may possibly interpret it as permitting some other arrangement than having the Negroes in a separate Church; but other members of the Commission quite his intellectual equals interpret it to mean exactly the reverse.

We think the Bishop also errs in the suggestion that the interpretation of the Commission is that of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. It is the prerogative of the Commission to interpret for itself, but the two million Methodists of the Church, South, also have an equal right to construe the significance of the action of the General Conference. It is well, we think, to keep this distinction in mind. One trouble about the Oklahoma enactment is that it is poorly and muddily written. In such matters clarity of statement is of vast importance.

BIBLES NEEDED FOR SOLDIERS.

A great opportunity for distributing God's Word among our soldiers who are in camp at Jackson Barracks and Camp Nicholls, in New Orleans, is offered to us. Recruits for the regular army are coming to Jackson Barracks at the rate of 30 a day or 900 a month. These boys are from our best homes and they are deeply conscious of the peril that may await them in the not distant future. They listen eagerly to the gospel message and are most grateful to get a copy of the Bible.

The infantry and artillery are only awaiting commands to move forward. One of them only last Sunday walked up to Sister Jamieson, who was distributing Bibles, and said, "What is the price of one of these Bibles; I would like to get one?" As only a mother's heart can respond, she said, "My boy, you shall have one without cost."

These khaki-bound testaments cost 25 cents a piece—from the American Bible Society. Will not many who read this appeal send in a contribution to Rev. W. E. Thomas, 815 St. Charles Street, New Orleans, La., who has charge of this work?

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Burke Culpepper, the well known evangelist, is conducting an interesting meeting at Meridian, Miss.

Rev. A. W. Turner has recently delivered addresses at Oak Grove and Floyd, La., in the interest of the prohibition cause.

Rev. F. P. Moss, writing from Chestnut, La., sends us two subscriptions to the Advocate, and says: "Everything is moving along nicely in the Alberta charge."

In a business letter to our office, written on June 19, Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, of Pleasant Hill, La., says: "We have just closed a good meeting at Robeline, an account of which will follow in a few days."

Rev. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Monroe (La.) District, headed for the Seashore Divinity School, passed through New Orleans Tuesday of this week. He spoke optimistically of the work in his district.

Rev. R. H. Harper, of New Orleans, recently assisted Rev. B. H. Sheppard in a revival meeting at Le Compte, La. The services were well attended and there were a number of accessions to the Church.

Rev. W. W. Perry, of Glenmora, La., says: "My charge is doing well this year. We have already paid over half of our Conference collections, and the other finances are up to date." Brother Perry has lately aided Rev. R. V. Fulton in a helpful meeting at Pineville, La.

Rev. H. W. May, Rev. H. N. Harrison, Rev. R. F. Harrell, and Rev. and Mrs. C. A. Battle, passed through New Orleans last Monday en route to the Seashore Divinity School, and while in the city paid the Advocate office appreciated visits.

Rev. M. W. Porter, of Eucutta, Miss., is giving attention to the claims of the Advocate in his field, for which service we are grateful to him. It scarcely needs to be said that the other interests of the Church are not being overlooked by this faithful pastor.

Rev. T. M. Bradley, of Cleveland, Miss., writes: "Bishop J. H. McCoy will preach here on the first Sunday in July, and will officiate at the laying of the corner-stone of our new church." We thank Brother Bradley for an invitation to be present on this interesting occasion.

We are informed that Mr. R. M. Lawrence, a popular young man of Grenada, Miss., has lately come to New Orleans to accept a position with the Interstate Trust & Banking Company. We hope that he will find his new residence and work in the Crescent City in every respect pleasant.

Dr. Charles W. Smith, an eminent Northern Methodist minister, in referring to Dr. Blake's latest proposed arrangement for the colored Methodists in the suggested unified Church, says: "The proposition of a Negro jurisdiction, with a Liberian appendix, is a joke pure and simple."

Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Fernwood, Miss., has been given a vacation by his pleasant charge, which he will spend principally at the Seashore Divinity School, taking his family with him. Brother Saunders is a hard worker and doubtless a brief season of rest will prove helpful to him.

The Rayne Memorial (this city) Bulletin for Sunday, June 24, is before us. It contains as this church's "Roll of Honor" the names of its members who have enlisted in the United States Navy and Army. The eloquent pastor, Dr. U. G. Foote, thus sets a good example for other congregations.

The Corinthian, of Corinth, Miss., of June 19, contained an account of a revival that was then in progress at the South Side Methodist Church, of which Rev. J. R. James is the popular pastor. Rev. L. W. Cain was doing the preaching, which was stated to be of a high order and to be drawing large congregations.

Rev. B. F. Lewis, of Canton, Miss., writes: "We are moving along splendidly at Canton. Our congregations have been gradually increasing in interest and size all the year, and our prayer meetings have been unusually good." We make grateful acknowledgment to Brother Lewis for 2 subscriptions, contained in his letter.

Rev. and Mrs. C. D. Atkinson and their babe are at the Seashore Campground, having gone thither to enjoy the lectures given at the Divinity School and to have an outing. Brother Atkinson reported the work to be progressing well within the bounds of the great Shreveport District, in which he leads the forces of Southern Methodism.

Rev. L. C. Wilson, of Grand Cane, who is one of the choice spirits of the Louisiana Conference, favors us with 3 subscriptions to the Advocate, and comments as follows upon his field of labor: "My work is moving on fairly well. We hope to have good meetings this summer and fall, and go to Conference with a good report."

There was a fine mid-summer audience at the Parker Memorial Church last Sunday morning, and the gifted young pastor, Rev. R. H. Harper, delivered an excellent sermon which held the close attention of all present. Brother Harper reports that he has had 75 accessions to the Church during the present Conference year.

Rev. E. H. Cunningham, the efficient pastor of our church at Leland, Miss., was an appreciated caller at the Advocate office last Tuesday, being on his way to the Seashore Divinity School. He was in the best of spirits and we never saw him looking better. We were not surprised to learn that his work is prospering at Leland.

Rev. W. D. Bennett, our pastor on the Sardis Circuit, thus reports concerning his charge: "Our Sunday school work is encouraging. We have one school with an enrollment double that of the membership of the Church at that place. We have observed Children's Day at three points and had fairly good collections. The general condition of the circuit is very good."

Rev. Leland Clegg, of Harperville, Miss., forwards us 3 subscriptions, and thus refers to his pastorate: "My work is moving on well. The congregations are growing, the attendance being larger than it was last year. Children's Day has been observed at every church (some of which had not celebrated the 'Day' in a long time). The general spiritual state of the charge is good.

We have before us a beautiful pamphlet containing the address of Rev. W. L. Duren of Columbus, Miss., who spoke for the Alumni Association on the occasion of the Quarto-Centennial Celebration of Millsaps College. It is an eloquent and highly creditable utterance, the theme of which was "Reconstruction After the War." We are pleased to know that it has been printed in this form.

Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Brookhaven (Miss.) District, recently went to Memphis to attend a meeting of the Trustees of the Methodist Hospital. While in the Bluff City, he was a guest of Bishop W. B. Murrah at tea. Bishop Murrah stated to us some time since that as a presiding elder Brother Leggett ranks with the very best that he had come in contact with in the Church.

We regret to learn that Mrs. Mattie McRae, of Doddsville, Miss., recently had her residence burned, losing in the fire nearly all of her household effects. As the conflagration took place at night, she feels especially thankful that all of the family escaped uninjured. A number of friends have been generous and kind, and they have her deep gratitude for their thoughtfulness and assistance.

The following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, have our thanks for two or more subscriptions forwarded within the past few days: Rev. J. S. Duke, Mendenhall, Miss., 5; Rev. J. E. Cunningham, Corinth Miss., 4; Rev. J. S. Purcell, Ellisville Miss., 4; Rev. P. F. Luter, Acona Miss., 3; Rev. W. M. Langley, Pickens, Miss., 2; Rev. Waldo W. Moore, Bogue Chitto, Miss., 4.

Rev. G. F. Roberts, of Reeves, La., in a communication bringing us two subscriptions, appends the following note: "The work in this field is climbing up. Our Sunday school is a great force for good and is growing. Brothers Carter and Breithaupt were with us recently, and they said that we have the nicest church and best graded Sunday school that can be found in any town of like size in the Conference."

A card signed by Brother and Sister S. Randle, and dated at Oak Ridge, La., reads as follows: "Just a word to say that the Monroe District Conference was a delightful occasion. Brother Lutz was at his best. We have spent five happy weeks in dear old Louisiana. It has been a foretaste of heaven. May God bless our dear friends who have shown themselves to be so anxious to do all they could for their former pastor."

The Federal Bone Dry Law, forbidding the shipment of liquors into prohibition States except for scientific, sacramental, mechanical, and medicinal purposes, will take effect on July 1. Attorney-General Collins, of Mississippi, had advised the express companies doing business in that commonwealth before delivering stimulants claimed to be for medicinal purposes to demand a certificate from a reputable physician to that effect.

Rev. O. W. Bradley, of Tupelo, Miss., informs us of the death of Mr. Douglas A. Bell, a son of Rev. John W. Bell, our pastor at Okolona, Miss., which occurred in Okolona on Friday, June 15, the burial taking place at 2 p. m. on the following day. The deceased had been ill for a number of years, and had just returned from the West, whither he had gone hoping to be improved by the climate. Brother Bell and his family will have the sympathy and prayers of many friends in their great sorrow.

We take off our hat to Rev. J. E. Stephens, our capable young pastor at Coahoma, Miss., for 7 subscriptions to the Advocate, 2 of which are new. Brother Stephens makes the following reference to things in his field: "My work here is very pleasant. We have had 12 additions on profession of faith this Conference year, and 4 by certificate. The pastor's and presiding elder's salaries are up to date, and about 40 per cent of the Conference assessments have been paid. A little more than $3000 has been secured for Grenada and Millsaps Colleges in cash and good subscriptions (the cash amounting to about $1800). Our Children's Day collections brought in $60. We have two good teacher-training classes in our Sunday schools. Brother Curtis, our presiding elder, is doing splendidly." This is, indeed, a notably fine record.

A SECRET WORTH KNOWING.

Doing nothing for others is the undoing of ourselves. We must be purposely kind and generous or we miss the best part of existence. The heart that goes out of itself gets large and full. This is the great secret of the inner life. We do ourselves the most good by doing something for others.—Horace Mann.

THE BIBLE WAY TO HEAVEN.

By Rev. J. C. Ryle.

Some people seem to think that there are many ways to heaven. They appear to fancy that it matters little what a man believes, so long as he is in earnest. They tell us we have no business to be so particular about doctrines. We are to be satisfied if people go to some place of worship. We have no right to doubt, then, that all must be right.

All this would be very good if we had no clear account of the way of salvation in the Bible. But we have such an account—plain, unmistakable, and easy to be understood. Let me tell you what it is.

All through the Bible, from Genesis down to Revelation, there is only one simple account of the way in which men must be saved. It is always the same—only for the sake of our Lord Jesus Christ, through faith, not for our own works and deservings.

You see it dimly revealed at first. It looms through the mist of a few promises, but there it is.

You have it more plainly afterwards. It is taught by the pictures and emblems of the law of Moses, the schoolmaster dispensation. Every Old Testament sacrifice was a confession that a Savior was expected, who should die for sinners.

You have it still more clearly by-and-by. The prophets saw in vision many particulars about the Redeemer yet to come.

You have it fully at last in the sunshine of New Testament history—Christ incarnate, Christ crucified, Christ rising again, Christ preached to the world. The gospels are Christ living, speaking, and moving among us. The Acts are Christ preached, published, and proclaimed. The epistles are Christ written of, explained, and exalted. All through, from first to last, there is but one Name above every other, and that is Christ.

But one golden chain runs through the whole Bible, no salvation excepting by Jesus Christ. The bruising of the serpents's head, foretold in the day of the fall, the clothing of our first parents with skins, the sacrifices of Noah, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the passover, and all the particulars of the Jewish law, the high priests, the altar, the daily offering of the lamb, the holy of holies entered only by blood, the scapegoat, the cities of refuge—all are so many witnesses to the truth set forth in the text: all preach with one voice, salvation only by Jesus Christ.

In fact, this truth appears to me the grand subject of the Bible, and all the different parts and portions of the book are meant to throw light upon it. I can gather from it no ideas of pardon and peace with God, excepting in connection with this truth. If I could read of one soul in it who was saved without faith in a Savior, I might perhaps not speak so confidently. But when I see that faith in Christ—whether a coming Christ, or a crucified Christ—was the prominent feature in the religion of all who went to heaven; when I see Abel owning Christ in his better sacrifice at one end of the Bible, and the saints in glory in John's vision rejoicing in Christ at the other end of the Bible; when I see a man like Cornelius, who was devout and feared God, and gave alms, and prayed, not told that he had done all and would of course be saved, but ordered to send for Peter and hear of Christ; when I see all these things, I feel bound to believe that the doctrine of the Bible is this: no salvation, no way to heaven excepting by Jesus Christ.

I do not know what use you make of your Bible—whether you read it, or whether you do not, whether you read it all, or whether you only read such parts as you like. But this I tell you plainly: if you read and believe the whole Bible, you will find it hard to escape the doctrine, that there is no other name given under heaven whereby we can be saved, but only the name of Jesus. I do not see how you can consistently reject what I have been endeavoring to prove: Christ is the way and the only way; Christ is the truth and the only truth; Christ the life and the only life.

I conclude this article with words once preached by John Owen before the English House of Commons, which I commend to your serious attention: "Christ is the way; men, without Him are Cain, wanderers, vagabonds. He is the truth; men without him are liars like the devil of old. He is the life; men without him are dead in trespasses and sin. He is the light; men without Him are in darkness, and go they know not whither. He is the vine; men that are not in Him are withered branches, prepared for the fire. He is the rock; men not built on him are carried away with a flood. He is the Alpha and Omega, the first and the last, the author and the ender, the founder and finisher of our salvation. He that hath not Him hath neither beginning of good nor shall have end of misery. Oh, blessed Jesus, how sweet, better were it not to be, than to be without Thee! Better never to be born, than not to die in Thee! A thousand hells come short of this, eternally to want Jesus Christ."

Reader, may you and I be able to say Amen to the spirit of this passage, and then it will be well with our souls.

MANY WILL APPRECIATE THIS.

Writes a most faithful and liberal pastor: "I have a salary of $900 a year, a family of several children, and no house. I am besieged with letters almost every week from a relief organization, pressing and urging me to send a contribution to Mr. X. Y., treasurer of that relief fund. Mr. Y. is a millionaire forty or fifty times over, and is the great agent for millionaries. He could more easily give the whole fund needed outright, and not feel it, than I could give one dollar." It is this kind of thing that makes many good people "tired" just now.—Presbyterian Journal.

CONSERVATISM.

Conservatism is a good word we prize! Like many another good thing it has been greatly misrepresented. In times of peace and indulgence, the conservative man has been regarded as opposed to progress, or too inert or fearful to depart from well-marked ruts and to assume the heavier labor of the new progress. This is wrong. The true conservative is the true progressive. His opponents are aggressively destructive rather than truly constructive. The conservative man realizes that some things abide, like air and sunshine, truth annd right. There are laws in nature and principles in religion and morals which cannot be changed, and to violate them means not construction, but destruction. In building he realizes that the larger and more lofty the building, the stronger needs be the foundation and the unchanging granite is the best. In husbandry, he knows that soil and seed are most important, and that hard, dirty, or shallow soil and lifeless and bad seeds mean no fruit or a vicious crop, despite all enthusiasm and activity connected with it.

If ever there was a time when the whole civilized world needed to be conservative, it is now. Wild rage and mere bold dash mean nothing. Speculation must give way to evidence and hopeful dash to cautious certainty, mere vision to reality. We need to study and discern the abiding principles of God. We require to have knowledge and faith and the fear of God. The forces are accumulating slowly, but their very slowness means weight and power. Hysteria here is fatal. Lawlessness and mere dash are deadly. The powers that be must be respected as ordained of God. Right and truth must be honored as eternal and unchangeable. Says Paul: "If a man also strive for masteries, yet is he not crowned except he strive lawfully."—The Presbyterian.

IN TRIAL.

If there's remedy for trouble, just apply it;
If you fret, your trials double; then keep quiet.
There's no reason for repining—
Trouble is not helped by whining—
If there is a "silver lining," haste to spy it.

—Mrs. Frank A. Breck.

Sure! High Heels Cause Corns But Who Cares Now

Because style decrees that women crowd and buckle up their tender toes in high heel footwear they suffer from corns, then they cut and trim at these painful pests which merely makes the corn grow hard. This suicidal habit may cause lockjaw and women are warned to stop it.

A few drops of a drug called freezone applied directly upon a sore corn gives quick relief and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts out without pain. Ask the drug store man for a quarter of an ounce of freezone, which costs very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

This drug is an ether compound and dries in a moment and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. Clip this out and pin on your wife's dresser.

WILLIAM E. KELLY, on the 21st of May, 1917, peacefully passed from the activities of this earthly life to those of the beyond. Had he lived till the 8th day of the following June, he would have been 70 years old. He had been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, since early childhood, and at his death his membership was at Pelahatchie, Miss., where he was residing when the end came. He lingered in a sickness for several months before his passing, but in the midst of it all he was patient and bore his affliction without a complaint. It was my privilege to visit him frequently during his last illness and I always found him with a strong faith in God and willing to meet him. He left a wife, five sons, and one daughter to grieve because of his leaving. May the Holy Spirit comfort these sad hearts! R. P. FIKES.

CLARENCE BELL, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Bell, passed triumphantly to his reward on June 7, 1917. He met with a serious accident at Canton, Miss., a few days before his passing. Immediately after the accident he was taken to the Baptist Hospital at Jackson, Miss., where he underwent an operation, but he lived only a few days afterwards. He had no dread or fear of what the end would be, but said he was ready for the going, and just before the end came he made all his plans and then calmly fell asleep. He had been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for many years, and at the time of his death his membership was at Pelahatchie, Miss. He was tenderly laid to rest in the cemetery at Clinton, Miss., where his father was buried several years ago. He leaves a mother, one sister, and four brothers, whose hearts are deeply grieved because of his going. May the living Christ comfort each of these sad hearts!

R. P. FIKES.

Mr. ROBERT B. NEAL was born in North Carolina in 1854, and was married to Miss Mollie Saunders on Dec. 23, 1876, in Starkville, Miss. He had for many years been an esteemed citizen of Starkville, where he died in the faith, on April 21, 1917. He was converted in his early youth and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Brother Neal was devoted to his Church, and a faithful attendant upon its services. He maintained a family altar in his home, and at the mid-week prayer meeting was ever ready, when called upon, to respond in earnest and helpful prayer. His saintly wife died in August, 1914. He is survived by eight daughters, three sons, and a number of grandchildren. His immediate children are all members of the Church, and all save one daughter were present at his funeral service, which was conducted at the residence of a son-in-law, Mr. A. B. Harrington, by Rev. W. S. Harrison. The body was laid to rest in the Odd Fellows' Cemetery with the impressive service of the Order of Odd Fellows, of which Brother Neal was a member. We shall miss the kindly greetings of our ascended brother. We sympathize with the bereaved ones and sorrow for his passing away, but we sorrow not as those having no hope. T. C. WIER.

Starkville, Miss.

Brother H. B. LAUGHTER was born in the year 1835, in De Soto County, Miss. Here he grew to manhood, and when the call of his country came he enlisted in the Confederate Army in which he served faithfully as one of her sons. After the war was over, he returned and settled in the eastern part of De Soto County, where he spent the remaining days of his earthly life. On Jan. 9, 1869, he was happily married to Miss Georgia Payne, of Cockrum, Miss. Of this union were born 7 children, 4 of whom survive him, together with his wife. Like Joshua of old, Brother Laughter said to his wife when they began their happy wedded life, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord;" and true to this vow, they traveled life's highway happily. All the children in early life professed faith in Christ and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Cockrum — the Church of their parents. On the morning of March 20, 1916, the spirit of this good man, who had ever been faithful to the interests of the Church, heard the summons and took its flight to the realms beyond. On the following day, a host of friends and neighbors attended his funeral which was conducted by his pastor, Rev. F. H. McGee. He was buried in the Cockrum Cemetery with Masonic honors. He will watch and wait for you, loved ones. May this be an unbroken family where families never break up!

R. I. COLLINS.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT.

The work on the district has gone steadily on for the past quarter. Every man is at his post and giving himself to his work. Brother Brown, at De Ridder has been greatly interfered with, on account of the workmen in the house finishing it up. When it is done, the church will be more than repaid for what it has suffered by this interruption. It will be equipped for a far greater work.

The largest increase in membership this quarter is at Oakdale. A union meeting there—Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians co-operating—resulted in 123 additions to our Church. Brother Freeman is conserving the gains and is yet adding to the membership there. Meetings are in progress in various parts of the territory, and the season has just opened. We are expecting great results from these special efforts. Brother Price is at Alexandria assisting Brother Coleman. The crowds are in excess of any I ever saw at a meeting in Alexandria. The church recently bought the balance of the block fronting on Jackson Street; so we are secure for the future, as far as a roomy location is concerned.

Our District Conference was good, but there was an element of failure shown—there were no applications for license to preach.

Methodism must not only produce her own preachers, but she must produce an overflow for other churches. This is her past; it should be her present and future.

The church at Elizabeth found it had been duped in following its self-constituted pastor and has dismissed him for sufficient reasons and requested the presiding elder to supply them a preacher. Brother E. S. Williams, formerly in the traveling connection in our church in Missouri, is now in charge.

As far as material improvements are concerned, I believe, outside of the above mentioned places, only the improvements at Bunkie are taking real shape. Some of them are still in the air. Bunkie's are being put on the ground—very decided advantages in the arrangement and enlargement of the parsonage.

The good people at Colfax are talking of a new church. Some in Colfax have awakened to a knowledge of the need. I think outside of Colfax the verdict that the Methodist people there need a better and bigger church is unanimous—specially among those people who pass by the highway. I think we will have it, some day.

The most esential thing in any enterprise is a sufficient and efficient equipment. I think this applies to the Church as well as to any other work. Gradually our people are awakening to the necessity of equipment in doing the work of the Church.

I am looking forward to a great number of accessions to the Church as a result of the special efforts during this coming quarter.

STOP THAT PAIN!

The few misguided people who argue against the relief of pain as a first step in treatment, either have never suffered from any pain themselves or else they do not know what they are talking about.

It is all right to realize that pain may be the danger signal for some more serious complaint and it is well to look deep into the reason for pain, but the first step is to gain as speedy relief as possible in a safe way.

Pain is the greatest ally that disease has. Pain is the artillery, it batters down the nervous defenses of the body so that disease can safely take hold of the body.

But not only does pain do physical harm to the body, but it also does moral harm which may be tremendously far-reaching in its effects.

The nagging effect of pain is such that it will change the disposition of a person to such an extent that they will become a burden to themselves and to everybody else. The person who has normally the sweetest temper may be readily turned into an irritable crank by a succession of unrelieved headaches or pains.

Stop that pain by using Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills according to directions. They are effective, safe and harmless. They can be purchased at any drug store, and the druggist is always willing to return the purchase price if the pills fail to relieve pain. You are the judge yourself. It will cost you nothing to try.

"Friendship can sometimes show its strength as much by the readiness with which it accepts benefits as by the freedom with which it gives them. It proves by this its confidence in the love of the other side."

THE DURANT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Durant District Conference met in its twenty-second regular annual session in the Methodist Church, in Kosciusko, Miss., Wednesday morning, May 30, 1917. The opening sermon was preached on Tuesday evening by Chas. D. McGehee. T. H. Mills was announced to preach, hut the illness of his wife prevented him from meeting his appointment.

When our church at Ackerman, the appointed place of meeting, was damaged by storm, to the extent of making it necessary to change the seat of the conference, the good people of Kosciusko generously threw open their doors and received the Conference in their characteristic wholehearted manner, and were untiring in their efforts to entertain and make us welcome. A reception was given the conference on the church lawn, after which we were put aboard automobiles and carried over, around, and ahout the enterprising little city. Under the leadership of their popular and efficient pastor, Rev. S. A. Brown, the church at Kosciusko, moves forward. A new roof has heen put on the church and the auditorium worked over. Several new additional Sunday school rooms will soon be under construction to take care of the growing Sunday school.

The thoughtful and alert presiding elder, W. W. Mitchell, had prepared and printed, heforehand, a splendid program that was full and workable. The program was adopted by the conference and made the order of the exercises. The conference worked under the lead of sixteen committees. The reports from committees were thoughtful and carefully prepared. The work was thorough, going into all departments of the work. Ample time was given to all, and there was no haste. The presidency of Brother Mitchell was dignified, firm, and considerate.

The preaching was of a high order, being ably done by C. D. McGehee, T. H. Mills, H. M. Ellis, Roht. Selby, and C. P. Moss.

The following representatives of general causes were in attendance: H. M. Ellis for the Memphis Hospital; M. M. Black for Millsaps College; R. Selby for Emory University; J. B. Randolph for the Orphans' Home, and R. H. B. Gladney for the Sunday School Board. All of these gave ahundant evidence of the prosperity of the work committed to their hands. Mrs. T. R. King, District Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society, in a pleasing and illuminating address gave an account of the work in the district.

The laymen attended well throughout the session. Every pastor was present except one, and their reports were full of progress, hope and enthusiasm. There seemed to he no lag at any point.

J. Lem Seawright, R. E. Wilhurn, Dr. R. C. Elmore, and Parham Willams were elected delegates to the Annual Conference; with F. A. Howell and J. B. Streater as alternates.

J. Lem Seawright was re-elected District Lay Leader.

B. P. Jaco, J. T. McCafferty, C. P. Moss, and W. M. Langley were, on nomination of the presiding elder, elected as a Licensing Committee.

The Committee on Books and Periodicals were instructed to take steps looking to a Conference Colporteur or a display of hooks from the Publishing House at the Annual Conference.

B. P. Jaco was hy resolution made District Superintendent of the Pocket Testament League to aid in providing Testaments for our soldiers in the army.

There was a hrotherly, helpful, earnest, and God-fearing spirit manifested by all. The conference adjourned to meet again in Ackerman next year.

FROM FERNWOOD, MISS.

My Dear Brother Meek: As you know, Brother Kelly and Brother Duke are here in a meeting. Both of these brethren are measuring up to the high expectations of the people. We all knew Brother Kelly, as he had been here three times before, and knew what to look for, but notwithstanding that fact he shows that be is a student and grows in knowledge as well as grace. Brother Duke was very little known here, but he has captured the situation with his fine voice in song, and his management of the young people makes him a fine co-worker with our Dan. They match well and should be hitched up together for a year at a time. Their work is proving a blessing to the whole community and great good is coming and greater good will come by Wednesday or Thursday evening, when we expect to close.

W. H. SAUNDERS.

PERSONAL.

Brother: Accidentally discovered nature's antidote for the nasty tobacco habit. It is a pleasant-tasting root, chewed like gum; quickly and easily overcomes both tobacco habit and indigestion. Gladly send particulars. W. E. STOKES, Mohawk, Florida.—Adv.

Constipation

You are apt to think lightly of a slight case of constipation. Did you know that constipation is incipient auto-intoxication or self-poisoning? You cannot he too careful, for constipation without treatment is liable to become the source of far more serious ills. To be entirely healthy and have a clean body, it is necessary to keep the howels clean and the liver active. When constipated, take Van Lax, for it is the ideal treatment for constipation. Contains no calomel and no habit-forming drugs. Does not gripe or nauseate. It is pleasant in taste and results. Sold everywhere by the best dealers. Manufactured hy Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

Freckles

The fairer the skin the more ugly it is when marred by freckles; and they are not necessary at all. As soon as the warm sunshine or the hot winds bring them out, and with the natural embarrasment that every woman feels, get a package of Kintho; this is the easy way to remove them. If Kintho is used at the first sign of the ugly spots, they'll sometimes disappear overnight. Any druggist has or can get Kintho for you. Use Kintho soap too. It's astonishing how it helps keep the freckles away once Kintho has removed them.

What Do You Know About Your Blood Supply?

Your ignorance may startle you.

Few people know of the many functions of the blood supply, and just how important it is that it be kept absolutely free from all impurities. The health of the entire body depends upon the condition of the blood. You are invited to write and obtain a booklet that gives you some invaluable information on this important subject. It tells how to keep the blood strong and free from the many impurities to which it is constantly subject.

It gives the history of S. S. S., the world's most successful blood remedy, which has been sold for more than fifty years by druggists everywhere. This book will be sent free to all who write to Swift Specific Co., Dept. A., Atlanta, Ga.

WOMEN SUFFER MOST OF ALL

From those conditions of the blood and nerves in which the combination treatment, Hood's Sarsaparilla before eating and Peptiron Pills after eating, gives so much satisfaction at so little cost as compared with other medicines or physicians' fees.

These two great medicines are especially effective in cases of physical weakness, nervous irritability, run-down conditions in which there is iron deficiency. Price of each $1. Ask your druggist for them.

A NOTE OF THANKS.

Dear Dr. Meek: So many letters of sympathy have come to me in our sorrow that I could not very well answer each one of them: so please let me through the Advocate express my appreciation of them. May God bless you, brethren! You have lightened our burden and helped us on the way up the hill of life.

C. M. CROSSLEY.

THE CHURCH'S WORK.

To proclaim the Spirit of Truth—that the Spirit is verily with us and striving with us, cultivating all the faculties He has conferred, bringing us to repentance, seeking to mold us after God's image, seeking to make us helpers and not destroyers of each other—this is the work that is left to the Church, this is the one hope for the age.—Maurice.

VASHTI INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

E. E. Bishop.

Two young girls—sisters, orphans, children of a queer little old man who had lived in a queer little old house—were found in the county poorhouse, the only life of the white race among the aged and decreplt of that inglorious institution. The overseer of the poorhouse remarked when they were heing taken away, "The young one's all right, hut the old one is a regular wildcat."

The "wildcat" was a little old-looking, freckled creature with a small bunch of paie, straggly hair tied in a wad, with a tall of it sticking out from under a little gaudy hat behind, and matched before hy a wizened face, colorless, wrinkled, and dwarfed, like the hody, by unwhoiesome food and the excessive use of snuff. She did not want to go to school. No, indeed! Education was all right for some people, but snuff was good enough for her; and if either had to be left off, she would choose the snuff and let the educatlon go. Truly, education was a trial for her and for her teacher as well, for her mind and senses, as well as her body, were dwarfed. She could nelther see well, think clearly, nor speak plainly. No one knew her age, but, on account of her small size, she was put down at fourteen. She never could do good school work, her industrial work was never extra, but she couid and did get religion clearly and "for keeps." She learned to read her Bible, to pray, to testify, and to work. She had found and improved her one talent, and from that time on, in spite of physical and mental limitatlons, she possessed the influence of a teacher. Of choice she remained two years overtime at our institution. Then she went out as a companion for a woman of means; and at spare times she carrled tracts, church papers, and held cottage prayer meetings all over the nelghborhood. Finally, she became a domestic for the wife of a financier at good wages—not because she was competent, but because she was so truthful and trustworthy.

Then came the happy inevitable for girls whom we teach and train. She entrusted her destiny to a hushand, and our records close. Was this transformatlon worth while?

OPPOSITION TO CONFUCIANISM AS A STATE RELIGION.

The proposal to establish Confuclanism as a State religion for China has again been before Parliament and failed by nine votes in five hundred and twenty-nine.

Two Christians of Kiangsi were delegated to visit Peklng, a thirty-six hours' journey to protest against the hill. It is a witness to the effectiveness of Christian missions that it is the converts and not the missionarles who are fightlng this battle.

Five members of Parliament from their province introduced into Parliament the petition of Kiangsi Protestants, numberlng 54,000, setting forth their objections:

1. A State religion is not conformable to the principles of a republican form of government.
2. It will be necessary to create an enormous item in the national budget in order to maintain a State religion.
3. A State religion is contrary to the clause which guarantees freedom of religion provided in the Provisional Constltution.
4. A State religion will tend to cause religious controversies.
5. A State religion will tend to foster hostility between Christians and non-Christians.
6. In case of trouble, it is bound to invite foreign interference.—The Expositor.

SOME OF THE HORRORS OF WAR.

In Great Britain, for instance, some of the first war economies were in the educational system. School buildings were taken over for military purposes, teachers enlisted, repairs, buildings, appropriations, and supplies were cut down; evening schools, medical inspection, school dentistry, and free lunches were stopped or cut down; and the age limits for schooling were changed so that three hundred thousand little children from five or under who had been in school were turned out, while thousands of children of eleven and twelve were excused from school to go to work.

The laws governing hours of labor in munition plants were broken down. Club work, settlement work, and general child welfare work were crippled or stopped.

Thousands of children in England are without teachers or schools. Juvenile delinquency in England has increased at least 34 per cent since the war began.

What Shall We Do In America?

1. Oppose all attempts to break down the school system in your vicinity either by relaxing enforcement of compulsory education laws or by cutting down school funds. "Education is the very last thing we ought to economize in."
2. Oppose all attempts to break down the labor laws of your State either by giving young children special permits to work or by exempting certain establishments from the laws limiting hours of labor.
3. Support, as usual, local and national social agencies. Do not allow settlements, recreation centers, health boards, juvenile protective associations, child welfare and child labor committees, and other organizations that it has taken years to build up to be destroyed.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER DUKE.

Dear Brother Meek: As you will note by this letter-head, I am at Fernwood, and the purpose for which I am here is to lead the singing in the revival meeting which will be conducted by Brother Dan Kelly. Brother Saunders and his people are expecting a great revival, and from all indications their hopes will be realized. Brother Lloyd Decell preached a great sermon here last night, and will preach tonight, Brother Kelly coming in tomorrow.

Well, the real purpose of this letter is to tell you that the Mendenhall charge is going forward, and that it is a pleasure to be the pastor of a loyal people such as compose the membership of the three churches—Mendenhall, D'Lo, and Bethany comprising the charge. They have "pounded" the pastor and his family more than once, and in all ways are trying to show their appreciation, and help to hold up the hands of their leader.

I cannot but mention the sweet spirit of loyalty and helpfulness which is manifested hy Brother W. B. Waldrop, who was pastor of the charge last year but had to ask for a year of rest. His health has not improved, as we had hoped for, hut he is contemplating a trip West, which will perhaps build him up. He has heen the pastor's friend.

We are expecting good revivals this year on the Mendenhall charge, and I hope to be able to write you of them later on. Sincerely,

June 19, 1917. JAS. S. DUKE.

WOMAN AVOIDS OPERATION

Medicine Which Made Surgeon's Work Unnecessary.

Astoria, N. Y. — "For two years I was feeling ill and took all kinds of tonics. I was getting worse every day. I had chills, my head would ache, I was always tired. I could not walk straight because of the pain in my back and I had pains in my stomach. I went to a doctor and he said I must go under an operation, but I did not go. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told my husband about it. I said 'I know nothing will help me but I will try this.' I found myself improving from the very first bottle, and in two weeks time I was able to sit down and eat a hearty breakfast with my husband, which I had not done for two years. I am now in the best of health and did not have the operation." — Mrs. JOHN A. KOENIG, 502 Flushing Avenue, Astoria, N. Y.

Every one dreads the surgeon's knife and the operating table. Sometimes nothing else will do; but many times doctors say they are necessary when they are not. Letter after letter comes to the Pinkham Laboratory, telling how operations were advised and were not performed; or, if performed, did no good, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was used and good health followed.

If you want advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

Doctor Says Nuxated Iron Will Increase Strength of Delicate People 100% in Ten Days

In many instances—Persons have suffered untold agony for years doctoring for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease or some other ailment when their real trouble was lack of iron in the blood.—How to tell.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician who has studied widely both in this country and in great European medical institutions, said: "If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night, others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, hut all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases, it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what any one tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run-down people who were ailing all the time double, and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good sound, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated iron for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have such unbounded confidence in its potency that they authorize the announcement that they will forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided, they have no serious organic trouble. Also they will refund your money in any case in which Nuxated Iron does not at least double your strength in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

From the Field

Petal, Miss.

Last Sunday night at Rawls Springs marked the closing of our Children's Day observance on the Hattiesburg Circuit, consisting of seven appointments. The services were an inspiration to all present and we feel that much good was accomplished, notwithstanding the difficuities encountered. All the children who participated acquitted themselves well; $13 was the total amount of the offering. We begin our first revival for the summer season at Lux on July 14 with Brother W. W. Moore to assist. By the aid of the Holy Spirit, we are planning for and expecting greater things ahead.—C. E. Downer.

Boyle, Miss.

Dear Doctor Meek: We have just brought to a close one of the best revivals that Boyle has had in a long time. Brother Bowen was with us, and preached with his usual effectiveness. By the sincerity and simplicity of his manner he won the respect and love of the people. The result has been, I believe, a thorough revival of all departments of the church. On Sunday we received 16 persons into the Church. Miss Juliet Featherstun, of Port Gibson, helped us in the singing, and aided materially in bringing about the successful results. Much interest was taken in the meeting, and the whole community seems to have been benefited. J. H. MITCHELL.

Eunice, La.

Dear Doctor Meek: Though we have not enjoyed the liquid showers of blessings for some time, we have been the recipients of a gracious outpouring of spiritual blessings. On June 3, Rev. W. D. Pickens, of the Memphis Conference, began our revival, which lasted for twelve days. His messages were of a high spiritual tenor—full of the pathos of one who loves souls, and the arguments of one who beseeches in Christ's stead. The conditions were propitious and the results were forthcoming. The church was lifted up, and, we hope, has caught the vision of the greater Kingdom. Many came for prayer, some were converted, some reclaimed and 25 united with the church—nineteen on profession of faith. About five of these were children under ten years. There are yet others who are to unite with the Church, so we feel that all the good done is not altogether visible. We are winding up our quadrennium here and hope to leave this field in a hopeful attitude. The people are rejoicing in the fact of having a commodious, beautiful building now, and practically out of debt, $75 remaining to be paid, which is not due till December, 1918. The building is not quite finished, but should we fail to finish it by Conference, our successor will have an unencumbered start, and can do so in the course of time. Our Sunday school here is flourishing. Fathers and mothers attend. We are endeavoring to build a church at Port Barre, and expect that by Conference we will have a church building there. Withal, things seem hopeful for Eunice, and in the near future, with a little help and encouragement, we believe that it will be a station. The Baptists think it a strategetic point enough to keep a man here on three-quarter time—why shouldn't we?—A. A. Bernard, P. C.

STOP! CALOMEL IS QUICKSILVER!

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when 50 cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and does not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel to-day and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

Splendid Tonic for the Stomach and Liver.

If you suffer from a sluggish liver, chills and fever, jaundice, take that old-time, reliable remedy, Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Regulator. It is a dependable tonic for the stomach and liver. It contains no Calomel or other injurious drugs. Purely a vegetable compound. Buy a bottle of Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Regulator, price 50c, and watch your spirits pick up. It invigorates your sluggish liver and puts you on your feet again. Best general tonic to tone up the entire system. For sale by druggists or direct from Van Vleet-Mnasfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

A MATTER OF IMPORTANCE.

Herbert C. Hoover, National Food Director, mailed a few days ago a letter to 200,000 pastors of individual churches, Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish, calling upon them to co-operate with him and with the Department of Agriculture in urging the largest possible production of food and the smallest possible amount of waste.

"As a minister of God," writes Mr. Hoover, "a leader of the people and a lover of liberty and of your fellow men, your co-operation is earnestly desired and greatly needed. In such a time as this the people naturally turn to the church. It will be a calamity to the nation and to the churches if their chosen ministers neglect to exercise their proper leadership in the great cause of feeding a world in need, for the world is in want of food.

"To meet the needs of the war and of the world, we must produce generously, give freely to our allies, ourselves eat as much but no more than we need, and especially save the waste. Lasting disgrace will fall upon us if lack of self-restraint should prevent us from taking our proper part in this great conflict against the doctrine of 'might makes right.'"

Mr. Hoover estimates the annual waste of food at one billion dollars. He urges a larger use of corn and cornbread in the family ration.

"The women of America," says Mr. Hoover, "have never failed to answer such a call as comes to them now. The saving of food is within their sphere, and without food conservation we cannot win the war."

All pastors are urged to preach upon Conservation of Food, Sunday July 1, which is designated as Food Saving Day, and to secure the co-operation of religious and civic bodies in a campaign for Food Saving.

Fifty Against Two. It is not reasonable to expect two weeks of outing to overcome the effects of fifty weeks of confinement. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla along with you. It refreshes the blood, improves the appetite, makes sleep easy and restful.—Adv.

Honor must grow out of humility, freedom out of discipline, righteous joy out of righteous sorrow, true strength out of true knowledge of our own weakness, sound peace of mind out of sound contrition.—Charles Kingsley.

THE REVIVAL, AND SOME OF ITS PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS.

By Rev. J. Lloyd Decell.

A series of meetings wherein sinners are pungently convicted and wonderfully saved, and the children of God built up in the most holy faith, constitutes a revival. This is recognized by many to be the greatest present need of the Church. The times are perilous and life is surrounded with such material and social influences that every foot of ground gained by the Kingdom's forces is stoutly contested. We are realizing that "Zion, or the Lord's house, is established in the top of the mountains," and that in reaching it we go up contrary to worldly currents. Helping God to get humanity with its civilization up to the high altitudes of the mountain-top is no less a battle than that which is now raging in France and Belgium. This fight calls for the first lines of defense.

We have cried "kultur," "social service," and "recreation" loud and long until the real "first lines"—regeneration," "cleansing," and "soul winning"—have been given a secondary place in our practice, if not in our theory. Must we be shocked into the consciousness of the supremacy of spiritual foundations? A true revival of the Christian religion will not result in merely having a mission study class once a week, taking a flower to the hospital occasionally, nor so arranging the church lawn as to provide cold cream for the young ladies and a promenade for the young men of the church. The right kind of culture, social service and recreation are fruits of the true revival, and not causes. A rich personal experience in Christ, a heavy burden for lost souls, an agony of prayer for the lost, and a constant unselfish labor for them because Jesus dwells within and the sinner's need without him, joined with continual recognition of the Holy Spirit's power and leadership, will bring us a revival such as we need. With this balm from Gilead accessible, "Why then is not the health of the daughter of my people recovered? They have healed the hurt of the daughter of my people SLIGHTLY, saying Peace, peace, when there is no peace." (Jeremiah 8:22, 11.) Surface applications to the deepest needs prove failures. It will not do to accept a light recognition of serious obligations and a little discharging of great duties as assurance of genuine religious experience. To many, the attendance upon the preaching services, Sunday school, Bible class, or some other ordinance involves "satisfactory and meritorious doings," when their motive in such may be rivalry, custom, or just perfunctory habit. How we need a revival in which the deep workings of the Holy Spirit shall witness to freedom from sin, sonship in Christ, and flood the life with the hope of the eternal weight of glory in the beyond!

Beyond all doubt, to the saved soul, a life born from above, baptized with the Holy Ghost, performing a willing and loving service for Jesus' sake, the matters of culture, social service, and recreation adjust themselves without harm to self or injury to Christ or His cause. Such a life hid with Christ in God assumes a proper attitude toward these, the "second lines," looking upon them as avenues in which Christly power, translated through human personality, may exert itself. This type of life does all to the glory of God (1 Cor. 10:31 and Col. 3:17)—sets up a standard of life many of us would not dare to try to square our lives by without first putting away much that is indulged in now.

Then we need not merely a protracted meeting, but a revival in which men shall be new creatures in Christ—"created in Christ Jesus unto good works," going everywhere laboring unto the glory of God the Father, under an impelling Christly power within, which responds to the world's need without.

McComb, Miss.

"The very same Spirit whose fiery flame sat upon the twelve apostles, and whose indwelling filled their hearts, is still our only strength, our only holiness, and our only hope."

SABBATH SCHOOLS, STAND BY YOUR COLORS.

In recent years many attempts have been made to supplant the lessons prepared by our own Boards by those produced by other publishers, the teachings of which are antagonistic to the teachings of evangelical Christianity. Recently a prominent publishing concern has been circulating a letter containing these statements:

"As you are a graduate of Union Theological Seminary, we are assuming your sympathy with the modern interpretation of the Bible, which exalts the divine Fatherhood and universal human sonship. We feel that you must be eager to have these interpretations introduced into the teaching of your Sabbath school.

"How many a child has been trained in Sabbath school in the old ultra-conservatism, only to find on growing older that many intelligent persons no longer believe these things!

"Moreover, from the standpoint of the Sabbath school the new views are not only more reasonable, but are also more effective as a dynamic for right living. They offer us a conception of God that is truly moral, and completely Christian.

"How shall these interpretations be given to children? Many teachers hesitate to tell a child that this or that Bible story is not strictly historical, lest the child think that 'the Bible is not true.' What is needed is a series of graded lesson books which will interpret the Bible in the right way from the beginning."

This not only shows that Union Seminary's friends know that her teachings are opposed to the teachings of the evangelical Churches, but that they are doing their best to introduce them into the Sabbath schools and so deprave the children.

(This is a matter which primarily concerns the Presbyterians, but the quoted statement shows how aggressive the subtle skepticism of this age is. Well may Southern Methodists be watchful in these perilous times. As we have before stated, Dr. L. W. A TIMELY GIFT.

Wherever the Gospel has been preached a simple but beautiful act has been told for a memorial of Mary, because she did what she could.

There were no savings banks in that day, where one could begin with a penny and increase the amount at a certain rate every week, and be astonished at the amount of the "Xmas Fund" by and by. But Mary had some excellent saving plan that enabled her at last to buy so princely a gift for her Lord. And it must have meant a great sacrifice to her to save the price of the precious ointment.

In distant India it is said that men and women, in the ancient time, would climb the mountain-slopes and pluck a certain kind of flower growing there. And it was the distilled sweetness of the crushed and broken hearts of a thousand fragrant flowers which Mary lavished upon her Master. It was an act colored with the purest sentiment; it was a beautiful gift. it was a sweet mixture of the fragrant flowers of the mountain-side. the work of the toilers, such as those who heard the Master gladly, and of the loving sacrifice and devotion of Mary. It was such a gift, the ointment of spikenard, very costly, which Mary selected to express her desire to give her best to her Lord.

And the devotion of Mary had the right object. There are men who dedicate their brilliant intellect and splendid genius to the satisfaction of their own ambition. We can but admire their determination and their unwavering effort to carry out their purpose. But it is sad that so many are giving their best to some image, which may have a head of gold but cannot hide its feet of clay.

"The dearest idol I have known,
Whate'er that idol be,
Help me to tear it from Thy throne
And worship only Thee."

This expression of devotion was a timely gift. "She hath come aforehand," said the Master, "to anoint my body to the burying." Better a few kind words and helpful acts for the living than beautiful tributes and many flowers after he is dead—if he cannot have both. Too often the people have gilded the work of the prophets and garnished the sepulchres of the righteous whom their fathers had stoned. Too often the recognition of a man of genius has come when he could no longer hear.

"Seven wealthy towns contended for Homer dead,
Through which the living Homer begged his bread."

Robert Burns, like many poets and other men of genius, had a hard struggle with poverty. But after he was dead his people in their pride erected to him a splendid monument. And his aged mother came and looked on the costly marble and said: "Poor Robbie! Robbie! You asked for bread, and they gave you a stone."

So if you would give your best to your Master, give it now. If you would emulate him and heal the broken-hearted, and relieve them that are bruised, do so now. if you would make a gift to the Lord of your time and money and talents in the service of those for whom He died, bring your gift to-day. For procrastination, "the thief of time," may be also the thief of good deeds. And it may finally filch an immortal soul.

TARRYING BY THE STUFF.

The present crucial hour in the life of the Nation has demonstrated the real power of the Church. There are some who do not credit the Church with much influence in the life of the people at large. But our chief authorities have not thus lightly esteemed the Church. Ministers everywhere were asked to help further the Liberty Bond issue. And last Sunday the ministers in this city, and doubtless all over the country, in response to Mr. Hoover's appeal, preached upon the conservation of food.

The Church should use its influence to inculcate the spirit of patriotism, and to further all practical plans to conserve our resources, that we may win in a cause we believe is just. This statement is no denial of the separation of Church and State.

It is to be hoped that the appeal of Mr. Hoover will not be in vain. Three thousand years ago, David gave due credit to those who tarried by the stuff. And there never was a time when the issues of a great war depended as much upon the work done behind the lines. After all, the greatest victory may be won by those who never see the enemy in battle. Let us have a care to reduce or eliminate the waste of food, which is said to be greater in America than in any other country in the world.

This task will fall largely to the women of the land. History shows no lack of frail women who rose to the martial heroism of men. Such were Deborah the prophetess, and Joan of Arc, who donned a suit of mail and took up a sword that she might crown a king. But we cannot forget the thousands of noble women of the South who, in the darkest days of the Civil War, tarried by the stuff. And our women to-day are called to the prosaic but highly patriotic task of conserving the food supplies of a nation. R. H. H.

ECHO FROM WASHINGTON.

Several years ago a preacher met, at different times, two farmers on the road. One had a jug of whiskey tied to the pommel of his saddle, and as he seemed to feel called upon to apologize for its presence, he said that he was on his way to a piece of ground he was renting, and that the negroes always expected him to bring back for them whiskey from town. The other farmer owned a great plantation on Bayou Boeuff, in Louisiana. He was known as one of the most successful farmers in the country. Every year the cane, all of a height, stretched away almost to the horizon. He was driving a span of fine horses, and he reined in the beautiful high-spirited animals to talk a few minutes with the preacher. In the course of the conversation he asked the preacher if he thought there was any possibility of voting whiskey out of the ward. He said that the saloons in the neighboring town greatly demoralized the negroes.

The preacher compared the divergent views of the two farmers and contrasted their financial standing. How did men ever believe that whiskey helped to build up the country?

Once the liquor interests were eager to show how they helped to provide a market for the farmers' grain. Now they would give much of the blood money of the people to show how little of the foodstuffs of the country they consume, for the return of nothing but redness of eyes, and sorrows, and woe, and poverty, and broken hearts, and drunkards' graves.

So war may not be an unmixed evil. And we trust that this raider, without a country, with its black flag carrying skull and cross-bones, and with its heartless crew, may be interned for the period of the war, and that its old, rotten, blood-stained hulk may go to pieces before the first note of peace. A GREAT OPPORTUNITY.

Rev. G. A. Morgan has recently issued a very interesting folder concerning Houma Mission. He states that the church at Houma, La., now has seventy members, an official board of nine, a well-organized Sunday school with a total enrollment of ninety-nine, a Woman's Missionary Society with sixteen members, and an Epworth League. The church owns a good parsonage, which is free of debt, and a lot of ground in the heart of the town. It is only a short distance from the court-house, and just across the street from the site selected for the new government building. It is an ideal location for a church. The old dwelling on the lot is used as a house of worship. But there is an imperative need for a real church there which will command respect.

The pastor is a man of large vision, whose heart is in the task of paying off the debt of $2000 on the church lot, and of building upon it the house of worship that is so greatly needed. There are a few men of means in the church upon whom the pastor relies to have a large share in the work. But they must have outside help. The situation is just the kind for which the Board of Church Extension exists. And it is a situation that appeals to persons of wealth who love the Kingdom.

The writer recently visited Houma, and he was greatly impressed with the opportunity of our church there. Houma is a thriving town of 6000 people, in the rich sugar district of Louisiana. It is also one of the largest oyster-shipping points in the United States. Oil and gas have recently been discovered in the parish, and there is a prospect of the gas being piped from the Terrebonne field to New Orleans. There are residents of Houma who have gas wells in their own yards. Houma has the prospect of great development, and our church there should be in a position to exert a commanding influence. R. H. A PRAYER.

Lord, make my heart a place where angels sing!
For surely thoughts low-breathed by thee
Are angels gliding near on noiseless wings;
And where a home they see,
Swept clean and garnished, with adoring joy,
They enter in and dwell,
And teach that heart to swell
With heavenly melody—their own untired employ.

—John Keble.

NOT ALONE.

When Fisher, Bishop of Rochester, came out of the Tower of London, and saw the scaffold upon which he was to be beheaded, he took out of his pocket a Greek Testament, and looking up, exclaimed: "Now, O Lord, direct me to some passages which may support me through this awful scene." He opened the Book, and his eyes fell upon John 16:32—"Yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me." He instantly closed it, saying: "Praise God! this is sufficient for me and for eternity."—The Presbyterian.

RENUNCIATION.

God is always ready to meet men more than half way. When under the constraint of His Spirit sin has been discovered, and we are willing utterly to relinquish it, we have sure and certain hope of forgiveness, based upon the fact of God's own nature. Indeed, the greatness of any sin is in persistent refusal to repent and turn from it. But let it never be thought that the restoration of an individual or of a nation which has sinned grievously against God is an easy matter. Christ has said that an offending right hand must be cut off, and an offending eye must be plucked out. Renunciation, even though it involves pain and blood, is the only pathway into the sunshine for those who have given themselves to sinful courses in the dark.—J. Stuart Holden.

UNCONSCIOUS MARKS OF TRADE.

Men carry unconscious signs of their life about them. Those that come from the forge and those from the lime and mortar, and those from the humid soil and those from dusty travel bear signs of being workmen and of their work. One need not ask a merry face or a sad one whether it hath come forth from joy or grief. Tears and laughter tell their own story. Should one come home with fruit, we say, "Thou art come from the orchards;" if with hands full of wild flowers, "Thou art from the fields;" if one's garments smell of mingled odors, we say, "Thou hast walked in a garden." But how much more, if one has seen God, has held converse of hope and love, and hath walked in heaven, should he carry in his eye, his words, and his perfumed raiment the sacred tokens of divine intercourse!—Henry Ward Beecher.

MOTHERS IN ISRAEL.

By Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D.

When the Hebrew matron called out to Joab from the walls of the beleagured city of Abel and exhorted him to spare the town and "a mother in Israel" she originated a fine proverbial expression which has often been applied to good women who have distinguished their maternity by a beautiful and godly influence. The holy-hearted Hannah heads the roll of those model mothers—the woman who dedicated her first-born son to God in these memorable words: "For this child I prayed, and the Lord hath given me my petition which I asked of him. Therefore I have lent him to the Lord; as long as he liveth he shall be lent to the Lord." Samuel also heads the roll of eminent servants of God who owed an incalculable debt to wise maternal influence.

What was true in ancient times has been true ever since. At the starting-point of a vast majority of the best Christian lives stands a Christian mother. When I was a student in the seminary the chairman of the examining board requested all of us who had praying mothers to rise up, and nearly the whole one hundred and fifty leaped to their feet—living witnesses to the power of a mother's prayers, influence and example. My own widowed mother was one of the best that God ever gave to an only son. She was more to me than school, or college, or pastor, or all combined. In our early rural home, the first Sabbath school I ever attended had but one scholar, and she was superintendent; the only book studied was God's Book, committed to memory. During my infancy she dedicated me to the Christian ministry, and kept that steadily before her own eye and mine. I cannot now fix the date of my conversion; it was her constant influence that led me gradually along, and I grew into a religious life under her potent training and by the power of the Holy Spirit working through her untiring agency. If all mothers were like her, the "church in the house" would be one of the best feeders of the church in the public sanctuary.

We ministers must not take on airs. There is a ministry that is older and deeper and more potent than ours; it is that ministry that presides over the crib, and impresses the first Gospel influence upon the infant soul. Before the pulpit begins, or the Sunday school begins, the mother has already begun, and has been molding the plastic wax of character for weal or woe, for heaven or hell. A prodigious power this; it is the same power which sent Samuel out of the godly home of Hannah, and wicked Ahaziah out of the home of godless Jezebel. Each of them "walked in the way of his mother." Far be it from me to underrate the influence of fathers, for good or evil, but still the fact remains that it is mainly the mother who shapes the home influence and imparts to it its prevailing atmosphere; for the most important part of moral education is atmosphere. There is her throne; there her sway; there she can make or mar the destiny of the immortal soul beyond any one this side of the throne of God. Among eminent living ministers none preaches the great vital doctrine of the atonement more powerfully than Dr. Newman Hall, of London; he almost idolized his mother, and he has told me that the first words she ever taught him were, "God so loved that he gave His only begotten Son." That text became the key-note of his grand ministry, and of his world-known tractate, "Come to Jesus." Susannah Wesley's hand rings all the Methodist church bells around the globe to-day. Suppose that Lord Byron had been reared by such a mother as Newman Hall and the Wesleys had, the world might have escaped the moral leprosy that tainted so many of his brilliantly bad pages.

Would that I could burn it into the heart of every mother who reads these lines, that, under God, she is chiefly responsible for the moral and spiritual welfare of her household. If the mother is a frivolous fashion-worshiper, or is utterly prayerless and irreligious, or even careless of the spiritual welfare of her children, the whole home atmosphere catches the taint. The downward pull of her home preaching is quite too strong for the upward pull of the best preaching in God's house on the Sabbath. On the other hand, if she does her utmost to make the religion of Jesus attractive to her family, if she is watchful of every opportunity to lead them Christward, if she follows up the effect of Sabbath gospel by the powerful influence of home gospel, then there is almost a moral certainty that God will send his converting grace into that household. Let the mothers in Israel who read this try the blessed experiment for themselves.

That eminent preacher, Richard Cecil, of London, tells us that when a youth he tried his utmost to be an infidel; but his mother's beautiful and eloquent Christianity was too much for him. He never could answer that. Sometimes she used to talk to him, and weep as she talked. He says, "I flung out of the house with an oath—but I wept, too, when I got in the street. Sympathy is the powerful engine of a mother." Yes, there is a power in her love, when it is reinforced by the grace of God, to reach and bring down the most stubborn heart; it is a power that goes miles deeper than pulpit appeals, for it links itself with the primal instincts of our nature. If every parent were thus faithful in prayer and winsome example the home of natural birth would become the place of the new birth, and children—instead of running loose on the open common of sin to be pursued by "revival efforts" in after years—would be led early to Jesus and into his church fold.

"Take this child away and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages," said the Egyptian princess to Jochebed, the mother of Moses. She got her wages in the joys a mother feels when she yields up a part of herself to sustain her darling child; she got them in the love of the babe she nursed; she got them in the glorious service which her son wrought for Israel in after years. She was paid in the heavenly coin with which God pays good mothers.

When God lays a new-born babe in the arms of a mother he says to her heart, "Take this child and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages." The answer of maternal love should be, "O God, thou has put thy noblest workmanship into my hands. I accept the precious trust. I will shelter this young life under thy mercy seat. I will be truthful that it may never learn falsehood. I will nurse this soul in its infancy with the sincere milk of love, that in after years it may bear strong meat for strong service of God and righteousness. O Heavenly Father, make my life in harmony with thyself, that this young life may reflect thy blessed image in following my example!"

To such pious fidelity, God offers the highest wages; he pays the heart's claim in the heart's own coin. Faithful Hannah found her great reward in Samuel's great career. Moses on the Mount was the "wages" of the poor Hebrew mother who cradled him in her basket of rushes. St. Augustine's mighty service for the Gospel was the best reward that God could give Monica; our Washington was God's splendid recompense to Washington's good mother. The Lord never breaks his covenant with those who fulfill their covenant with him.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.

"A Good Investment." This subject ought to attract the average reader, since good investments are what a great many people are looking out for. But, my dear reader, do not let your interest in this article wane, when you find that I do not mean that you can get large money returns from the investment I am writing about. Go with me in these lines, patiently, persistently, to the end, and I will try to make it plain to you that this is really a paying proposition.

Then, as to the investment: you may put in time, personal influence, money, or property. Any or all of these may be contributed to the righteous and much-needed work of providing comfortable support for aged and disabled, retired preachers, and the widows and dependent children of those men who have died in the traveling ministry. For, of all the sad phases of our great Church work, the saddest is this, which relates to the persistent neglect or oversight of the old men and women who have done most to make our Church what it is in glorious history and large influence and usefulness to the world.

There can be no sort of question that investment in this holy work will yield large and satisfying dividends. But you inquire, "How will it pay?" First, it will pay liberally in building up Christianity and your Church by strengthening the Christian ministry. It is our deliberate opinion that the efficiency of the ministry in our Church would be increased from 10 per cent to 25 per cent were ample and adequate provision made for old age retirement. In the second place, it will bring large comfort and satisfaction to the "Veterans of the Cross" in their last days of decline and dependence. It will help to give them their just dues. In the third place, it will be a means of grace to you, personally, and will pay large returns in the consciousness that you have aided in a greatly needed work, which will be a means of comfort to many people and a blessing to mankind in general. Then, remember that whatever you put into the Superannuate Endowment Fund, directly or indirectly, will remain there for the coming years, to be a permanent source of help and benefit to the worthy workers who have given their lives for the cause of Christ and the Church. And, so, your contribution, whether of money or influence, will be a perpetual contribution to this good interest of our Methodism.

Let me be more specific still. Some one may read this who may not know what he could do, or how he might render the aid called for. To such, we gladly furnish literature which will give the necessary information; and one of the best ways to help the cause is to distribute this literature, which we furnish from the office free. You can talk of this great work to others. You can make a personal donation to the Fund, and every dollar counts. Give to it while you are able, even though but a little at a time. You can render further assistance by buying an annuity bond, the Board paying you interest during life, you leaving the principal with the Fund after your decease. Our annuitants are happy with the arrangement. No word of complaint or regret is heard from them. Still further aid can be given by deeding property to the Board for the Fund, retaining a life interest in it. We have several cases of this class. Then, at the last, if you have not done as much for the Fund as you desired, you can make a bequest. Many would do this if their attention were drawn to the subject at the proper time. A gentleman told me he knew of a good woman of wealth who was anxious to do something of this kind, and, he said, she would doubtless have given $20,000 or $25,000 if some one had called her attention to the matter. So, if you will be persuaded to render help in any way, address the undersigned, and he will cooperate with you.

UNION OF THE TWO METHODISMS.

J. W. Beeson, A. M., LL. D.

It seems to me that the greatest danger to the Southern Church that could come from a union with the Church, North, is from the kind of theology that Church is teaching through its Conference Course and through its higher institutions of learning. If it does not matter what is taught our ministers, nor what they preach to our people, all other difficulties, great as they are, might be surmounted. This Church greatly predominates in numbers and would naturally set the standards of theology. One needs only to examine the books in the course for young preachers in that Church to see the danger ahead. Vanderbilt was a greater curse than a blessing to our Church because of its questionable theology the last ten or fifteen years before we lost that institution, which event was a great blessing. Since we could not reform, convert or regenerate Vanderbilt, to lose it was a blessing. It is difficult to keep the course of study for young preachers in the Southern Church as pure and free from taint as it should be. Dominated by greater numbers of the Northern Church, the modern theology would be forced upon us with increasing rapidity. This is the greatest danger of union.

The Negro problem is delicate, but not really dangerous. Social ecclesiastical mingling could never be forced upon Southern people, whatever be the legal status of affairs. But the new and dangerous theology could be forced upon us through the course of study required of young ministers. Let us beware of that danger.

We need deeper spirituality more than large numbers and greater machinery. The further Methodism gets from deep spiritual teaching and living the less of power and usefulness she will exert upon nations and individuals, no matter how rapidly she may multiply her millions in membership and in wealth.

That God may guide us safely through the breakers should be our earnest prayer.

Meridian, Miss.

A PLEA FOR THE OLD VETERANS.

By Rev. John B. Culpepper.

The world is so much wiser than the Church. If you want proof of this, only look at the by-products in the coal departments, in cotton seed oil, and nearly everywhere. What was once thrown onto the scrap-pile is now worked over, and some of it is more useful in its second and third adjustment than in the first.

Boys are making money in many cities by gathering up old paper and rags. They even gather up the cigar stumps, and old quids, and dry them out, grind them up, put salt on them and sell them to the snuff-dippers. Pursuant of this thought of gathering up the fragments let us take a look at the Methodist Church, and her thrown-away products. There are literally thousands of supernumeraries, superannuated preachers, and local preachers, who don't preach any more, and as the territory is all taken up, or included in some pastoral charge, there is no place for them to work. We have also an innumerable army of old choir leaders. Sunday school teachers, superintendents, stewards, and other members, who await one thing—Death. Then a few kind words will be mumbled over them, and that is all. God left them here, often for thirty years, after the Church pronounced them useless, or undesirable.

Germany has taken charge of all her citizens, from five years old up, and the mother, with a babe in arms, is given something to do for the empire, and as she lies there by her babe and sews for the men at the front, she knows that she is a part of the whole. The old men and women are given remunerative work, and praised when they do it well, and rebuked for shortcoming. This makes living, real life. They have men and women scourging the country for workers and none are passad over as useless. They have many wounded, old, bedridden, but none who cannot work and pay their way. If one is wounded at the front, the very best medical skill is given, so that sixty-seven per cent of them recover, and are back at the front in a few days. Every department of life has representatives from both sexes, all colors, sizes and conditions. Think of it! A nation with the motto: "No idle citizens—work for all!"

I witness, at every Annual Conference, men begging for work, and often crying and insisting that they are not worn out. These superannuates were believed, when they told the Church that God had called them to preach, but not one of them is retained because they now plead that they still feel the call. The Church which gave them work at the first, should still find a place for them. I am not pleading for a larger retiring fund, but I am opposed to the thought of retiring or even excusing anybody. I read a wail last week from a superannuate, of South Georgia, who had to cease working years ago. It was a "sure" wail. I saw a preacher at the South Georgia Conference, leaning against the fence, crying because they made him superannuate. He begged for just one more year.

When men become inefficient physically, we send for the doctor. When mother or father becomes inefficient, the children look after their diet, their room, their rest, and soon they are back on their job. When a business man becomes inefficient, they send him for a little rest, give him lighter work, or an assistant, and he rallies, and is good for years. When a Methodist preacher becomes what they call inefficient, they retire him.

What ought to be done? Make the old preachers Pastor Emeritus to some city charge. Put the old preacher in a parsonage and let him lead some of the prayer meetings; let him put a ten-cent edition of our Discipline in every Methodist home. It is sorely needed. Let him pastorate, for one man cannot do a tithe of it. Let him chase the Eddyites, the Russellites, and the quacking geese and ducks of our territory. Who is better prepared to drive strange doctrines from our midst?

We are in need of some one to lecture the classes for membership; and so to drill and instruct them that even a child can give a reason for their hope. Behold our waste, through removals and undeposited letters! Think of what one of these wise old men could do, as station and circuit colporteur. We are not using our old folks, so I propose a new church, to be called The Church of the Veterans. We should want our old, worn out and retired Bishops to make our appointments. We should take for our secretary one who had been retired from the young folks' church. We would not allow the word superannuate or supernumerate, or too old, in our Discipline or dictionary. We should report for duty, to go anywhere, as laymen or preachers. We should move, as old folks, at the wisdom of our appointing power. We should colonize, at his suggestion, only with Christ and souls in view. We would do anything but quit. We would agree to anything but being called worn-out and of no account. We have men among us who superannuated so long ago that if they happen to attend an Annual Conference and get up in a love feast, ninety per cent of the preachers now running things ask who they are. I think if they looked at the gray stuff inside a fellow's head, rather than on the outside, there would be more old preachers receiving appointments. We simply ask for work. As there is none in the Church where we gave our life, nearly to its meridian, let us seek it. We don't want an Old Folks' Home, but an Old Folks' Vineyard.

Many years ago, near Savannah, Ga., a young wife and mother who had taken charge of the old home since her parents' death, said to Sam one morning out in the garden: "Sam, I want you to dig up this rosebush here by the walk. It has run too far, it is scraggy and ugly. It is not in keeping with those younger, beautiful vines." Sam said, "Yessum." Next morning the bush was still there. She said: "Sam, you have not obeyed me about this old hush; dig it up to-day." Sam said, "Yessum." Next morning, coming into the garden, she called Sam, and said, "Sam, I am not going to run you off the place, because you have been in the family so long, but you have got to mind me. Go bring that spade, yonder." "Yessum." He brought it. "Now place it right there at the edge of that vine." "Yessum." Now, put your foot on it." "Yessum." "Now push it up to the handle." Sam twisted about, and bent over it, until his mistress said, "Sam, you are not trying to dig that vine up." Sam straightened up, and said, "Missee, I jess can't do it! My foot takes the weakest every time I goes to push. Misses, I been here long time. When Ole Mars went off to bring your mother home as his purty bride, I got roses for de table, an' de parlor. I got 'em off dis bush. When Ole Miss sent me out fer de nicest roses, fer Ole Mars button-hole, an fer de table, I come right here. Den, when you was born, I tuck a rose off dis bush, an' slip it in your cute hand when Ole Miss sent for me to see you. Den when young Mars come to see you and you send for nice flowers, I always come right here. Then when Ole Mars and Ole Miss die, the same day, the neighbors come and get the nicest flowers from dis bush. Den, when I take you to see her grave, I always gets de nicest flowers right here. Den, when your little boy die so sudden, lass year, I come here an' get a little rose an' put it in his hand. It is in dar now, I specs. Miss, I'll do anything fer you I can, but my ole boot jess naterally won't push. You'll hatter scuse me, fer not being able to dig it up."

Then the young woman cried and said: "Sam, thank you for not digging it up. We will scaffold it and fertilize it, and let it live on till it dies a natural death."

Ah me! These old preachers! They married the young men and maidens of our Church. They went with us to bury your dead. They sat up with us in our grief, and they led our sons and daughters to God, and they dedicated our homes. They preached us into temperance and morality and hope. The Church and the home, and the very graveyard, have grown up under their care and love. Yes, they are a little angular, and look a little seedy. Yes, they have "scrter" overlain these modern walks. Yes, they do look a little different; but they have been doing something. They just want a place to grow a few more roses; and since the haughty, beautiful, up-to-date daughter insists, against old Sam's tears and entreaties, that the old bush has to come up. I beg that a place be arranged over there in that old broom-sage patch for it. We will break up that fallow ground, and fertilize the place, and bring all the old "out-of-place," and "out-of-date," and "in-the-way" bushes over here, and we will call it The Garden of Old Roses.

Here shall they put forth a new life, and shed a richer fragrance. Here will their old voices, growing young again with us, new-born of work and fellowship, and handclasp, create a new enthusiasm, such as was faintly adumbrated when the children of Israel left Egypt for the promised land, and when it was shouted throughout Chaldea that the captives were liberated, and were to return home and rebuild their broken farms and vineyards. "Their mouth was filled with laughter, and their tongue with singing. Then said they, The Lord hath done great things for them."

So it shall be with you in your renewed life. Bless your hearts, you always felt that there was work for you but could not get at it. Here it is! Come into your own, and leave outside the thought that you are old or useless. As the old cow gives the most cream, as the old palm bears the sweetest fruit; as God always set great store by age, and its wisdom and other graces, so do you come into a larger and happier life. We are no more to plan to die, but to plant, and build, and cultivate, and harvest. As I think about what you are to the world, and to God, and how he wants to use you more than ever, I almost envy you your readiness for this larger investment of your ransomed powers. But as I am only sixty-seven, I am not yet eligible, for this is to be strictly an Old Folks' Church. But, when I am seventy-five it will be the joy of my life to knock at your gates and ask for work, and communion, and fellowship.

RED RIVER LETTER.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D. D.

I'm in a peck of trouble, Meek. Possibly you may know of some way that I may relieve the situation. I have just returned from a delightful trip to Georgetown, Tex., where I went to speak at the Summer School of Theology. While I was there, among many other friends, I met one who deliberately accused me of being a "reactionary." That is a little softer word he probably thinks than "mossback," but it means the same thing. And there is a gentleman not far from your office, whom I highly esteem, who thinks the same thing, and has had the cheek to tell me so. Now, the sole reason they assign for this derogatory opinion is that I do not accept and fall in with the new-fangled notions which they call "progress." Among these notions are many of the results of the so-called "Higher Criticism" of the Bible; Feminism, with its woman suffrage policy; the union of the two Methodisms, with its acceptance of the doctrine of the equality of the Negro with the white man; and various other things, such as the apotheosis of Lincoln, and so forth, and so forth.

I don't feel lonesome, for I am in mighty good company. If I am not mistaken, both Burke and Pitt stood firm against the French Revolution in favor of the old order, yet both were "democrats" in the best sense of that term, and champions of the rights of man. But they realized that mere change is not "progress," and that a reverence for the past is the surest safeguard against the radicalism that would change everything in the desperate hope to get something better. We are in the age of the greatest transition that the world has ever known. The two ancient principles of government, autocracy and democracy, are now in the last great and mortal combat for supremacy, and the whole world is drawn into the struggle, and will be affected by the issues.

We all admit that everything is being "shaken;" but are there not "things which cannot be shaken?" Is he to be set down as a "reactionary," "mossback," "old fossil," and so forth, who takes his stand firmly on "those things which cannot be shaken," and is not swept off his feet by the flood of fanaticism that topples so many ancient things into ruin? Of course, I may be wrong in my advocacy of certain things; but my point is that my standing for the old against the new ideas does not in itself prove that I am wrong and the champions of the so-called "new" ideas are right. If I class myself aright, I'm a "conservative." I say "so-called new" ideas. But many of them are not new; they are as old as the history of man on the planet. The devil tempted Eve to assert her supposed "rights" in the beginning, and you know what came of that. He is tempting them now with the same old bait, and people call that "progress" which Heaven condemned at the start. Any man who has read Roman history knows that this woman question is not new, and knows what it did for society under the Caesars. Is a man a "reactionary" who warns another that the bridge is unsafe and will go down under him? I do not claim a courage that others do not have, but I do say that it takes a good deal more courage to stand up against these "new ideas" than to adopt and advocate them. You say anything against woman suffrage in a public speech, and you wont get any bouquets, and will be lucky if they don't punch you with the "pointed end" of their parasols. And yet what does the average woman know of the larger aspects of the woman question? The extent of her knowledge is that there is a dead rat in the alley, and government by men is so inefficient that it is left there; let her vote, and she will see that no dead rats are left in the alley. That is very practical, and we share with her in the contempt of a government by men that allows dead rats to lie around loose. But it is not the part of wisdom to set the city on fire to get rid of a dead rat. So of other things. I still believe in a personal God, instead of the "Cosmic Force" of the New Theology which "advanced thought" has put in his place, and so on.

They had a great meeting at Georgetown, the best, they said, of any yet held. I saw Dr. Hyer's schoolhouse in the distance. Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Princeton, Cornell, Emory, SMU-t! In the name of reason can't we get them to change the name of "SMU" to Marvin, or Maury, or Lamar? Almost any name would be an improvement on the one chosen for the university at Dallas. And yet, Meek, some of the fellows who have been so "narrow" as to give a "university" a name that limits its usefulness largely to one denomination charge me with being "narrow," controlled by ancient "prejudices," and a "reactionary!"

I'm not bragging on my farm now. This drought has taken all the enthusiasm out of the case. When a man gets only ten bushels of beans where he expected to get fifty he is not in a shouting mood. Especially when his corn does not even promise respectable nubbins. At this writing there is no sign of any relief, and the food situation is a very serious one for this section. However, my sweet potatoes are fine, and I hope to make a second crop of Irish potatoes, and do my part in helping to feed the Allies and overturn Prussian autocracy.

GRAIN AND GROG.

It is not right at any time, and especially at a time like this, and no one can reasonably justify it, to crush hundreds of millions of bushels of the best food products, grains that will make bread, into the stuff of which to make drink. Still less is it right at any time to turn this food product into a form which weakens manhood, lessens efficiency, impoverishes the home, curses humanity. If our country is warring for liberty, conscience and humanity, let it with a strong hand put an end to the destruction of materials needful for food. Let it stop the enfeebling of our men and the destruction of body, mind and soul which the liquor manufacturers and liquor traffic produce. Now is the time, if there ever was a time, for dealing with this matter with a strong hand.—The Presbyterian Journal.

BAR.

By Scriptor.

It will soon bar you from every skilled industry. Many of the big steel mills and factories of every kind are taking the stand against liquor. "No drinking on or off hours," is their rule, and with many, for an employe to visit a saloon is considered sufficient cause for dismissal. The big Pennsylvania Railroad, with 125,000 employes, has banished liquor and now employs an army of "spotters" to see that its prohibition rules are effective. And the Pennsylvania system is only one out of many railroads that are taking the same stand. If you drink, you can't get on the force. That settles it.

"First Over the Bars." That's the slogan and the catchy trade-mark of a famous brand of whisky. There might be blown into the bottle of every brand of whisky another trade-mark, "First Behind the Bars." Behind the bars—of a cell. It is the best stuff with which to make inmates for cells that there is made. Absolutely guaranteed. Statistics prove it. Charity organizations everywhere that make scientific study of crime are unanimous in their conclusions that the greatest single cause is drink. A judge in this Western city above mentioned makes the statement that ninety-five per cent of all the criminal business that comes through his court is caused directly or indirectly by drink.

Surely, young man, if you line up to the bar, it will bar you to the best there is in life.—Central Christian Advocate.

THE STARS AND STRIPES.

Only some strips of red and white
And some stars on a ground of blue;
Only a little cotton flag.
Is it anything more to you?

Oh, yes, indeed! For beneath its folds
You are safe on land or sea;
It stands for America, brave and strong,
No matter where it may be.

It stands for a land where God is King,
Where His peace and His truth are free.
Let us love it well and keep it pure,
As our banner of liberty.

TAKING AWAY THE FREEDOM OF THE CHURCH

By Bishop W. A. Candler, in the "Atlanta Journal."

[The following article expresses convictions which are becoming prevalent and which are pressing to the front for discussion.]

The churches of our country are suffering from a multiplied number of parasitic organizations which are sapping their freedom and sucking their funds. These parasitic bodies emphasize their interdenominational character and prate much about what they call, with misleading pretence of charity and broad-mindedness, "Christian unity." By their very nature they have to assume an interdenominational attitude; for one church would not be enough to satisfy their cravings for power and their lust for funds. Moreover, such an attitude appeals to the support of that class of mistaken minds who dislike all churches, and yet wish to preserve some sort of semblance of devotion to Christianity—the class of men who profess great breadth of view and have no depth of conviction, and who mistake vagueness for virtue.

These parasitic organizations might be called syndicates of syncretists, but in many instances they are too small to be called syndicates and wholly unworthy of being dignified with the name of syncretists. Yet they remind one of the syncretists who operated in the Graeco-Roman world during the first century of the Christian era. Like the syncretists of that age, they have a certain skill in the making of mosaic creeds out of all sorts of fragments of belief, and their religion presents the appearance of a Joseph's coat of many colors. They imitate the shallow-minded pro-consul, Gellius, who invited the rival philosophers of Athens to come to terms, offering himself as arbiter entirely competent to pass upon and settle their differences of belief. In like manner the committees of these parasitic organizations constitute themselves as councils to conciliate all the churches, and then control the bodies which they have conciliated.

They are thoroughly worldly in their spirit and methods, mimicking "big business" and appropriating its pompous phraseology. They rely on combinations to convert the world rather than upon Christ's power, and the consecration of the saints to His service. Such methods fall in well with a commercial age, in which "trusts" and syndicates abound, defying the laws of both God and man. But these methods are most tyrannical whenever they can be, and are injurious always.

Like the men of "big business," they claim that their organizations "save waste" and "conserve energy;" but whatever may be the justice of such a claim when made by the men of "big business," it is wholly groundless when put forth by the men of these parasitic organizations. They make waste, and they enfeeble energy. They hold manifold conventions of the most useless and expensive sort, and thereby induce the Churches to pay for their junketing journeys. In summer, the mountains are filled with their meetings, and at other seasons they fly here and there like birds of passage, now sailing over sunlit seas, beyond the chilling blasts of winter, or assembling at resorts, which otherwise they could never visit. Their offices, secretaries, stenographers, and printers' bills are even more expensive than their journeys over land and sea, and the funds required for these expenses are drawn from the churches to whom they assume to dictate plans and policies.

They carefully and frequently assert that their functions are only "advisory" to the churches, and that they have no legislative authority, but this assertion must be taken with many degrees of allowance and considerable qualification. These parasitic bodies aspire to exercise a sort of overlordship over the churches, and they realize this ambitious aspiration whenever and wherever they can.

With respect to some interests, a number of the churches have become mere appanages of these organizations of overlords; the territory in which they do missionary work, for example, is delimited for them by the overlords, and the mission fields are marked off with corn-row processes. A Methodist Board of Missions may not operate in one area, while a Baptist Board may not labor in another, and a Presbyterian Board may not plant churches in still another.

If, under providential constraint, a Methodist convert removes to the region occupied by the Baptists, he must change his church connection, or have none at all, and, in turn, if a Baptist, for any cause, takes up residence in the area in which the Methodists operate, he must change his faith or have no church membership there. Can faith be other than feeble when it thus conforms to the character of the chameleon? Hardly.

In the interest of the freedom of faith, and the sincerity of faith, it is time for the churches to throw off the yoke of these overlords. Otherwise our Christianity will become colorless and characterless.

Strength of character, in both individuals and churches, is in direct proportion to strength and definiteness of conviction. Mergers, in which men renounce their convictions, result in nothing better than forceless fusions. Good men and great men can not be made by any such process. Power for the highest and best service is not secured by throwing overboard principles. The zealous advocate for truth and right, as he sees it, is the good man, and the sincere man; and God wants such men for the work of the Kingdom of Heaven; He can not use men who believe nothing, or who care little for what they believe.

If the process of agglomeration, under the pressure of the overlords of the churches, continues much longer, the outcome will be an almost worthless amalgam in the home field, and the reproduction of the same type in the foreign field. In the end, that may mean a convictionless and compromise Christianity in what are now heathen lands which future generations will have to reform at great expense and with much difficulty.

For every purpose of a wise and brotherly cooperation, the churches of our country can deal with one another directly far better than through the mediation of the parasitic organizations which sap their freedom and suck their funds. Christian brotherhood and comity can be had without submitting the churches to the control of overlording bodies. No anti-denominational and self-constituted league of peace is necessary to constrain the churches to mutual love and respect.

WAR RELIEF FOR MISSIONARIES.

By Rev. W. W. Pinson, D.D.

The first thirty days of our effort to raise the modest sum of $20,000 for the relief of our missionaries have passed; in the meantime financial conditions with them have grown no better, but rather worse. During this time our Government has sold $2,000,000,000 worth of Liberty Bonds. The American people have given $100,000,000 for the Red Cross service. These are the responses of a patriotic people to the demands of war-ways of "doing our bit" for the soldiers that fight for us. Shall Christian loyalty and brotherhood fall short of patriotism and fail those who represent us at the front in this great spiritual warfare? One naturally would have expected that the whole $20,000 asked for would have been in hand in thirty days. Evidently our people are not taking this matter as seriously as it deserves. Letters from our missionaries continue to show great embarrassment and distress. Surely we will not delay longer to respond to this need. To fail to give this money would be to indicate a lack of sympathy with our great missionaries, which would be discouraging.

We have received to date 378 responses, ranging from 40 cents to $1,000, and amounting to $6,024.41. We have received one donation of $1,000, one for $500, two for $200, ten for $100, and eight for $50, and 356 contributions averaging a little more than $8 each. Thus the larger part has come in small amounts and the accompanying letters in many cases indicate a spirit of self-sacrifice that is beautiful and touching. We thank these friends in the name of our missionaries and their wives and children.

We need more large donations and a multitude of small ones. We wish our missionaries to know that a large number of our people have come to their relief.

What we are asking will only furnish partial relief. It will still leave the missionaries to bear the larger part of the sacrifice. But it will show our willingness to share and lighten their burdens.

Send in without delay any amount, large or small, to J. D. Hamilton, Treasurer, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

REV. R. M. DAVIS.

Some Words of Love and Affection.

By Rev. Ben P. Jaco.

When I was only a lad, a sudden death of a former member of a near neighbor's family brought us all in much sorrow to a funeral service at Harmony Campground, where Rev. R. M. Davis, as the pastor of the deceased, made the talk. I shall never forget his striking appearance, his carefully measured words, and the restrained but deep emotion of the man.

To me he was a man to be looked up to, and I was never disappointed in my confidence in this noble soul. When I joined the North Mississippi Conference, I was thrown with him on my second charge frequently. This helpful association caused me to seek his company, because he always helped me to be a better man and minister. He could unravel my problems in my course of study; he could teach me more philosophy, psychology, and theology, in a week than any man I ever met. What matchless powers of analysis he possessed! What aptitude of accurate illustration! What tenderness and tact in leading a young man's thoughts!

In conversation one day he gave this illustration: "A bird can not fly in a vacuum; he must have an atmosphere to beat upon with his wings. Now, God's grace is the atmosphere for the soul of man, upon which it beats with the wings of faith and rises by the buoyancy of the divine gift."

All of his illustrations and humorous sayings were purely original—not like anything one ever heard before. I have heard his sayings used after they had gone far out into the world—far enough to be given as anonymous.

It was love's hoon each year when he would let me help him in a revival meeting, because the whole week would be a love feast, as that good man would bare his soul to me as we tried to do God's work.

I visited him twice in his days of affliction and found him cheerful each time. So bright was he, that those who went to comfort him were comforted themselves. To him, to die was to go to heaven, and heaven was home. So he talked triumphantly about going home. He has gone home—and how we shall miss him!

But the thought that we shall all go on pretty soon opens great things to us by anticipation. What joy to go where such souls as his are! Just a few such souls would make heaven great.

Lexington, Miss.

AN EVER-ENRICHING LIFE.

If we live near Christ, and draw our life from Him, then we may blend the hopes of youth with the experience and memory of age; be at once calm and joyous, wise and strong, preserving the blessedness of each stage of life into that which follows, and thus at last posessing the sweetness and the good of all at once. We may not only bear fruit in old age, but have blossoms, fruit and flowers—the varying product and adornment of every stage of life united in our characters.—A. Maclaren.

The firmest friendships have been formed in mutual adversity, as iron is most strongly united by the fiercest flame.—Colton.

The Home Circle

MR. CAN'T AND MR. CAN.

"Oh, Mr. Can't from Mr. Can
Is a very different sort of man.
For Mr. Can he always tries,
And Mr. Can't he always cries;
Now Mr. Can gets many a blow,
But he gets the best in the end, you know,
While Mr. Can't gets nothing at all—
For he's down too low to suffer a fall.

"Oh, Mr. Can gets up with a grin,
And he says: 'I'm bound in the end to win.'
But Mr. Can't is a pitiful sight,
For he's whipped before he's begun to fight;
And he says it puzzles him quite a lot,
Why some can win and some cannot.

"Oh, poor Mr. Can't, he never knew
The secret I'm going to whisper to you—
That you can win if you only try,
And you certainly can't if you only cry,
And that is the reason why Mr. Can
From Mr. Can't is a different man."

A CHILDREN'S BOOK SHOP

A book shop devoted wholly to children's books has lately been opened in Boston. It is called the "Book Shop for Boys and Girls," and the books it sells have been carefully chosen from the literature of all countries. Over 4,000 volumes of story and picture books, poetry, description, and so on, are on its catalogues, and represent selections made from the books of twenty nations. The Boys' and Girls' Book Shop is housed in a beautiful home-like room, with growing plants and an open fire, and low, comfortable chairs, where the children may sit and taste the wares before buying. Then once a week there is a story hour. —East and West.

THE LEGEND OF A FLOWER

There is a beautiful legend that long ago, when Nature's great loom had ceased its spinning and the flowers blossomed, each one was assigned by the Creator its place to live and grow. Bands of buttercups trooped in yellow waves to the meadows; the silent lily's pallid cheek was pressed close to the heaving breast of the water. Everywhere bright-winged flowers took up their stations on the waiting earth—everywhere except on the lonely hills. Then He who named their places asked softly, "Who will be content to dwell in these barren spots?" A shy, unheeded blossom answered, "Where'er Thou sendest me I will abide." Then said the Creator: "Thy race shall be forever blessed, because thou art content with a lowly place." And still on the tiny, coral-tinted flower that blessing abides. Every spring many people eagerly search the hillsides for the fragrant blossoms of the humble little trailing arbutus.—Christian Intelligencer.

USE YOUR HEAD

"Get me a pail of water, son," called Jamie's mother.

Reluctantly Jamie came from the depths of his absorbing book to answer presently, "All right, mother, as soon as I can find my book-mark." With a finger between the book's pages Jamie searched high and low. Finally muttering, "Aw, I can't find the old thing," he turned down the corner of a page and left the room, where his Uncle Richard was reading.

When Jamie returned his uncle was slowly turning the pages of the pretty book he had put down. He noticed several other books on his uncle's lap also. "I've been glancing through some of your school and story books, Jamie," explained his uncle with an odd smile, "and from the turned-down corners and the number of pencil marks I find, I judge you must lose your book-mark very often."

Jamie's face reddened. He did not like to have his jolly Uncle Richard discover any of his shortcomings. He knew that some of his schoolbooks were pretty well spattered with checkmarks, words and sentences indicating what and where the lesson had been each day. "I have to mark the lesson or I won't remember where it is," apologized Jamie. "I know it makes the book look bad, and, of course, the teacher doesn't like it, but I've got to do it if she won't let me whisper and find out where the lesson is. I only turn down the corner of a page in my story books."

"Maybe that's only because you don't have a pencil handy," laughed his Uncle Richard. Then with a serious face his uncle asked: "But why use any mark at all, Jamie?"

"Why, how'll I remember where the place is?" exclaimed Jamie in astonishment.

"What's your head for?" queried his uncle. "Mark the place or lesson in your head and then the mark'll never get lost. And besides your books won't look as though the baby or the puppy had had hold of them."

"But I just can't remember the place," protested Jamie, "if I don't mark it in some way."

"All fol-de-rol, boy," cried his uncle; "I haven't used a book-mark in twenty years, yet I never have any trouble in finding my place."

"Well, I don't see how you can do it," said Jamie. "I can't."

"I just remember where it is and turn right to it, that's all," answered his uncle. "Listen, Jamie. I used to think the same as you do: that I had to have a mark. But, thank goodness, a friend opened my eyes, and I learned to use my head a little more and my pencil and fingers a little less. And I've been glad of it, many a time! At the start I stopped putting in any mark at all. Of course at first I had some trouble in remembering what the lesson was or where I had left off in a story book, but when I knew that I had to depend on my head and not on a mark of some kind, I soon learned to remember. I noted carefully, before I closed the book, just where it was and what I had read last. Now I never seem to think about it at all when I close the book, yet I turn to the right place at once the next time. You can learn to do the same if you make up your mind to it. Try it, Jamie, and no longer be one of those slaves to a book-mark that is constantly getting lost."

"I'm going to," said Jamie earnestly. "Why, I'll get a much higher mark in deportment if I don't have to whisper about where the lesson is; and then my books will look a whole lot better without all those marks."

"Right, Jamie," declared his uncle. "Just use your head."

CHURCH ETIQUETTE.

As long as there are churches there will be a church etiquette, and very many who would not think for a moment of offending at a social function, do not seem at all concerned when attending a sacred service. The following rules form a good foundation:

1. If possible, be on time. You need at least five minutes, after coming, to get warm or cool, to compose your body and mind and to whisper a prayer before the service begins.

2. Never pass up the aisle during prayer or Scripture reading. If you do, your presence will distract the minds of many in the congregation.

3. Be devout in every attitude. All whispering and noticing members in the congregation or choir should be studiously avoided. Find the hymn, and sing it if you can. Share the book with your neighbor. If in a strange church conform to its customs of worship.

4. If the sermon has begun take a seat near the door, no matter if you are "at home."

5. Be thoughtful for the comfort of others. Take the inside of the pew if you are the first to enter, and leave all vacant space at the end next to the aisle.

6. Speak a bright, cheery word to as many as possible at the close of the service. If you are a stranger, ask one of the ushers to introduce you to the pastor or to some of the church officers. This will always insure a hearty welcome.

7. Never put on your overcoat, overshoes or wraps during the closing hymn, and do not make a rush for the door immediately after the benediction is pronounced. There should be no loud talking and jesting before the service begins, or after it is concluded. They are as much out of place at the house of God as at a house of mourning.—Southern Churchman.

THE UNBOLTED DOOR.

An aged widow sat alone
Beside her narrow hearth;
Her silent cottage never heard
The ringing laugh of mirth.
Six children once had sported here;
But now the churchyard snow
Fell softly on five little graves
Turf-covered long ago.

She mourned them all with patient love;
But since, her eyes had shed
Far bitterer tears than those which dewed
The faces of the dead.
The child which had been spared to her,
Her darling and her pride,
The woeful mother lived to wish
That she had also died.

Those little ones beneath the snow,
Not lost, but gone before,
Faith taught her all was well with them,
And then the pang was o'er;
But when she thought where Katie was,
She saw the city's glare,
The painted mask of bitter joy
Which need gives sin to wear.

Without, the snow was thick and white,
No step had fallen there;
Within, she sat beside the fire,
Each thought a silent prayer—
When suddenly, behind her seat,
Unwonted sounds she heard,
As though a hesitating hand
The rustic latch had stirred.

She turned, and there the wanderer stood,
With snow-flakes in her hair—
A faded woman, wild and worn,
The ghost of something fair.
And then upon the mother's cheek
The withered brow was laid—
"Can God and you forgive me all?
For I have sinned," she said.

The widow dropped upon her knees
Before the fading fire,
And thanked the Lord, whose loving hand
Had granted her desire.
The daughter kneeled beside her too,
Tears streaming from her eyes,
And prayed, "God help me to be good
To mother ere she dies."

They did not talk about the sin,
The shame, the bitter woe;
They spoke about those little graves
And things of long ago.
And then the daughter raised her eyes,
And said, in tender tone,
"Why did you keep your door unbarred,
When you were quite alone?"

"My child!" the widow said, and smiled,
A smile of love and pain,
"I kept it so, lest you should come,
And turn away again.
I've waited for you all the while—
A mother's love is true;
Yet it is but the shadow type
Of His who died for you."

Editorial

MISREPRESENTING BISHOP HOSS.

By the Editor.

When the report pertaining to Methodist unification was for a few minutes before our last General Conference at Oklaboma City, Bishop E. E. Hoss was presiding, and just before the vote was put (there had been no discussion of the report of consequence) Dr. W. N. Ainsworth of Georgia, from the floor, called upon the Bishop to make some remarks. Bishop Hoss then in a purely extemporaneous manner spoke for perhaps three or four minutes, and, in the course of his utterance, said: "I think you are moving on right lines. This is not final; nobody dreams it is final; no one man is wise enough to frame a final plan of union for all Methodism. We should go on, and after a time Almighty God will put his hand in, and this thing will come to pass."

The extreme unionists have seized upon this pronouncement made by Bishop Hoss and have tried to make it appear that it commits the Bishop to the liberal program for union which they are now seeking to work out—a program that apparently has little in common with the Oklahoma scheme (which, with the exception of the recommendation concerning the Negro Methodists, was that which had been matured by the original Joint Commission of three Methodist Churches—the Church, North, the Church, South, and the Methodist Protestants). It is well known that Bishop Hoss does not put any such construction upon his deliverance at Oklahoma City, and he affirms that he had reference to the carrying forward of the scheme to which he had devoted so much time and labor. Surely so great and good a man as Bishop Hoss should be accorded the right to interpret the significance of his own statements; and, in our opinion, while some of his detached declarations may be made to appear to place him in accord with the ultra-unionists, we do not think that there is any valid ground for endeavoring to create that impression or for alleging that he has been inconsistent. In substantiation of this view, we quote somewhat extendedly from Bishop Hoss's great address in reply to Bishop Cranston, when the original Joint Commission was in session in the winter of 1911:

"But if there is to be any closer union than now obtains, several things are necessary: 1. All the existing compacts, including those that were framed by the Cape May Commission and those that have since been framed by the Joint Commission on Federation, must first be honored, not in the breach, but in the observance of them. It is not worth while to enter into new covenants till we are ready, both in the letter and in the spirit, to observe the old ones. The Church that is faithless in one engagement will, if interest or convenience require it, be faithless in another, and does not deserve to be trusted. If it be said in answer to this dictum, that General Conferences cannot always control the actions of their agents, nor enforce the terms of their own voluntary contracts, then it only remains to further affirm that General Conferences which are so impotent are practicing a fraud when they make such contracts. This language is perfectly general in scope, and hits only those, but all those, who are in the way of it. Here I stand stubbornly, and from this position I will not budge an inch.

"2. Negotiations must not proceed upon the supposition, expressed or implied, that denominationalism as such is schismatic or sinful. Schism, in the New Testament meaning, is not separation from a Church, but a chronic and malignant quarrel inside of it. Some Protestants, including a few Methodists, have actually stolen the arguments of the Romanists and the High-Church Episcopalians concerning union, and are using it as if it were a new discovery. Do they not see that they are thereby canceling their own right to an ecclesiastical existence? If their contention be true, then it follows that Luther, Calvin, Knox, and Cranmer were all wrong, and their Roman antagonists all right. Nay, most of the pleas that are used to bolster up the plan for what is called 'the reunion of Christendom' would, if logically followed out, land us inevitably in the conclusion that Protestantism should abjure its past record and make a speedy peace with Rome. But there is nothing in the New Testament to justify any such view. Not one of the classical passages that are quoted to sustain it has any force. Our Lord, for example, never said that his sheep should all become of one fold. It was worth the revision of the New Testament to get that false translation out of John x:16. What the Lord did say was this: 'Other sheep I have which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be (not one fold, but) one flock and one Shepherd.' The unity of the flock depends not on the unity of the fold, but on the unity of the Shepherd. It would be an impossible thing to make one fold large enough to hold all Christ's sheep. Equally fallacious is the use that is sought to be made of our Lord's high priestly prayer in John xvii, and of the great paragraph on 'the seven unities' in Ephesians iv. But I have not time to notice them now. The conception of a world-wide Church under one authoritative head, whether that head be a pope, a council, a general assembly, or a general conference, is at war with the whole genius of Protestantism. That conception was not in the primitive Church any more than it was in the New Testament. I do not believe that in the first century anybody ever dreamed of it. It came later along with a flood of other errors and heresies. Human nature being what it is, such a Church as this would inevitably grow proud of its own bulk and obesity, and in the course of time would become, first, arrogant, then persecuting, and then rotten and corrupt. Denominationalism, within due limits, which men are to determine for themselves and nobody else is to determine for them, is one of the greatest safeguards of Christian purity. Not even as an ideal to be realized in the remote future do I look or pray for the abolition of it. Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty; and where there is liberty, there is sure to be diversity.

"3. We shall make no real progress toward the goal in view as long as we insist that the past separations among the Methodists have been wicked or evil. As I look at it, the providence of God has been in them all. The separation of the Methodist Protestants in 1824-28 was accompanied, it is true, by a great deal of unchristian acerbity on both sides. That, of course, was wrong. But good came of it. We are all indebted, largely indebted, to our Protestant brethren, and we have all paid them the homage of imitation. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1866, followed their example by giving laymen an equal representation in the General Conference and effective representation in the Annual Conferences, and the Methodist Episcopal Church moved later on in the same tracks. Still more earnestly do I hold to the opinion that the separation of 1844—'which was by consent and mutual'—was an epochal incident in the history of American Methodism, and a real contribution to the growth of the Kingdom of God in these United States. The General Conference which met in that year was not, as is commonly believed, made up of angry disputants. Having read the records again and again, and with the greatest care, I declare that, in my judgment, a more serious, conscientious, and devout company of men never met together on this continent. They moved slowly, and acted reluctantly, with heartaches and hot tears on their cheeks. The anger, the irritations, the unchristian conflicts came later, and might have been avoided. But the separation was designed to promote peace and brotherhood. Not even Charles Elliot, the author of 'The Great Secession,' was ever able to answer his own able speech in favor of it. It simply could not be avoided. Conditions had arisen which would have wrecked the Methodism of the North if it had remained in alliance with the South, and, as Stephen Olin pointed out in burning words, would have wrecked the Methodism of the South if it had remained in alliance with the North. As things turned out, the two Churches were set in right alignment with their own sections. God was surely in it, in spite of the human follies which accompanied it.

"4. I go a step further still, and make bold to say that any attempt at the present time to bring about a union by pressure would be foolish and futile. The advocates of union must understand that they have no legitimate instrument but persuasion, and that even this they must use in a spirit of love. Let those who fear God and who are controlled not by a lust for ecclesiastical empire, but by zeal for the redemption of his Kingdom, beware how they try to create division in the ranks of any Church that is not willing to merge itself in a larger organization. Any such move would provoke hot and righteous indignation, and would work an indefinite postponement of a complete unification. The sad experience of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church ought surely to teach us a lesson here. The result of a premature effort to force an unwilling element in that communion —whether a majority or simply a large minority —into an alliance that it did not relish, has ended in a long series of scandals. The same thing, on a much larger scale, would occur if a similar attempt were made to rush the consolidation of our Methodisms. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when it moves, and whichever way it moves, will move of its own unforced accord, and not in broken detachments, but in a solid body 2,000,000 strong. The suggestion that it may become necessary to reach the laymen by going over the heads of ministers is, if serious, sinister; and if not serious, silly. Our ministers and laymen have marched together too long to split into opposing camps now. That will come to pass on the day after the Greek Calends.

"5. If a real, vital, and permanent union is to be effected, each separate Church must be ready to make concessions, and this, too, not upon trifling points, but on matters of real importance. There must be no blinking of this fact, and no policy of shiftiness or maneuvering for advantage. Those who are most eager for union ought to be the first to say how far they are willing to go to obtain it. The mere intimation that either one of the Churches should absorb the other, maintaining meanwhile all of its own prized peculiarities, would be an impertinence. If organic union ever becomes a reality, it will consist not in the mere enlargement of any existing Church, but in the creation of a new Church. The Southern Methodists do not wish to absorb anybody, and they are not going to be absorbed. Many of us, at any rate, before submitting to that, will camp under God's kindly stars."

This ringing utterance shows where Bishop Hoss stood in 1911, and he is standing upon the same platform now. And his address at Oklahoma City, rightly understood, is not at all out of harmony with this position. Bishop Hoss believes, as did Bishop Wilson, that our Commissioners, according to the instructions of our General Conference, are restricted to the working out, the perfecting, of the plan of union to which that body gave its endorsement. That scheme, with the exception of a single recommendation, was as much the plan of the Church, North, as of the Church, South.

THE UNITY MOST NEEDED.

The article of Bishop Candler, which is taken this week from the Atlanta Journal, suggests the significant fact that real union is not to be found solely in organization. As there is a distinction to be drawn between the Church Visible, with its forms, its rules and regulations, its houses of worship, and the Church Invisible of true believers, so there is an important distinction to be drawn between unity of spirit and unity of organization. What is needed most is a unity of spirit between the M. E. Church and the M. E. Church, South, whether visible unification be accomplished or not. And in case of failure to accomplish the latter, it is to be hoped that the membership of each Church will escape the danger of being divided among themselves. R. H. H.

SUNSET AND EVENING STAR.

We thought of the beautiful words of the immortal Tennyson as the morning paper bore to us the sad intelligence that the long and noble career of Garvin D. Shands, soldier, lawyer, statesman, and Christian gentleman, had drawn to a close Sunday in the Presbyterian Hospital of New Orleans.

The notable career thus ended was linked with the history of three States. Governor Shands was born in Spartanburg, S. C., on December 3, 1884. At the age of sixteen he entered the Second South Carolina Cavalry, and he served four years under General Wade Hampton. Two years after the war he graduated from Wofford College, at Spartanburg.

Soon after his graduation he removed to Mississippi. From 1880 to 1888 he was Lieutenant-Governor of the State. Then, after practicing law at Senatobia, Miss., he entered upon a twelve-year term as Dean of the Law School of the University of Mississippi.

From 1906 to 1910 Governor Shands was professor of common law in Tulane University, New Orleans. Upon retiring in 1910, he made his home in this city, and devoted a great deal of his time to his library, reading the works of the great masters.

Governor Shands was married in 1870 to Miss Mary E. Roseborough, of Sardis, Miss., who survives him with a daughter and three sons: Mrs. P. H. Saunders, of this city; H. A. Shands, of Houston, Texas; Dr. H. R. Shands, of Jackson, Miss., and A. W. Shands, of Cleveland, Miss.

A service was held in the home of his daughter at No. 500 Walnut Street, and his remains were taken to his old home in Senatobia for interment.

These facts in the great career of Governor Shands have been taken from the daily press—the writer knew him only in later life, in the character which truly distinguished him the most, that of the Christian gentleman. His voice, which had been heard so often in the halls of state—for he was an orator of note—was also heard in God's house on the Lord's Day as it was lifted in humble but eloquent prayer. His strong personality, which had been felt in the affairs of a great commonwealth, was a blessing to the Rayne Memorial Church of this city. Within a short time of his death he was the teacher of an adult class, and he was also active in other interests of the congregation.

In appearance Governor Shands might remind some of General John B. Gordon. He was tall and striking, with the firm shoulders and erect bearing of the soldier. Age sat lightly upon his manly frame, and his large, dark eyes were still luminous with the truth and sincerity of the man.

Truly, as the Times-Picayune said of this man, "many tears will be dropped at the passing of this Christian gentleman, faithful friend and patriotic citizen." R. H. H.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, asks us to state that no camp meeting will be held this year at the Seashore Campground. The three presiding elders in charge fear that war conditions would make the attendance doubtful, and they have decided it is best to make the above announcement.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

In response to the letter of Mr. Hoover, our Methodist ministers of New Orleans preached last Sunday on the conservation of food.

Rev. J. T. Lewis recently assisted Rev. J. M. Wyatt in a very helpful meeting at Booneville, Miss. There were several accessions to the Church.

Rev. P. H. Fontaine, of the Louisiana Conference, a former pastor in this city, is in New Orleans visiting relatives. Last Saturday he paid the Advocate office an appreciated call.

Rev. T. L. Bryson, of Haughton, La., has our thanks for a check to cover seven renewal subscriptions to the Advocate. This is a work quite as necessary as the securing of new subscriptions.

In sending his second round of quarterly conferences for publication, Rev. J. H. Holder, presiding elder of the Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference, states that the work of the district is moving on well.

Dr. John T. Sawyer preached to a large congregation last Sunday morning at the Algiers Methodist Church, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. C. C. Wier, who was attending the Divinity School at the Seashore Campground.

From Eros, La., comes the report of a gracious revival, in which the pastor, Rev. J. F. Waltman, is having the valuable assistance of Rev. R. A. Bozeman. In one service there were more than fifty penitents at the altar.

In the death last week of Mrs. Girard, an aged member of the congregation at Lafayette, La., our Church has suffered a great loss. She was truly "a mother in Israel." She was one of the oldest and most influential members of the church in Lafayette.

We thank Rev. W. V. Shearer, pastor of Central Church, Columbus, Miss., for an invitation to attend the Epworth League Conference, to be held in Central Church July 5-6. We trust the conference may result in great blessings to the young people of our Church.

Rev. O. L. Savage, of Webb, Miss., writes that in the death of Mr. R. E. Neal, on June 20, the church there has lost one of its most faithful and loyal members. He had been a steward for twenty-five years. We regret to hear of the passing of this valuable layman.

Rev. M. E. Scott, of the Marietta Circuit, North Miss., Conf., and Mrs. Anna Harris Barnett, were united in marriage on June 26 at the home of the bride's father, Mr. Oscar Harris, near Marietta, Rev. J. M. Wyatt officiating. Blessings upon these servants of the Church!

At the regular meeting of the Protestant Ministers' Association of this city last Monday Rev. R. M. Brown, of the Felicity Methodist Church, was elected Secretary. Dr. S. H. Werlein, of First Methodist Church, was named chairman of the Committee on Law and Order.

Rev. W. W. Jones, of Lula, Miss., reports a very successful meeting held at Rich, Miss., recently. Rev. A. C. McCorkle, of Byhalia, did the preaching. Brother Jones states that his charge is in a better condition than at this time last year, despite the poor crop prospects in that section.

Rev. O. P. Armour, of Coldwater, Miss., has been doing most excellent work for the Advocate. A letter from him to the Publisher brings a check for six new subscriptions and two renewals, with the promise of a larger club to follow. We greatly appreciate his faithful efforts to place the Advocate in our Methodist homes.

In a letter inclosing a check for a subscription to the Advocate, Rev. E. B. Daniel, of Ida, La., writes that he will conduct a meeting at Ida during the present month. Material improvements are now being made upon the church property in the charge. Two church buildings will be painted, and another will be thoroughly renovated.

A letter from Rev. G. W. Gordon, of Noxapater, Miss., brings the distressing news that one of the churches of his charge was recently destroyed by fire, and that the loss was complete, there being no insurance on the building. But the work of raising funds for another building was at once begun, and the pastor hopes to have the new house ready for use within a few weeks.

The Library of the Southern Methodist University is in receipt of several volumes of great importance in the study of American history. This gift comes to the University from the First Church of Beaumont, Texas, through the courtesy of the popular pastor, the Rev. Glenn Flinn. Rev. H. M. Whaling, Jr., writes that the gift is highly appreciated by the University.

Dr. Roberts and Mr. Jordan, two laymen at Cheneyville, La., on the Lecompte charge, of which Rev. B. H. Sheppard is pastor, are doing a work which might help to solve the problems of some country churches elsewhere. Every Sunday afternoon each one goes to a Sunday school five miles distant to serve as superintendent, one to Elm Bayou and the other to Lyle.

Last Sunday night at Parker Memorial Church, New Orleans, the evening hour was devoted to a patriotic service. A very interesting program was given by the Sunday school. The chief feature of the evening was the presentation of two beautiful flags to the church—the American flag from the Epworth League, and the Christian flag from the Intermediate Department of the Sunday school.

LOUISIANA EPWORTH LEAGUERS, ATTENTION!

Subsequent to notice of some weeks ago, advising of the necessity of canceling the dates of the State Epworth League Conference which was to have met at Lake Charles on June 14 to 17, and at which time it was stated that a meeting would be called within 60 or 90 days, we are requested to announce that John D. Saint, President of Epworth Leagues, has called an advisory meeting of delegates from all leagues to meet in a 2-day session in Baton Rouge on July 28 and 29, next. It is desired that a constitutional number of delegates make every effort to attend this meeting and come prepared to work. It has been decided by the State Cabinet not to ask the people of Baton Rouge to entertain the visiting delegates, due to the unusual conditions and the short notice given, but that each delegate bear his or her own expenses. A committee from the Baton Rouge Chapter will arrange with first-class people to secure accommodations at reasonable rates, and as only one night will be spent there, the burden will not fall hard on anyone. Please immediately communicate with Mr. H. Le Roy Johns, 504 Fifth Street, Baton Rouge, La., and let him know how many will attend from your league.

A special program, touching upon the vital issues of the League of to-day, has been prepared and prominent leaders secured, and those who attend will be greatly repaid for the small expenditure made.

At no time in the history of our young people's organization has the call for leaders and workers been greater, nor has there ever been presented to these a larger field of service and opportunity. The war situation will be touched upon, and efficient plans for meeting the emergency and heavy drain upon the spirituality of the Christian people of our great Nation will be discussed. We have an extraordinary demand to meet, and it is imperative that as many gather in Baton Rouge as possible to plan our working policy for the next year. Besides the regular routine of business, there will be an election of officers for the ensuing year and the selection of a meeting place for next year, and on these two points all leagues in the State are requested to instruct their delegates how to vote.

"Spirituality and Efficiency" must be the watchword for next year, and we must see that the great work is placed in the hands of the most capable leaders of the State. We, the young people of the Church, have the greatest opportunity of our lives. What will we do with it? Let the answer be heralded from Baton Rouge on July 30 (the day after adjournment), and may the whole State take notice! JOHN D. SAINT.

To be in the right place, to be doing the right work, is one of the important considerations for every Christian. It is often possible for a man who has become a failure in one piece of work, to march to an amazing success in another environment.—C. S. Cooper.

Mrs. MARGARET A. PARSONS was born at Harrisburg, Pa., January 11, 1839, and departed this life June 5, 1917, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. J. M. Hutchinson, near Natchez, Miss. In early childhood she gave her heart to the Lord Jesus Christ, united with the Methodist Church, and during the long years of her eventful life of more than seventy-eight years developed a beautiful Christian character. At the close of the Civil War, she and her husband moved to Natchez, Miss., where they resided until death called them, he preceding her many years ago. Mrs. Parsons leaves the following children: Mr. Will A. Parsons, of Summit, Miss.; Mr. Edward H. Parsons, of Chicago, Ill.; Miss Bessie Parsons, of Terry, Miss.; and Mrs. J. M. Hutchinson, of Natchez, Miss. She also leaves one sister, Mrs. J. A. Plunkett, of Washburn, Wis., and several grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. She was a woman of superior intelligence and possessed in a large measure the elements of leadership. She helped to organize the first W. C. T. U. in Natchez, and for many years, until prevented by failing health, was actively identified with the Woman's Missionary Society and religious work. Her husband found in her a true companion, who shared all his life and interest in his work. She was a mother of rare wisdom. Her children were devoted to her. She lived to guide her sons and daughters to a happy and strong manhood and womanhood. Their constant care and solicitude for her comfort in a very great measure repaid the years of her unwearying thought, labor and prayer for them. During her residence in Natchez she was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, attending the services of the sanctuary as her health would permit. Her obituary cannot be written in words, but is indelibly inscribed in the grateful and loving memory of her family and friends. We think of hers as a life full of good deeds, as one too short for those who loved her.

"A perfect woman, nobly planned
To warn, to comfort, and command;
And yet a spirit still and bright,
With something of an angel's light."

The funeral services were conducted by her pastor from the Jefferson Street Methodist Church, which was attended by a number of her relatives and friends, and her remains were laid to rest in the city cemetery to await the glorious reunion by-and-by.

C. F. EMERY.

MRS. M. M. HAYES.

Whereas our Heavenly Father, in his infinite wisdom, has called from our midst Mrs. M. M. Hayes, our oldest and most beloved member, be it

Resolved, That we, as members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Opelousas, La., are in profound sorrow because of the departure of our sister and fellow-laborer. In her death our society has lost a faithful member and each of us a strong personal friend.

Her nick-name, "Aunt Mag," as she was called by every one in the community, shows how dear she was to our people. Her life had been a long and useful one, her illness and death interrupting her fiftieth year as a school teacher. She was a faithful member of the church, a teacher in the Sunday school, and an active worker and contributor to all departments of the church work. She is mourned by every one, Jew, Gentile, Protestant, and Catholic, and many have been heard to testify that her life has been one of true Christian devotion. Mrs. A. C. JONES, Secretary,
Ladies' Aid Society, Opelousas, La.

J. F. GILLILAND.

Whereas God, in His wisdom, has seen fit to call from our midst, to live with Him and His redeemed, one of our beloved members, Mr. J. F. Gilliland, we hereby adopt the following resolutions:

First—That we sorrow greatly because of the going away from us of this gentle, refined, consecrated man and co-worker.

Second—That the Church has lost a strong, loyal and consistent member, and the pastor a sympathetic friend and a wise and safe counselor.

Third—That we extend to his wife and son, and other members of the family, our sincere sympathy, and pray God's blessing on them.

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to his wife, and a copy forwarded to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed by: Mrs. J. W. Miller, Mrs. E. S. Mosby, Miss Eva Carothers.

DR. DWIGHT DEAD.

The American Bible Society announces with deep regret the death of its Recording Secretary, the Rev. Henry Otis Dwight, LL. D., on Tuesday, June 19, at his home in Roselle, N. J.

Dr. Dwight was born in Constantinople, Turkey, in 1843; prepared for college there, entered Ohio Wesleyan University, but left it in 1861 and was a soldier in the United States Army during the Civil War up to 1865. Later he was ordained to the ministry of the Congregational Church and returned to Constantinople as a missionary of the American Board, his work being to a considerable extent editing publications of the Turkish language in that Mission. In 1901 he returned to this country, still continuing his general literary and editorial work, until in 1907 he became Recording Secretary of the American Bible Society. His chief life labor was literary work in the Turkish language. He was the author of several books—the first, "Turkish Life in War Time" (1881), and the last, the "Centennial History of the American Bible Society," in 1916.

"WHAT BEAUTIFUL HAIR!"

Have you ever heard that remark made as some one passed by who had carefully kept hair? Did it not make you envious and did it not make you ashamed of every coarse, stiff or gray hair in your head? Did it not make you wish that you, too, had kept your hair carefully and could hear similar compliments passed on ou? Don't envy a beautiful head of hair. It is your privilege to have one. The beauty of the hair depends entirely on its care; and its luster depends on the food on which it subsists. Hair must be fed. Every single hair is a distinctly individual living thing and it demands food. Unless you feed it, it is going to be stiff and coarse and void of beauty. Follow the example of the Creoles of Louisiana, who pride themselves on their hair. Get their recipe. It was kept as a race secret for many years but you can get it now by asking our dealer for "La Creole," the natural hair dressing, or by sending one dollar to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

LAFAYETTE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

A very pleasant and fairly well attended session of the Lafayette District Conference, which met in Rayne, La., on June 12, closed at noon, Thursday, June 14, 1917. Rev. H. W. May, presiding elder, presided. One superannuate, nineteen pastors, two local preachers, and seventeen lay delegates answered to roll-call during the session.

The visiting brethren who looked in and took part in the conference were: Dr. R. H. Wynn, President Centenary College; Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Superintendent of the Louisiana Orphanage; Rev. K. W. Dodson, President Louisiana Conference Board of Church Extension; Rev. C. V. Breithaupt, Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, and Rev. Briscoe Carter, presiding elder of the Alexandria District.

The preaching, which was of a very high order, was done by J. D. Harper, T. I. Beck, N. E. Joyner, F. B. Hill, R. W. Tucker, and K. W. Dodson. Wybra Mack, a son of J. C. Mack of Lake Arthur, was licensed to preach.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: A. P. Holt, J. W. Wynn, A. M. Mayo, and W. L. Doss. Alternates: John W. Faulk, and Rev. R. P. Howell.

The following telegram was by order of the Conference sent to our Senators and Representatives at Washington: "Lafayette District Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, representing forty-five thousand constituents, petition and urge you to prohibit the liquor business as a war measure, and to strike out liquor tax; and also to submit a constitutional amendment prohibiting the liquor business."

The secretary has since received a courteous and favorable reply from Senator Robt. F. Broussard and Representative L. Lazaro.

The next session of the Lafayette District Conference goes to Abbeville.

J. IVY HOFFPAUIR,
Secretary.

JUNALUSKA TRAINING SCHOOL.

Rev. E. B. Chappell, D. D.

The General Sunday School Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has for several years been conducting a Summer School of Methods at Lake Junaluska. Because of inadequate facilities for accommodating visitors, however, it has been impossible hitherto for the Board to carry on the work on a large scale. But at last the long-promised hotels and boarding houses have been built and arrangements completed for taking care of several hundred guests.

The Board has, therefore, finally arranged for carrying out a plan which it has long had in contemplation for conducting this year a "Central Training School for Sunday School Leaders." The school will open at 9 a. m., July 24, and close at 10:45 a. m., Aug. 5. The Annual Sermon will be preached Sunday morning, July 22, by Bishop W. B. Murrah. General addresses will be given by the following speakers: Rev. Edgar Blake, D. D., Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Sunday Schools of the Methodist Episcopal Church, two lectures and a sermon; Henry F. Cope, Ph. D., General Secretary of the Religious Education Association, five lectures; William Byron Forbush, Ph. D., author, lecturer and specialist in boys' work, three lectures; Bishop James Atkins, one lecture; Rev. W. F. McMurry, D. D., one lecture; Rev. W. A. Christian, D. D., two lectures; four members of the General Sunday school staff, one lecture each.

Rev. C. W. Byrd, D. D., will conduct vesper services each evening from 7:30 to 8 o'clock.

Other features are as follows: New Testament Introduction by Dr. Andrew Sledd, of the Candler School of Theology; Study of the Pupil, by Dr. Wade Crawford Barclay, Assistant to the Sunday School Editor of the Methodist Episcopal Church; Principles of Teaching, by Professor Hugh H. Harris, of the Candler School of Theology.

Courses in Elementary work will be given under the direction of Miss Minnie E. Kennedy. Miss Kennedy will be assisted by Mrs. W. B. Ferguson, Mrs. T. M. Salter and Mrs. Clay E. Smith.

Courses in secondary and adult work will be given under the supervision of Dr. C. D. Bulla, who will be assisted by Dr. William Byron Forbush and Dr. Ivan Lee Holt of Southern Methodist University.

We believe that the program thus briefly outlined will be the most interesting and profitable for those who are interested in the problem of religious education ever offered in our Church, and we trust that a large number of our pastors and Sunday school workers will avail themselves of the privileges thus brought within their reach.

In addition to the valuable courses of study, the opportunities which the occasion will afford for stimulating Christian fellowship and recreation in the midst of inspiring and delightful surroundings may be suggested as reasons for a full attendance. Many Sunday schools have already arranged to send delegates. From others will come large groups of workers. Let still others follow the good example.

To turn the wilderness into springs of water and the desert into a flowing stream is nothing compared with turning the dead, cold, dry heart of man into a mighty wellspring of love springing up unto eternal life.—Spurgeon.

NERVOUSNESS AND DISORDERS OF THE NERVOUS SYSTEM.

The energy that gives life to the body is known to be nerve force. It is this hidden energy that creates the difference between the living and the dead body. It is the indefinable something that the body is robbed of in death.

Irregular distribution of the nerveforce is responsible for many of the disorders of the system. Consequently any remedy that has the power to soothe the irritated nerves, thus regulating the supply of nervous energy, is of inestimable value.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is such a medicine. It not only soothes the irritated nerves, but it induces a more regular distribution of the nerveforce, and thus assists the bodily organs in performing their proper functions. Furthermore, it induces a natural sleep, which is nature's greatest tonic and strengthener.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is especially recommended in cases of Sick, Bilious and Nervous Headache; Epilepsy; Fits; Irregular, Profuse and Painful Menses; Neuralgia; Sciatica; Sleeplessness; Melancholy; Backache; Nervous Irritation and Nervous Dyspepsia.

For more than 25 years Dr. Miles' Nervine has been largely used, and the success that it has met with on all sides is the best proof of its merit.

If you think that Dr. Miles' Nervine is suited to your case, procure a bottle from your druggist, take it according to directions, which you will find wrapped around the bottle, and then if you are not benefited return the empty bottle, one only, to your druggist and he will return your money in full. The Miles Medical Co. repays him the full retail price, so there is no reason why he should not return your money promptly.

EXECUTION OF SYRIAN SCHOLAR AND REFORMER.

(From American and Syrian Relief Committee.)

Turkish newspapers published in Constantinople, recently received in this city, contained the news of the hanging of the Hon. Sulunian el Brestany.

No particulars have been received as to the cause of his execution. Mr. Brestany was a Syrian from the Province of Lebanon and a man of great ability and learning. He had a fondness for the classics, especially the Greek, from which he translated the works of Homer into Arabic.

He was elected a deputy from Beirut to the first Parliament under the new Turkish Constitution, and was designated to deliver the address of welcome at the opening of that body. This he did in Arabic, Turkish, Armenian, Ancient and Modern Greek, English and French. He completed the last two volumes of the Arabic Encyclopedia begun by his celebrated uncle Butrus Brestany. He was first Minister of Commerce, and later Minister of Education in the Turkish Cabinet.

Physicians Explain Why They Prescribe Nuxated Iron So Widely

For Creating Red Blood, Building Up the Nerves, Strengthening the Muscles and Correcting Digestive Disorders—Often Increases the Strength of Delicate, Nervous, Run-down Folks 100 Per Cent. in Two Weeks' Time.

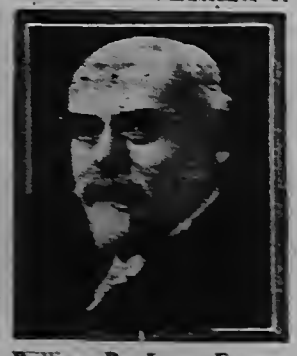
CHICAGO'S FORMER HEALTH COMMISSIONER SAYS IT SHOULD BE USED IN EVERY HOSPITAL AND PRESCRIBED BY EVERY PHYSICIAN

Opinions of Dr. Howard James, late of the Manhattan State Hospital of New York, Dr. A. J. Newman, Former Police Surgeon, City of Chicago, Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon, St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York and Other Physicians Who Have Tested Nuxated Iron in Their Own Private Practice.

NOW BEING USED BY OVER THREE MILLION PEOPLE ANNUALLY.

New York, N. Y.—It is conservatively estimated that over three million people annually in this country alone are taking Nuxated Iron. Such astonishing results have been reported from its use both by doctors and laymen that a number of physicians in various parts of the country have been asked to explain why they prescribe it so extensively, and why it apparently produces so much better results than were obtained from the old forms of inorganic iron. Extracts from some of the letters are given below. A special messenger was sent to interview the Former Health Commissioner of Chicago, Wm. R. Kerr, as it was known that he had personally used Nuxated Iron. Commissioner Kerr said:

"As Health Commissioner of the City of Chicago I was importuned many times to recommend different medicines, mineral waters, etc. Never yet have I gone on record as favoring any particular remedy, but I feel that in Nuxated Iron an exception should be made to the rule. I have taken Nuxated Iron myself and experienced its health-restoring, strength-building effect, and in the interests of the public welfare I feel it my duty to make known the results of its use. I am well past my three-score years and want to say that I believe my own great physical activity is due largely to my personal use of Nuxated Iron, and to my endorsement that I advise anemic persons, run-down men and women to take Nuxated Iron, and receive the wonderful new health which I have received. I shall feel greatly gratified that I made an exception to my life-long rule in recommending it. From my own experience with Nuxated Iron I feel that it is such a valuable remedy that it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician in this country."



William R. Kerr, Former Health Commissioner, City of Chicago

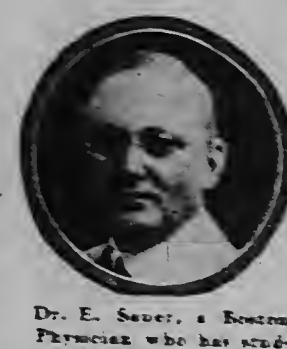
In connection with the above Dr. A. J. Newman, Former Police Surgeon of Chicago and former House Surgeon Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, said: "I heartily endorse everything Former Health Commissioner Kerr says about this remarkably efficacious preparation. It has been my particular duty during the past six years to assist in keeping Chicago's five thousand physicians in good health and perfect fighting trim so that they would be physically equipped to withstand all manner of storms and the ravages of nature's elements. Recently I was prompted through an endorsement of Nuxated Iron by Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon, St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York, to give it a trial. This remedy has proven through my own tests of it to excel any preparation I have ever used for creating red blood, building up the nerves, strengthening the muscles and correcting digestive disorders."

Dr. A. J. Newman, Former Police Surgeon, City of Chicago, and Former House Surgeon, Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago.

Dr. Howard James, late of the Manhattan State Hospital of New York and formerly Assistant Physician, Brooklyn State Hospital, said: "Nuxated Iron is a most surprising remedy. A patient of mine remarked to me after having been on a six weeks' course of the 'NAY, DOCTOR, THAT THERE STUFF IS LIKE MAGIC.' Previous to using Nuxated Iron I had been prescribing the various mineral salts of iron for years, only to meet complaints of discolored teeth, disturbed digestion, constipation, hardened excretions, etc., when I came across Nuxated Iron. An organic iron preparation containing organic iron which has no destructive action on the teeth—no corrosive effect on the stomach, and which is assimilated into the blood and tissues, makes its presence felt in increased vim, vigor and staying power. It enriches the blood, brings roses to the cheeks of women, and is an unfailing source of renewed vitality, endurance and power to men who burn up the vitality their nerves exert in the strenuous strife of the great business competitors of the day."

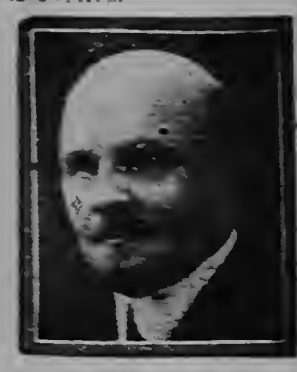
Dr. Howard James, late of the Manhattan State Hospital of New York, and formerly Assistant Physician, Brooklyn, State Hospital.

Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician who has studied both in this country and in great European Medical Institutions says "As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. Nuxated Iron has done more in the way of building up and strengthening the nerves and blood than any other preparation I have ever used in my practice. I have given it to my patients with most satisfactory and gratifying results. And those who want to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."



Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston Physician who has studied in great European Medical Institutions.

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon, St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York, said: "I have never before given out any medical information of any kind, but in the case of Nuxated Iron I feel I would be remiss in my duty if I did not tell my fellow men what I have learned about it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most satisfactory and gratifying results. And those who want to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."



Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon, St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York.

Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Many an athlete and prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for lack of iron."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by a number of well-known physicians, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and which many leading physicians have been prescribing in their private practice for years, with asserted success in building up the blood, creating strength and endurance, and in overcoming many forms of nervous troubles. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach, but on the contrary is a most powerful remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous troubles of both sexes. The Vitamine tablets have had a great deal of success in Nuxated Iron, and it is said by many druggists that when these tablets are used in connection with Nuxated Iron, they produce almost marvelous results in many cases. Ordinary readers may obtain Nuxated Iron from their druggist, and it is said that if they will take it for a few weeks they will be surprised at the results obtained, even if they do not report to their physician how much they are benefited. Nuxated Iron is sold by druggists everywhere, but if you prefer you may order it from the Nuxated Iron Laboratories, 25 Stone Building, Jersey City, N. J.

INCREASES THE STRENGTH AND ENDURANCE

Of weak, nervous, care-worn, haggard-looking men and women in a remarkably short time. This is found to be the effect of the new medicinal combination, Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron Pills, one taken before eating and the other after.

These two medicines, whose great merit has been fully established everywhere, are made from the best formulas for the blood and nerves.

All druggists. Price, $1 each.

FROM BROTHER HOWSE.

Dear Brother Meek: I am in the midst of a fight for the Lord with Brother Sweeney at Fisher, La. Our congregations are growing larger all the while and interest seems to be deepening. I was with Brother H. Mellard at Talowah week before last in a revival. There were 14 accessions to the Church. We labored against disadvantages, but the Lord gave us victory. While at that point my entertainment was mostly with Brother and Sister S. F. Avery—good Baptist people. While there it was my pleasure to see Brother Mellard baptize one of Brother Avery's grandsons, who was also a grandson of our sainted Brother W. G. Backus, of the Mississippi Conference. Little Edwin Henry Avery is much like his grandfather Backus. This is my fifth revival meeting this year and the Lord has given success in them all, for which I give him most humble thanks and all of the glory.

Your Brother,

ELLIS ISLAND.

They come, they come! One treads the other's heel;
And some we laugh and some we weep to see.
And some we fear; but in the throng we feel
The mighty throb of our own destiny.

Outstretched their hands to take whate'er we give—
Honor, dishonor, daily bread, or bane—
Not theirs to choose how we may bid them live,
But what we give we shall receive again.

America, charge not thy fate to these!
The power is ours to mold them or to mar;
But freedom's voice, far down the centuries,
Shall sound our choice from blazing star to star!

—C. A. Price.

FOREIGN MISSIONS AT HOME.

Years ago foreign missions meant the sailing of seas and long traveling of distant lands to give the gospel to the foreign-born. Sometimes it does mean all that yet, but to-day foreign missions are traversing distant plains, native mountains, boisterous seas, to come among us and seem to sit down under our own national vine and fig tree to have a chat with us, apparently saying, "You were so long in coming to us that we have come to you, whether you want us or not." To-day it is possible to have foreign missions established in America. For in our large cities we have what they call "Chinatown," "Little Italy," and "Hungary."

We can no longer say with a spirit of self-satisfaction, "I don't believe in foreign missions," for foreign mission work exists in America. It needs to exist for our comfort and their benefit.

Listen: "One-third of our entire population is foreign-born or of foreign parentage. In thirteen of our Western States and territories from fifty to sixty per cent are foreigners, and New England is so overrun with them (forty-six different nationalities) that it is already foreign missionary ground. Some of our largest cities contain from sixty-eight to eighty per cent foreigners."

It might be good to formulate our creed like this: "I believe I must do something for foreign missions, or they will do everything with me."—The Evangelical.

THE BLACK RACE.

Several years before his death Booker T. Washington said: "A short time ago I paid a visit to Italy, and there I observed a race that has been free for hundreds of years, and yet 51 per cent of its people can not read or write. In Spain 51 per cent and in Portugal 76 per cent cannot read or write. When Mr. Lincoln freed my race only three per cent were literate. Now 65 per cent can read and write."

QUESTIONS.

Do you know that there are Indian reservations where there is not a single missionary or Christian teacher?

Do you know that a magnificent Hindu temple has been erected in San Francisco, and that 1100 Hindus entered the port of Seattle in one year?

Do you know that there are forty heathen temples under the Stars and Stripes, burning incense to false gods?

Do you know that the Moslem call to prayer has been sounded in Union Square, New York?

Do you know that a man on horseback can travel from Alberta, Canada, to the interior of Old Mexico, and stop every night under a Mormon roof?—The Expositor.

CUBAN CHARACTER.

It is not just to judge the Cuban by our American standards. Race, environment, education, religion, opportunities and possibilities of development, must all be taken into consideration in our estimate of him both in the present and the future—for he is both present and future. Four hundred years of misrule, enforced ignorance, and wrong religious teaching, have left their impress. Denied liberty of expression, there was little to develop a thinking people. Surrender of conscience to the priesthood will invariably undermine personal morals. A reverence for things because they are old will paralyze progress.

Howard B. Grose ("Advance in the Antilles") portrays Cuba as she has been formed through the four hundred years of Roman Catholic domination as follows: "By their fruits ye shall know them,' said Jesus. The Roman Catholics can hardly declare it unjust to apply this principle of the Savior to the product of their Church in Cuba. If, after centuries of complete domination over the lives and government of a people we find an appalling absence of moral and ethical standards, of educational institutions, of national and individual ideals, of honesty and chastity, of chivalry and conscience, what shall be said of the sins of omission and commission of the Church under whose instruction and dictation this came to be? And when you discover that in all the years of corruption and oppression the Church never raised its voice for relief, even not to say release or liberty; when you find that the Church had no protest against the cruel forms of sport such as the bull-fight and the cocking-main, or against the spread of gambling among all classes through government lottery; when you learn that the priesthood was shamelessly and openly corrupt, so that it became itself a source of moral rottenness, according to the confession of some of its own members, and deserted the contempt it inspired in the best men; when you know that through the greed of this Church the masses of the people were practically forced into families and bound by legal or Church ceremonial; when you read the long and terrible chapters of illiteracy, of intellectual repression, of foolish superstitions, of infamous impositions in the name of religion upon a hopelessly chained people—it is not unjust to apply the Master's test."

Amid such surroundings and under such influence was formed and developed the character of the Cuban people. Contending that they are lacking in some of the qualities we deem essential for the highest civilization, we should ask if we would be better under like conditions. The Cuban or Porto Rican at the worst has not been much worse than was the Scot when John Knox worked into the national life, through the school and the Word of God, the spirit of his prayer, "O God, give me Scotland or I die!" What the Gospel did for Scotland it will do for Cuba.—Extract from "Old Spain in New America."

Whenever you can look at yourself and be satisfied, you should begin to suspect yourself of moral blindness.—Youth's Companion.

Auto-Intoxication Causes Death

Do you know why you have sick headache, diabetes, neuralgia, rheumatism and liver or kidney troubles? It's because you are being poisoned by products of your own body. Your organs of elimination are not working properly. Waste material that should be thrown out is being retained to poison and intoxicate your system. That could not happen if the bowels were kept open with Granger Liver Regulator. This splendid preparation is purely vegetable and non-alcoholic. Demand Granger Liver Regulator at your drug store—35c a box—and take no other. There is nothing "just as good."

There are great sacrifices of self, and noble acts of heroism done every day in nooks and corners and in little households, and in men's and women's hearts.—Charles Dickens.

Freckles

The fairer the skin the more ugly it is when marred by freckles; and they are not necessary at all. As soon as the warm sunshine or the hot winds bring them out, and with the natural embarrasment that every woman feels, get a package of Kintho; this is the easy way to remove them. If Kintho is used at the first sign of the ugly spots, they'll sometimes disappear overnight. Any druggist has or can get Kintho for you. Use Kintho soap too. It's astonishing how it helps keep the freckles away once Kintho has removed them.

The Composition of Coca-Cola and its Relation to Tea

Prompted by the desire that the public shall be thoroughly informed as to the composition and dietetic character of Coca-Cola, the Company has issued a booklet giving a detailed analysis of its recipe which is as follows:

Water, sterilized by boiling (carbonated); sugar, granulated, first quality; fruit flavoring extracts with caramel; acid flavorings, citric (lemon) and phosphoric; essence of tea—the refreshing principle.

The following analysis, by the late Dr. John W. Mallet, Fellow of the Royal Society and for nearly forty years Professor of Chemistry in the University of Virginia, shows the comparative stimulating or refreshing strength of tea and Coca-Cola, measured in terms of the refreshing principle:

Black tea (infusion)	1 cupful, 5 fl. oz.	1.54
Green tea (infusion)	1 glassful, 5 fl. oz.	2.02
Coca-Cola (fountain)	1 drink, 5 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.21
Coca-Cola (bottles)	1 drink, 5 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.12

From the above recipe and analysis, which are confirmed by all chemists who have analyzed these beverages, it is apparent that Coca-Cola is a carbonated, fruit-flavored modification of tea of a little more than one-half its stimulating strength.

A copy of the booklet referred to above will be mailed free on request, and The Coca-Cola Company especially invites inquiry from those who are interested in pure food and public health propaganda. Address

Ruleville, Miss.

We have about completed our new brick church at Ruleville. We will move into the new building as soon as we can get our new pews. They have been ordered long enough to have been here. We have eleven memorial windows in the new church. Ruleville stands next to Greenwood in the Winona District.....Our Sunday school and Ladies' Missionary Society at Doddsville are among the best in North Mississippi. Every Gentile in Doddsville attends the Sunday school, and every Gentile lady is a member of the Ladies' Missionary Society. There are no better people to be found anywhere than those on the Ruleville charge.—J. H. Ingram.

Duncan, Miss.

We have just closed a great meeting here. Brother Bell and his singer, Brother Pemperio, closed a nine days' meeting here last Friday night. It was by far the greatest meeting ever held here before. He added some 10 or 12 members to the Church, among them some of our best business men and women. We can not praise Brother Bell too highly. Everybody here, Methodists and Baptists, fell in love with him and hated to see him leave. The day the meeting closed he was presented with a purse of over $200; and the ladies fixed up a big box of good things to eat and sent it by express to his family at Columbus. We are very thankful to him for the good he did us and hope to get him again next year.—M. H. Alford.

Lauderdale, Miss.

Dear Brother: Permit me to speak just a few words in regard to our two revivals, held at Electric Mills and at Lauderdale. We had Brother W. W. Graves of Rolling Fork, Miss., and Brother George Avery, Jr., of Donaldsonville, La., as helpers at Electric Mills. Brother Graves was at his best, and the Lord crowned his work with success as he preached from day to day. Brother Avery did a most acceptable work in leading the singing. He is a good singer, sweet-spirited, and loves the children. We had eight accessions to the Church on profession of faith, and baptized four infants. We feel that the whole work of the church at Electric Mills has been given a new impulse, and that great good will come of the work done there in the meeting. Brother Graves is a great and good man; he is the young preacher's friend. I love him because he has been like a father to me.....Our meeting here at Lauderdale was quite a success. While there were no accessions to the Church, much good was accomplished. Lauderdale is one of those communities where very nearly everybody is already in some Church. As a result, the work and preaching was confined for the most part to the building up and strengthening of the Christian life of our people. Brother Deceli preached in his characteristic style of forcefulness and clear-sightedness, upon sin and Christian living. He suggested to the Church people of the Lauderdale community the proposition of this pastor going to the Divinity School, which resulted in the raising of a purse sufficient to bear my expenses. This makes it possible, for the first time, for me to attend this institution, for which we acknowledge our thanks to Brother Decell and the good people of Lauderdale. "Bless the Lord, and all that is within me, bless His holy name."—J. H. Moore.

NEED FOR DISCRIMINATION.

Dear Editor: Thirty-three Oriental beggars were released from Ellis Island, New York, on June 14, 1917, where they had been detained for two months by the Department of Immigration. Deportation is now impracticable. These professional solicitors are Chaldean Nestorians from Turkey and Persia who have collected thousands of dollars from churches and Christians throughout this country, making capital of the suffering and need in their homeland. The Federal authorities found in their possession many forged credentials, fictitious letters and rubber stamps (made in America) imitating the seals of Oriental Bishops.

This group now on parole is only a part of the horde of Orientals at large preying upon American charity. They frequently masquerade as Armenian or Syrian clergymen, deacons or relief workers, secure credentials from honorable but credulous American pastors, speak at Sunday or mid-week services, take collections, solicit at residences, and live at ease here or at home, inspiring their fellows to enter this lucrative trade upon misguided philanthropy. Unless a contributor wishes to give money to such solicitors for personal use, he should send his contributions for charity to the treasurer of a reputable organization.

This admonition concerning fraudulent solicitors should not be allowed to reflect upon other devoted and worthy natives of Western Asia who are unselfishly seeking relief for their destitute countrymen. These worthy representatives, however, will not ask to have money placed in their own hands nor will they personally accept money. They are as a rule asking only the privilege of presenting the facts, leaving the pastor to transmit the money through an accredited treasurer or committee which should be personally known to the pastor. A word in your columns concerning these solicitors will save for needed and legitimate relief much money that would otherwise be worse than wasted. Very sincerely yours,

C. V. VICKREY.

Calomel To-Day, Sick To-Morrow

Dose of nasty calomel makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel to-day you'll be sick and nauseated to-morrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.

No More Tired Feeling

Used Manalin Now Entirely Well

Now I feel like a boy of eighteen

Mr. William Salmans, Cambridge, Ohio, writes:

"I was suffering with bad constipation and kidney and liver trouble. I felt so worn out after working in the mine all day that I did not feel like washing myself. After taking two boxes of Manalin Tablets according to directions, I can honestly say that my Lumbago, as they called it, is gone and I feel like a boy of eighteen years of age.

"I cheerfully recommend Manalin and can say it will certainly take away that tired feeling and you can do your work just half as easy."

Those who object to tablets can secure same in liquid form.

THE STORY OF A GREAT DISCOVERY.

The hardships of a traveling salesman's life had wrecked my health. My family physician diagnosed my case as chronic gastritis, brought on by a congested liver and complicated by kidney trouble. I consulted specialists in New York and other cities where my travels called me. They confirmed his diagnosis and approved his treatment. Months passed, I grew worse and was finally compelled to give up my work.

By chance I heard of some wonderful recoveries which had resulted from drinking the water of a little spring in the Mineral Belt of South Carolina, a picture of which spring appears on this page. In desperation I tried it. On the second day I imagined that I could notice some improvement; at the end of the first week my appetite and digestion had returned, and I was much stronger; at the end of the third week I felt that I was completely restored. That was nine years ago and I still enjoy perfect health.

Knowing that it had restored my health and believing that it had saved my life, I bought the Spring.

I then determined to see whether the water would restore others as it had me. During the first year I shipped ten gallons free of charge to each of one thousand sufferers from chronic diseases. Only four reported no benefit from the use of the ten gallons. The others reported decided benefit or complete restoration. Many claimed that the water had saved their lives.

I realized that I had discovered one of the world's greatest mineral springs, and I decided to devote my life to it. But how could I make the world listen; how could I make them believe my story? The precious water was running to waste while thousands were suffering. I said, I will make them believe me by showing my faith in them and in the restorative power of the Spring. I will tell them that the water shall cost them nothing if it fails to benefit them.

The world listened.

Some wrote for proof and I sent them the letters which I had received from their fellow sufferers. Others accepted my offer without question. Thousands have written me reporting relief and permanent restoration from a great variety of chronic diseases.

But some of the water still ran to waste for lack of belief. I determined that every drop should be used to relieve the sufferings of humanity. To this end I requested a physician friend of mine to come to see me. At my desk I opened my mail and showed him the letters from men and women from all parts of the country who had suffered and who had found relief. I gave him my letter files and induced him to spend several hours reading my past correspondence with those who were using the water. I showed him the chemical analysis and letters from physicians and chemists explaining the medicinal properties of the water.

He believed, and as a result he has written this announcement for me.

WILL YOU BELIEVE?

I do not ask your implicit faith; only enough to try the water for three weeks as I did. I estimate that I drank about ten gallons and I, therefore, offer gladly to give you the equivalent of a three weeks visit to the Spring by by shipping you two five-gallon demijohns on my agreement that if you find that it does not benefit you I will promptly refund the price, which is only $2.00. You must promise to drink the water in accordance with the instructions which I will send you and return the empty demijohns. I make you the sole judge as to whether the water has benefitted you or not and hope you will feel perfectly free to accept my offer.

This offer is extended to all who suffer with any curable disease, but I especially recommend the water for the treatment of stomach, liver, kidney and bladder diseases and conditions resulting therefrom, such as rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, gout, uric acid poisoning, nervous headache and general debility resulting from impure or impoverished blood. These are the diseases most frequently mentioned in the letters which I have received, but my offer is open to any one who suffers from any curable ailment.

Yours sincerely,

N. F. Shivar

Proprietor.

Savannah, Georgia.

Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.: Dear Sir—As you are well aware I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all its train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had lived on milk, soft eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered 10 gallons of your Mineral Water, which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months from date I began drinking it gained 25 lbs., was strong and perfectly well and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantities as possible, for its properties are so happily blended and in such proportions that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely nature's remedy.

Editorial

"Who seeks for heaven alone to save his soul,
May keep the path, but will not reach the goal;
While he who walks in love may wander far,
But God will bring him where the blessed are."

COMPLETE IN HIM.

Not so many years ago Newton said the fulfillment of some of the prophecies would call for locomotion at the rate of thirty miles an hour. And Voltaire said, "Poor old Newton, in his dotage, talking of men traveling thirty miles an hour!"

But despite the noted Frenchman's scoffing, it is now possible to travel twice thirty miles an hour. And this is only one of the marvels of this present age, which have contributed no less to the horrors of war than to the arts of peace.

"We are living, we are dwelling, in a grand and awful time,
In an age on ages telling to be living is sublime."

But the very wonder of man's achievements brings the thought of the incomplete. What he has done leads us to believe that he may yet do things as unimagined by us as the marvels of steam and electricity were undreamed of by Adam in the Garden of Eden.

And some day, when the step is slow and feeble, and the head is white with the drifting snows of many a winter, we shall turn away, with a bitter sense of disappointment, from all earthly things.

And worse than a sense of the insufficiency of earthly things, there will come an insufferable sadness to the man who has survived those he held most dear. The world will be the same old world, but a strange place to him.

"Poor old voice of eighty crying after voices that have fled!
All I loved are vanished voices, all my steps are on the dead.

"All the world is ghost to me, and as the phantom disappears, Forward far and far from here is all the hope of eighty years."

Then there are so many tasks of earth never completed. The work we deem so important may be forever stopped with the setting of the sun. A master builder began a beautiful house of worship. He was a member of the congregation, and he loved the Church. So he brought, with the skill of the builder, the heart of a man who was doing a sacred task. The pastor saw him last as he left him at dusk, sitting on some building material and looking at the half-finished structure, and planning the work, as he was wont to do, long after the workmen were gone. The next morning at the break of day, Death's bright angel ushered him all at once into the presence of the Supreme Master Builder. As those who loved him sadly returned from doing him the last honor, one of them looked up to the skeleton walls which loomed above them in the twilight, and said, "The unfinished task!"

So, at the last, the world fills us with the sense of the incomplete. Its marvels become the "commonest commonplace," its friendships often fail, its dearest human ties are broken in the end, and its tasks are left unfinished. So the limitations of time and space drive our thoughts out toward the great eternity.

For this reason, the incomplete has a part in things which are complete. They answer to each other as the angle at the center answers to the arc of a circle which is infinite. The beautiful poetry is that which may be read between the lines. The masterpiece is more than so much paint, or the picture of things more beautiful in nature than on canvas. The great music makes the heart-strings to tremble.

We are brought then to believe that character only will endure. It will outlast the worlds. And man's happiness depends not upon the circumstances and objects of a material and passing world, but upon what he is. And the character he forms by his thoughts, acts and habits, will fix an eternal destiny.

How is a right character to be formed? How is it to be made complete? Some say a man's education should begin twenty years before he is born; others, that it should begin with his grandparents.

Some say that environment decides. Take the children of the most criminal parents away, and place them under refining influences, and they will not become criminal to any greater extent than average children.

And to a good environment must be added a liberal culture, and travel to the cities of our own country, and to the capitals of the Old World.

But we have seen scions of great houses go to the dogs; the stranger who went into raptures over the hills where a great statesman was born, saying that the iron of the hills entered into his blood, was told by an aged native, "These old hills have been here always, and the country aint never produced but one Dan'l Webster"; Mr. Kant, in all his life, never went further than sixty miles from his native city.

"Ye are complete in him," said the writer to the Colossians. He was writing of Jesus of Nazareth, who alone can bring the complete to the lives of men by reconciling them to God and by giving them eternal life.

Let us see, then, that life apart from Him has no meaning, and is doomed to failure. We must help to make this earthly earth a better place to live; we must have settlement homes and houses of mercy, but these, without a crucified Lord, will not bring the results we seek. And time and again we are brought back to the conclusion that our chief duty is to preach Christ as the only complete and satisfying answer to the world's need.

THE UNKNOWN GOD.

In the ancient time Athens was filled with beautiful temples and crowded with the statues of gods and heroes. Paul was greatly impressed by these numerous objects of pagan worship, and he lifted up his voice with such effect that he was summoned to appear before the highest court in Athens—the tribunal charged with superintending the national religion and with punishing any attacks upon it.

Paul's defense was that he was not a setter-forth of strange gods, because, as he had passed by and beheld their devotions, he had found an altar with this inscription: "To The Unknown God." And he was the very God Paul came to proclaim.

So, long ago the philosophers of Athens, in a city of temples and statues of gods and heroes, erected an altar to the "Unknown God." But the heathen in his blindness, bowing down to wood and stone, has not been alone in erecting altars to an unknown God.

Many in Christian lands do not know God and they try to substitute their own ideas. Perhaps the man who shows least love to God and his fellow men declares the greatest confidence in the love of God. "I cannot reconcile this with my idea of God," he says. He is like the guilty old negro before the court—he doesn't want justice. The mere suggestion that men can be left to form their own views of God and make him conform to their own ideas will not do. That would mean, in effect, that every man could provide his own savior. There is only one God, eternal and unchanging, revealed in his Word.

It would seem a profane act to inscribe on the corner-stones of some churches, "To the Unknown God." But many who go in there erect altars to a God unknown to them in their own lives. They have built churches to him. They call upon his name. With simple or elaborate ritual they claim to worship him. They worship him with their lips, but their hearts are far from him. Then they go out to desecrate the Sabbath the remaining hours of the day. And on the morrow they go forth to drive hard bargains, and to oppress the hireling in his wages, and to compromise, and to pass by on the other side of the man in need.

A NEEDLESS LOSS.

At the session of the Divinity School just closed at Biloxi prizes were offered for the best essays on "How to Increase the Efficiency of the Country Church." We trust that constructive helps will come from the essays submitted. There are many difficulties surrounding Christian work in rural districts. One discouraging feature is the constant drain upon the membership of country churches. Many of their people remove to the towns and cities. These losses to the country are seldom made good by the incoming of others. And the serious fact is that many of the people going from the country church to town or city are lost to the Church entirely. In the beginning of the "One-Win-One Campaign" in St. Louis three years ago it was estimated that there were 200,000 persons who had been members of the church elsewhere but had never found a church home in the city. And there is a large number of such persons in every big center.

It would be well for pastors of country charges to follow their members who move away by letters to pastors in the city where they expect to reside.

THE PRISON AND THE ANGEL.

Self is the only prison that can ever bind the soul;
Love is the only angel who can bid the gates unroll.
And when he comes to call thee, arise and follow fast;
His way may lie through darkness, but it leads to light at last.

—Henry Van Dyke.

A HAPPY HEART.

A happy heart transfigures all the world for us. It finds something to be thankful for in the barest circumstances, even in the night of sorrow. Let us train ourselves to see the beauty and the goodness in God's world, in our own lot, and then we shall stop grumbling, and all our experience shall start songs of praise in our heart.—James R. Miller.

LOST SMILES.

We are living now in a troubled time. War is with us—war that brings the fear and pain of parting and giving and renouncing. And it isn't as easy to smile as it has been. And for just that reason every smile that we give means a hundred times as much as it formerly did.

And so I am going to ask you, friends of mine, to try to bring one smile a day to some soul who, maybe, hasn't the courage to smile. You needn't limit yourself to one smile—if you can make ten, twenty, fifty people smile, so much the better. But be sure, at least, of that one smile!

A little old lady didn't know that she was making the way possible for a genius—that she was bringing a gift of God out of obscurity into the light. But that's what she did when she made the writer-girl's work worth while.

We don't know, any more than the little old lady did, when we give our smiles, just how much good we may be doing. Sometimes a smile, given at the right time, is worth almost as much as a word of understanding, or a loving hand, or a bit of helpful advice. And sometimes the smile that isn't given may be the weight of lead to help crush some one.

A little girl in the subway disappeared into the crowd before I could show her that I wanted to be friendly. Don't let your opportunities to bring cheer disappear, as she did, into oblivion.—Margaret E. Sangster, Jr.

THE DEATHLESS LIFE.

I feel in myself the future life. I am like a forest once cut down: the new shoots are stronger and livelier than ever. I am rising, I know, toward the sky. The sunshine is on my head. The earth gives me its generous sap, but heaven lights me with the reflection of unknown words. You say that the soul is nothing but the resultant of the bodily powers. Why, then, is my soul more luminous when my bodily powers begin to fail? Winter is on my head, but eternal spring is in my heart. I breathe at this hour the fragrance of the lilacs, the violets and the roses, as at twenty years. The nearer I approach the end, the plainer I hear 'round me the immortal symphonies of the worlds which invite me. It is marvelous, yet simple. It is a fairy tale, and it is history. For a half-century I have been writing my thoughts in prose and verse: history, philosophy, drama, romance, tradition, satire, ode and song. I have tried all. But I feel I have not said the thousandth part of what is in me. When I go down to the grave I can say like many others: "I have finished my day's work." But I can not say: "I have finished my life." My day's work will begin the next morning. The tomb is not a blind alley; it is a thoroughfare. It closes the twilight; it opens on the dawn.—Victor Hugo.

THE CHRISTIAN GRACES.

We call faith, love, and hope the Christian graces; and we are apt to forget that the associations of heathen mythology, thus introduced, are disturbing rather than enlightening. The three Graces of the Greeks are ideally beautiful figures; but their beauty is aesthetic, not spiritual. They are lovely as a group of statuary is lovely; but though "by (their) gift come unto men all pleasant things and sweet, and the wisdom of a man and his beauty, and the splendor of his fame," their nature is utterly unlike that of the three powers of the Christian character; no one would dream of ascribing to them work, and labor, and patience. Yet the mere fact that "graces" has been used as a common name for both has diffused the idea that the Christian graces also are to be viewed mainly as the adornments of character, its unsought, unstudied beauties, set on it by God to subdue and charm the world. That is quite wrong: the Greek graces are essentially beauties. They confer on men all that wins admiration—personal comeliness, victory in the games, a happy mood; but the Christian graces are essentially powers; they are new virtues and powers which God has implanted in the soul that it may be able to do his work in the world. The heathen graces are lovely to look at, and that is all; but the Christian graces are not subjects for aesthetic contemplation; they are here to work, to toil, to endure. If they have a beauty of their own—and surely they have—it is beauty not in form or color, not appealing to the eye or the imagination, but only to the spirit which has seen and loved Christ, and loved his likeness in whatever guise.—J. Denny.

FAMILY RELIGION.

The term is a vague one. No one can define it. And yet all who know the sweetness and power of home ties, on the one hand, and the nature and claims of religion on the other, appreciate something of its meaning.

Having daily family prayer is not family religion. It is an essential expression of it, however. Family religion is not apt to thrive where the family altar has not a daily sacrifice offered to God. Having the children to spend a certain number of hours on Sudnay in the home study of the Bible and in religious reading is not family religion. It is needful to it, though. If the young and old people in the home do not take ample time to become acquainted with God's Word and to read of his works, the love of him will not be apt to dwell long in their breasts. Spending much time in religious song, concerted singing of God's praises, is not family religion. It is a wonderful stimulus, however, and the memories of afternoons and evenings given to religious singing are among the most precious and lasting as one goes down the lower end of the pathway of life.

Praying, reading, singing at home are only expressions of what may be regarded as religion permeating the family life. The ideal family is first of all one whose united head, the husband and wife, are one in the Lord as well as one in heart, mind, purpose, and life. The husband and wife sustain and encourage as well as help each other in so disposing their separate and joint affairs as to secure perfect freedom in giving to Christ all the time, effort, duty, and offering which belong to him as Savior, Lord, and Friend. Next, they regard their children as heirs to a covenant which God has made. They keep before them from the very dawn of their young lives that the duty they owe to Christ is paramount, that nothing is to come before it. They exercise their parental, God-given authority in directing the actions and making the habits of their children so that these will always accord with the children's covenant relations. They never allow them to think that they may neglect the house of God or the family altar any more than they let them think they may neglect the morning or noon-day or evening meal, or the school room. They keep them subject to themselves in discipline. They regard it as just as much their duty to train them to take their places among God's people as to educate them for taking their places creditably and becomingly in the world. They teach them, above all, the fundamental principles of obedience and reverence. A Christian father and mother, having their children in rightful subjection, diligently teaching them by precept and example the way of the Lord, and lovingly and faithfully requiring of them attendance upon and respect for the outward expression of the faith, make a home where, without defining or bounding it, "family religion" may be truly said to dwell.

Out of such a family will come the strongest characters among men. Taught to respect authority and revere those who are invested with authority, they grow up into stalwart men and women, who in knowing how to obey know also how to rule. The best citizenship, the highest business integrity, the most beautiful womanhood, the richest and sweetest domestic virtues are developed in this atmosphere. If governmental paternalism could be made to command the home with a view to its giving in the years to come strength to the nation and prosperity to business, commerce, and social life, it could not effect its end better than by making homes where "family religion" prevails, where "the heart of the fathers is turned to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers."—Presbyterian Journal.

"A LITTLE CHILD SHALL LEAD THEM."

By Rev. Oswald S. Lewis.

In his inspiring book, "Followers of the Gleam," Dr. Charles L. Goodell has a beautiful chapter with the above title. The story is given of the christening of a child in a home of great wealth. The father and mother were not Christians. To them and their friends who had gathered in the beautifully decorated home the affair was little more than a social function. But the good man of God was not content to let the service mean no more than that. To quote his own words: "As I saw the sweet little face and realized the future, a great anxiety laid hold of my heart that that little one should be trained for God." At the first opportunity he had a quiet talk with the parents of the child, taking occasion to impress upon them more forcibly the meaning of the service, and emphasizing the need of the child being brought up in a Christian home. After one or two more interviews, both parents were led to give their hearts to God and make a public confession of Christ, and theirs became a Christian home.

This story was brought to my mind on a recent Sunday evening at the Gibson Memorial Church. A right young father and mother brought their baby to church to be baptized. At the beginning of the service I had them to come to the front, and there assume the obligation to train that little one for God. To me it was a solemn moment and I felt the responsibility of the hour. I was praying earnestly that the full meaning of the service would be realized by the parents and all present. The father was not a Christian, and I was especially anxious that he might that very night give his heart to God, and begin at once to carry out the obligation he was then assuming.

I could tell that he was very much impressed, and somehow I was able to preach with great confidence that the message was going home and that the seed was falling into good ground. I threw my whole soul into the exhortation to yield to God and accept Jesus as Savior and Lord. I had never had a closer listener than this young father, and when the call was made his response was as earnest as my call. Down the aisle he came with the singing of the first verse. In quick succession there followed two other young men, his brothers-in-law. Then came two married couples, making seven in all who came into the Church that night, three by letter, and four by profession of faith. The spirit of a revival was felt by all and everybody was rejoicing at the result of the service. We are hopeful and praying that this is but the beginning of a great revival at this place.

Yes, indeed, "a little child shall lead them." "Who hath despised the day of small things?" When I reflect on the manner in which God has blessed and used the dedicating of children to God in Christian baptism it pains me to hear any one ridicule such a service and make light of it. "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not," says the Master. Yes, and when the little ones are truly brought to him the older ones are likely to follow.

WHEELS AND CIRCLES.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

At one time in the dim, distant past, the controlling powers in Methodism were insistent upon faithful service at the charge assigned to the preacher. The work of the preacher was to preach and to travel. Nowadays too often it is to travel here, there and anywhere. Lecture engagements, lyceums, bureaus, institutes, chautauquas, commencement occasions, mountains, seas, and lakes, are calling, calling so loudly, continuously and insistently, that I fear sometimes the call within is hushed by the call without. Why not quit assigning appointments and give every man a roving commission? Don't place responsibilities on him he is not expected to assume. If the kind of service stated is best, remove the obligation to service within clearly defined bounds.

The world is on wheels to-day. There are wheels in the streets, on the roads, in men's heads, whirring, whirling on land and sea. The race seems to scorn stability or anything stationary. They all believe nowadays that in God they live, move, and have their being; especially the "move," and if motion is the law of life and being, they are surely chasing it. It is right hard to work and so easy to travel. Motion exhilarates; work tires. New scenes stimulate new brain cells, and break the dull, monotonous round of duty and toil. Cooling breezes from the main or mountain fan the fevered brow, and cool the heated blood. The job at home can wait, it will keep, but the summer will soon be spent, and the winter winds sing through the deserted lodges and leafless trees of the erstwhile gatherjoys. I want to go there, too.

Don't you, don't you?

LEADERSHIP.

By Rev. J. Tillery Lewis.

Leadership of some kind the world will always have, because organized society can not exist without leaders. The principles dominating the life of the leaders of Church and State, rather than the announced and proclaimed principles of the creeds and constitutions thereof, determine the character of both these institutions. As all thinkers must recognize, howsoever just and righteous may be the constitutional basis upon which an organization rests, it is, after all, the principles governing in the lives of the leaders of the organization, rather than the constitutional principles thereof, that determines the character of the deeds emanating therefrom. Organizations must be classed, as to their righteousness, not by the basic and foundational principles of their written or unwritten constitutions, but by the visible and tangible output of those institutions. Since it is the leadership of an organization, rather than the constitutional principles thereof, that determines the expressed character of the institution, it can not be amiss for us to make an earnest study of the question of leadership. With no thought of making personal applications of the truths herein discussed, but wholly with the desire to help enquiring souls after truth, that they may the more clearly apprehend the same as it is related to the great question of Leadership, I shall discuss this subject under four heads: (1) Righteous Leadership, (2) Unrighteous Leadership, (3) Righteous and Unrighteous Leadership Contrasted, (4) The Urgent Need of Righteous Leadership.

I.

Righteous Leadership.

Righteous Leadership is concerned, alone, with the discovery and application of truth, and is therefore aggressive in its very nature. Righteous leadership looks to the highest interest of all people, therefore to the highest interest of the masses, as well as to that of the classes, and with equal earnestness. Righteous leadership recognizes the fact that God made all men free and equal, and therefore gladly concedes, and seeks to accomplish for all men, an equal right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. In pursuance with this thought, righteous leadership applies itself to the business of effecting a just adjustment of the laws and administration of Church and State, that each individual may have assured to him the opportunity of working out his own temporal and eternal destiny upon the basis of religious and political liberty in so far as his pursuit of his chosen ideal does not infringe upon the rights of society and of other individuals. Righteous leadership knows neither fear nor favor, but exercises herself in behalf of the highest good of all alike. Righteous leadership unswervingly, but with gentle firmness, stands for her conception of truth even though said loyalty to truth lead to martyrdom. Righteous leadership is both non-egotistical and unselfish; therefore she does not exalt self, but on the other hand self-interest is forgotten in her contemplation of the larger interest of mankind. To sum up: Righteous Leadership is unselfishly aggressive in her daily activities for mankind's political and religious redemption.

II.

Unrighteous Leadership.

Unrighteous leadership is selfish and egotistical to the core. Unrighteous leadership is always loud in her declaration that brains should control, but she refuses to recognize the existence of brains, save as other individuals stoop to her leadership. Unrighteous leadership is skillful in the art of playing to the galleries, but her activity in behalf of righteousness is aggressive only in so far as her own interest is helped thereby. The life of unrighteous leadership is dependent upon the "secret caucus" and "demagoguery." "Secret caucus" manipulation is the sine qua non of machine politics. This is true because the "Secret caucus" method affords to two-faced persons abundant opportunity to ply their trade of duplicity. Demagoguery must have an uneducated constituency, to whose passions and prejudices an appeal may be made, else demagoguery will die of starvation. Unrighteous leaders have cunning head training all right, but they are without heart development, without which development it is utterly impossible for one to rise above self-interest. It is heart companionship with Jesus alone that has power to lift men out of self and lead them into self-sacrificing service for humanity's uplift. Brain power is necessary to furnish wisdom and light by which to best serve the highest interest of mankind, but heart power is the only known constraining force that is sufficiently strong to lead men into the "labor of love" for the down-trodden of earth.

III.

Righteous and Unrighteous Leadership Contrasted.

Righteous leadership is projected upon an "open and above board" basis; whereas unrighteous leadership employs "secret caucus" and "demagogic" methods. Righteous leadership is exercised in the highest interest of humanity; whereas unrighteous leadership begins, continues and ends in self, working along the line of humanity's uplift only as a means of attaining unto self-exaltation. Righteous leadership delights in serving the highest interest of others; whereas unrighteous leadership glories in the sycophantic adoration of lesser lights. Righteous leadership calls to its aid truth, justice, love, mercy, and meekness; whereas unrighteous leadership makes companions of pride, hatred, revenge, covetousness, and retaliation. Righteous leadership is always eager to recognize merit, and gladly awards accordingly; whereas unrighteous leadership handles other humans as so many men on a chessboard, and with the same end in view that dominates the mind of the chessplayer—to win. Righteous leadership joins hands with rivals in ability, and, together, they pull for the uplift of mankind, letting honors fall where they may; whereas unrighteous leadership seeks to annihilate possible competitors for positions of honor, that there may be no mistake as to where the honors shall fall.

IV.

The Uurgent Need of Righteous Leadership.

The need of righteous leadership is so patent that I can hardly afford to plead her cause before intelligent readers. A look at the civil, religious, social and commercial interests of the world will convince one of the urgent need of righteous leadership far more effectively than can I present the matter for contemplation. I beg leave to say this, however: the need of righteous leadership is so overwhelmingly urgent, while the subtlety of selfish ambition is so insinuatingly cunning, that those who contemplate undertaking the big business of leadership should first look to the business of both head and heart preparation therefor, that both their judgment and their motives may be projected upon the basis of righteous leadership. Because of the frailty and innate corruption of our lower natures, which is selfish to the very core, men who desire to become leaders in the Church should first look carefully to meeting God's requirement for leadership. That requirement can not be better expressed than in the words of Jesus: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me."

The goal of universal, abiding peace is yet far in the distance. True, the close of this war may bring to the world an end of international strife for many years to come, but there is before us a period of national and international reconstruction that is going to require the loftiest and most unselfish leadership ever known to the world, that order may be brought out of chaos. What is most needed to-day is a nation of men with the Christ ideal of service, whose energies are applied to the solution of the civil, the social, the religious and the commercial problems of the world. To some it may sound visionary; nevertheless, I am convinced that God is now knocking at the door of our nation, and pleading for admission into our hearts, that He may lead the United States in world-wide unselfish service for mankind's redemption. Already our noble President of the United States is leading us into war against autocracy, that democracy may be assured to all the people of the earth. But our great nation, because of superior advantages every way over the rest of the nations of earth, owes a larger debt to the world than can be met through our government alone. Before we can become world-wide leaders in the redemption of mankind, however, we must first know and apply in our individual lives the principles of righteous leadership. As a nation we must at least have a sufficient number of persons controlled by the principles of righteous leadership, through whom to mould public opinion in behalf of righteousness, else we can never become leaders in the world's redemption. As is well known, despite the boasted democracy of our nation, unrighteousness and all evils flowing therefrom abound among us. In matters civil, religious, social, and commercial, we yet have much that must be accomplished before righteousness can be enthroned in our nation. It is a well known, and often remarked upon, fact that the evil of Church and State being manipulated in behalf of the classes, and for the benefit of those already in power, is not altogether unknown in our boasted free America. Just in so far as these unrighteous principles govern in the lives of our present leaders in Church and State do we need courageous, Christlike men who are willing, if need be, to suffer for righteousness' sake, that justice may be exalted to leadership and unrighteousness be dethroned. It is chiefly the masses in our great nation whose rights need to be championed until justice sits enthroned in every branch of our complex life. Until our Churches attain unto that degree of righteousness where the laboring man will no longer have occasion to say, "Give me Christ, but away with your churches," it is of little use for us to preach righteousness by word of mouth. God never intended that truth should be preached by word of mouth alone. The power of the Gospel lies not in its verbal declaration, howsoever logical, theological and brilliant that may be, but it lies rather in its demonstrated power to lift a life out of sin and unrighteousness. But if the preacher of gospel truth is himself the victim and slave of sin and unrighteousness, how is the world to know that there is power in the gospel of the Crucified One to lift one to the plane of righteousness?

Leadership that is projected upon the lofty plane of righteousness first looks within, that the leader's own life may be made to square with the principles of righteousness. Then, with his own life standing four-square to the world, he looks to the discovery and condemnation of all unrighteousness, whether found in the classes or the masses. For leaders of this lofty type recognize the fact that the ultimate result of all unrighteousness is disastrous to the one perpetrating the same, though the immediate result may be freighted with profitable returns. In view of these truths, it behooves all of us who are aspiring to become leaders that we be sure of the fact that our leadership is projected upon the basis of righteousness. It is only thus that we are laboring with God. All God's plans for time and eternity are projected upon the basis of righteousness, and just because God is the "King of kings, and Lord of lords," righteousness will one day sit enthroned upon earth. Shall we, as a nation, help to exalt God and righteousness to the kingship of this old world? If so, it is high time for great activity on our part, upon the basis of aggressive righteousness.

CHURCH UNITY.

By Prof. Henry E. Dosker, D.D., LL.D.

The Apostolic Church was characterized by a spiritual unity; its head was Christ; the common faith was the bond of union between all believers; they were one and felt themselves one, but in the outward manifestation of this common life there were the greatest varieties. The difference between the Judaizers and the Christians of the provinces, the converts of St. Paul, amounted almost to an antithesis. And yet they remained one body and the Church at Jerusalem, under the immediate supervision of the original apostles, never dreamt of cutting off the converts of the gentiles from their communion, because their practices and their whole viewpoint were so utterly different from their own.

Why? Why did not the centrifugal force swing these apparently heterogeneous elements off into the outer darkness, where many extremists among them undoubtedly claimed they belonged? Because the centrifugal force was wholly subdued and subordinated by the centripetal, and the latter was the burning love of all for the common Savior.

The Apostolic Church was as variegated as is ours, but it was less complex, less bound by tradition and form and history than ours. It was the life of the spring-time, it was the day of vision and hope and burning love. Let no man cry, "back to the apostolic days," and dream that there he would find absolute and unbroken harmony and unity. Far from it! The Church of Christ from the beginning has been absolutely free from that man-made homogeneity in which Rome has found its ideal.

Its ideal of unity was spiritual, not physical; it consisted in the unity of the essentials of faith; not in the empty forms of statement of dogma or practice of worship. And Rome has forever striven after this latter ideal, whilst inward diversity was allowed, if only the outer husk remained untouched. And for this outer husk St. Paul, the founder, under Christ, of the Christian Church, cared little or nothing, if we are to believe the collective results of his study of his epistles. "Bound under Christ, but free in Christ," seems to have been the motto of his life. A Church so absolutely Christ-centered that He was its all in all, but a faith of such startling simplicity that it never in any way obscured the open vision of the center. No one can make an intelligent study of the Pauline epistles without being forced to the conclusion—Christianity is Christ. All is centered, all is combined, all is expressed in the one divine formula, "For me to live is Christ."

In another article we will endeavor to point out false ideals of Church unity, which men have substituted for the apostolic ideal; let it suffice here to say that the ideal of Church union must ever be spiritual and can never be physical. What text has been more tortured and crucified than the sublime high-priestly prayer of the Master, "that they all may be one as Thou art in Me and I in Thee?" A little assiduous study of the context and of the words themselves will at once teach us that Jesus here never could have referred to the physical unity of believers, but that the reference, in this sublime petition, was for the spiritual oneness of all those who, through the words of the apostles, did believe or were to believe in Him.

God hates monotony. His every expression of Himself in His creative work spells variety of form and aspect, in essential unity. Thank God for his variety in nature! What a monotonous thing this beautiful world of ours would be if the creative power of our God had not expressed itself in this endless variety of form! And even in the Church of Christ the proverb holds good, "Variety is the spice of life." Rome with all her boasting can not deny that history proves that her ideal had well-nigh destroyed her at the time of the Reformation, and that only that event saved her from herself. The modern Rome, which we know but too well, has become what it is through the reaction, on its own life, of the force which broke the sleepy uniformity of that life through many ages. The true unity of the Church is spiritual, not outward and physical.—Christian Intelligencer.

THE WOMAN OF TO-DAY.

With the coming of the inevitable war, woman has at once responded to the first call of duty, and instinctively taken her place as helper in the many conditions of life in which she is situated. For many months she has rendered efficient service with the Red Cross Corps on the battlefields of France—fields stained with blood and wet by tears torn from the mangled bodies and anguished spirits of the wounded and dying soldiers.

She is there to tenderly sooth their pain, to alleviate their suffering, and minister to their spiritual needs, as only a woman can. At home, with courageous heart, she is doing her part by conserving all foodstuff, by spending wisely, by saving consistently, by eliminating all needless expenditure from her home, by dressing simply and sensibly, and putting away all modern social extravagances. While opposed to war, from her heart's depth she alone suffers the greatest sacrifice, for does she not give her sons and loved ones? Who can guage or sound the depth of anguish for a child in danger of death?

She knows this is no war of conquest, that we seek no gain, that we are fighting for right, for the sake of humanity, for democracy, for the overthrow of autocracy, for the uplift of down-trodden nations, and world-wide liberty.

The woman of to-day is efficient, capable, yet she seeks no honor save that of service, desires no recompense but the consciousness of work well done. Doubtless when peace has come, and the nations of the earth are reconstructed, women will gain suffrage. Whether it will promote her happiness and make her a better homemaker or mother remains to be seen.

The woman of to-day is willing to give her time, money, and talents to her country, be they one or ten; she is alive, and a power for good and helpfulness. WILLIAM CONGER PAGE.

The enrollment of the Southern Methodist University at Dallas for the session just closed was 523.

Rev. Richard B. Webster has served the Westminster Presbyterian Church of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., forty-four years.

On the last Sunday in June the Eleventh Avenue Methodist Church of Birmingham, Ala., burned a canceled mortgage for $5000.

Rev. A. C. Thomson, D.D., of the Episcopal Church, has accepted his election as Suffragan Bishop of the diocese of Southern Virginia.

Approximately $150,000 had been secured by the last of June in the campaign for the colleges of the two South Carolina Conferences. This is half the amount to be raised.

Two sons of Northern Methodist Bishops have enlisted for active service. They are R. W. Bristol, son of Bishop F. M. Bristol, and James F. Cooke, son of Bishop R. J. Cooke.

"Fathers' Day" was observed in Lowman Methodist Church, Topeka, on Sunday, June 17. That was a good thing. "Mothers' Day" seems to be a discrimination which should not be made between those who unite to make a home.

Rev. John Kelman, of Edinburgh, preached in Charlotte, N. C., on the evening of June 13. The service was announced to be held in the Second Presbyterian Church, but that building filled so rapidly that it was necessary to move to the City Auditorium. Dr. Kelman's address concerned the war and its relation to Christian activity.

At the recent session of the Southern Baptist Convention that body endorsed the efforts of the St. Charles Avenue Baptist Church, this city, to raise $20,000 throughout the denomination to be applied toward the building of a church on the present site, to cost $50,000. The pastor, Dr. B. P. Robertson, reports that progress is being made in this undertaking.

The splendid new house of worship being erected by the Napoleon Avenue Presbyterian Church of New Orleans is nearing completion. The location is at the corner of Napoleon and St. Charles Avenues—a most excellent one. Intersecting car lines give easy access from all sections of the city above Canal Street. Dr. U. D. Mooney is the pastor.

The Y. M. C. A., through the leadership of Dr. John R. Mott, since the beginning of the work in 1914, has raised a grand total of $7,000,000 for relief work and work among the army camps. Wherever the soldiers go the red triangle of the Y. M. C. A. goes, with its conveniences and comforts for the troops, and with its message of clean manhood and Christian living. A large Y. M. C. A. building was recently opened at Camp Nicholls, New Orleans.

Billy Sunday's campaign in New York has closed and it has eclipsed all his previous records. Sixty thousand people heard him the last day, and the sum of $113,000 was given him in the free-will offering, all of which he gave to the Red Cross and to the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A. Mr. Sunday also gave $20,000 for Liberty Bonds, and it is said that he expects to give the free-will offering in Chicago to the mission where he was converted. No carping critic can say that Billy Sunday is preaching for money. The campaign resulted in 98,264 conversions. Bishop Luther B. Wilson spoke at one meeting and Ambassador Gerard at another. Governor Whitman sent the following message, which was read from the platform. "The people of New York recognize and appreciate the good service you have rendered the city and the State of New York."

A severe electric storm in New Orleans late Saturday afternoon interfered with traffic, lights, and telephones for several hours. Street cars were not running, and scores of persons were marooned on Canal Street, unable to get home, while many houses dependent upon electric lighting were in darkness.

Last Sunday, Col. Donnelly, commanding the first regiment, Missouri National Guard, received a call to send troops from Alton to Hartford, Ill., to protect the whites there from a threatened attack of the blacks. Rioting has already disturbed East St. Louis, and more trouble is expected in Illinois towns.

Last week, Henry Hawkins, aged 98, a negro slave and servant in the family of Zachary Taylor, was buried here in the tomb of General "Dick" Taylor, son of the former President, and a noted Confederate officer. Henry followed old "Rough and Ready" through the Mexican War, and has been in the family ever since the death of his former master.

The announcement was made on July 7 that a million American women have signed pledges to follow the food conservation directions of the food administration. All will be enrolled as actual members of the food administration, and from time to time will be sent instructions on household economics. Within the next few weeks the administration hopes to enroll virtually every woman in the United States.

On the night of July 9 wild enthusiasm was shown by the 10,000 men and women who packed Madison Square Garden, New York, in honor of Boris Bakhmetieff, Russian ambassador to the United States, and his fellow members of the mission to this country. An offering of $20,000 was made to be devoted to the welfare of Russian prisoners. The banner of King David had a place beside the blood-red banner of the Russian revolution.

The correspondent of an Amsterdam paper reports that five persons were killed and a number of houses destroyed during the bombardment last Friday night of the German city of Essen, where the great Krupp works are located. A correspondent of the Telegraaf says that bombs were dropped on the Krupp works, but that reports of the damage done are conflicting. An official French statement said that one French aeroplane raided Essen, dropping bombs on the Krupp factory.

The great Russian general Brussiloff is now again leading the Slavs in a splendid showing that the Great Bear is able to "come back." General Brussiloff led the Russian armies in the recovery of much territory some months ago, and in the capture of a phenomenal number of the enemy. Approximately 10,000 have been captured by the Russians in their new offensive, and General Brussiloff is now attacking with success in the region of Stanislaus, southeast of Lemberg. The present offensive is the first Russian movement of any consequence since the Russian crisis, and there is hope that Russia may yet give valuable aid to her allies.

On July 7, the Senate went on record in favor of "bone-dry" national prohibition during the war so far as whiskey and other distilled beverages are concerned. In lieu of the House bill to prohibit the manufacture of foodstuffs into beverages of any description, the Senate substituted, by a vote of 45 to 37, a provision prohibiting manufacture and importation of distilled beverages during the war, and added a clause directing the President to take over all the distilled spirits in government bonded warehouses and pay for it on the basis of cost plus 10 per cent. Unfortunately the beer and wine industries were to be left undisturbed.

On July 7, London suffered one of the boldest and most damaging air raids of the war. Twenty German machines flew low over the city, steering a course from northwest to the southeast, dropping bombs as they went. British machines engaged them, and the roofs of houses were crowded with people to watch the thrilling spectacle. But none of the enemy machines were brought down, and they later made their escape, after causing the loss of many lives, and the destruction of much property. A red cross flag over a hospital only served as a target for bombs. Three of the raiders were later brought down into the sea. The Monday press reported that London was furious over the raid, and demanded more adequate defense for the city. Most of the raiders were slow biplanes, and the fast British machines made rings around them. Their low altitude and slow rate of speed seemed to show their contempt for the city's defenses.

TAKING STOCK.

Looking back over seven delightful years of association with the choice young women who have come under my care and instruction during that period, I thank God and take courage. I believe few men have had a finer body of girls to train, and much credit must be given to the mothers who began the molding and fashioning of these characters in the days of their childhood. Good material accounts in large measure for the stability and finish of the completed product. That high ideals and serious purpose have prevailed among the students is conclusively shown by the fact that of the 62 graduated during my administration, 61 were Christians, 55 became teachers, 22 have married and only three of the unmarried are now employed. Even these three I know to be helpers at home, sharing the duties of the household with their mothers. During the past two years but one boarder has remained through the session without becoming a Christian. To my mind no eulogy nor flaming advertisement could speak louder of the efficiency and consecration of the faculty of our Conference College for girls. Such work is the result of personal contact and inspiration possible only in the small college.

The curriculum of the school has been raised to cover a full four-year course based upon fourteen units for entrance to the freshman class, and this standard has been approved by the General Board of Education of our Church. The requirements for a degree do not take into account work in the special departments, but apply solely to the literary work done. Diplomas are given those who satisfy the requirements in music, art, expression, or domestic science, provided they complete as much as two years of the literary course, thus giving all that the junior colleges offer for two years of study, and providing for those who can only spend two years in college.

The physical condition of the institution has been greatly improved by the expenditure of more than $25,000 in repairs and the purchase of new property. Many additions have been made to the equipment of the library and laboratory, seventeen rooms have been added to the dormitory, the campus increased by two acres, and five new pianos have been placed in the studios. Commissioners Jaco and Brownlee have brought the signed subscriptions for new buildings up to more than $15,000, with tentative subscriptions for several thousand dollars more. These buildings are urgently needed, but owing to the disturbed condition of the country, the Board of Trustees deem it inadvisable to undertake their erection this year, hoping, however, to begin early next spring. We believe a memorial library will soon be erected in honor of one of the departed saints of the Church in our territory. Devoted children could hardly erect a more fitting and useful memorial to their beloved mother.

An exceptionally fine spirit prevailed in the student body the past session, more than the average number signing for rooms before Commencement. The general public recognize the fine work the school is doing, and the prospect for a full attendance is gratifying. Government authorities insist that parents shall give the largest possible opportunity to their sons and daughters who can attend college when the exigencies of war have called so many away. Vacancies must be filled and the larger opportunity for the educated woman is hastened and augmented by the present world catastrophe. I am determined that Grenada College shall do its part.

In the meantime, let the preachers and laymen of the North Mississippi Conference, to which the school belongs, rally to it with patronage and money to enable it to meet the demands made upon it in these strenuous times. If our own institution is just as good, it DESERVES our patronage and support; if it is not equal to some others, our patronage and support would soon develop it. So, send on the girls.

I close by offering board, tuition, laundry, and incidentals one year FREE to any young woman in the North Mississippi Conference who will find another college whose graduates can show a record equal to that given in the first paragraph above.

A colored preacher had just concluded a powerful sermon on "Salvation Am Free" and was announcing that a collection would be taken up for the benefit of his own family, when up jumped a dear old colored brother and said: "Lookey heah, pahson, how am dis, anyhow? An' I tells you p'intedly heah an' now dat I's not gwine to 'tribute nothin' until I finds out."

"Patience, brudder, patience," cried the old preacher. "I'll 'lucidate dat case sho' 'nough. S'pose you wab thirsty an' come to a riber. You could kneel right down an' drink your fill, couldn't you? An' it wouldn't cost you nothin,' would it?" It would be free drink, sho' 'nough."

"Of cou'se it would be free. Dat's my p'int, that's just what I"

"Dat water would be free," continued the preacher, "but 'spoosen you was to hab dat same water piped to your house? You'd hab to pay for dat, wouldn't you?"

THE BAR.

The saloon is sometimes called a bar—that's true.
A bar to heaven, a door to hell.
Whoever named it, named it well.
A bar to manliness and wealth;
A door to want and broken health.
A bar to honor, pride and fame;
A door to grief and sin and shame.
A bar to home, a bar to prayer;
A door to darkness and despair.
A bar to honored, useful life;
A door to brawling, senseless strife.
A bar to all that's true and brave;
A door to every drunkard's grave.
A bar to joys that home imparts;
A door to tears and aching hearts.
A bar to heaven, a door to hell;
Whoever named it, named it well.

THAT IS WHISKEY.

ONLY A MINORITY OF THE LABORING MEN.

In one of the daily papers of Washington City there appeared recently a two-page advertisement which was an appeal to the President and to Congress in behalf of the brewers. The advertisers claimed to represent the workingmen's organizations of the United States in petitioning President Wilson and Congress "against cutting off a habitual temperate beverage." The names of something like five hundred different organizations, with the number of members affiliated with them (2,062,857), filled two pages.

In the opinion of the liquor people this was a very impressive showing. They did not count on an early answer to their misleading advertisement. However, the National Temperance Society and the Commission on Temperance of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America answered the statements of the liquor people in a two-page advertisement in another Washington paper. The answer says in part:

It is interesting to note that the liquor men in their advertisement had more workingmen enumerated as signers of the petition to the President in the twenty-two States mentioned than there are members in the American Federation of Labor throughout the country; also, hundreds of thousands of names were duplicated many times in the different organizations tabulated. Furthermore, only 445 local labor unions signed the petition, although there are 22,000 such labor bodies throughout the country, which means that over 21,500 local unions had failed to sign the petition. As a matter of fact no individual workingmen were asked to sign the petition which was presented to President Wilson and Congress by President Samuel Gompers. What actually happened was that a small minority of trade unionists assumed to speak for the entire membership of their various organizations.

It is argued by the liquor men that they use only one per cent of the grain in the manufacture of beer. This of course does not include the molasses and sugar and other ingredients that are employed; but assuming that what the liquor men say is true—namely, that they use only one per cent of the grain—it is obvious that this amount of grain will feed one per cent of the people. One per cent of the population of 100,000,000 means 1,000,000 people who are being deprived of the food products used in the manufacture of liquor.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

THE SECONDARY OBLIGATIONS OF LIFE.

The primary obligation of life is our obligation to God. The secondary obligations of life are our obligations to ourselves and our fellows. The second great commandment places these secondary obligations on a par. It does not command us to love our neighbors more than we love ourselves, but as we love ourselves. It does not command us to love ourselves more than we love our neighbors, but as we love our neighbors. While then these two obligations must yield the right of way to our obligation to God, yet neither may claim the right of way over the other.

But while these obligations are secondary to our obligation to God, let no one suppose that fulfilling our obligation to God excuses us for neglecting our obligations to ourselves and others. Piety, religiousness, the saying of prayers, attending the ordinances of the Church, and such like, do not excuse us for neglecting our own health or for failing to develop our mental powers; still less for being unkind or unjust or unmerciful to our fellows. No doubt in every age there have been those who look upon piety and religiousness as substitutes for righteousness and mercy. This is to be regretted the more because nothing has done more to bring religion into disrepute. The Bible teaches, moreover, that a genuine regard for God always leads to a moral life, more especially that it always leads to and is attended by a genuine regard for others. In language of the utmost vigor, it repudiates as false and unreal a piety and religiousness that does not issue in a genuine regard for others. The Pharisees exemplified this type of religion. They were exceedingly religious, very scrupulous about the observance of the rites and ceremonies connected with religion, but were forgetful of justice and mercy. And we all know the vigor of the language with which the Master condemned them. It is not merely the ancients that have been guilty of this mistake. It is to be feared that there are plenty living to-day who imagine that a regard for God atones for lack of charity in dealing with men. Who does not know of men and women who are spoken of as "very religious," and yet are lacking in kindness and generosity? Such a religion is fundamentally defective. It is impossible to fulfill our obligations to God without at the same time fulfilling our obligations to ourselves and others; and that because all our duties, including the duties we owe to self and others, are duties we owe to God. Those who are fully mindful of their duty toward God will not, therefore, be unmindful of the duties mentioned in the second commandment.

This commandment, as already intimated, points to a two-fold duty—the duty we owe to self and the duty we owe to others. When we are told to love our neighbor as ourselves, we are told that the love we have for ourselves is the measure of the love that we ought to have for others, that the duties we owe ourselves stand on a par with the duties we owe others. We must distinguish between self-love and selfishness. Self-love is not sinful. To say that self-love is sinful is to say that we are without worth in God's eyes. Such a thought, however, is opposed to the whole burden of revelation. If God considered us of such worth that He sent His Son to be our Savior and Redeemer, surely we ought to look upon ourselves as possessed of great intrinsic value. But while this commandment implies that we owe duties to ourselves, yet it throws the emphasis on the duties we owe to others. The Master takes for granted that men love themselves, that they are mindful of their own interests—though He recognizes that this love and interest is not always intelligent—and what He seeks to do is to lead them to an interest in the welfare of their neighbors similar to that which they have in their own.

Most men are ready to acknowledge that Jesus spoke wisely when He exhorted men to think not only of their own things, but also of the things of others. We say "most men," because there have not been wanting those in all ages who have advocated what is known among ethical writers as Hedonism, i. e., that the individual should be concerned only about his own happiness, that there is not, and that there ought not, to be such a thing as disinterested action. But while the advocates of this theory have always been few, the number of those who have been busy in large measure in putting it into practice has always been large. This is where our chief danger lies. It is not probable that we question the soundness of the Master's teaching, but it is to be feared that our practice lags far behind our knowledge. To what extent are we thinking and acting as those should think and act who acknowledge that they ought to love their neighbors as themselves? How prone we are to be so taken up with our own things as to be forgetful of the things of others! Is it not significant of our whole attitude that we write "I" with a capital letter, while we are content with a small letter when we write "you?" And as we look over the world and observe the actions of men, we cannot fail to be impressed by the appalling amount of selfishness that prevails, even among those who acknowledge the lordship of Jesus. Everywhere we perceive that "man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn." How many of our captains of industry are as much interested in their employees as in themselves? If they were, how long would child labor and sweat-shops continue? How many office-holders really look upon themselves as servants of the people? Do not the majority apparently look upon office as merely an opportunity to exploit the people? And then, as regards the ordinary citizen, how many are really as much interested in the welfare of the community as they are in their own welfare? Is public spirit a characteristic of the average citizen? Is an interest in the welfare and happiness of other individuals characteristic of the average person? And even where such an interest is apparent, is it not often a refined selfishness, as in the case of the Pharisee who showed kindness to those for whom they expected kindness? How many out of a genuine sympathy weep when others weep, and laugh when others laugh? How many are really concerned over the question whether others go up to heaven or down to perdition?

But while it is abundantly evident how far practice lags behind knowledge at this point, yet it is very easy to exaggerate, as do those sneering cynics who affirm that there is no such thing in this world as disinterested action and that the only real difference between virtue and vice is that the one is intelligent and the other unintelligent selfishness. Such as these do not reckon with all the facts. Notwithstanding the appalling amount of selfishness, there is an astounding amount of unselfishness. On every side there are those who, in large degree, are manifesting the spirit of Him who came not to be ministered unto, but to minister. Jesus did not live and die and rise again in vain.—The Presbyterian.

MR. SIMMS' FOURTH OF JULY.

Emily S. Windsor.

Ned and Harry Waters came into the garden one afternoon where their mother was sitting sewing under a big tree. They were talking very loudly and excitedly.

"Mean old man," Harry was saying.

"He's the meanest man around. I just hate him," added Ned.

"What's the matter, boys?" asked Mrs. Waters. "Of whom are you speaking?"

"Of old Mr. Simms," answered Harry. "He's so hateful."

"What about him?"

"Why, a lot of us were playing in that field next to his house, and he chased us away."

"Why did he do that?"

"He said we annoyed him, and we weren't doing anything but playing ball."

"He said we made too much noise," explained Ned.

"Well," said Mrs. Waters, "I guess you did. Half a dozen boys with a baseball can make a good deal of noise. That field belongs to Mr. Simms. If he doesn't want you to play in it, you will have to stay away from it."

"The other boys all go," grumbled Harry.

"That makes no difference. You two boys must not," returned his mother decidedly. "I'll not have you annoying any one."

"It's the only nice place around to play in," objected Ned.

"We'll not say anything more about it," said Mrs. Waters.

The two little boys grumbled a good deal about old Mr. Simms when they were alone, and called him a good many hard names.

"I wish we could do something real bad to him," said Harry, "to pay him back."

"He ought to be paid back," returned Ned.

During the next few days, whenever the two little boys passed Mr. Simms' house on their way to do some errand for their mother, they would see the old man walking about his garden leaning on a cane.

"You know he is almost blind," said Harry.

"And his wife is lame." It must be pretty hard for them," answered his brother.

"Well, it ought to be hard for him."

When they went in to supper on the evening before the Fourth of July their mother said:

"Your uncle has just telephoned that he wants you to go over to Carthage to-morrow afternoon. There's to be a procession and the Governor is to speak. I wish your father was at home to take you. But I guess it is safe enough for you to go over by yourselves. It's only a mile and a half."

Harry and Ned danced around in glee. They hadn't expected to have any fun on the Fourth, for their father had forbidden fireworks, as he could not be at home.

"Your uncle will be waiting for you at the end of the bridge at ten o'clock."

"My, won't it be just dandy!" exclaimed Ned.

As the two boys passed Mr. Simms' house the next morning on their way to Carthage, the old man and his wife were sitting on a bench in the garden. The boys heard him say: "Here it's the Fourth of July, and I can't get over to Carthage to see the celebration. Tom Smith always drove me over, and here his horse is gone lame. And I've always gone."

And his wife answered in a soft voice: "I'm so sorry, William. It's too bad for you to miss hearing the Governor."

"It's a good thing, you mean old man," muttered Harry as they passed on.

Suddenly Ned stood still. "Say, Harry, let's take him over with us? You know he can't see to go alone."

"Why, Ned Waters!" exclaimed Harry, "take that mean old man!"

"Yes. I feel sorry for him. He is so old and it's pretty hard not to hear the Governor. Come on, let's go back and tell him we'll take him. And he can go to dinner to uncle's with us. You know uncle is always so good to every one. Come on."

Harry grumbled a good bit, then followed Ned who was already going into Mr. Simms' garden.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

WHEN POLITENESS PAID.

Nellie May Pearce, Fayetteville, N. C.
(Aged Thirteen Years.)

"Good afternoon, sir," said a cheerful, boyish voice.

The shabbily dressed man turned around in surprise, but his sad face lighted up when he saw who had addressed him.

"Good afternoon, Fred," he said, "how is your mother to-day?"

After a few minutes of conversation, the two boys passed on.

Fred Norton, the younger boy, was about twelve years of age. His companion, Tom Larson, was a year older.

"Fred," said Tom, "why do you always speak to every one you meet? You don't catch me lowering myself to speak to a mill hand."

"I don't call it lowering oneself to speak to a friend, even if he is a mill hand. Anyway, my mother has always told me to be polite.

"Oh," was the sneering rejoinder, "another case of being tied to the mater's apron strings."

Fred flushed, but said quietly, "If you call obeying one's mother 'being tied to her apron strings,' then I am tied there safe and sound, and only too glad to be there."

"Well," said Tom, who certainly could not be accused of being tied to his mother's apron strings, "let every one follow his own tastes. Now, if that had been Mr. Jones, the lawyer, I would not have minded being polite, because I want that place in his office."

At this minute a stout, brisk man passed them. Both boys quickly drew off their caps. As Mr. Jones spoke to them, Fred fancied that he glanced rather keenly at Tom.

When Mr. Jones was out of earshot, Tom said, "Are you going to apply for that place in his office to-morrow?"

"Yes," was the reply, "because I need the money. I must get a job soon, and that is the kind I would like."

"Shucks," said Tom, scornfully, "I don't need the money, for I have all I need, but I want that place anyway."

When the two boys parted at the corner, Tom called out to Fred, "Now go home and help mother, dear, prepare supper."

This was just what Fred did.

After all the night work was done, and Fred and his mother were sitting before the fire, he told her about the conversation he had held with Tom Larson that afternoon.

"You did just right, my son," she said. "If you always do your duty by man and by God, your reward will surely come."

Nine o'clock the next morning found three boys in Mr. Jones' office. They were Fred Norton, Tom Larson and Sam Greene, a boy about nine years old. They had come to apply for the vacant place.

Mr. Jones told Sam that he was too young, and this left only Tom and Fred in the contest.

"Well," said Mr. Jones, with a smile, "I see that if I get an office boy to-day it will have to be one of you two. I'll take Fred."

Tom was greatly disappointed, and showed it plainly.

"May I ask, sir," he said, "your objection to me?"

"Yes," was the reply, "do you remember a certain conversation you two boys held yesterday?" Seeing by the color in Tom's face that he, at least, remembered, he continued, "Well, I was just back of you and could not help hearing what you said I want no boy in my employ who considers it beneath him to be polite to a mill hand."

This is only another case of when politeness pays.—Southern Churchman

GENERAL PERSHING.

The first American commander to lead troops in war on European soil, it is natural that General John J. Pershing should have "taken Paris by storm" last month, in the words of the newspaper correspondents. If some other American general had been charged with this highly important service, the people of France might have received him with equal enthusiasm, but it is certain that for the time being the traditions of American democracy, of American valor, as the French know them, are all embodied in Pershing. In Paris his six feet of soldierly presence means more than most of us can easily conceive, for to the French mind that well-knit figure typifies the might and the vigor of the elder Republic across the water to whose founding Lafayette gave the ardor of his youth.

At any rate, we at home know that when the Washington Administration sent "Jack" Pershing to head the American military contingent in France it selected for that responsible task a man who represents the very best that this generation has to offer as the product of our training for the soldier's profession. On the Mexican border, as successor to General Funston, he commanded the largest bodies of troops that have been assembled in this country since the disbanding of the Civil War armies. His difficult service in the Philippines was a test of his resourcefulness in the field, under hard conditions and far removed from his base. His leadership of the Mexican expedition last year was perhaps a still more trying experience—partly because he was less independent in command. Yet he obeyed orders and retained the respect of superiors and subordinates alike.

General Pershing was graduated from West Point thirty-one years ago and at once began active service in the Southwest. Since that time he has seen as much field duty as was possible for an American officer during three decades when the United States remained at peace, with the exception of the brief unpleasantness with Spain in 1898. In subjugating the hostile Moros, every soldierly quality was brought into play, and, in addition, there were administrative tasks that required the soundest of judgment and the firmest of wills.

The General is of Alsatian descent and was born in Missouri.—Review of Reviews for July.

Not Well Enough Known.

We cannot accomplish much in the treatment of dyspepsia however much we may temporarily relieve its symptoms, so long as the blood remains impure. It is a fact not well enough known by people generally that when the stomach, liver and other digestive organs are supplied with impure blood, the digestive process is impaired so as to cause faintness and loss of appetite and sometimes a deranged state of the intestines and in general all the symptoms of dyspepsia.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is of great service in dyspepsia, because it purifies the blood, making it the healthy stimulus the digestive organs must have for the proper performance of their duties. Hood's Sarsaparilla, especially if taken in a little hot water, has "a magic touch" in dyspepsia. Get it to-day.—Adv.

MACHINERY.

Several years ago a terrible wreck occurred on one of the greatest railway systems in the country. An express train, running at full speed, crashed into the rear end of an excursion train, with disastrous results.

Investigation showed that the block system was working perfectly. The signals of caution and then of danger had been set, but the engineer of the fast train had not seen them. While running at the rate of nearly a mile a minute, he had concentrated his attention inside the cab, upon some piece of mechanism which had not been working properly.

A high official of the road, in commenting upon the wreck, said the company had installed every device that human ingenuity could devise, and had done everything possible to safeguard the lives of their passengers. But they could not quite eliminate the human factor; at the last they had to depend upon a man. For the finest machine ever made lacks one thing—it has no brains.

There is some machinery in the Church that is oxidizing because it is not man-controlled. There are some plans which are doomed to failure, because they are not man-worked. For no plan will work itself.

Let us use the good machinery that we have, let us try the plans by which others have achieved success. The Duplex envelopes have helped to solve the problem of regular and systematic giving in many a church: have they been tried by your stewards? The plan of the Every-Member Canvass is good. Has a canvass been made in your church? The "One-Win-One" Campaign is a good plan. It was attended by remarkable success in Saint Louis, in 1914, and it has been tried with good results elsewhere. Have you, as a pastor, tried to multiply your efforts to win souls, by calling a number of faithful men and women to your aid?

We may have too many plans and methods, despite the fact that our name is Methodist. We may have too much machinery. But we are more lacking in machinists than we are overloaded with machinery. There is certainly no wisdom in having no definite plan. Plan your work, but work your plan.

SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

The ninth session of the Seashore Divinity School closed July 5. It was said to have been one of the most successful sessions of the school. Bishop W. A. Quayle, of the Methodist Episcopal Church; Rev. Charles Le Roy Goodell, D. D., of New York City; Rev. Henry Churchill King, President of Oberlin College, and Dr. John W. Shackford, head of the Teacher-Training Department of the General Sunday School Board of our Church, were the chief speakers.

Quite a number of undergraduates of the several patronizing Conferences took their Conference work at the Divinity School this year, and at the close of the session the Dean of the school, Dr. H. H. McNeill, pastor of First Church, Dothan, Ala., addressed the graduates, and gave diplomas to W. A. Mangum and W. F. Henderson, Jr., of Louisiana; J. F. De Bardeleben and D. Y. Register, of Alabama, and C. H. Strait, H. M. Johnson, O. H. Grice, S. T. Trotter, and E. H. Cooley, of Mississippi. Certificates were given to those who had completed the first, second, and third year courses, as follows: First year, J. M. Boykin, V. G. Clifford, and G. L. McNeese. Second year, R. A. Abrams, J. L. Lay, W. H. Myrick, C. P. Roberts, J. O. Wilson, and J. H. Jolly. Third year, M. J. Boutes, M. W. David, J. L. Evans, G. P. Jones, Guy Ray, S. C. Moody, M. D. Taylor, and T. B. Winstead.

Rev. C. W. Crisler, president of the Divinity School, and Rev. H. M. Ellis, publicity agent, spoke in high terms of the work of the faculty, and the faithful work of the students.

The prizes offered for the best essays on "How to Increase the Efficiency of the Country Church" were awarded as follows: Rev. C. D. Atkinson, $25; Rev. Roy Kleiser, $15, and Rev. Frank B. Hill, $10.

Rev. F. G. Hocutt, a superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, who has lived for years near the Camp-ground, when introduced to the school, announced that it was his desire to give his beautiful home, a short distance away, on the beach, to the General Board of Missions to be used as a home for training missionaries.

Rev. W. W. Holmes spoke feelingly of Mrs. Hocutt, who recently died, saying that she had been greatly missed during the session, because she had always kept fresh flowers on the pulpit, and had extended the greatest hospitality to the ministers.

The value of the home offered to the Board of Missions is said to be $14,000.

COMMISSION ON UNIFICATION.

The report of the Joint Commission on the Unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of their recent session held at Traverse City, Michigan, June 27-July 3, states that a tentative agreement was reached upon the following matters: The Church Conference; the Quarterly Conference; the Annual Conference; the composition and powers of the white Regional Conferences; the area, and boundaries, and powers of the Missionary Regional Conferences; the basis of representation in the General Conference, and the powers of the same, and the method of election, assignment and retirement of Bishops, together with a constitutional provision for the defining and fixing of the privileges, powers and duties of the Episcopacy. No definite action was taken with reference to the status of the Negro, and it is evident that the most difficult work of the Commission is yet in the future. The Commission adjourned, to meet in Savannah, Ga., January 23, 1918.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Sunday schools in Greensburg, La., joined in observing "Patriotic Sunday" in the auditorium of the new school building.

The Methodist Sunday school at Sardis, Miss., observed July 1 as Patriotic Sunday, and the offering was given to the Red Cross Society.

Forty-five young men in the army and navy are from First Church, Shreveport, La., and one of these is the son of the pastor, Dr. S. A. Steel.

The new pews of the North Main Street Church at Water Valley, Miss., have been paid for, and the church has nearly enough money to purchase carpeting.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, is visiting his parents at De Kalb, Miss., and will remain away from the city for three weeks.

Rev. E. R. Smoot, of Holly Springs, Miss., will assist Rev. A. H. Williams in a meeting at North Main Street Church, at Water Valley, Miss., the first week in August.

Rev. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Monroe District, Louisiana Conference, called at the Advocate office last Monday. He reported his district to be in good condition.

All reports from our church at Byhalia, Miss., where Rev. A. C. McCorkle is pastor, are ahead of last year. The assessments for Foreign and Domestic Missions have already been paid in full.

Among the speakers on the program of the vacation school for preachers at the Mississippi A. and M. College, at Starkville, were Rev. E. Nash Broyles, Rev. G. S. Harmon, and Revl J. R. Countiss.

The Baird Class, First Church, Shreveport, La., has an average attendance of one hundred every Sunday. This class recently purchased a $100 Liberty Bond, and also contributed $50 to the Y. M. C. A. work.

Reports indicate that the response to Mr. Hoover's appeal was general over our patronizing territory, while many Sunday schools responded to the request of the President to make July 1 "Patriotic Sunday."

A recent number of the Magnolia Gazette announced Dr. L. W. Cooper, of Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., would make an address at a Fourth of July celebration at the Progress Consolidated Schoolhouse.

Miss Wilcox, affectionately known by many as "Charlotte," who has been employed at Mary Werlein Mission for years, and was the close friend and helper of Mrs. Lily Meekins, is very sick in one of the hospitals of the city.

A very fine sacred concert was recently given at Parker Memorial Church, this city. The silver offering was placed to the credit of the intermediate department of the Sunday school, which has pledged $200 this year on the church debt.

Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of Parker Memorial Church, delivered the memorial address of the Grand Grove of Druids of Louisiana in their recent annual meeting in this city. The Parker Memorial choir furnished the music for the service.

Rev. W. B. Hogg, who has been commissioned a chaplain in the regular army, asks us to state that, while waiting for actual assignment, he would be glad to assist his brethren in meetings, if satisfactory dates can be arranged. His present address is Laurel, Miss.

Just to make him wonder where we got the news, and to show we do get the news, the big car of Rev. W. H. Coleman, pastor of our church at Alexandria, La., broke down about three weeks ago, several miles from town. He got in touch with an automobile doctor, and waited until relief came.

Rev. J. D. Harper, pastor of our church in Opelousas, La., has recently opened up a new preaching point at a small station on the Gulf Coast Line, on the Atchafalaya River. Opelousas is historic in Louisiana Methodism, being the seat of the organization of the Louisiana Conference, seventy years ago.

Rev. N. B. Harmon, pastor of our church in Magnolia, Miss., was one of the chief speakers at a rally recently held in the courthouse of Magnolia for the purpose of raising that town's quota of the $[illegible] fund now being raised throughout the country by the Y. M. C. A. for its work in the military training camps.

The St. Helena Echo, published at Greensburg, La., where Rev. Q. R. Henry is pastor, announced that the pastor was to begin a protracted meeting there last Sunday. Rev. T. A. McCormack, the accomplished pastor at Franklinton, La., was expected to do the preaching. We hope later to hear good reports from this meeting.

A very successful revival meeting has recently been closed in the Homer (La.) Baptist Church by Evangelist B. B. Comm, of Marshall, Texas. The pastor of the Methodist Church, Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., and his people co-operated in the meeting. There were fifteen or more additions to the Methodist Church, as a result of the meeting.

The remains of Governor G. D. Shands of New Orleans, announcement of whose death appeared in the Advocate of last week, were laid to rest in Berbesia Cemetery, Senatobia, Miss., July 2. The services were conducted by Rev. J. H. Brooks, pastor of the Methodist Church, and Rev. J. H. Holder, presiding elder of the Sardis District.

Rev. J. A. Wells, pastor on the Oak Ridge charge, Mississippi Conference, recently made announcement in the Vicksburg Herald of a meeting to begin at Porter's Chapel last Sunday, July 8, Rev. J. W. Price, of Hermanville, Miss., a former pastor on the Oak Ridge charge, and a man greatly loved by the people there, had been engaged to do the preaching.

The Daily Herald, of Vicksburg, Miss., in the issue of July [illegible] printed the sermon of Rev. O. S. Lewis, pastor of Gibson Memorial Church, on the Sunday preceding upon the subject of conserving our food supplies. The text of the discourse, which was a very able one, was found in John 6:12—"Gather up the fragments that remain that nothing be lost."

Mrs. C. T. Noble asks us to forward the Advocate to Allen, Alabama, as she will be there some time, on a visit to her parents. Her husband, Rev. C. T. Noble, is blind, and so cannot read the Advocate in her absence. Sister Noble writes that she has been a reader of the Advocate for eight years, and that it has been such a "stay" to her that she would not be without it.

The Memphis Commercial Appeal, under date of July 2, carried the following: "Rev. J. V. Bennett, Conference evangelist of the Methodist Church, has been assigned to the pastorate of the First Church of Laurel, to succeed Rev. W. B. Hogg, recently commissioned a chaplain in the regular army. Rev. Mr. Bennett will serve the Laurel church until the end of the Conference year."

The readers of the Advocate will regret to learn that Rev. H. Armstrong, a veteran of the Louisiana Conference, living at Olla, La., recently sustained a very painful and serious accident. He fell from the porch of his house, severely injuring his left knee and foot, and bruising the left shoulder. He writes that he has suffered great pain and that he has no relish for food.

In sending in two subscriptions to the Advocate, Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle, of Longview, Miss., states that a Sunday school rally will be held at Steele's Chapel, July 14. He writes that the second quarterly conference on his charge was marked by great interest, that the material showing was good, and that the presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Woollard, did some very able preaching.

Announcement was made in the daily press that Bishop J. H. McCoy, of Birmingham, was to preach the sermon at the laying of the cornerstone of the new Methodist church to be erected at Cleveland, Miss. The material for the building has already been purchased, and is being received. It is said that the edifice, when completed, will be one of the most handsome and artistic in the Delta. The pastor of the church and leader in the movement is the Rev. T. M. Bradley.

Rev. W. J. Ferguson, of Fifth Street, Meridian, was in the city last week, and called on Wednesday at the Advocate office. He reported that a city-wide campaign was on in Meridian, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., of which Mr. J. B. Holland is secretary. Rev. Burke Culpepper was doing the preaching, and Prof. Coffin was leading the singing. All the churches were co-operating, and a large tent, capable of seating about 5000 people, was being used. It was the opinion of Brother Ferguson that the meeting was surpassing any ever held in Meridian.

We are greatly indebted to the following brethren for sending in two or more subscriptions to the Advocate: Rev. M. E. Scott, Marietta, Miss.; Rev. C. L. Oakes, Ebenezer, Miss.; Rev. A. L. Davenport, Corinth, Miss.; Rev. O. S. Lewis, Vicksburg, Miss.; Rev. J. M. Guinn, Brooksville, Miss.; Rev. J. Tillery Lewis, Greenville, Miss.; Rev. R. S. Lawson, Abbeville, Miss.; Rev. W. D. Bennett, Sardis, Miss.; Rev. R. M. Evans, Calhoun City, Miss., and Rev. T. E. Gregory, Caledonia, Miss.; Rev. F. H. McGee, Cockrum, Miss.; Rev. D. R. McDougall, Kossuth, Miss.

We are printing this week a very interesting article from the Lincoln County Times concerning the opening of the splendid church at Brookhaven, Miss. This costly structure is the last word in modern church building, having every convenience and facility for every department of church work. It is an imposing building along simple and classic lines. It is situated on the main street of the town, next to the government building, and just across the street from Whitworth College. The work was enterprised during the pastorate of Rev. J. M. Morse, and completed by Rev. C. W. Crisler, the present pastor.

Recently a patriotic service was held in Macon, Miss., where Rev. E. Nash Broyles is the pastor. Boy Scouts, in full uniform, and a number of little girls, each representing one of the allied countries, took part in the program, which was interesting and inspiring throughout. The subject of the pastor's address was "The United States Enters the Great World War." The Macon Beacon printed a part of the address, and spoke of the pastor and his address thus: "Rev. Mr. Broyles, who always gives the impression of being at his best, inspired by the seriousness of the situation calling for this occasion, and spurred on by the immensity of his theme, more than excelled in presenting his views, and in the earnestness of his closing appeal to the manhood of the country to rally to and stand by the flag and all that it represents."

BEYOND THE SUNSET.

I watch the sunset as I look out over the rim of the blue Pacific, and there is no mystery beyond the horizon line, because I know what there is over there. I have been there. I have journeyed in those lands. Over there where the sun is just setting is Japan. That star is rising over China. In that direction lies the Philippines. I know all that. Well, there is another land that I look toward as I watch the sunset. I have never seen any one who has been there, but it has a more abiding reality than any of these lands which I do know. This land beyond the sunset—this land of immortality, this fair and blessed country of the soul—why, this heaven of ours is the one thing in the world which I know with absolute, unshaken, unchangeable certainty. This I know with a knowledge that is never shadowed by a passing cloud of doubt. I may not always be certain about this world; my geographical locations may sometimes become confused, but the other—that I know. And as the afternoon sun sinks lower, faith shines more clearly, and hope, lifting her voice in a higher key, sings the songs of fruition. My work is about ended, I think. The best of it I have done poorly; any of it I might have done better, but I have done it. And in a fairer land, with finer material and better working light, I shall do a better work.—Robert Burdette.

TWO WAYS OF TELLING A STORY.

By Henry K. Oliver.

In one of the most populous cities of New England, a few years ago, a party of lads, all members of the same school, got up a grand sleigh ride. The sleigh was a very large one, drawn by six gray horses.

On the following day, as the teacher entered the schoolroom, he found his pupils in high glee, as they chattered about the fun and frolic of their excursion. In answer to some inquiries, one of the lads gave him an account of their trip and its various incidents.

As he drew near the end of his story, he exclaimed: "Oh, sir! there was one thing I had almost forgotten. As we were coming home, we saw ahead of us a queer looking affair in the road. It proved to be a rusty old sleigh, fastened behind a covered wagon, proceeding at a very slow rate, and taking up the whole road.

"Finding that the owner was not disposed to turn out, we determined upon a volley of snowballs and a good hurrah. They produced the right effect, for the crazy machine turned out into the deep snow, and the skinny old pony started on a full trot.

"As we passed, some one gave the horse a good crack, which made him run faster than he ever did before, I'll warrant.

"With that, an old fellow in the wagon, who was buried up under an old hat, bawled out, 'Why do you frighten my horse?' 'Why don't you turn out, then?' says the driver. So we gave him three rousing cheers more. His horse was frightened again, and ran up against a loaded wagon, and, I believe, almost capsized the old creature—and so we left him."

"Well, boys," replied the teacher, "take your seats, and I will tell you a story, and all about a sleigh ride, too. Yesterday afternoon a very venerable old clergyman was on his way from Boston to Salem, to pass the rest of the winter at the house of his son. That he might be prepared for journeying in the following spring he took with him his wagon, and for the winter his sleigh, which he fastened behind the wagon.

"His sight and hearing were somewhat blunted by age, and he was proceeding very slowly; for his horse was old and feeble, like his owner. He was suddenly disturbed by loud hurrahs from behind, and by a furious pelting of balls of snow and ice upon the top of his wagon.

"In his alarm he dropped his reins, and his horse began to run away. In the midst of the old man's trouble, there rushed by him, with loud shouts, a large party of boys, in a sleigh drawn by six horses. 'Turn out! turn out, old fellow!' 'Give us the road!' 'What will you take for your pony?' 'What's the price of oats, old man?' were the various cries that met his ears.

"'Pray, do not frighten my horse!' exclaimed the infirm driver. 'Turn out, then! turn out!' was the answer, which was followed by repeated cracks and blows from the long whip of the 'grand sleigh,' with showers of snowballs, and three tremendous hurrahs from the boys.

"The terror of the old man and his horse was increased, and the latter ran away with him, to the great danger of his life. He contrived, however, to stop his horse just in season to prevent his being dashed against a loaded wagon. A short distance brought him to the house of his son. That son, boys, is your instructor, and that 'old fellow,' was your teacher's father!"

When the boys perceived how rude and unkind their conduct appeared from another point of view, they were very much ashamed of their thoughtlessness, and most of them had the manliness to apologize to their teacher for what they had done.—McGuffey's Fourth Reader.

MEMORIES AND A REVERIE OF A FRIEND.

'Twas just a year ago she left us,
And no more on earth our joys and sorrows she will share;
But just beyond the shining gates of pearl she's waiting,
And from her heart the Father's hand has soothed each care.

She left us, and to-night our hearts are aching,
With loneliness and longing deep bowed down;
But oh, the tender memories that come crowding,
Wreathing our hearts with beauteous thoughts around.

She lived and wrought among us gladly, bravely,
And when the Master called she went away:
"Come home, my child; you've finished all life's lessons—
Fold up the tangled web of life to-day.

"Close up the book whose lessons sometimes saddden,
And leave your cherished garden where the buds sometimes decay.
The lesson, once so sad, to-day your heart will gladden;
The bud that faded there will bloom within your arms to-day.

"Some day the angels will the web untangle,
And show the glorious pattern that you strive for so;
But now, my child, fold up the weaving,
And know the rest and joy that only brave hearts know."

"Master, I have yet one task unfinished—one that thou gavest me;
Unopened yet within my garden lingers our fairest bud—
Its lily petals have not yet unclosed in perfect bloom;
I would stay by and tend and train and keep it pure and good!

"How can I leave unto the care of others, this bud, my youngest-born?
How leave to other eyes the golden heart's unfolding fair,
I have so watched and trained and tended through life's early morning?
Oh, Father, let me now my fairest bud's bright blossoming share!"

"Leave in my love and care this tender blossom;
Safe in my arms I will sustain and guard its blossoming."
And so, with heart serene, content, upon His bosom
She laid her cherished flowers and this tenderest bud of Spring.

And so the web of life by angel hands was folded up,
And life's book was laid beside it to await the final day;
And so she left her garden where each flower held high its golden cup;
But one bright bud, unfolded still, in the Master's kind care lay.

But one day the book of life its deepest lessons will unseal,
And the web unfolded will the perfect pattern show—
May one day her flowers, all gathered by the Master's hand, reveal
Not one missing, and her heart its deepest joy will know.

For just beyond the gates of pearl she's waiting for her blossom;
By love may it be sheltered in His arms from every blast—
Find joy and strength and shelter in his bosom,
Lift up its snowy, golden-hearted chalice safe when all storms are past.

Your Greatest Problem—That Boy of Yours.

What kind of a man will he be ten, twenty, thirty years from now? You know, every parent knows, that it depends entirely upon the training he is getting right now, his associations, his ideals, his inspirations.

Mr. Robert K. Morgan, Principal of the Morgan School, Fayetteville, Tenn., has been training boys for twenty-five years. He wants your boy. He recognizes in him one of the men who may some day manage big affairs and he wants to train him for that end. His school has been built and equipped, and his instructors chosen with the first and only consideration of giving the boy the mental and physical training, the associations, with clean, high-minded men, the ideals of character, the inspirations to ambition, which the world expects in the men to whom it entrusts its greatest affairs, be they business, professional, religious or social.

Robert K. Morgan is a Christian gentleman of strong, wholesome, inspiring personality, and his school is the material projection of that character. He is a graduate of Webb School, Bellbuckle, Tenn., and the Vanderbilt University.

The boy deserves your most careful thought. Write Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Fayetteville, Tennessee, to-day, and let him send you a catalogue and tell you what this school can do for your boy.

Mrs. H. R. CALDWELL (nee Miss Mary Anna King) was born near Holly Springs, Miss., on March 15, 1842, and died at Old Dentville, Copiah County, Miss., on June 20, 1917, at the home of her only son, Dr. J. L. Robertson. We laid her body to rest in the cemetery at Mount Olive, Miss., by the side of the body of her husband, the late Rev. H. R. Caldwell, of the Mississippi Conference. The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by her pastor, Rev. T. B. Cottrell, and Rev. J. L. Neill. Sister Caldwell had been twice married. She had one son by her first marriage, Dr. J. L. Robertson, of Dentville, who lives to mourn his loss. She married Rev. H. R. Caldwell in Holly Springs in November, 1872. Sister Caldwell was a faithful itinerant preacher's wife from the day of their marriage until the death of Brother Caldwell, November 25, 1915. She was never well in mind or body after Brother Caldwell's death. She was practically helpless for several months before her death. But now she is reunited with those who have preceded her to the mansion above.

IN MEMORIAM.

Whereas God, in His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to call from an earthly to a heavenly home Mrs. M. M. Hayes, our oldest member, and for many years our faithful Recording Secretary, therefore be it resolved:

That we, the members of Opelousas Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, do hereby express our appreciation of her godly life, and our loss in the translation to a higher life of this consecrated worker.

That in our meetings we shall greatly miss her cheery presence, and words of helpfulness and inspiration. Her beautiful life is ended here, but the influence of it will abide.

That we extend to her loved ones our deepest sympathy in their bereavement, and commend them to Him who doeth all things well, and whom she served so long and faithfully.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our deceased friend and sister; that copies be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and the St. Landry Clarion for publication, and that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the mintes of our Society.

THOMAS JAMES REED.

A great character is the product of many forces. Chief among these is a noble ancestry. It is much to be well born: Among the earliest settlers in the Natchez country were the ancestors of Thomas James Reed. His parents were Thomas and Mary Forman Reed. Major Thomas Reed was, during his long life, a leading lawyer and citizen of Mississippi. Thomas Reed was born on December 20, 1864, in Jefferson County, Miss., and died at Natchez, Miss., May 17, 1917. In early youth he consecrated his life to the service of the Lord Jesus Christ, and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Fayette, Miss. In 1880 he transferred his membership to the Jefferson Street Methodist Church, Natchez, of which he was a faithful and consistent member, and was for many years a steward and superintendent of the Sunday school. On April 25, 1901, he was united in marriage to Miss Estelle Ogden, the ceremony being performed in New Orleans by Rev. B. M. Palmer, D. D., a friend of the family, assisted by Dr. Dunbar H. Ogden, brother of Mrs. Reed. To this devoted couple were born three children—Elizabeth Ogden, Estelle Forman, and Thomas James. Their home life was ideally beautiful. In the truest sense of the word, it was a Christian home. All the children, though very young, are members of the Church. The hearts of the parents were gladdened when, early in the present year, little Thomas, ten years of age, volunntarily united with the Jefferson Street Methodist Church.

Brother Reed had many points of contact with the life of the community. Possessing in a large degree the elements of leadership, exhibiting courtesy, kindliness, a high sense of honor and a keen regard for all the conventionalities of life that make for refinement, his was a strong personality that made his companionship delightful and elevating. He was intensely patriotic and took an active interest in all affairs that concerned the welfare of the community and State. Broad catholicity characterized his religious convictions. While he loved the Church of his choice with an unswerving loyalty, he could say to every Christian: "Is thy heart right as my heart is with thy heart? If it is, give me thy hand." "Unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace" guided him in all his relations in life, whether at home or in business. For many years he faithfully and zealously served his church in various capacities—as a delegate to the various Conferences, as superintendent of the Sunday school, and as a steward: and these services he continued to render until physical disability made it impossible. He had a passion for Sunday school work, and in this his zeal was not limited by denominational lines. As a counselor, he was at all times wise and safe.

For more than a year Brother Reed suffered from Bright's disease; yet he met the enemy that threatened his life with a heroic courage and habitual cheerfulness that can be accounted for only by divine grace and an unswerving faith in his Master, whom he loved. For more than a year, as his pastor and friend, I was intimately associated with him. We have had many heart-to-heart talks, and we have prayed together. I was with him nearly to the end. Just before he entered into rest, he opened his eyes, and smiled in recognition as his hand feebly pressed mine. Without a struggle, his gentle spirit passed away into the presence of Him whom he had known and loved and trusted. His genial, smiling face will be seen no longer by us here, but his triumphant faith and habitual optimism should be a constant inspiration to us all.

Brother Reed had several brothers and sisters who preceded him years ago into the better world. He leaves but one brother—between whom there existed the most devoted attachment—Hon. Richard Forman Reed, late one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Mississippi.

His funeral services were conducted by the pastor in the Jefferson Street Methodist Church in the presence of a large and sympathetic congregation of friends. His body was laid to rest in the city cemetery.

To his beloved and faithful companion, to his loving children, and to his devoted brother, the writer tenders this inadequate expression of his love and sympathy for the irreparable loss of our honored brother in Christ.

Natchez, Miss. C. F. EMERY.

A ONE HUNDRED PER CENT PEOPLE.

It is a pleasing coincidence that the Red Cross campaign for $100,000,000, which immediately followed the conclusion of the Liberty Loan campaign resulted in an oversubscription of practically the same percentage as the oversubscription to the loan. The American people are well over 100 per cent patriotic and well over 100 per cent generous.—U. S. Publicity Bureau.

HEADACHES AND OTHER ACHES AND PAINS.

Pain keeps the thoughts of the sufferer continuously on the ailment that is that causing the pain, and in this way it acts to retard recovery.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are their own best advertisers. The wonderful degree of success that they have met with for more than 25 years has been entirely due to their efficiency.

Users are willing to concede that these pills do all that is claimed for them. That is, they promptly relieve headache, backache, neuralgia, rheumatic pains, monthly pains, and almost every other kind of ache or pain and do this without any bad after-effects.

And if the sufferer finds rest from the pain that weakens the mind and harrasses the nerves pending treatment for the cause of the pain he certainly should be satisfied.

Furthermore, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills do not constipate, do not derange the stomach or leave any disagreeable after-effects when taken as directed.

If you suffer from any ache or pain you will not be out any money to try these pills. Go to your druggist and purchase one box of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. Use them as directed and if the results are not satisfactory return the empty package to the druggist and he will immediately return you your money. No questions will be asked. You are the judge of the merits of these pills. Could anything be fairer than this?

MRS. J. M. NABORS.

Whereas our Heavenly Father, in his all-wise providence, has seen fit to take from us our beloved associate, Mrs. Mary Lee Nabors, therefore be it resolved:

1. That we, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Mansfield, La., bow in humble submission to His will, realizing that our loss is her gain.

2. That we extend to her stricken relatives and friends our deepest sympathy, and pray that the Holy Spirit may comfort and sustain them in their great bereavement.

3. That our Society has lost a true friend and co-worker, who was ever ready to do her part.

4. That the Church has lost a faithful and devoted member, whose service was marked all through her life.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, The Mansfield Enterprise, to each member of her family, and that they be spread on our minutes.

Signed by: Mrs. Jno. B. Williams, Mrs. J. W. Dean, Mrs. R. E. Bobbitt, Committee.

A GOOD RECORD.

The following report of his services has been furnished by Brother E. A. Vail, 525 Howard Avenue, this city, who has been active in various forms of Christian work for many years.

From April 20, 1890, up to date, there have been 2,017,900 tracts, books and illustrated papers distributed. Visits have been made to the Prison Gate Reform, and much good has been accomplished in the country, and in this wicked city of New Orleans. Visits have been made among the sick and the poor, and they have been aided, when funds were on hand to minister to their wants. Medicine has been bought, and clothing and repaired shoes have been distributed, and much good has been done. Visits have been made to the Parish Prison, and much work has been done in a general way. The Golden Rule has been carried out, and much heart-to-heart work has been done. A room has been rented, where tracts, temperance papers, and books can be kept. Souls have been saved by distributing religious matter, and by personal work in this city and in the country.

Yours truly,
E. A. VAIL.

Freckles

The fairer the skin the more ugly it is when marred by freckles; and they are not necessary at all. As soon as the warm sunshine or the hot winds bring them out, and with the natural embarrassment that every woman feels, get a package of Kintho; this is the easy way to remove them. If Kintho is used at the first sign of the ugly spots, they'll sometimes disappear overnight. Any druggist has or can get Kintho for you. Use Kintho soap too. It's astonishing how it helps keep the freckles away once Kintho has removed them.

All Choked Up With Catarrh? Why Continue Makeshift Treatment?

Sprays and douches will never cure you.

Catarrh is annoying enough when it chokes up your tonsils and air passages, causing painful and difficult breathing and other discomforts. But the real danger comes when it reaches down into your lungs.

This is why you should at once realize the importance of the proper treatment, and lose no time experimenting with worthless remedies which touch only the surface. To be rid of Catarrh you must drive the disease germs out of your blood.

Splendid results have been reported from the use of S. S. S., which completely routs from your blood the Catarrh germs, for which it is a perfect antidote.

S. S. S. is sold by all druggists. If you wish medical advice as to the treatment of your own individual case, write to-day to Chief Medical advisers, Swift Specific Co., Dept. B., Atlanta, Ga.

DOING GREAT GOOD AT THIS SEASON

A superlative blood-purifying medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, combined with a superlative iron tonic like Peptiron Pills, makes the ideal all-round treatment. No other medicines possess such curative properties as these two working together.

Two dollars invested in these two medicines will bring better results than four dollars spent in any other course of treatment or attendance. It will be wise to get them today.

What a Pity!

Isn't it a pitiful sight to see a handsome face covered with pimples and other scaly patches? And it is still more pitiable that some people allow these cutaneous troubles to continue, growing worse each day, when the simple treatment of applying Tetterine salve will entirely eliminate skin troubles and will restore the skin to its normal health. 50c a box. SOUTHERN METHODIST WOMEN AND WAR.

The Woman's Missionary Council is sending a war program to the churches and missionary societies with the following outlines:

1. Every woman is urged to pray daiiy that our men may be pure and sustained by the consciousness of the presence and the power of God.

2. Every auxiliary is urged to organize prayer circies; to iist aii soldiers, officers, and trained nurses who have gone out from the Church or congregation on scroiis hung on the waiis of the church. These names are aiso to be sent to Mrs. R. W. MacDoneii, Secretary of Woman's Home Work, 810 Broadway, Nashviile, Tenn. A War Committee is to be organized in each society to attend to this work. The chairman is to see that messages are sent from the home Church and congregation to the soldiers at the front and to keep the home Church informed.

3. Actlvities for Churches near Mobiiization Camps.—A Federated War Committee, composed of representatives from each auxiiiary of the Woman's Missionary Society or the church within the city where there is a mobiiization camp, is to be organized. The District Secretary is to be chairman of this Federated Committee. A scroii with the names of the men in the camp will be piaced in the churches near these camps. "Pleasant Sunday afternoons," Sunday dinners, special mid-week social and religious meetings, in co-operation with the reiigious and social workers at the camps, are urged as activities. Above everything eise, aii of the women of the Church are urged to be much in the spirit of prayer during these days of strife.

JUNE ACTIVITIES AT ST. MARK'S HALL, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Sewing School.

June 1 there were sixty-five present at the ciosing of the sewing schooi. The exhibitlon of work was most interesting. The models were mounted in books and given to the pupils. The crochet ciass, dressmaking department and littie mothers' ciass were aii represented in the exhibit. Mrs. Todd had the story hour. Mrs. Parker, our president, made a most interesting taik. A diploma was presented to our graduate, who wore a white dress which she had made. Ice cream cones were served.

The kindergarten class from the sewing school had their ciosing treat at the City Park. Mrs. Sanders took them in her automobiie. Their visit to the museum and the play grounds was followed by a treat of ice cream.

Vacation School.

Learning that for want of funds the pubiic school had abandoned the summer work, we have begun a vacation school for our children who have much unoccupied time during the summer months. There are classes in kindergarten work, doll dressmaking, basketry, fancy work and sewing. Boys are admitted to the basketry ciass.

Mothers' Club.

This organization has had a busy month. At a regular meeting, Miss Kate Gordon and Mrs. Schertz were our guests. The mothers were much interested in Miss Gordon's talk on tuberculosis, and her map showing local conditions. As a result, the mothers had a part in the anti-tuberculosis campaign. They canvassed twenty-four square blocks, making 424 calls and collecting $20.25, besides distributing literature. I wonder if any other mothers' club can beat this record.

In the evening of June 18 a delightful program was given under the auspices of the Mothers' Club. The chapel was filled—the entertainers came from various parts of the city. After the program was given, refreshments were served in the yard which was lighted by Japanese lanterns. As a result the Mothers' Club will have between ten and fifteen dollars to apply in the new laboratory for the clinic.

The Clinic.

This department has had a full month. There are two new afternoon clinics, Monday and Saturday, for ear, nose, and throat, in charge of Dr. Israel. Dr. Hume has the eye, ear, nose and throat clinics each Thursday afternoon; Dr. King, the general clinics on Tuesdays and Fridays. The attendance has been unusually large.

Statistics: Number of general clinics, 5; number of patients, 233; number of eye clinics, 4; number of patients, 55; number of ear, nose and throat clinics, 6; number of patients, 25. Total number of patients, 313.—St. Mark's Bulletin.

VIRGINIA K. JOHNSON HOME.

Mrs. M. L. Stone.

He who said to the woman whom sinful men thought to stone, "Neither do I condemn thee," and gave the water of life to the woman of Samaria, with power to lead many souls to Him, still displays His love and mercy in saving the lost.

Our girls come to us, each having lost faith in the man who so won her love that she cast the crown of her womanhood at his feet. Consequently they have no faith in themselves nor in mankind, and only wish to die. But the beautiful songs and the religious services soon lead them to believe that God loves them and that he offers forgiveness of sins and a chance to begin life anew. We have family worship every morning in the dining room, again at supper, and have one hour in the chapel for instruction and worship every evening except Monday. This makes such an atmosphere in the Home that in a few months the change of expression is so noticeable that we can but know the thoughts of the heart are changed.

There are some of our girls in and around Dallas who are living such pure, clean lives that a lady who knows some of them intimately said: "I am almost persuaded that their past is an ugly dream. They live so far above anything of that kind now that it seems impossible to believe that they have ever fallen." They are respected by those who know the unfortunate past. Some have married and are making happy homes; some are doing Christian work; one is a missionary in a foreign field. Shall we not make the power of the gospel here more effective by a larger equipment?

OUR MISTAKES.

Sometimes they entail very serious consequences, do they not? Even though we had no bad intention when we made them, they have a perverse way of overlooking that absence of wrong motive and keep on dogging our steps long after we think we ought to have escaped them. Of course, that fact ought to teach us the necessity for greater care and wisdom. A sensible man ought to take his mistakes somewhat seriously and let them instruct him for the future. But one of the most serious mistakes we can make in life is to take our mistakes too seriously. If we are guilty of that folly then our mistakes cease to be helpful factors in our lives, and become drags and fetters, checking and hampering us at every hand. In thinking of our mistakes and their sometimes serious consequences it is well to remember that there are great reconstructive and recreative forces at work in life that are very actively on the side of the man who is determined to improve upon a bad or foolish past. And that brings hope, no matter how great the mistakes have been.—Christian Guardian.

CALOMEL SELDOM SOLD HERE NOW

Every druggist in town—your druggist and everybody's druggist—has noticed a great falling-off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

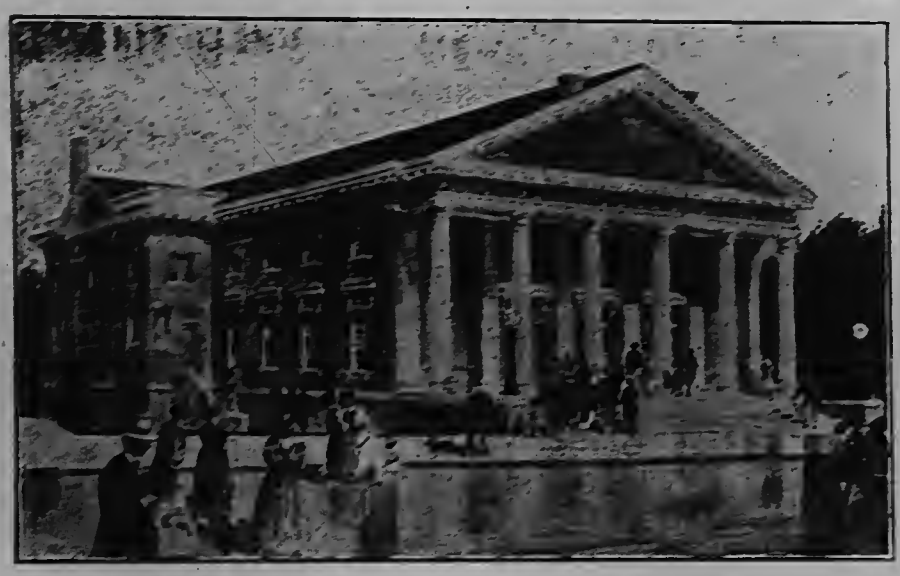
BROOKHAVEN METHODIST CHURCH OPENING

Methodists of Brookhaven last Sunday, June 24, occupied for the first time as a preaching service their splendid new church home, for which ground was broken last September. An immense congregation was present, filling the great auditorium, to hear the sermon offered by the pastor, Rev. C. W. Crisler, who chose as his subject "The Vision of Isaiah." The sermon was a strong presentation of the opportunities and duties of mankind for service.

Special music was arranged for the occasion, including an anthem by the choir, a vocal solo by Mrs. Willoughby, and violin solo by Miss Adele McNair.



At night another great audience gathered, augmented by worshipers from the Baptist and Presbyterian Churches, who canceled their services in order to rejoice with the Methodist brethren in the occupancy of their new home. Rev. W. H. Morgan, pastor of the Baptist Church, preached, from the text "Have faith in God," a striking and stirring sermon. Rev. W. H. Hill, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, was present and assisted in the service. Dr. I. W. Cooper was master of ceremonies.

It is noteworthy that the Rev. Mr. Crisler was also pastor when the first brick church was opened—the building which was outgrown and gave way to the splendid new plant. He referred to the opening in 1910, and stated that he did not expect to officiate at another like event in Brookhaven, for the present plant will accommodate a great deal of growth.

This building is of dark red pressed brick, and is handsome indeed. It has been pronounced by visiting churchmen most admirably arranged. Its main auditorium will seat about 1000, with additional room in ample balconies. More than thirty rooms are furnished for the Sunday school classes, including organized classes. The choir is taken care of, and provision has been made for the installation of a pipe organ. The Women's Society is provided for; the church officers have a meeting place, the pastor a study; there is a kitchen—in fact, the church is a compact, conveniently arranged plant for the carrying on of religious work in all lines. L. E. Gaisford, of Memphis, was the architect and the Garber Construction Company, of Jackson, were the contractors. Not all the bills are in hand yet, some awaiting adjustments between sub-contractors and material men, but to date the amount expended is $43,484.11. The cost of the lot was $3500; seats, $2500; windows, $1200; lights, $530; and paid on building contract, walks, and other items, $35,754.11.—Lincoln County Times, Brookhaven, Miss., June 28.

A MESSAGE TO THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Arrangements are being made for a systematic appeal to the Sunday schools of the various Christian denominations of the United States in behalf of the Red Cross work. The work is to be under the general direction of the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations, but is to be carried on through denominational channels. Each denomination, through its duly authorized agencies, is to receive and give credit for money raised in its Sunday schools.

Full information in regard to aims and plans will be given later to individual Sunday schools. Meanwhile schools which have already taken collections should forward them to the undersigned, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tennessee.

Accurate accounts will be kept for charges, districts, and Conferences, and reports will be made from time to time. Remember that you will receive no denominational credit for your contributions if they are not made through the regular denominational channels.

E. B. CHAPPELL,
Sunday School Editor.

IT IS THE PEOPLE'S WAR.

The great fact that stands out above all the rest is that this is a people's war, a war for freedom and justice and self-government among all the nations of the world, a war to make the world safe for the peoples who live upon it and have made it their own.—Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States.

Scientific Treatment For Rheumatism.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a salt combination scientifically prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says: "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief; too much can not be spoken in behalf of 'Renwar' for rheumatism." SOME PLEASANT FACTS.

The Liberty Loan of 1917 was a great success in whatever aspect it is considered. The Government called for two billion dollars and over three billion dollars was subscribed for by more than four million people. This large subscription and this great number of subscribers were obtained, after a short campaign, from a Nation that as a people were not accustomed to purchasing Government bonds. The spirit with which vast numbers of citizens and organizations worked to make the loan a success is not an unimportant element in making the loan not merely a success but a triumph.

It should be remembered, too, that the bond issues of other nations were sold when the foe was either on their territory or at their very gates. Our bonds were sold when danger was far from us. There was no duress, there was no hysteria, and there was but little war spirit. The bonds were bought in the calm exercise of patriotism and sound business judgment after a campaign of education and information.

Richmond, Va., the old capital of the Confederacy, bought a Liberty Bond for every five inhabitants. Montana, in the far West, largely exceeded its quota of bonds. Little villages all over the country exceeded their quotas as the metropolis of the country greatly exceeded its. There was hardly a State, city, or community that did not do the same. Poor crop conditions, a recent great fire, and other local causes resulted in two districts falling a little below their allotments, but the large oversubscription everywhere else more than made up for this unavoidable deficiency. Cities with large foreign-born populations subscribed as liberally as others.

The united spirit of the American people, the solidarity of the Nation, made up as it is of people from all nations, have been demonstrated.

A second loan is contemplated within the next few months. The same things that made the initial loan of two billion dollars a success will operate to make the new one equally successful. In fact, the information regarding Government bonds and finances now possessed by the people of the country will make the placing of the next issue of bonds less difficult. Those subscribers of the first issue who were not allotted their full subscription will give the new issue a start of more than a billion dollars, since it may be regarded as certain that they will not lose the opportunity to obtain the amount of Government bonds desired.—U. S. Publicity Bureau.

Editorial

"Our days of praise shall ne'er be past
While life, and thought, and being last,
And immortality endures."

The only way to purify one's life is to purify one's heart, and this the Holy Spirit alone, in response to penitence and faith, can do.

* * *

In dealing with any perplexing problem in life, do not forget that assistance may bo found through prayer. God can accomplish what you never could.

* * *

In Christian work true success never comes in a haphazard way; on the contrary, it is achieved in tho largest measure by him who discovers and makes the most of passing opportunities.

It belongeth not to any human being to have his own will fully realized in his life. Even Jesus was denied this. The will of the Divine Father is best for all, because back of it lies infinite wisdom, love, and strength. There is sound philosophy in praying, "Thy will, not mine, be done."

* * *

A church can get along somehow without almost anything else except the presence and power of God; but if that be wanting, it is a dead church, whatever else it may possess. And this most indispensable possession, like God's best gifts in nature, is within the reach of the poorest and most obscure congregation.

* * *

When men are shrewdly manipulating things to achieve an end, it ill becomes them to pour forth a flood of pious talk about the need of Divino leadership. God is not given to leading in any movement that is promoted by methods that are not guileless and straightforward, and calling upon him under such circumstances is nothing short of blasphemy.

Those who are without physical sight are not the only ones on earth who are blind. To be without spiritual perception is worse than be without material vision. It was of unperceiving souls that Jesus said, "Having eyes, they see not." How numerous are thoso in this class, and oh, how they need the touch of the Master that they may be given discernment! Are we striving to lead all such to Him? This is the Christian's appointed task.

It should be remembered that the Christian religion has been divinely revealed to man. In this respect it differs from the sciences which are only discoveries and formulations of finite minds. The latter are incomplete, and hence must be ever changing, though even they have fundamental principles that endure. But having been set forth by God himself, the essential truths of the Bible aro immutable. They must be tho same for all ages and for all men, until the end of time. They may possibly be seen by succeeding generations in a wider range and larger fulness, hut for them there are no substitutes. "The grass withereth; the flower fadeth; but the Word of our God shall stand forever." (Isaiah 40:8.)

THE NATION'S RELIGIOUS ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

The only flag that ever flies above the hanner of the Stars and Stripes is a pennant which bears upon it the picture of a Cross. It is hoisted to the top of the staff when the time for religious worship arrives. Thus does the mightiest power upon the globe make acknowledgment to the yet mightier Power which created and maintains the universe. However far short of exhibiting the spirit of Christ our country may fall, to this extent at least its government is Christian.

The significance of this practice is thus interpreted by The Outlook: "The flying of that pennant is the answer which such a Nation as ours gives to thoso arch-infidels who deny that tho State owes allegiance to any power other than itself. It is the answer to those who contend that might makes right. It is the answer to those who act on the assumption that there is no obligation resting on the government of any nation to observe its pledged word or to act in accord with the dictates of conscience."

UNHOLY AMBITION.

The Apostle Paul has declared that "contentment, with godliness, is great gain." Happy the man who accepts this dictum and acts in harmony with it! What awful chapters in the world's history selfish ambition has written! To it must be credited the bloody and ruinous career of the first Napoleon, and from a consuming desire upon the part of Emperor William of Germany to dominate Europe sprang the present world-war, which is the most appalling disaster known to the annals of recorded time.

Especially is a selfish seeking of high place in the Church by professed disciples of the meek and lowly Jesus incongruous and deserving of rebuke. No man ought to be chosen to such a position who aspires to it. The call of God and of the Church should conscript the men who are to be Israel's leaders. No man is fit to be a Bishop or connectional officer who nurses a desire to be such and seeks to shape things so as to effect its realization. He falls below the high standard that St. Paul set up: "In honor preferring one another."

The only legitimate ambition for a Christian minister is that he may accomplish the largest possible service for the Master. The spectacle of a preacher chafing and acting ugly because he has not been given a conspicuous and remunerative appointment is sickeningly humiliating. If there is before him a field in which he may accomplish good and which will provide for his necessities, he should repress any disappointment that he may feel and count it a privilege to represent the Master therein.

This passion for self-exaltation, even if measurably realized, does not bring the reward and satisfaction which many fancy it will. Lord Byron speaks of the self-seeking spirit as "a fever," and writes thus concerning it:

"This makes the madmen who have made men mad
By their contagion: conquerors and kings,
Founders of sects and systems, to whom add
Sophists, bards, statesmen, all unquiet things,
Which stir too strongly the soul's secret springs,
And are themselves the fools to those they fool,
Envied, yet how unenviable! What stings
Are theirs! One breast laid open were a school
Which would unteach mankind the lust to shine or rule.

"He who ascends to mountain tops, shall find
The loftiest peaks most wrapt in clouds and snow,
He who surpasses or subdues mankind,
Must look down on the hate of those below.
Though high above the sun of glory glow,
And far beneath the earth and ocean spread,
Round him are icy rocks, and loudly blow
Contending tempests on his naked head—
And thus reward the tolls which to those summits led."

CAMP BEAUREGARD.

The city of Alexandria, La., has, we are glad to note, heen selected as one of the cantonments of the United States Army for the training of troops, and has been given the name of Camp Beauregard. It is estimated by some of the secular papers that not less than 25,000 soldiers will be quartered there, probably for many months, and possibly others will follow in quick succession, as quota after quota is drilled and sent to the front, for two or three years. Alexandria is an admirable place for teaching our "Sammies" the arts of war except in one particular, namely, that it is cursed with the legalized rum traffic. One of the most capable men in the State Legislature (now in session), Mr. Upton, has introduced a bill forbidding the sale of intoxicants within ten miles of Camp Beauregard, and the fight is now on for the passage of this measure. Resolutions favoring the Upton bill were adopted last Sunday by the congregations of the Methodist, Baptist, and Presbyterian Churches in Alexandria, and a Committee, composed of Judge H. H. White, Dr. W. D. Haas, and Representative Grundy Cooper, was named to go before the Committee on Military Affairs at Baton Rouge in the interest of this proposed enactment Tuesday of this week. Ordinarily we do not think that churches, as such, should take up the work of influencing secular legislation; but the question involved in this instance is wholly of a moral character, and we are glad that the churches at Alexandria have spoken out so promptly and emphatically for the suppression of the saloons in that city, that the troops to be trained near there may have in every respect wholesome surroundings. All the moral forces of the State should at once rally energetically to the support of this cause. There is not a moment for delay, as this issue will be settled within the next few days.

The miracle is not a breaking through of the law of nature on the part of God, but an activity on the part of God without the interposition of these laws of nature.—Rothe.

A SAINT'S PRISON POEM.

(Written by Madam Guyon while a prisoner in the Bastile in Paris, France.)

A little bird I am,
Shut from the fields of air;
And in my ledge I sit and sing
To Him who placed me there;
Well pleased, a prisoner to be,
Because, my God, it pleases thee.

Naught have I else to do,
I sing the whole day long;
And He whom most I love to please
Doth listen to my song;
He caught and bound my wandering wing,
But still He bends to hear me sing.

My cage confines me round,
Abroad I cannot fly;
But though my wing is closely bound,
My heart's at liberty;
My prison wall cannot control
The flight, the freedom of the soul.

Oh, it is good to soar,
These bolts and bars above;
To Him, whose purpose I adore,
Whose providence I love;
And in that mighty will to find
The joy and freedom of the mind.

HOW A GREAT WORKER DIED.

(Reprinted from Frank Leslie's Sunday School Magazine.)

Cruden, the author of that invaluable book, "The Concordance," died on his knees while praying. He was a man of remarkable industry and fervent piety. His heart beat warmly for the poor and suffering. He consecrated the entire profits of the 2d and 3d editions of his book to relieve the poor. It was his soul's delight to minister to their wants. He was a fine example of that Biblical precept, "Not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord."

The first copy of "The Concordance" he presented to Queen Caroline, wife of George II, in 1737. The Queen was so well pleased with it that she promised to reward him; but 16 days afterward she finished her brief life. Poor Cruden's hopes were disappointed. He kept on in his back store in London, in the Royal exchange. When nearly 70 years old he was missed. Search was made in his lodgings, and the man was found kneeling by his chair with the open Bible before him, his face calm and peaceful. Thus he died, yet not alone. He who says, "Lo! I am with you always," was with him. How blessed thus to fall asleep in Jesus!

Asleep in Jesus! Oh, for me
May such a blessed refuge be!

HOW I ASCERTAIN THE WILL OF GOD.

George Muller.

Surrender Your Own Will.

1. I seek at the beginning to get my heart into such a state that it has no will of its own in regard to a given matter. Nine-tenths of the trouble with people is just here. Nine-tenths of the difficulties are overcome when our hearts are ready to do the Lord's will, whatever it may be. When one is truly in this state, it is usually but a little way to the knowledge of what His will is.

Do Not Depend on Feelings.

2. Having done this, I do not leave the result to feeling or simple impression. If I do so, I make myself liable to great delusions.

Seek the Spirit's Will Through God's Word.

3. I seek the will of the Spirit of God through, or in connection with, the Word of God. The Spirit and the Word must be combined. If I look to the Spirit alone without the Word I lay myself open to great delusions also. If the Holy Ghost guides us at all, He will do it according to the Scriptures and never contrary to them.

Note Providential Circumstances.

4. Next I take into account providential circumstances. These often plainly indicate God's will in connection with His Word and Spirit.

Pray.

5. I ask God in prayer to reveal His will to me aright.

Wait.

6. Thus, through prayer to God, the study of the Word, and reflection, I come to a deliberate judgment according to the best of my ability and knowledge, and if my mind is thus at peace, and continues so after two or three more petitions, I proceed accordingly. In trivial matters, and in transactions involving most important issues, I have found this method always effective.

KINDLY COUNSEL FOR YOUNG BELIEVERS.

Let your committal to the Lord Jesus be absolutely without reserve, a full and true acceptance of Jesus as Master; a surrender of your whole being; all that you are and all that you possess—of time, money, resources, or talents. "This one thing I do."

Let His service be your supreme ambition, upon which your highest energies shall be resolutely focussed—remembering that you are not your own, that you are bought with a price, and that for you to live is Christ. Only, always, and altogether His.

Maintain a constant confession of Jesus, acknowledge Him everywhere as your Lord.

If these items had been placed in the order of importance, this might have been put first: "Seeing then that we have a Great High Priest * * * Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our confession." (R. V.)

I heard of a sailor who wrote in plain letters on his bunk, "I am a Christian." This was indeed excellent; it would have been even better, however, in his confession to have made use of the name Jesus. The name of God's Son is Jesus; and this is the name at which every knee must bow; this the name which is above every name. We truly believe that the Father is satisfied with nothing less than a clear and hearty and constant confession of Jesus, His Son, as our living Lord.

Find time for frequent prayer. Commune often with your Lord. Submit your every plan to Him. Value His approval above all. At whatever cost, maintain true fellowship with Him. Let your prayer seasons be more sacredly kept than any other engagement.

Many of God's trusted ones have found it necessary to sacrifice sleep for prayer. One who would really do business for God must pray. He must reach God, and receive positive response to his prayers. Our God loves to be waited upon. The prayer of faith is still effectual. He is rich unto all that call upon Him.

Give much study to His Word. Let the Word dwell in you richly. Be able to wield skillfully this mighty sword; and measure your growth in grace by your real love and relish for the Word itself, rather than for any speculation, commentary or exposition. Eat the Word and earnestly desire its milk, so necessary for growth in grace. There can be no substitute (not even the best of other books) for the unadorned Word itself. Remember that the words of this Book have proceeded from the mouth of God Himself, and are addressed to you.

Seek constantly to win others to Jesus. He would have you feel the burden of the lost and perishing, something as He Himself felt it. If you are not deeply concerned for the salvation of sinners, take alarm; for every one who has any knowledge of Jesus is thereby "debtor" both to the wise and unwise.

Do you ask, To what extent am I debtor? The Holy Spirit answers, "As much as in you is." By all means, save some.

Give generously to God in proportion to your ability. This is vital. Take heed and beware of covetousness, which has been called the almost universal sin. Remind yourself continually that you are a steward, and not an owner; and that it is required in a steward to be found faithful. Remember that he who sows sparingly shall also reap sparingly.

It will not pay to rob God, nor will any true disciple wish to do so. He declares that every beast of the forest, as well as the cattle upon the hills, belong to God. He is the real owner of everything which may be in your hand.

Remind yourself continually of the day when this real Owner will "reckon" with His servants.

And in your giving, see to it that every penny shall be used to acquaint the perishing world with the only Savior, rather than in movements which are merely humanitarian or philanthropic.

Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness. Never make an intimate of one who is not really a lover of Jesus, even though he be otherwise most attractive.

Our God is a God of light. In Him is no darkness at all. Jesus said nothing in secret. He forbade putting light under a bushel, and He also forbade fellowship with the ungodly. Christians are separated unto God, a peculiar people, passing through the world as strangers and pilgrims, and finding no satisfaction in this present evil age. The mixed multitude are sure to fall a-lusting; therefore refuse their fellowship, lest you be also a partaker of their evil deeds.

Never joke about sacred things. Sooner bite your own tongue than pollute it with irreverence or lightness in use of His precious Word or Name. If others persist in finding the point of a witticism in Holy Scripture, you will never join in their laughter, lest you also share their punishment.

See to it that in your public testimony all the glory shall be for Jesus. It is as surely necessary for you to "decrease" as it is that He should "increase." Exalt Him everywhere, and let self be quite hid. "We preach not ourselves." Keep yourself low before God. Humble yourself under His mighty hand, remembering that He gives grace only to the humble, but the proud He knows afar off.

Remember that "in that Day" the Lord alone will be exalted. Shall we not be certain that this is always the Father's mind—to exalt that One Glorious Name?—to make that One Blessed Person conspicuous?

Give up absolutely all wrong habits or indulgence. God hates mixture or compromise. Those who bear the Lord's vessels must be clean. We cannot sit with Him and also with His enemies. We cannot touch pitch without being defiled. Watch closely against special or besetting sins.

Refuse even to look at forbidden things. Let your eyes be closed and your ears stopped from all that God hates.

Never read harmful books, nor participate in questionable conversations, lest you soon lose taste and relish for heavenly conversation and holy association.

Above all, beware of even the beginnings of impurity.

Avoid wrong emphasis in your testimony. It can be noted of almost every false doctrine that it puts something else where Jesus ought to be—in the forefront. Do you be sure to emphasize the things which the Holy Ghost has emphasized: Jesus Himself, Blood Atonement, New Birth, Separation unto Him, the Word, the Holy Spirit, the Gospel preached to every creature; glorious reward for those who love, serve and confess Jesus; eternal punishment for those who reject Him as Lord and Master; His resurrection from the dead; His return to establish a Kingdom.

Finally, stand ready and press on to the end, looking only unto Jesus. Not to self nor circumstances; not to men nor organizations; not to resources nor machinery, but—unto Jesus.

As Mrs. Mary Allbright has written:

What shall we do when things go wrong?
Just plead the name of Jesus,
Keep His dear name on heart and tongue,
The precious name of Jesus,
He who led from darkness to light
Will quickly turn the wrong to right,
And make us victors in the fight;
The solution of our problems is Jesus.

What shall we do when friends depart?
Have fellowship with Jesus,
Like Mary, choose "the better part,"
Down at the feet of Jesus.
The world must go if He would stay,
Tho' friends may "think" or "do" or "say,"
His peace, they cannot take away;
The solution of our problems is Jesus.

What shall we do when funds are low?
Just plead the name of Jesus,
To Him our Heavenly Banker go;
How safe to trust in Jesus,
He owns the "silver and the gold,"
And cattle on the hills, we're told,
Yes! there's a plenty in His fold;
The solution of our problems is Jesus.

What shall we do when suffering pain?
Just plead the name of Jesus,
Our great Physician e'er "the same."
Oh, come in touch with Jesus.
He never turned one soul away;
He heals all freely—naught to pay;
Surrender all! trust Him to-day;
The solution of our problems is Jesus.

SHALL THE BOY GO TO COLLEGE THIS FALL?

By Rev. A. F. Watkins, D. D.

He should be encouraged to do so, and every possible sacrifice upon the part of parents and guardians should be made to enable him to do so.

He owes it to his country. If, as President Wilson seems to think, the war with Germany will last from two to five years, the boys of from sixteen to twenty-one years of age may be called into the military and naval service of their country, and, if they should be called, they should be prepared to give their country the most efficient service that culture of intellect and training of body can secure. Our political and educational leaders are advising that lower class college men should not volunteer at this time.

The United States Board of Education wisely says: "The desire to render immediate service is praiseworthy, but it is EFFECTIVE SERVICE which finally counts. Students should ever keep this goal in mind."

President Frank McVey of North Dakota University, who knows the food situation first-hand, says: "Boys and girls under 21 should go on with their training after they have completed high school. This should be done freely and as a part of a patriotic duty."

Mr. P. P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education, says: "All young men below the age of liability to selective draft, and those not recommended for special service, should be urged to remain and take full advantage of the opportunities offered by the Colleges, Universities, and Technical Schools, to the end that they may be able to render the most efficient service in the later years of the war and the times of need that will follow." And, again, he says: "The total number of students in these schools should be increased rather than diminished. All students should be made to understand that it is their duty to give to their country and to the world the best and fullest possible measure of service, and that both will need more than they will get of that high type of service which only men and women of the best education and training can give. Patriotism and the desire to serve humanity may require of these young men and women the exercise of that very high type of self-restraint that will keep them to their tasks of preparation until the time comes when they can render service which cannot be rendered by others."

The temptation to keep the younger son at home will be very strong. The older son has left the field, the shop, the office, or the store, and the need for the younger boy is urgent. But the cry of our native land is imperative and the need is great, and will not be unheeded by wise and patriotic parents.

But the unparalleled needs of our country in the present crisis are not its only needs. The future of America and the world demands that the boy should go to College this fall. Thousands of our College graduates are enlisting in the service, and hundreds of thousands of undergraduates are going. Many of these splendid young fellows may never come back. The ranks of the educated will be depleted, and their places of leadership must be taken by those who will remain in College for the next few years. Of the great crowd of those whose College course has been interrupted, the best that can be said is that most of them will never go back to College. Their opportunities will have gone forever and they will meet life's strenuous conflicts unprepared. Some of them, it is true, with the heroic spirit that marked a few of the young soldiers returning from the Civil War, will wrest from adverse fortune the equipment for life's service; but they will not be many; with most of them the interrupted task will never be resumed. In the years to come the world will cry aloud for men prepared to do her work and wear her honors, and the cry must be answered by the boys who to-day are in the High Schools and the men who are in the lower classes in our Colleges.

The boy should go to College this fall, for his home will need him. Great as may be the need for him now on the farm and in the factory, greater far will be the need in years to come, and the man will be better prepared then to meet the need. It has been estimated, too conservatively it would seem, that the productivity of the College man as compared with that of non-College men will average at least $600 per annum. This may not seem much; but it is the difference between $1200 and $1800 per year. If the wage-earning term were fixed at forty years, this would mean $24,000 of increased productivity. Where can the average man invest four years with the expectation of a greater return than this?

The boy should go to College this fall because of the unequaled opportunities that will be offered when the war is over. It has been said that the intellectual leadership of the world has passed to the United States. The Universities of Europe are deserted. Thousands of their most brilliant students have died upon the field of battle and thousands more are manning the trenches of the warring nations. Their younger professors have followed their students into the ranks of the army, and the old men walk with bowed heads through deserted classrooms or lecture to depleted classes.

Dean Wigmore, addressing his students at Northwestern University concerning conditions in England and France, says: "The intellectual flower of their population is being destroyed. A great swath of destruction has been cut through the ranks of educated young men who were to form the intellectual leaders of the coming generation. They are gone. The world has lost them. And those nations will be by so much the weaker and less progressive in the coming years. This is one of the saddest calamities resulting from the war."

Where must the world look for those who are to repair the wastes of war and rebuild the dismantled temple of civilization? And when the work of restoration is completed, where look for those who shall take up anew the interrupted task of the development of the lands? Whence must come the civil, political, and industrial leaders of the world; the world's teachers of philosophy, of science, of morals, of religion? Must they not come chiefly from America, and must not American Colleges and Universities prepare and furnish them?

Jackson, Miss.

THE REVIVAL AND SOME OF ITS PRESENT DAY PROBLEMS.

By Rev. J. Loyd Decell.

II.

In a previous article we purposed to emphasize that the foundation of the revival lay in the "first line" forces of the Kingdom—souls born of the Holy Spirit, endued with His power, and active in winning others for Christ. That neither cultural, social, nor recreational activities within themselves were sufficient for these things. Presently we wish to notice more directly some of the problems.

When.

The ideal time for the revival is every day in the year. That will be a great day in the Church when we as pastors and people will become so fully alive to our responsibilities and opportunities that we will go out daily with an eager passion for bringing others to Christ.

Even with this ideal accomplished we would still have need of special seasons of tarryings in the "upper room" and times when we would gather for refreshing showers from on high. We need the time when special effort is made to enlarge our own spiritual lives and increase the fold of Christ. Agricultural and other vocational interests would enter as factors in determining the "When." Everything being equal, there is no reason why autumn and winter should not be as propitious as spring and summer.

Duration.

How long should the services continue? Should the interest determine the time limit? Who can tell what the next service will bring forth? Could as much be accomplished by concentrating upon a certain number of days as by having no certain time to close? Is it better not to have a meeting than to quit before the victory is won? Could there not be work to do and victories to win indefinitely? With the life of the average people so preoccupied, it probably takes more time to get them intersted than it once did. It seems that just to have an annual three or four days' meeting, because it is customary, would not be as far-reaching in its benefits as to have a biennial siege. The question as to whether or not the pastor and his people have properly prepared the way will largely decide the length of time.

The Revivalist.

Who shall lead in the special services? In this time of "teams" and "campaigns" it appears that the evangelist would be the only feasible person. Here are big problems.

There are not enough evangelists to reach all the churches. Then, as it is now, many of the churches are not able to reach the evangelist that they feel they need.

In the Mississippi Conference we have 553 churches, and, adding other opportune places, there would be 650 places where revivals are needed. We have seven presiding elders, one Conference evangelist, one district evangelist, and 156 pastors. It is obvious that two evangelists, with the help of outside evangelists, cannot supply this great need. It is growing more and more difficult for the pastor to leave his responsibilities and give sufficient length of time to a revival or revivals.

Some Suggestions.

1. Presiding elders and pastors should be men of evangelistic abilities and possessed of a great soul-winning passion.

2. Local preachers should be appreciated and encouraged. The need for capable local preachers seems imperative.

3. The local church should look on the fields whitened unto harvest and prayerfully and cheerfully encourage their pastor in holding occasional revivals. It would be a blessing if the local church would hear the "Macedonian call"—a great thing for pastor and people to unitedly wage war against sin in the distant charge; a large place here for unselfish devotion to the general cause of Christ.

4. Multiply the number of evangelists. Have them under direct Conference control. Let their appointments be made like all others—without consultation. Place one and all upon a strict salary basis. Let receipts from meetings be turned over to the committee on evangelism. The evangelist makes many sacrifices which are not incident to the pastor's work, and he should be well paid, but there is no justifiable cause why he should not have a stipulated salary.

We are making mighty strides in some other fields, but here is where we cannot afford to fail. We must let out the cords and demonstrate to the world that the Church means to secure the salvation of the individual, the first of all things.

If these articles would but stir up some one of more experience and greater ability to endeavor to have our church department of evangelism placed upon a firmer and more effective basis, the writer will be grateful.

Dr. E. G. B. Mann, the able presiding elder of the Lexington (Ky.) District, continues to show himself to be a master in revival work. He has held a number of fruitful meetings this year.

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate says: "Bishop Atkins, who has spent some time at Battle Creek, Michigan, was much benefited by his stay there. The physicians found no organic trouble, but advised several weeks of rest for him."

Bishop Murrah has been tarrying in the North since the adjournment of the Joint Commission on Unification at Traverse City, Michigan. He expected to return to Memphis this week, but will soon be off again to meet an engagement at Junaluska.

Rev. J. L. Cunninggim, who formerly was connected with Vanderbilt University and who was director of the Correspondence School of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has accepted a position in the Southern Methodist University at Dallas, Texas. He will take up his new work this fall.

We take the following from the Northwestern Christian Advocate: "Mr. C. T. Wang, a Chinese youth, graduated from Yale University an earnest Christian and went to China to take up his work as General Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association in the Celestial Empire. Then he was called by election to the Vice Presidency of the Senate. Every week in Peking this devoted young man conducts a Bible class made up of government officials."

Dr. Bradfield, Editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, accompanied by Mrs. Bradfield, has been to Rochester, Minn., to confer with specialists concerning his physical condition. We are pleased to note that he has been advised that no operation was necessary for the improvement of his health. In Dr. Bradfield's absence, the editorial work of the Texas Advocate is being brilliantly done by Dr. Hoyt M. Dobbs, Dean of the Theological School of Southern Methodist University.

Both the retiring Governor of Georgia, Colonel N. E. Harris, and the incoming Governor, Hugh M. Dorsey, are Methodists, as was also Ex-Governor Slaton, Col. Harris' predecessor. Mr. Slaton and Governor Dorsey are members of our Trinity Church in Atlanta. At the recent inauguration of the latter Dr. J. H. Scruggs, who had officiated at his marriage to Mrs. Dorsey and baptized their first child, made the invocation, and Rev. C. O. Jones, the pastor of Trinity Church, pronounced the benediction. Dr. Scruggs is a son-in-law of Bishop Paine and formerly was a member of the North Mississippi Conference.

REPORT OF THE JOINT COMMISSION.

The following report has been sent to the Advocate from Traverse City, Mich.:

The members of the Joint Commission on the Unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in closing the labors of their second session, held at Traverse City, Michigan, June 27-July 3, 1917, send greetings to the people of the two branches of the one Church which they represent.

First of all, we give thanks to God the Father, through our Lord Jesus Christ, for the full measure of grace which has been vouchsafed us in our labors, and for the evident tokens of the presence of the Holy Spirit in our assemblings, sweetening our fellowship, deepening our sense of oneness in Christ, and strengthening our hope of a united Methodism throughout the reaches of our common country.

We do not seek in this message to diminish the general understanding of the difficulties which have attended our efforts to meet fully the task committed to our hands; but we have rejoiced greatly in Christ our divine Leader to see how many of these difficulties have dissolved away as we have approached them in a spirit of prayer and dedication to the end which the Church has set us to achieve. The results of our labors are not yet complete, but they are substantial and reassuring; and it is part of the purpose of this communication to inform the Connections which we represent of the fact that we have the unfinished details of our task under prayerful consideration and treatment, and it is our earnest desire to be able to make to our respective General Conferences a happy report upon the whole matter of unification.

That our people may have the means of determining for themselves the extent to which we have progressed we beg to submit the following statement touching the conclusions reached at this sitting of the Commission.

The Joint Commission has reached tentative agreements upon the following matters:

1. The Church Conference.
2. The Quarterly Conference.
3. The Annual Conference, including lay representation therein.
4. The composition and powers of the white Regional Conferences.
5. The area, and boundaries, and powers of the Missionary Regional Conferences.
6. The basis of representation in the General Conference and the powers of the same.
7. The method of election, assignment, and retirement of Bishops, together with a constitutional provision for the defining and fixing of the privileges, powers, and duties of the Episcopacy.

The foregoing tentative agreements are subject to further consideration and revision, if necessary, and their final approval and adoption is contingent upon agreement on the matters that are yet to be considered.

THE MARY WERLEIN MISSION.

For the first time in nineteen years the doors of Mary Werlein Mission are closed to everything but the services which are held on Sunday, Tuesday, and Friday.

The reading room and free baths are closed to an average of 500 men a month, the only place outside of the saloon where they might find a resting-place from the summer's sun. Men of all nationalities have found a welcome; a Gospel, a tract, a "God bless you," within the pales of this mission. Hungry children within a few blocks are destitute and without one good meal a day. Down-and-out men and women who could come and get a cup of coffee and a sandwich no longer find that open door. The fallen girl who may want to lead a better life has not that place to turn to that has so long been hers. These, with other conditions as numerous as the needs of the human family, can not be supplied because we have no money to run it.

This crisis had to come in order that we might get on a substantial foundation. It has never been any one's special business to finance Mary Werlein Mission. The Mission Board has paid the pastor's salary, the City Mission Board has paid the missionary's salary, and they were left to run it the best they could.

The Need.

If the Southern Methodist Church is going to do mission work in New Orleans (and I believe she now is in the lead in this work), a special assessment should be carried by the Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences with which, along with regular personal contributions, the work should be enlarged to meet the urgent needs of the situation. Why do I include Mississippi? Because we handle as many Mississippi people as we do Louisianians.

A home is imperatively needed for boys. There is not a place in New Orleans where you can put a Protestant boy who needs to be cared for. The homes are full and there are conditions that must be met before they will take a boy. I know three boys now, ages 12, 7, and 5, who are starving and being exposed to venerial diseases every day. Their little 8-year-old sister is already infected. Numbers and numbers of Protestant children are placed in Roman Catholic institutions because there is no place for them.

We need a home for wayward girls—there is no place for them except that prison, the House of Good Shepherd. Only last week a woman appealed to me for help. She wanted to leave a life of shame, but I had no place to offer her. She was a girl from Mississippi, who was reared by a godly mother (as is indicated by the mother's diary, which she treasures) and educated in one of our Methodist schools; but she fell. She can't enter a hospital for training; she can't do many things, because of the double standard to which we so rigidly adhere. This girl is not hopeless; she has never drank nor taken opiates, but there is no place for her. I know of another little Methodist girl from an adjoining State who used to teach a Sunday school class, but who is now living the scarlet life, and who could be induced to leave it; but there is no place for her. She is spurned by womanhood—kicked from society and branded for life, but the man who caused her ruin may be passing the collection plate next Sunday.

Oh, Methodist people, the need is appalling! I know that the demands on us in this great world crisis are strong, but these conditions are before our eyes. Will you not help us solve this problem?

COMING TO NEW ORLEANS THIS FALL.

The American Prison Congress will be held in this city from November 19 to 23, inclusive, and promises to be the most important session of that body ever held. Mr. W. O. Hart, chairman of the General Committee, has prepared and turned over to Mr. E. M. Stafford, State Senator, a concurrent resolution to be introduced and passed if possible at this special session of the Legislature giving State recognition to the Congress, which reads as follows:

"That the Governor is hereby authorized and requested by official proclamation to call the attention of the people of the State to the meeting in the city of New Orleans of the American Prison Congress from November 19 to 23, both inclusive, 1917, and to appoint a committee of two hundred representative citizens, one hundred from the city of New Orleans and one hundred from the State at large, said committee to co-operate with the committees of the Prison Reform Congress."

It is the impression at present that Congress will not adjourn before the middle of August.

Southern Congressmen will ask Congress to appropriate $500,000 to aid in the fight against the threatened invasion from Mexico of the disastrous pink boll worm.

The Commission Council of Baton Rouge, La., has passed an ordinance forbidding the use of wood shingles for the roofing of houses in that city—a fire-prevention measure.

Dr. Von Bethman-Hollweg, the Imperial Chancellor of the German Government, has vacated his office, owing, it is said, to the influence of the Crown Prince. This action is understood as being inimical to the interests of democracy and peace.

Hon. J. Austen Camberlain, Secretary of the British Government for India, resigned last week. Mr. Chamberlain was regarded as in part responsible for the ill-fated Mesopotamia military expedition, for which he was severely criticised, along with a number of other officials.

Mr. George W. Brackinridge, a San Antonio capitalist, has offered to furnish the regents of the University of Texas $300,000 to operate that institution next year if the recent veto by Governor Ferguson of the Appropriation Bill passed by the State Legislature is held to be valid by the courts.

An embargo has been placed on all shipments to foreign countries of coal, coke, feed, grain, flour and meal therefrom, fodder, meat and fats, fuel oils, kerosene, gasoline, pig iron, steel billets, ship plates, structural shapes, scrap iron and steel, ferro manganese, fertilizers, arms, ammunition, and explosives, except with a bill of lading presented with a federal license issued by the Export Council at Washington.

A Washington dispatch says: "Popular belief that works of fiction dominate the literary field in the United States was exploded to-day (July 13) by a statement issued by the Federal Bureau of Education giving a survey of publications issued from 1890 to 1916. Last year fiction represented approximately 9 per cent of the books published, while in 1890 the proportion was 24 per cent. In 1886 a total of 1880 books of fiction were issued, while last year the number was 932."

General Pershing, sent word to the men at the front last week that if they would hold out till America gets ready for business the victory for the Allies will not be far off. This concerning the American General upon whom the eyes of the world are now fixed is worthy of record. It is said that he receives at his headquarters in France hundreds of letters, telegrams, etc., each day from the people of Europe, and that he dictates a reply to each one of them.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

A plant for the making of oxygen and hydrogen is being constructed in New Orleans at 420 Girod Street. It is stated that the commercial value of these gases has increased largely within recent years because of the use of the oxyhydrogen flame in welding and cutting steel. Formerly the only use to which they were put, aside from experimental laboratories, was in the production of calcium lights. About two years ago, when the steamer Eastland overturned in the Chicago River and over 800 people were drowned, most of the persons who survived owed their lives to the fact that oxyhydrogen torches were rushed from a skyscraper, then in process of erection, and that by means of these lamps great holes were cut in the steel plates of the vessel, through which the victims escaped.

Did we put ourselves in the place of others, the hatred and jealousy we harbor against them would fall away.—Goethe.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE AND DR. COOPER.

Whitworth College is entering upon a new phase in its splendid career. Its history has been a remarkable one, but its outlook was never so bright as it is to-day. Dr. Inman W Cooper is beginning his sixteenth year as the head of this notable institution, and during his incumbency at least $60,000 worth of property has been added to its holdings, while the current expenses of the College have been promptly met from year to year—without leaving a dollar of indebtedness. This is an unusually fine record, considering the fact that the school has no endowment and that the Mississippi Conference has carried no assessment for it.

At the late Commencement Dr. Cooper made a four-year contract with the Trustees, in which he guarantees the running expenses of the institution and promises to turn over to them all that comes in above that amount. It is intended so to operate its affairs that the entire plant, with all its equipment, will come, without indebtedness, under the complete control of the Mississippi Conference at the expiration of the quadrennium now beginning. And along with this movement will be launched an active campaign to raise an endowment of $100,000 for the College. Whitworth has a most capable Board of Trustees, of which Mr. Thad B. Lampton, of Jackson, Miss., is the resourceful president, and it is felt that under their wise leadership, assisted by Dr. Cooper, this undertaking can be accomplished with no great delay.

REV. I. W. COOPER, D.D.

Dr. Inman Williams Cooper, who has contributed so largely to the upbuilding of Whitworth College, was born in Yazoo County, Miss., on June 15, 1856, being a son of Rev. Preston and Mrs. Lucretia (Finch) Cooper. He was educated at Benton and French Camps, Miss., Hiwassee College (Tennessee), and Vanderbilt University. He was for four years president of Centenary College of Louisiana, in which position he wrought effectively. He is not only a distinguished educator, but also an eloquent preacher, and a most courtly Christian gentleman. He is a great-hearted philanthropist, and has perhaps done as much to help the poor youth of Mississippi to obtain an education as any man who ever lived in that State. His generosity made it possible for five young ministers to attend the recent session of Millsaps College, and he is constantly assisting needy and deserving young women to equip themselves for their life-work at Whitworth.

WHY WAR?

Thou God of nature's endless course,
Whose wisdom gave the earth to man;
Our heritage from such a Source
Must prove there's goodness in the plan;
Then why this universal strife,
This awful waste of human life?

'Tis dense stupidity of sin,
The blindness of an awful fate
That warps the human mind within,
And hardens all the soul to hate'
'Tis fate of sad perverted will,
The judgment due the lack of skill.

Great wrongs are woven in the web
Of sad, misguided nation's life;
Thence life perforce must reach the ebb,
Where sure reaction leads to strife.
The seeds of sin are sown in pride,
And war restrains the rising tide.

'Tis thus through all the ages long,
Perverted life has led to war;
The reign of selfishness and wrong
Has brought the strife we all abhor.
When nations build on Heaven's plan
We'll cease to kill our fellow man

The Great Battle

THE LARGEST DRY CITY IN AMERICA.

Portland, Maine, is of course the largest dry city in the world, its present census will show population, because of the Maine prohibition and the largest dry city in America. By this act the peninsula will be under absolute prohibition for three years, when a plebiscite will be taken on the question of its remaining dry permanently. Ontario Province reverses the action of the States in going dry. The Provincial Legislature first enacts a prohibition law then submits it to a vote of the people.—The Presbyterian.

LIQUOR WAKES BLOWS.

Lady Henry Somerset the Eminent English reformer of the late Frances Willard in the temperance reform, is now living the life of a religious recluse in the simplest of lodgings in London, the bare room serving as study and bed-chamber. Though herself cruel and the daughter of a countess she is an ardent believer in social democracy, and is looking forward to a meeting of the gap between the rich and poor after the war. She says: "If the liquor traffic receives a real blow, then there will come a definite change for the working class. The people will not stay in slums. They are so constantly drunk now that they do not realize where they are living. The drink keeps them in a state of stupefaction. It keeps them poor, it keeps them satisfied with their condition. If the liquor traffic goes the people will step upward. They will demand better wages—better housing. My supreme hope is that a mighty spiritual awakening will come to England as it has come to France."—The Presbyterian.

STOP FOOLING WITH THE NATIONAL SAFETY!

Delay in inaugurating war prohibition will imperil the morale of nursery. If permitted to continue its activities unchecked, the drink traffic will—

Ruin millions of tons of food and fuel.

Retard the output of munitions and equipment.

Imperil the ship-building program and help the submarines.

Deprive the country of the services of thousands of soldiers whom it will affect with insanity and disease.

Embitter the hearts of mothers who are willing to give their sons for war, but not for drink dividends.

Raise the cost of food for our homes.

Congest railway yards and warehouse systems.

Waste nearly $7,000,000 a day.

Prolong the war and cost the loss of thousands of precious lives.

One drink revenue would take care of the Liberty Bond issue; would double our prosperity, would multiply the nation's military power.

Give us war prohibition and victory!

—The Voice.

THE WORLD'S MOST COLOSSAL WAR.

South African War (1899-1902)	$ 1,250,000,000
Russo-Japanese War (1904-5)	1,500,000,000
Franco-Prussian War (1870-71)	3,000,000,000
Napoleonic Wars (1793-1815)	4,250,000,000
American Civil War (1861-65)	4,000,000,000
Present World War up to date	40,000,000,000

HOW DO YOU TAKE YOUR DEFEAT?

The way a man takes his defeat is a pretty good test of his caliber. The strong man uses the failures for stepping-stones instead of stumbling-blocks.

I know a very successful young man who has made it a rule of his life to use every misfortune that comes to him as a point of departure for something better. He has had losses and misfortunes which would have crushed most men, but they only nerved his resolution, hardened him to fate and gave him a new start. They only made him more determined to conquer the next time.—Success Magazine.

A BENEFICIAL BENEFACTOR.

The largest addition ever made to the Loan Fund Capital of the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was by the late Mr. C. W. Blair, of Shreveport, La., who bequeathed $60,000 to this fund. The interest on $50,000 of this amount is to go perpetually to superannuated preachers in the Louisiana Conference and the interest on $10,000 will go to Centenary College, Jonesboro, Ark.

In addition to this, Mr. Blair gave $20,000 to the Representative Church, Washington, D. C., to be used by the erection and equipment of modern Sunday school quarters. This part of the building is to be known as the C. W. Blair Memorial Hall.

Mr. Blair contributed the above amounts a total of $80,000, on January 31, 1917, and on May 1, 1917, passed to his reward.

GARVIN D. SHANDS.

In Memoriam.

The University of Mississippi deplores the death of the distinguished gentleman who, as a former member of its Faculty, accomplished so much for the advancement of its interests.

Governor Shands was a native of South Carolina and received his academic education at Wofford College. He entered the Confederate service in the Second South Carolina Cavalry at the age of sixteen, and was for four years under the command of General Wade Hampton. He removed to Mississippi in 1867, and in 1871 married Miss Mary E. Roseborough of Sardis, Miss. He began the practice of law at Senatobia and took an active part in the reconstruction of the State after the Civil War. He was a member of the Legislature for several years and was Lieutenant Governor from 1888 to 1892. He was a warm friend of Senator Lamar and accompanied and assisted him in his canvass of the State as a candidate for the United States Senate.

Having, with the co-operation of others, accomplished the task of redeeming the State from misrule, he steadfastly declined to accept or stand for any other office, and devoted himself assiduously to the practice of his profession and the education of his children. When urged to become a candidate for the United States Senate, he replied: "Let some one undertake that who has no sons to educate." When importuned later to enter the contest for nomination for Governor, he made inquiry as to the cost of the canvass, and said, "No! I am willing to serve the people, but I am not willing to buy the office."

In 1891 he was elected to the Chair of Law in the University of Mississippi. For three years he taught both the Junior and Senior classes without assistance. The attendance was greatly increased, and he urged that the curriculum should be enlarged to keep pace with other progressive schools. He also recommended the establishment of the second Chair of Law. All this was done, and Governor Shands was made Dean of the Department in 1895. He was a prince of teachers, and a most fruitful lecturer. His standards were high, his methods wise, and his example and influence ennobling and elevating.

In 1906 he resigned his position to accept the Chair of Common Law in Tulane University, where he served with great success. In 1910 he retired on the active duties of his office, and was made Professor Emeritus.

His motto—

"A kind true heart, a spirit high
That could not fear and would not bow."

Resolved 1. That the University of Mississippi has heard with profound sorrow of the death of its Honorable Garvin D. Shands.

Resolved 2. That in his death the University of Mississippi has lost a devoted friend, the cause of education an earnest and able advocate, the cause of civic reform a wise leader, and the Church of God a faithful member.

Resolved 3. That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Faculty, of the University, that copies be given to the press, and a copy sent to the family of the deceased.

Signed this the 6th day of July, 1917, at the University of Mississippi.

HITTING THE NAIL.

One of the factories of the city, being in want of a boy in its mill, a piece of paper was tacked on one of the posts, in a prominent place, so that the boys could see it as they passed. The paper read:

"Boy wanted. Cali at the office to-morrow morning."

At the time indicated a host of boys were at the gate. All were admitted, but the overseer was a little perplexed as to the best way of choosing one from so many, and he said:

"Boys, I only want one; and here are a great many. How shall I choose?"

After thinking a moment, he invited them ali into the yard, and, driving a nail into one of the large trees and taking a short stick, told them that the boy who could hit the naii with the stick, standing a little distance from the tree, should have the place. The boys tried hard, but after three trials each, they all failed to hit the nail. The boys were told to come again the next morning, and this time, when the gate opened, there was but one boy, who, after being admitted, picked up a stick, and, throwing it at the nail, hit it every time.

"How is this?" asked the overseer; "what have you been doing?"

And the boy, looking up with tears in his eyes, said:

"You see, I have a mother; and I am poor and have no father, and I thought I should like to get the place, and so help her all I can; and when I went home, I drove a nail into the harn and have been trying to hit it ever since, and I have come down this morning to try again."

It is hardly necessary to add that this boy who had shown such perseverance was the one chosen to fill the vacant position in the mill.—Apples of Gold.

NEAR-AT-HAND TREASURES.

By Bessie L. Putnam.

"The other girls are going to take flowers to Margaret on her birthday to-morrow," announced Mary Hunt with questioning tone as she returned from school. "Constance ordered roses, great American Beauties, at only a dollar a dozen, and Elizabeth selected snapdragons, the soft dull reds of which will blend beautifully with the color of Margaret's dress."

"And you are wondering how you can go when such gifts are expected?" responded mamma, thoughtfully.

"Well, yes," was the reply. "But I had almost rather not go at all than take the money when it is needed for so many things here. It is not as if it was really going to do any one any lasting good. And it seems almost a needless sacrifice, when she will have just lots of beautiful flowers. Still —I dislike to go feeling ashamed of myself."

"No need of either sacrifice or shame," declared Aunt Nell from the next room. Why don't you gather some of those big blue violets with which the meadow is blue?"

"Oh, but it is greenhouse flowers they are getting."

"What if it is? Yours will be all the nicer because they are different."

Mary assented with some misgivings, wondering if she would not really wish, when in the beautiful home, that her wild flowers were, with her, back in the country home. But it did seem wrong for her to take one of the dollars so much needed by her mother for a thing which was not needed and would soon be gone.

She worked hard in the hot sun for an hour, but the great blue beauties had never seemed larger, of richer color, or with longer stems. And when Aunt Nell had safely packed them in a fancy box, with a bit of wood-moss to keep them fresh, she was forced to admit that they were really beautiful, even if they had cost no money.

Still she was somewhat in doubt as she handed her little offering to Margaret, having caught a glimpse of the imposing floral offerings already given.

"Just violets," she whispered, to which Margaret replied: "That is just lovely. They are my favorite flower, and I have not had one this year."

Shortly after she slipped up to Mary with the assurance, "Mamma says she never saw such violets before, and she has put them in the best cut-glass dish, in the center of the table. Then slipping her hand into that of her guest, as modest as the violets, she led her to view them—and all admitted that those wild flowers, arranged in great clusters around the sides of the dish, their long, slender stems showing through the glass, and all kept in place by the pieces of moss in the center, were even more beautiful than the roses or snapdragons.

Then a neighbor came to see the table after it was ready, and was so charmed over the violets that she wanted to borrow them that evening, when some rich city guests were expected.

"Of course I shall be glad to lend them," said Margaret, "but mind, they are only lent, for I can not spare them very long myself."

"To think," said Mary on her return home, "that I should have been half ashamed to take those flowers."

"Just because they cost you nothing but a little warm work," laughed Aunt Nell. "If you had put up two or three dollars for them at the florist's, you would have been the proudest girl in the bunch over your present. But that's the way in this world. Some of the best things, offered without money, we do not appreciate."

"I am so glad I have found the true value of violets. Even the meadows will be more beautiful to me now."—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

FAITH.

Annette Morrison Stubbs.

We shall be glad when the morning dawns
And the trying night is past,
That with never a doubt we believed our God
Would send the light at last.

We shall be glad when the morning dawns,
Our rest will be sweeter far,
That amid the clouds of sorrow and pain,
Faith shone a guiding star.

We shall be glad when the morning dawns,
And we meet our Savior's gaze,
That we trusted Him without reserve
Whether bright or dark the days.

MRS. GEORGE A. GUICE—AN APPRECIATION.

Mrs. Madera Costley Guice, wife of the late Rev. George A. Guice, who met a tragic death on the railroad while pastor at Bay St. Louis, was born in Jefferson County on June 30, 1850, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. P. B. Bell, near Brookhaven, Miss., on May 12, 1917, after an illness of three or four days, leaving two sons and a daughter to mourn her death. She died as she had lived, in the faith and favor of her risen Lord.

When ten years old she united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Old Bethel Church, Jefferson County, and was happily married to Mr. George A. Guice, a farmer near Meadville, Miss., on September 2, 1874.

Later, as a successful lawyer and State Senator from Franklin County, Mr. Guice served his State with honor and distinction. But finally yielding to a call to enter the ministry, he joined the Mississippi Conference on trial in December, 1890, and at once became one of the most faithful pastors and efficient preachers of our Church.

Sister Guice was a model wife and mother. Perhaps nowhere else did her modest Christian virtues express themselves more perfectly than in the home. No influence, possibly, contributed more to the success and usefulness of Brother Guice as a farmer, lawyer, lawmaker, pastor, and preacher than that of his consecrated wife. She loved her children with a sacrificing devotion, always giving the best she had and getting the best from them. They bless her name and revere her memory and are useful citizens because of her.

As a Christian woman, she loved her Lord, and her neighbor as herself. Her life, when health permitted, was one of ministry to those for whom Christ died. She fed the hungry, visited and comforted the sick, and prayed for the conversion of the sinner. She was devoted to her Church and counted no sacrifice too great to be made for its advancement. She loved the work of the pastorate and gave her best self unselfishly to its great work. She was a true woman of God "whom it was a privilege to know, a necessity to love, and a delight to honor."

On Sunday morning, a beautiful day—one with God's smile in every sunbeam and his touch in every breeze—we laid her to rest in the quiet cemetery at Meadville among her many friends and loved ones, to await the final resurrection. Her life was a ministry, her presence a benediction, and her death a victory. She loved and lived in 1 Corinthians 2:9. Her pastor,

Editorial

THE WORK OF THE UNIFICATION COMMISSION.

In another column of this issue of the Advocate we give the statement sent forth by the Joint Commission on Unification with reference to its recent meeting at Traverse City, Michigan.

While this formal statement is somewhat hopeful in tone, as was to be expected, we gather from it as a whole, and from other reliable information that has reached us, that nothing of very great importance was put into anything like definite shape at this meeting.

The reports upon the status of the Negro and of the supreme judiciary of the United Church were not taken up. The report on the several kinds of Conferences was consldered in part; but, if we are correctly informed, the most important and difficult features of it were postponed for consideration at the next meeting. The part of this report which most vitally affects the scheme of unification is that which deals with the numher and lines of what are called "Regional Conferences," and which thus raises the entire question of the Negro's place in the Church. If the colored members of the Methodist Episcopal Church are to be gathered into a "Regional Conference" and have representatives in the General Conference, there will have to be more than six "Regional Conferences," the number now proposed. When this point was reached the Joint Commission stopped and deferred the consideration of this portion of the report until it assembles again.

Moreover the lines of the proposed six "Regional Conferences," even if the Negro question were not involved, are matters of a very perplexing sort. When the grouping of the Annual Conferences is undertaken and old associations are sought to be broken up and novel affiliations established, there are likely to be sharp differences of opinion and much debate.

In view of all these facts, it seems quite clear that the Joint Commission in its first two meetings has made no great progress toward removing the truly obstructing difficulties and opening the way for the consummation of unification. Hence, those among us who favor union should not, in our opinion, be over-sanguine, and those who are opposed to it should not be unduly depressed. The fact is, the movement is still in an undetermined state. Nothing of vital consequence has yet been nailed down as settled. It is perfectly clear that if the scheme is ever to be worked out, the accomplishment of this end is not, at this time, in sight.

We venture to express the hope that the Joint Commission will puhlish in full at an early date all the things which it did "tentatively" with reference to the various Conferences (giving the details), and that at the earliest time possible it will set forth the number and boundary lines of the contemplated "Regional Conferences," that the Churches may know what is probably before them. Of course, we understand that what was done at Traverse City is only "tentative," but the Churches at this stage of the proceedings should know even the "tentative" proposals of the Commission in order that they may see the trend of the efforts which the Commission is putting forth.

Let matters be placed clearly before the entire Methodist puhlic, as far as they have gone. Indefinite general statements are not enough now, when our General Conference is only a few months off. It is stated that the Commission will meet the last of next January and probably sit two weeks, and it will likely take some time after its adjournment to formulate the statement that will go to the General Conference in May; so the intervening period would be wholly inadequate for the proper discussion of questions so momentous. Let the Churches now have in full the "tentative agreements," that the people may judge for themselves what progress has been made and see the direction in which things are moving. This is, in justice, due them.

One thing more: We have noted that some Methodist papers are loudly affirming that all the "tentative agreements" reached were unanimous. Undue significance should not be attached to such statements. It is well known that some of the ablest of the commissioners do not subscribe to some portions of this "tentative" program. Wise men on such bodies, especially if they are in the minority, are not given to acting decisively until issues are being definitely settled. To what extent the Oklahoma plan has been adhered to, or departed from, are questions that we will not undertake to discuss now.

SEEKING TO AMEND AN UNWISE LAW.

The New Orleans Times-Picayune in a recent issue made the following editorial utterance, which is so informing and timely that we take pleasure in reproducing it:

"A strong movement is under way in this country to secure such amendment of the Federal inheritance tax law as will allow bequests, legacies or donations for educational, philanthropic or religious purposes without subjecting them to this tax. Congress provides for a heavy duty on all legacies for public purposes, running as high as 15 per cent. Formerly such donations or legacies were exempt from this burden, as they ought to be, and only nine of the States include the tax in their inheritance laws. If it is levied it will have a discouraging effect on gifts to colleges and hospitals and to other similar purposes for the relief and benefit of the sick and suffering. The rich men of this country have been most generous with their money in this matter of the general welfare of the Nation, and its educational facilities and advantages are largely due to the liberality of these donations.

"No country is able to do as much in this way as the United States, and the figures given of these American gifts have been a wonder to Europe. Public opinion has laid down the proposition that no man of wealth shall pass away without making some provision for the country in which he has made his fortune. These gifts to public purposes amounted to $146,682,930 during 1915; to $318,599,482 the previous year, and to $199,841,442 for 1913. To put a tax on these charities and donations would discourage them and would place them in a wrong position before the people and the country. It would seriously embarrass the colleges and hospitals, which do not receive enough revenue from ordinary sources for their maintenance, but are compelled to depend on generosity from the outside. Thus it is shown that in New York City alone more than three-fourths of the income of the higher educational institutions is derived from priate benefactions, as against one-fourth from public taxation. For the Union as a whole the amount of income for colleges, universities and technical education comes half from private gifts and half from taxation and the public funds. Any action taken that will have the effect of reducing these donations will compel the closure, in part, of many institutions that offer much relief to the suffering and tend to the educatlon of the people and the uplift and advance of the country.

"This tax on donations to public purposes passed Congress without attracting much attention, and those institutions that have suffered because of it did not organize until very late. They are now making, with the assistance of friends both in and out of Congress, an effort to secure the remission of the tax, so that any one can give his money to public purposes without having to pay a heavy penalty or tax for doing so."

With this strong deliverance, we are in the heartiest accord. It is undoubtedly sound public policy for the government of a country to foster and encourage the establishment and maintenance of educational and philanthropic institutions within its bounds. Under our constitution Congress and the State Legislatures can with propriety appropriate money only to such institutions as are owned and operated by Federal or State governments, but the Nation is the beneficiary of all worthy institutions of this character and should at least refrain from placing a serious obstacle in the way of their success. Moreover, in this instance, it seems that this tax is to be universally imposed—no institution of any kind being permitted to escape.

Note particularly the following statements of our distinguished contemporary: "Only nine of the States include such a tax in their inheritance laws"....."Public opinion has laid down the proposition that no man of wealth shall pass away without making some provision for the country in which he has made his fortune." In the light of these facts, how unenviable is the position of the State of Mississippi, which has gone the whole length of absolutely forbidding bequests to an institution of any sort owned and operated by a religious denomination!

A CAUSE YOU SHOULD HELP.

We trust that none of our readers will overlook the article, "Among the Soldiers," by Rev. W. E. Thomas, which appears in this issue of the Advocate. What Brother Thomas has to say concerning the importance of proper religious work among these young men who have enlisted in the Nation's service is timely, and ought to appeal strongly to our Methodist people in this section. The proposal to present a khaki New Testament to each of them is certainly a most commendable undertaking, and the money with which to do this should be quickly forthcoming. This is a task which properly devolves not only upon the Christian people of New Orleans and Louisiana, but of this entire section of the South. Any pastor would do well to take up a collection for this cause. And let our Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues also at once lend this work a helping hand. They may feel assured that any funds sent Brother Thomas will be faithfully devoted to the end in view. If preferred, money for this purpose may be sent through the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. G. Johnson, of Black Hawk, Miss., recently assisted his brother, Rev. A. P. Johnson, in two successful meetings in Oklahoma. Brother Johnson is this week conducting a series of evangelistic services at Black Hawk.

Mrs. R. H. Harper, of New Orleans, Second Vice President of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference, is at Lindsay, La., where she will remain for several weeks. Correspondents should address her there.

The following friends, whose kindness has not been mentioned elsewhere, have favored us with two or more subscriptions to the Advocate within the past few days: Rev. O. L. Savage, Webb, Miss., 3; Rev. P. F. Luter, Acona, Miss., 2; Dr. J. M. Brown, Haughton, La., 4.

Sister Saunders, the wife of Rev. W. H. Saunders of Fernwood, Miss., went to Newton, Miss., a few days ago to be with her mother, who was reported to be seriously ill in a sanitarium there. We trust that the condition of the stricken one has improved since this message reached us.

At the recent meeting of presiding elders of the Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi Conferences, Rev. H. W. May, of the Lafayette (La.) District, was chosen chairman. This was a distinction that was well merited. Brother May has made a notably fine record in this responsible office.

Rev. J. H. Brooks, of Senatobia, Miss., recently assisted Brother Fikes in a revial meeting at Branch, La. While Brother Brooks was rendering this service, his accomplished young wife and sweet baby daughter went on a visit to Mrs.

Brooks' parents, Rev. and Mrs. Jaco, of Lexington, Miss.

Concerning his charge, Rev. R. G. Halling, of Greenwood Springs, Miss., writes: "The work throughout the circuit is moviug along smoothly, and the prospect is that we will close the year with a good report. We have had good rains, the crops are lookiug well, and our people are now in good spirits."

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of Macon, Miss., Treasurer of the Board of Education of the North Mississippi Conference, writes: "Rev. W. M. Campbell, of Shelby, Miss., is the second man in the Conference to send in a check to cover his educational assessment." Good for Brother Campbell. Let others do likewise.

After tarrying a while at the Seashore Campground, Rev. and Mrs. H. G. Roberts of Coldwater, Miss., have been spending some days in New Orleans. Brother Roberts was given a month's vacation by the excellent people whom he serves. These esteemed itinerants paid the Advocate office an appreciated call a few days ago.

The following dispatch from Tylertown, Miss., appeared in the Times-Picayune last week: "A series of revival services will be begun at the Methodist Church here next Sunday, July 15, to continue for about two weeks. The pastor, Rev. H. A. Gatlin, will be assisted in this meeting by Dr. A. C. Holder, of Shreveport, La."

Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, spent last Friday in New Orleans. Dr. Cooper is scheduled to preach at the Crystal Springs (Miss.) Chautauqua on Sunday, July 22—the 25th anniversary of its founding, with which he had much to do. We predict that his message on that interesting occasion will be well worth hearing.

We regret to learn that Rev. A. Joe Beasley, our pastor at Houlka, Miss., has illness in his home. We hope that it will be of brief duratiou. Brother Beasley reports that he is having a successful year in his work. His letter brought us an account of the Aberdeen District Conference, which reached us too late for this issue of the Advocate, but which will appear next week.

From a business letter from Rev. O. L. Savage, of Webb, Miss., we take the following: "We have just closed a good meeting at Glendora, Miss., during which there were 3 accessions on profession of faith and 4 by certificate. There was not a dull service from start to finish. Rev. W. L. Graves, of Montpelier, Miss., was with me, and my people were delighted with his work."

After addresses by Mr. Vic Fulton, Mr. O. A. Wright, and Dr. S. A. Steel, the pastor, on Sunday, June 17, our First Church congregation at Shreveport, La., gave $500 for Red Cross work. The Messenger, a local monthly published by this Church, contains as "a Roll of Honor" the names of those from among its members who are in the United States Army and Navy—45 in all.

A correspondent writes that last Sunday was a fine day with our First Church at Baton Rouge, La. There was an excellent attendance at Sunday school, and large congregations waited upon the public ministry of the Word at both the morning and eveuing hours. Pastor Battle preached with unction, and there were 3 accessions to the Church, one of them ou profession of faith.

Rev. L. E. Crooks, of Selma, La., writes as follows: "I have planned a revial meeting with a view to haviug it embrace the first and second Sundays in August, and I should be glad to hear from some of the brethren who could be with me at that time. Let them write me at once." Brother Crooks' letter brought us 2 subscriptions to the Advocate, for which we extend to him our thanks.

A friend writes us that at the late meeting of the Joint Commission at Traverse City, Michigan, Bishop John W. Hamilton paid Bishop Hoss, who was absent, a beautiful tribute, saying among other things, as our correspondent remembered it: "He is perhaps more widely known among Methodists than any other living man; in fact, he is the leader of world-wide Methodism." Our Church is, indeed, fortunate to have so majestic a General Superintendent, and well may she hearken to his wise counsel.

Rev. R. H. Harper, the brilliant young pastor of the Parker Memorial Church of this city, spent the latter part of last week at Lindsay, La. The Editor acknowledges himself greatly indebted to Brother Harper for assisting in getting out the two preceding issuues of the Advocate, while, for about two weeks, he was in Central Mississippi looking after personal business and getting a little rest. It does not need to be said to those under whose eyes those numbers of the Advocate came that Brother Harper's work was of a high order. He wields a gifted pen.

Do not miss the communication entitled "The Mary Werlein Mission," from the pen of Rev. W. E. Thomas, the consecrated young pastor who has that work in charge. Such statements as he makes can hardly fail to find an echo in every Christian heart. Surely some way should be found to meet more adequately the conditions which he so appealingly sets forth. It would undoubtedly be a monumental and enduring work if some man or woman of means would lead the way toward the establishment of a "Rescue Home" for fallen women in this greatest city of what is properly termed the South. Here is an open door to a service that would outlast the stars.

SHALL WE THROW OFF ALL THE NEGROES FOR SOME OF THE NEGROES?

Some of the editors of Northern Methodist papers seem to consider that the incorporation of the Negro members of their Church into the proposed unified Methodist Church in the United States involves the very essence of Christian principle, and that opposition to this plan by any Southern editor is an absolutely ungodly thing. The Editor of the Christian Advocate of Pittsburgh, Penn., for example, goes so far as to deny our Church a place among the catholic Churches of the world unless we consent to follow the plan of his Church and renounce the plan of our Church which we have followed since 1870. (Such also is the import of some recent heated utterances by Bishop Quayle.)

These esteemed editors overlook an important fact which is worthy of consideration. That fact is this: In the Methodist Episcopal Church there are no more than 350,000 Negro members, whereas there are nearly 2,000,000 Negro Methodists in the United States. About 50,000 of their members are found in the States of Delaware, New York, and Illinois and the District of Columbia. Not more than about 300,000 are found in the Southern States.

It is evident that Negro Metbodists in affiliation with white churches are not successful among their own people, even when supported by large funds for educational missionary enterprises sent to them from the North.

Why now should the small number of Negro members of the Methodist Episcopal Church have a preferred claim upon the white Methodists of America?

Why should we of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, be called upon to throw off the membership of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America—a Church which we organized and which we have been aiding for over forty years—and take to our arms a small body of Northern Methodist Negroes in preference?

If our Church were united with the Northern Church, an assessment would doubtless be laid upon all the Annual Conferences, and through these Conferences upon every pastoral charge in the South, for the support of the Freedman's Aid Society." The collections from such an assessment would be devoted to the support of tho colored membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Would it be right for our Church to withdraw its aid from the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, and through the Freedmen's Aid Society bestow its funds upon the comparatively small membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church? Would this be doing our duty by the whole number of Negro Methodists in the South? The Secretary of The Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church is I. Garland Penn, a Negro layman.

How do the advocates of "union at any cost" think our people would respond to an assessment sent out for his Society by Secretary Penn? Do they think the response upon the part of the people to such an assessment as would be laid for the Freedmen's Aid Society would be very great? Do they imagine that if unification were accomplished our Northern brethren would hesitate to lay an assessment upon the united Church for the support of their Freedmen's Aid Society?

This whole matter of unification is not a thing to be settled by unthinking sentimentality. It involves a great many elements of both principle and policy, and, such being the case, a mere wave of the hand will not remove all difficulties.

"When Christ comes into a heart, the light of His presence shows up each dark, sinful corner in it. Then comes the choice—shall sin go, or shall we lose the light?"

SHOULD BE STOPPED.

The Central Christian Advocate (Kansas City) makes the following observation:

"It is noticeable that Congress is still making appropriations to Catholics for the maintenance of their Indian schools. This abuse of Federal patronage in behalf of sectarian institutions has been fought out time and again in Congress. Particularly during the rule of President Grant this un-American thing was thought to be abolished. None the less, it still persists, and is a perennial fracture of the principles upon which the Republic rests."

When once the Romish Church gets any governmental favor, she is not easily stripped of it. With the St. Patrick's Thanksgiving mass being accorded at least a semi-official recognition by the attendance in official regalia of high public officers and foreign diplomats, the influence of Roman Catholicism at Washington does not seem to be on the wane. Apparently all political parties are anxious to win favor at the hands of this great ecclesiasticism, which is said to control an immense number of votes. The Protestants of the United States should note these things and exert their influence against them. We need no national Church in this country, nor anything approximating one.

AMONG THE SOLDIERS.

The recruits for the regular army have been coming to Jackson Barracks, New Orleans, on an average of something near 900 a month, but now that the draft system is to go into effect the number will be largely increased.

These boys are from all sections, the greater percentage from Louisiana and Mississippi. They are uprooted from all former environments and associations and naturally that feeling of homesickness and lonesomeness that comes to us all when we are separated from those we love comes to them.

It has been a long time since I preached to a company of men that are as receptive and appreciative as they are. They eagerly receive the New Testaments bound in khaki with which we have been trying to supply them.

The American Bible Society has been forced to raise the price on these testaments to $30 per hundred. I am making a plea to the churches and to individuals to help in this great work. It is an opportune time to sow the Word, which the Lord said should not return unto him void.

Another feature that adds tremendously to this opportunity of rendering first aid is the personnel of the officers in charge of this important post. I do not believe there can be found within our army a commanding officer and staff who are more interested in the welfare of their men than Major Cook and his corps. Major Cook is a man of rare ability as an officer, and has a great heart that is personally interested in his men

Lieutenant Bundy, who has charge of affairs at the Post, is a young man who is talented and vitally interested in every detail that will add to the comfort and moral uplift of these, our own young men.

Captain Edwards and Captain Ashbridge are both men of strong character and ability.

Naturally, with men of this type at the head, it is encouraging to the newly enlisted to start right. Will you not respond to this call by sending me a remittance for this urgent work at once?

NOT EQUIPMENT, BUT THE MAN MAKES THE DIFFERENCE IN SCHOOLS.

A man in whom you can trust your boy with absolute confidence is Mr. Robert K. Morgan, Principal of the Morgan School, Fayetteville, Tennessee.

During the past twenty-five years Mr. Morgan has built up this training school for boys around his own long experience, and his study of boy nature, and of the problems of giving the boy the mental preparation, physical well-being and spiritual strength for an honorable manly, successful life. He has chosen his faculty, equipped his school and ordered its courses with one purpose in view.

Mr. Morgan is a graduate of the Webb School, Bellbuckle, Tenn., and the Vanderbilt University. He is a man of strong, wholesome personality and deep Christian character—an inspiration to every boy who comes under his care. His close personal relations with his boy students, his attention to their work, their talents, their special needs, has given his school a position of high distinction. The citizens of Fayetteville have recently presented him with a $15,000 building as an addition to his school.

A postal card to Mr. L. L. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Fayetteville, Tenn., will bring you a catalog and full information about this school.

On June 11, 1917, as the sun was setting in the golden west, Miss BEATRICE HENDERTON, of Ima, Miss., entered the rest, and her spirit went back to Him, Who gave it. When young she gave her heart to God and joined the Methodist Church. She was a faithful Sunday school attendant and was always ready to work for the cause of Christ. She was a faithful mother to her mother's two little girls who are again left motherless. She was patient and cheerful in her last sickness, and her home-going was like the peaceful setting of the sun in a clear sky. She left a father, a mother, two brothers and two sisters to mourn their loss. The world was made better for her having lived in it. May the Lord comfort the ones who are so sadly bereaved.

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

ROBERT CHILDEROT PORTER, son of Rev. Childeroy Porter, late of the North Mississippi Conference, died on June 19 in a hospital in Temple, Tex. While on duty as postmaster at Gainesville, Texas, May 14, he was fatally burned by the explosion of a tank-car of casing-head oil, alleged to have been shipped as a non-explosive oil in a common tank at a much higher freight rate. During a month of pain and struggle he was hopeful, cheerful, and patient in his suffering. Mr. Porter was born in Brooksville, Miss., on March 4, 1871. He joined the Church in Gainesville about two years ago. The change which expressed itself in church membership was genuine, and his pastor, as well as others, testifies to the right living and worth of the man. He leaves a wife and one child—Childeroy the third—a boy full of promise, and devoted with a peculiar attachment to his father. Besides, he leaves a mother, two sisters, and three brothers. The friends of Sister Porter and the children will pray for them in their grief.

Starkville, Miss. JOHN PARK.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

I want to urge all the pastors of the North Mississippi Conference to see to it that the offering taken on Children's Day is sent to the treasurer right away. The Board had to borrow money to begin the year's work and the Children's Day offering is badly needed to keep things going.

Respectfully,
E. S. LEWIS,
Oxford, Miss. Treasurer.

PROF. TOWNSEND COMMENDED.

The resignation of Prof. H. E. Townsend as superintendent of the Sunday school of our church at Simsboro has been received with expressions of regret among our people, and the members of the Sunday school recently adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Sunday School at Simsboro, La., accepts the resignation of Prof. H. E. Townsend as superintendent with extreme regret, and that it does so with extreme loss.

Resolved (2), That the Sunday School hereby gives expressions of appreciation of the devoted service that Prof. Townsend has rendered our church and Sunday School during the four years of his serving, as an able and conscientious Christian leader. Our prayers will be for his health, happiness, and a long life of fruitful labor in the Master's vineyard.

Resolved (3), That we believe we voice the sentiments of the entire community in which Prof. Townsend served as the faithful and untiring Principal of the Simsboro High School in expressing the hope that the high ideals and Christian principles which were ever before his pupils may come to exist in our Parish and throughout the entire State and that we may have Christian teachers both in our public schools and Sunday schools.

Respectfully submitted,
Signed: Mrs. A. J. Thomas, Mrs. J. A. Turnage, Mrs. Effie Pace.

THE MONROE DISTRICT AND THE LOYALTY SCHOOL

Five of the ministers from this district attended the Loyalty School at the Seashore Campground.

Rev. T. J. Miller of Lake Providence taught two classes—one in sight and another in Evidences of Christian Experience. He has been a regular attendant and an enthusiastic supporter of the School. This year he was honored by being placed on the Board of Directors.

Rev. J. L. Lay, of Talbom, passed successfully the entire second year course. He established a record for being a painstaking student.

Rev. J. A. Ray the popular pastor of Wilson, was favored with a month's vacation by his people. He said that the lectures were great and that he intended to return next year in his auto.

Rev. W. J. Woodward, of Oak Grove, entertained the District Conference so hospitably that all the rest his people favored him with a trip to the Seashore. In addition to enjoying the lectures, he proved himself a skilled disciple of Sir Isaac Walton.

The preaching after caught the Third-Year Class in "Building the Kingdom" and the "Life of William Tindale."

At the District Conference thirty-three dollars was raised for the running expenses of the school.

FORGETFULNESS OF SELF.

Not when we are determined, come what may, to have a pleasant and a happy life are then is the reveal of that insistence, does God bestow the music of the heart. He gives it when there is forgetfulness of self and the struggle to be true to what is highest, though the morning break without a glimpse of blue, and the path be through the valley of the shadow. The one sure way to miss the gift of happiness is to rise early and sit up late for it. To be bent at every cost on a good time, is the sure harbinger of dreary days. It is when we have the courage to forget all that, and to lift up our hearts to do the will of God, that, like a swallow flashing from the eaves, happiness glances out with glad surprise.—C. H. Morrison.

Coarse Hair

doesn't become you and it is as manly as it is unbecoming. The hair should be soft and light and should hold its original luster when it is healthy. The quickest and surest way to deprive the hair of its original luster is to leave it alone to look out for itself. Each separate hair is an individual delicate structure in itself and every hair on your head, in order to contribute its share of beauty should be perfectly fed with the natural hair oil, which comprises its food. Starve your hair and, like anything else, it will die. Feed your hair with nature's hair food, "La Creole." This excellent hair food, first discovered by the Creoles of Louisiana fifty years ago and preserved by them, proved a treatment from which sprang their reputation for beautiful hair. It has since been offered the public and has served to beautify the hair of thousands of the tasteful and fastidious.

To Drive Out Malaria And Build Up The System

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS chill TONIC. You know what you are taking, as the formula is printed on every label, showing it is Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form. The Quinine drives out malaria, the Iron builds up the system. 50c.—Adv.

PALPITATION AND OTHER DISORDERS OF THE HEART.

Weak hearts are exceedingly common. Directly you are conscious of the fact that you have a heart, it means that your heart is not acting normally and that it needs attention.

Every time your heart misses a beat its efficiency is lessened.

Heart trouble, taken in its early stages, may not be difficult to relieve; but the more the treatment is delayed the harder it is to obtain permanent relief. If there is the slightest symptom to show that your heart is weak or diseased you should not delay taking treatment.

Dr. Miles' Heart Treatment has been the popular choice for more than twenty years. It has stood the test of time in a manner that forbids any doubt as to its efficiency. People who praised this remedy twenty years ago still believe in it and are only too glad to state that the trouble has never returned.

Any of these symptoms may indicate heart trouble: Shortness of Breath, Fluttering or Palpitation; Choking Sensation; Irregular Pulse; Weak or Hungry Spells, Swelling of Feet or Ankles, Pain under the Left Shoulder Blade.

If you notice any of these symptoms get a bottle of Dr. Miles' Heart Treatment. You risk nothing, for if the first bottle fails to benefit you, you have only to return the empty bottle to your druggist and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

CONTINUE THE WARFARE.

Are we going on unto perfection? If so what progress are we making? Perceptibly none? Just drifting? Just going forward and slipping back again? Beware lest your soul accommodate itself to the presence of sin in your life as a necessity as our physical nature comes to live in the presence of the germs of dread disease. If we consent to the presence of sin without striving, without repentance, without grief, or if we lower the standard of perfection till it is within our reach, we are guilty of errors which have their roots in bitterness, and will harvest lifelong regrets.

On dressers and Mantels, Under Beds And Behind Trunks, in Grips And Hip-Pockets--Sweet Dreams

Sweet Dreams—everywhere.
The folks at home keep it on mantels and dressers, under beds and behind trunks. The frequency of netless beds demands that the traveler keep it in his grip. And it's only the fisherman who hasn't yet heard that doesn't slip a bottle in his hip-pocket.
Sweet Dreams is a very wonderful mosquito remedy, and just a few more people are learning this every day.
And Sweet Dreams would appreciate your giving it a trial.

The Composition of Coca-Cola and its Relation to Tea

Prompted by the desire that the public shall be thoroughly informed as to the composition and dietetic character of Coca-Cola, the Company has issued a booklet giving a detailed analysis of its recipe which is as follows:

Water, sterilized by boiling (carbonated); sugar, granulated, first quality; fruit flavoring extracts with caramel; acid flavorings, citric (lemon) and phosphoric; essence of tea—the refreshing principle.

The following analysis, by the late Dr. John W. Mallet, Fellow of the Royal Society and for nearly forty years Professor of Chemistry in the University of Virginia, shows the comparative stimulating or refreshing strength of tea and Coca-Cola, measured in terms of the refreshing principle:

Black tea (hot)	1 cupful (5 fl. oz.)	1.54
Green tea (cold)	1 glassful (8 fl. oz. exclusive of ice)	2.02
Coca-Cola (fountain)	1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.21
Coca-Cola (bottlers)	1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.12

From the above recipe and analysis, which are confirmed by all chemists who have analyzed these beverages, it is apparent that Coca-Cola is a carbonated, fruit-flavored modification of tea of a little more than one-half its stimulating strength.

A copy of the booklet referred to above will be mailed free on request, and The Coca-Cola Company especially invites inquiry from those who are interested in pure food and public health propaganda. Address

A VISIT TO COFFEEVILLE, MISS.

For two months this year I have been busily engaged in Sunday school work, being the Sunday School District Secretary for the Sardis and Holly Springs Districts. The work has been made pleasant by the hearty co-operation of the genial pastors with whom I have labored. Possibly no day has brought more of good things to me than the Sunday recently spent in the historic town of Coffeeville with that cultured people and their inestimable pastor, whose assidnous efforts have been crowned with such signal results.

Last year the boll weevil destroyed the cotton crop and the rain deluged the corn and hay, but, like a true philosopher, Brother Storment kept his head above the waves of disappointments and adversities, his heart burning with love for his church and his faith riveted in the eternal promises of God. Thus he went about his work and accomplished that which seemed impossible. The old church, with its inadequate equipment, has been transformed into a beautiful modern building, with spacious Sunday school rooms. An elegant building, ideally located, has been purchased, and soon the pastor and his family will be pleasantly domiciled in one of the most comfortable and attractive parsonages in North Mississippi. These are some of the expressions of material development which signify a deeper consecration of church life.

On Sunday morning, though the weather was extremely warm, the Sunday school attendance was large and the services unusually interesting. At the 11 o'clock hour the pastor delivered a great sermon to a crowded house. The sweltering temperature of the afternoon did not enervate the spirit of the people, for at 8 o'clock the house was again crowded. In the afternoon, in a pleasant grove not far from Bryant, Miss., an appreciative audience had assembled to listen to a sermon by Brother Storment, who was in his happiest mood and who brought the hungry crowd an inspiring message from the words, "Ye are the salt of the earth." REVIVAL AT MERIDIAN, MISS.

Dear Mr. Editor: It gives me great pleasure to forward to you a report on the city-wide revial campaign that comes to a close here Sunday. Rev. Burke Culpepper and his party, Prof. Harold R. Coffin and Mr. George Tucker, have held the most far reaching revival that this city has seen in twenty years or more. All of the churches (17) and the Y. M. C. A. united in the campaign. Some remarkable services were held in the shops, at the factories, and on the streets, and there were hundreds of prayer meetings all over the city. The tent seated 5200, but a conservative estimate, taking the throng that was on the outside, fixed the number attending night services at 8000 or 10,000. Professor Coffin had a splendid chorus of 350 voices, and Mr. Tucker specialized in working with the railroad men, conducting noon services, etc. The campaign song, "He Included Me," was used all over the city, and it was greatly blessed of God in touching those who never go to church. Many were turned to God as a result of this wonderful campaign. The churches have received a new life and have become quickened, and the city's morale is much better. One of the features of the campaign was that Evangelist Burke Culpepper gave his entire Free Will offering away to be divided between the Red Cross Society, the Y. M. C. A., and a local Tuberculosis Hospital.

The future engagement of the Culpepper party are: Lonoke, Ark., August 1-15; Murry, Ky., and Ellzabeth City, N. C. Respectfully, MEMORIAL TO GOVERNOR SHANDS.

At the conclusion of the regular session of the Rayne Memorial Sabbath School Sunday morning, July 15, Superintendent J. R. Westerfield summoned the members of the adult, senior and junior departments to the main Sunday school room to take part in a memorial service to the memory of Governor G. D. Shands, who for many years was a member of the faculty of Tulane University and an active member of Rayne Memorial Church and Sabbath school, and teacher of the Wesley Adult Bible class.

The service was presided over by Superintendent Westerfield, who briefly outlined Governor Shands' connection with the Sabbath school which began years ago when he first moved to New Orleans, and when Mr. Westerfield was in charge of the school. He spoke of Governor Shands' extreme modesty and his willingness to he used wherever he could he of the most service, and paid a glowing tribute to his fruitful and earnest labors. in concluding he introduced the pastor, Dr. U. G. Foote.

Dr. Foote spoke of his brief acquaintance with Governor Shands, dating back only a few months, since the laying down, on account of his growing feebleness, of his active duties in the church. He spoke of the stability and serenity of his Christian character and of the expression of it in those graces of gentleness, meekness and generosity that marked him as one of God's noblemen. He referred to him as one of a class of men of the old school, who are rapidly passing away, and who should be marked by younger people as examples worth emulating.

Mr. S. A. Montgomery paid a glowing tribute to Governor Shands' life and character and after a few words of personal appreciation and an expression of regard in behalf of the Sabbath school by Mr. Westerfield, he introduced Mrs. J. R. Black, who sang the hymn, "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," after which the service was concluded with a prayer by Rev. W. G. Evans.

AN INTERESTING OCCASION.

Hon. W. A. Percy, son of the distinguished Senator Leroy Percy of Greenville, Miss., spoke at the Temple Theater in Aberdeen last night, July 15, to about 1200 people. Mr. Percy was invited to Aberdeen by the officers and members of the Red Cross Society. He has just returned from Belgium, having served on the Belgian Relief Committee with Mr. Hoover. The speaker held his audience spellbound for one hour and fifteen minutes, whlie he related some of the horrible things the German soldiers were doing and had done in this war. One incident was where a beautiful young girl was walking down the street and a German officer stopped her and made an indecent proposal to her. She denounced him with all her might, whereupon she was arrested and tried before a bunch of Germans and sentenced to six months' imprlsonment for insulting the German officer. Mr. Percy said that unless the Red Sross Society and the Y. M. C. A. placed some decent forms of amusement in France for our soldlers they would be forced to spend their spare time in the "pubs." Immediately after the speaking Mr. Gaston Therrell asked for contrlbutions for the Red Cross and in just a few minutes $1500 was raised.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Freckles

The fairer the skin the more ugly it is when marred by freckles; and they are not necessary at all. As soon as the warm sunshine or the hot winds bring them out, and with the natural embarrasment that every woman feels, get a package of Kintho; this is the easy way to remove them. If Kintho is used at the first sign of the ugly spots, they'll sometimes disappear overnight. Any druggist has or can get Kintho for you. Use Kintho soap too. It's astonishing how it helps keep the freckles away once Kintho has removed them.

NEW VIEW-POINTS.

Since the war began missionary appeal has automatically changed. Unconsciously a new view-point has emerged. Such questions as these have arisen:

1. What would happen should China and Japan, having adopted Western sciences, adopt the ideals of the Germans?

2. If humanity is a unit, must we not Christianize others that we may be Christianized ourselves?

3. Is not selfishness the "root of bitterness" that has corrupted the world? Is not Germany's ambition for world-power a legitimate development of that principle?

4. Wealth is stewardship and it has been selfishly used. May not the present destruction of wealth be interpreted as a Divine judgment?

The tendency of the Church in all ages has been to rely upon organization and allow the inner life to evaporate. Reformation, "back to Christ," means a return to primitive Christianity, the indwelling Spirit. And nothing but Pentecostal Christianity will overcome.—Rev. R. P. Mackay, D. D., Secretary of the Board of Missions, Canadian Presbyterian Church.

THE MOSLEM'S PREPARATION FOR PRAYER.

Throughout the Moslem world no "believer" under any circumstance is allowed to perform his prayer before having cleansed himself by prescribed ablutions when he can obtain clean water. If traveling in a waterless desert the "believer" is allowed to use sand in his ablutions. If it is impossible to procure sand, he passes his hand over a stone before each act.

The ablutions are absolutely necessary as a preparation to prayer. The "believer" tucks up his sleeves above the elbows and from a "breek" or brass jug of water before him he pours water into his hands and washes them three times.

Next, taking a little water into the hollow of his right hand he allows the water to run up his arm as far as his elbow, and, having washed the right arm, he does the same with the left. This is done three times.

Water is next taken in the right hand and sniffed up the nostrils and blown out by the finger being placed on the side of the nose.

The nose and mouth having been thoroughly cleansed, he wets the tips of his two forefingers, places them in his ears and twists them around. Sometimes before his last act the Moslem will scrape out his ears with a tiny spoon of bone in order that no dirt may remain.

He next takes off his fez cap and lays it down in a clean place. He passes his wet hands over his head down to the nape of his neck. In order that no water may fall on his linen and thus render him impure, he passes his hands around his neck, shaking off any water that may have been gathered on the forefingers.

If the "believer" has shoes and socks, they are taken off before beginning the ablutions. The last act is to wash his feet and legs up as far as the knees, the fingers being carefully passed through the spaces between the toes; thus the ablution is completed.

Between each act of washing the Moslem repeats some pious saying. When washing the nostrils he says "O my God, if I am pleasing in Thy sight perfume me with the odors of Paradise," and so on.

If the worshiper is sure of having avoided all kinds of impurity, it is not necessary for him to perform these ablutions five times daily before the prescribed prayers. He trusts, however, in the cleansing of water and does not believe that the blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanseth us from all sin. It is a ceremonial cleansing rather than a heart cleansing that the Moslem is seeking.—Arthur V. Liley, Tunis.

MESSAGE FROM THE NEW SUPERINTENDENT OF STUDY AND PUBLICITY, MISS. CONF.

The first quarter of the Conference year has closed and the work for this quarter is finished—not in a sense of completeness, but so far as this quarter is concerned it is, for what else is done must be reported in the work for the next three months.

Official reports have been slow to come in. This may be largely due to the inexperience of the new Superintendent of Study and Publicity. Personal letters, however, from members of many auxiliaries and reports from some of our district secretaries show increasing interest in the work.

There have been reported to me through the district secretaries three new organizations: one in the Brookhaven district at McComb City, and the other two are in the Meridian district—one at Andrews Chapel, the other at Electric Mills.

There have been two new study circles organized: one of these was with the women of the new society at Electric Mills; the other was at the East End Church of Meridian.

At Poplar Springs, where the work has been abandoned for quite a long while, the women have taken up the work again.

The work of the Meridian District Secretary has been very much lightened and her expenses lessened by the good women of this city who own automobiles. There are several here who are not only willing, but who offer her transportation to those churches where she cannot go on the train. I offer this by way of suggestion; perhaps others would do likewise if it had occurred to them.

If there has been any success attached to my department of the work I would not forget to give to those district secretaries and members of auxiliaries who have helped me all the credit due them. Some have rendered invaluable service to me. Without them I could not have accomplished what I have.

Trusting I may be able to report greater results next quarter, I am

Your co-worker,
Mrs. GEO. H. THOMPSON.

SHORTHAND FOR THE CHINESE.

The Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions has received the following interesting item:

"A system of Chinese shorthand has been invented by Mr. K. V. Dzung, a native of Shanghai. The whole system contains but 39 signs, of which 15 are vowels and 24 consonants, and yet the inventor claims that every Chinese character is indicated, while a speed equal to that of most English systems, that is 150 words a minute, can be attained. He says that the course can be mastered as readily as any and can be used in conjunction with the newly invented Chinese typewriter. The value of such a system of writing in Chinese cannot be overestimated because of the great number of characters in the Chinese alphabet, and not only that, but they cannot be written rapidly owing to their complicated construction. Mr. Dzung acquired his English shorthand through an American correspondence course, and is planning to open a Chinese school of shorthand with headquarters in Shanghai."

You Can Tell The People Who Have Iron in Their Blood —Strong, Healthy, Vigorous Folks

Doctor Says Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Nervous Rundown People 100 Per Cent. Stronger in Two Weeks' Time in Many Cases.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—"One glance is enough to tell which people have iron in their blood," said Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician who has studied widely both in this country and in great European Medical Institutions, in a recent discourse. "They are the ones that do and dare. The others are in the weakling class. Sleepless nights spent worrying over supposed ailments, constant dosing with habit-forming drugs and narcotics for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease and useless attempts to brace up with strong coffee or other stimulants are what keep them suffering and vainly longing to be strong. Their real trouble is lack of iron in the blood. Without iron the blood has no power to change food into living tissue and therefore, nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. The moment iron is supplied the multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. I have seen dozens of nervous, rundown people who were ailing all the time, double and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of every sign of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without any benefit.

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. There is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and sound, healthy flesh on your bones. But you must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr. E. Sauer, is one of the newer organic iron compounds. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

From the Field

Pine Grove, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just closed three revival meetings on the Pine Grove charge which were a great success. There were about 75 confessions and 10 accessions by profession of faith. The churches were generally revived. Brother Alonzo Early, of Amite City, La., did the preaching. Brother Early was well liked by all, and we commend him as good help in a revival.—B. D. Watson, P. C.

Fernwood, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: As you know, our meeting was set for June 18, with Brother Dan Kelly to do the preaching and Brother Duke to do the singing. The preaching done by Brother Kelly was of the best type and full of the love and power of God. Under the leadership of the Spirit, his preaching reached the hearts of the people, the church was greatly revived, the spirit of godliness was much increased in the community, and about every one that could be expected to unite with the Church did so. There are not many out of the Church in the town of Fernwood, as they are looked after as they come to the place and soon are united with the Church. Brother Kelly had been to Fernwood three times before. His preaching was a blessing and a benediction to the place. Brother Duke's singing caught the people and his work was of a high order and contributed in no small measure to the success of the meeting. On last Sunday morning I received a class of 6 into the church and baptized 5 children, and one person was received at the evening service by certificate. There are others to join in the future. The meeting closed at 10 p. m. on Thursday with a beautiful flower service, and a spirit of rejoicing was in the audience.

The people of Fernwood had indicated to the pastor that it was expected that he and his family would attend the Divinity School, and on Friday morning at 6 o'clock we started through the country in an "auto" to the coast, a distance of 156 miles, and reached our distination that afternoon at 6 o'clock. This, surely, was a treat that we will long remember, and we cannot find words to express our appreciation of the trip.

The fellowship of the brethren who gather at the coast at the time of the Divinity School is not surpassed by any body of men to be found anywhere. This fellowship alone is a blessing that can not be overestimated. I have attended seven of the nine sessions of this School, and can say that the one just closed was one of the very best it has been my pleasure to attend. The management did itself grand in the program, and I can not see how any preacher in three hundred miles allowed himself to miss it. Bishop Quayle, Dr. King, and Dr. Goodell, and also our own Dr. Shackford, brought messages that would inspire the dry spirits of many preachers and give them a new hold on the art and spirit of preaching. It is time that Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana—all three States—were rallying to this institution and helping to make it what it is destined to be. Please let me exhort the brethren in these Conferences to come to the help of this institution, for in so doing you will help yourselves and the churches that you serve more than you will the institution. While the attendance was about as good as at any session since it was founded, and all the expenses were paid, it would have been far better to have had three times as many preachers as we did have. If it had had that many the management could have provided an extended program, including more work in the departments of the young people in the Church. To speak of any one of these great men that furnished attractions might seem to discriminate against the others, but I am inclined to say that Bishop Quayle reached the high-water mark and captured the preachers and the people of the coast.

Now, Dr. Meek, you know I am on the home-run on this charge, and at the coming Conference I will finish up the allowed four years. Some preacher will have to take my place, and in many respects he will find it a very pleasant situation. May he meet with as kind a reception as I have done throughout my four years' stay and come out at the end with as pleasant memories!

About one month ago, one evening, the young people came in droves, all bringing something to remind the pastor and his family that they thought kindly of them and left a good spirit of brotherly love behind. More recently some elegant rugs and other comforts for the house were brought, and now our home is very nice as well as comfortable. My successor may be able to violate the rule regarding "softness and needless self-indulgence."

Now, Mr. Editor, if you will come up I will let you indulge.—W. H. Saunders.

CALOMEL MAKES YOU SICK, UGH!

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Better Than Calomel and Can Not Salivate.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for 50 cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the net day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

A BUSINESS MAN'S PRAYER.

With gratitude for Thy protection during the night watches, I begin, O Lord, the new life of a new day. My path will be the busy thoroughfare; walk with me unseen. My thoughts will be of my business. Let not my heart cleave to these things, but through the sweet influence of Thy Spirit incline me to seek things that endure.

I shall be tempted to-day; I may be drawn to the verge of some awful mistake, in the swift moment when I can not withdraw to my closet of prayer—give me to know the right, and power to do it. Let not trifles ruffle my temper, or disappointments unman me; let not exacting duties make me selfish and churlish; give me rather a sunshiny face, and the joy of a word fitly spoken to some timid, discouraged soul.

Strength for the day's service give me in such measure as Thou willest; pass by my sins of omission; and when the shadows fall, bring me again, unsullied by word or deed to sweet, refreshing sleep. For Christ's sake, Amen.—Presbyterian Advocate.

PERSONAL.

Brother: Accidentally discovered nature's antidote for the nasty tobacco habit. It is a pleasant-tasting root, chewed like gum; quickly and easily overcomes both tobacco habit and indigestion. Gladly send particulars. W. E. STOKES, Mohawk, Florida.—Adv.

There is one lesson that we all need to learn, and that is that we shall save nothing from the wreck of life but the deeds and gifts of love which we have given unto Christ.—Bishop Whipple.

Chronic Catarrh is Curable
Nothing is more distressing to the sufferer and his friends. Chronic catarrh is systemic—that is, it is present throughout the body, though it may manifest itself in a local ulceration.
Only a constitutional treatment will overcome systemic catarrh. Local treatments sometimes help the acute manifestations, but they cannot overcome the systemic disorder.
PERUNA Has Helped Thousands
It is a foe to catarrh. The voluntary testimony of thousands establishes that. Peruna benefits in a number of ways. Peruna builds up the digestion, restores the strength, and helps put the system in condition.
Peruna has special value in catarrh: It gives vitality to the system, restores tone to the membranes and enables these to perform their functions. In many cases its benefits begin at once, and it rarely fails when treatment is continued properly.
The Peruna Medical Department will be glad to assist you to overcome this disease. The doctor's advice is free. Don't delay treatment.

THE MONROE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

A very pleasant and harmonious session of the Monroe District Conference was held in the Baptist Church in the progressive and hospitable town of Oak Grove, West Carroll Parish, June 14-21, inclusive. The Methodist church was destroyed by a storm about a year ago and has not been rebuilt, but Rev. W. T. Woodward and his flock have plans under way to erect a $10,000 brick building. The preachers, delegates, and visitors were met at Delhi, on the V. S. & P. Railway, with automobils and conveyed to Oak Grove, a distance of about 40 miles, free of charge, and were likewise returned to Delhi after the conference adjourned. The only disagreeable feature of this trip was the great amount of dust encountered, but the pleasure of the auto trip through almost the full length of this thriving northeast Louisiana Parish, and a part of Richland Parish as well, was so great that the discomfort of the dust was soon forgotten.

The conference opened on the night of the 19th with a splendid sermon by Rev. I. T. Reams, of Rayville. The presidency of Rev. A. S. Lutz, the presiding elder, gave general satisfaction, and he made it a point to bring before the conference every one of the varied interests of the Church. Brother Lutz is in high favor in the district and spares no pains to care for every interest of the Church at all times, giving, as should be the case, special attention to its spiritual interests.

Rev. W. T. Woodward, the pastor of the Oak Grove charge, was a splendid host and gave every visitor the best home in Oak Grove.

Hon. W. L. Bagwell, a resident lawyer and member of the Baptist Church, delivered a hearty address of welcome, which was responded to by the presiding elder.

The eleven o'clock hours were given to Rev. C. V. Breithaupt and Rev. R. H. Wynn, D. D., respectively, to present the interests of the Sunday school work and Centenary College. Rev. R. W. Vaughan was given the devotional hour of an afternoon session to present the claims of the orphanage and was delighted that he could speak as long as he wanted to, which was about one hour.

S. J. McLean and M. H. Honeycutt were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial, and S. J. McLean for deacon's orders.

R. O. Randie was re-elected District Lay Leader.

The delegates elected to the Annual Conference are: W. L. Calhoun, R. O. Randle, C. W. Scates, and W. L. P. Henry. Alternates: Rev. W. B. Inabnett and B. F. Sheppard.

Mer Rouge was unanimously selected as the place for the next session of the district conference.

The Conference unanimously adopted a resolution calling upon President Wilson to do all in his power for the suppression of the liquor traffic during the period of the war.

Rev. T. S. Randie, one of our honored superannuates, who has been living in Texas several years, was in attendance as a member of the Conference, he and his wife having returned to Louisiana to live with his brother, Rev. Robert Randle, at Farmerville, La. Other prominent visitors to the Conference were Rev. Fred Long of the Mississippi Conference, State Secretary of the Mississippi Sunday Sschool Association, and Van Carter, State Secretary of the Louisiana Sunday School Association.

Rev. E. K. Means preached a splendid sermon on Wednesday night, and the Conference closed with a strong and forcible sermon by Rev. C. C. Miller on Thursday night. At this last service a collection was taken and sufficient money raised to defray the expenses of Rev. W. T. Woodward, the host of the Conference, to the Seashore Divinity School.

AGAINST THE RUM TRAFFIC.

The following resolution urging the suppression of the liquor traffic was recently unanimously adopted by the Monroe District Conference:

Resolved, That we, the members of the Monroe District Conference (Louisiana Conf.) of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, hereby put ourselves most emphatically on record in favor of every form of prohibition, local, State and National; that we endorse the work of the Anti-Saloon League of America; that we call upon Mr. Wilson, the President of the United States, to whom the question of prohibition during the war has been referred, to do all in his power in favor of the suppression of the liquor traffic during the period of the war; and, further, that we call upon him in behalf of the cause of prohibition and the food supply to use all of his power in preventing the manufacture of any food products into any liquors used for beverage purposes.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of this resolution be printed in the New Orleans Christian Advocate and in the local paper, and a copy sent to President Wilson.

Signed by: W. R. Harvell, C. C. Miller, W. T. Woodward, Geo. Fox.

A REVIVAL AT PATTERSON, LA.

Dear Brother Meek: A ten days' mission was concluded here on Wednesday last, having been conducted by the Rev. J. Douglas Swagerty of Shreveport. The excellent singing of Brother Swagerty especially won the people, and it was followed by earnest, quiet, effective appeals which brought good results. The attendance was larger than at any previous revival services. A special featurue was the dinner-hour service at the lumber mill, made possible by the kind permission of F. B. Williams Co. Between 100 and 150 men, white and colored, listened attentively to a short address, many at the close of the meeting standing up in token of beginning a new life. Fifteen new members were taken into the Church, and a new impetus was given to Church activities in this difficult Roman Catholic community.

Rev. J. D. Swagerty has a wonderful power in song, combined with a very pleasing personality. His simple Gospel messages, aided by the Holy Spirit, resulted in the most successful evangelistic services in the history of this church. F. B. HILL.

OUR GIFT.

By Caroline Ticknor, of the Vigilantes.

Behold Thy sons, O Lord!
We give them back to Thee,
With outstretched arms and bleedings hearts,
On bended knee.
Wrought in Thy image, nurtured in Thy truth,
The brave, the strong, all-glorious in youth;
Guard this our priceless gift, in strife and stress,
O Lord of Righteousness!

Our noblest sons, O Lord!
We give them back to Thee.
Use them to glorify Thy name,
A ransom for the free.
Yet as we give Thee back Thine own to-day,
On bended knee with fervent hearts we pray,
Guard Thou our valiant sons on land and sea,
O Lord of Liberty!

THE CALL TO THE COLORS.

The work of developing an army by means of a selective draft went a stage further toward execution on Friday, July 20, when the drawing of the nearly ten million men registered on June 5 was conducted in the Capitol at Washington, with a view to determining the order of their call to the colors. Every possible precaution was taken to make this drawing perfectly fair and impartial, and there is not the slightest doubt that it was executed in a manner that was absolutely above criticism in every respect. Every person whose name figured in it may feel assured that he has been given a square deal, whether the outcome shall be to send him to the front, or to leave him to pursue unmolested his accustomed vocation.

The task of examining the men whose names were first drawn to determine their physical fitness for military service will now be speedily taken up, and those who are held to conform to the necessary requirements, up to the number of 687,000, will ere long be in camps to be trained and equipped for the work that is before them. The calling of these selected young citizens into the army will leave many vacant places in the homes of the Nation, and there will be among us many burdened and anxious hearts, because of the danger into which their loved ones are expected soon to be summoned. Tho coming months will doubtless be trying ones to millions of our people, and Christians throughout the land should pray earnestly in their behalf, and also for the soldier boys who, in all probability, will within a few months be on the firing line.

War is terrible; but it is sometimes an unavoidable necessity. There unhappily arise occasions when right and justice must be maintained by the sword, and our national leaders have adjudged that such conditions now exist. We are in the conflict, and it is the duty of every citizen to be thoroughly loyal to his country and to contribute to its success in arms to the full measure of his ability. America must do nobly her part in this fateful crisis, and that she will acquit herself with credit in the mighty struggle we entertain no sort of doubt. Her aims are wholly unselfish, and she will strike no blow that will not be in the interest of downtrodden humanity and of freedom. May the Heavenly Father bless our Nation as she addresses herself to this lofty task, and watch over the heroic sons into whose hands she shall commit her sacred cause and give the keeping of her priceless honor!

THE CHRISTIAN'S PRESENT INHERITANCE.

Many think of the Christian's inheritance as something that entirely awaits him in eternity; but in this conception they are mistaken. Glorious indeed will be the estate into which the child of God will then enter, and it is well for him to look forward to the time when he will come into the full possession of what God has prepared in the heavenly home for those that love him. But the true disciple of Jesus has a precious inheritance in this present life, which is worth vastly more than anything the world can give. It includes conscious fellowship with the risen Lord, the communion of saints, and all the blessed fruits of the Spirit: faith, peace, knowledge, courage, love, joy, patience, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, meekness, and temperance. Why, with such soul-wealth within his reach, need any follower of Christ count himself to be poor? Let us, each and all, claim in full measure these priceless treasures which the Heavenly Father would fain bestow upon us here on earth. "If these things be in you and abound," you will be able to sing from the heart with the sacred poet:

"I had rather be the least of those
Who are the Lord's alone,
Than to wear a royal diadem
And sit upon a throne."

A FAR-AFIELD TEACHER.

In the editorial department of The Outlook of July 18 was carried the following inquiry and answer:

In the article entitled "If God Reigns," in your issue of June 13, 1917, the following statements occur: "Jesus is called King of kings and Lord of lords. How did he exercise his authority? Only over those who accepted it. His subjects were all voluntary subjects. * * * Jesus would exercise no authority except over those who yielded to this authority," etc., etc.

I should be greatly interested in hearing how you reconcile such statements as the above with the following texts from the Gospels:

1. "He that believeth not shall be damned."
2. "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire." —Agnostic.

Jesus never said, "He that believeth not shall be damned." The last twelve verses of the Gospel of Mark (9-20) are a supplement or appendix, or probably two supplements, added by some unknown copyist to complete a book which had been left incomplete. See the "Twentieth Century New Testament" or any modern-school commentary.

The other saying you quote is found in Christ's dramatic picture of the Last Judgment, in which he welcomes to celestial companionship with himself and his Father those who befriended the sick, the sorrowful, the friendless, and condemns to eternal punishment those who have never done so. And he declares that neither class knew him; therefore the one class could not have accepted nor the other class have rejected his authority.

In the parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus Christ sends to hell the rich man for leaving the beggar at his door uncared for. When Christ cries out to the Pharisees, "How can you escape the damnation of hell?" it is not because of their opinions, but because they devour "widows' houses, and for a pretense make long prayers."

The Church has often condemned men for their theological opinions; Jesus never. He condemns them for inhumanity to man.

If you want to know what Jesus Christ taught, do not go to the creeds and theologies; go to the original documents. They are quite accessible. Read the first three Gospels. Read them not critically, to pick flaws in Christ's character, conduct, or teaching. Read them appreciatively, to find out what there is in his character, conduct, and teaching which has made him the admiration of such agnostics as the English John Stuart Mill and the French Ernest Renan.

It was not stated in The Outlook who the author of this remarkable exhibition of Bible learning was, but presumably it was Dr. Lyman Abbott, its widely known editor. At any rate, this utterance shows how far ouut of harmony with the teaching of the Protestant Evangelical Churches this publication under its present management is, touching the fundamental doctrine of justification and salvation by faith. The writer of this oracular deliverance will have to use his scissors quite a good deal more to get out of the words that fell from the lips of our Lord the doctrine that human destiny is determined by one's belief or nnbelief. He will have practically to send John's Gospel to the scrap-heap, for it abounds in such passages as the following: "If ye believe not that I am He, ye shall die in your sins:"..."He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life, and he that believeth not on the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him." Moreover, all through the Epistles of the inspired writers this great truth, that salvation is by faith, is set forth in unmistakable terms. It was the grasping of this long-overlooked teaching that gave to the world Luther and Wesley, with hearts aflame and with tongues of fire; and it was by unfolding it to others that these mighty men of faith were instrumental in leading countless thousands into the attainment of the same blessed experience that thrilled their souls, thus kindling a great light in the darkness and lifting the earth upward toward God.

It is noticeable that the writer in The Outlook only directs the inquirer to read "the first three Gospels," thus apparently indicating that he sets little store by the other parts of the New Testament; but we do not believe that any amount of special pleading would enable him to sustain his case, even if the discussion were restricted to the synoptic Gospels. What, for instance, would he do with the following utterance of the Master contained in Matthew xxi, 31 and 32: "Verily I say unto you, That the publicans and harlots go into the Kingdom of God before you. For John came unto you in the way of righteousness and ye believed him not; but the publicans and harlots believed him; and ye when ye had seen it, repented not afterwards; that ye might believe him."

Nor can we accept the view of The Outlook's

THE CHRISTIAN'S WAY.

"Pray when you rise in the morning,
That God will bless your day;
Pray at the busy noontide,
For guidance on your way;
Pray as the darkness deepens,
When work and care are o'er;
Pray with your mind and spirit—
Pray always, evermore."

GROWING LIKE HIM.

"The silkworm grows to be similar in color to the leaves on which it feeds. The tree-frog takes on the hue of that to which it clings. So the human soul becomes Christlike when Christ is to that soul the bread of life. If we walk with him, commune with him, feed on him, and become satisfied with his likeness, the world will take note that we have been with Jesus."

A STUDENT OF NATURE.

Agassiz told Whipple: "For myself I may say that I now never make preparation for penetrating into some small province of Nature hitherto undiscovered without breathing a prayer to the Being who hides his secrets from me only to allure me graciously on to the unfolding of them. I sometimes hear preachers speak of the sad condition of those who are without God in the world; but a scientist who lives without God in the world seems to me to be worse off than ordinary men."

WESLEY'S POWER.

And look at Wesley: always thoughtful, serious, sad, and pious; but without the testimony of the Spirit. He wishes for relief to his burdened heart. A humble German points him to Christ, and for awhile he hesitates, but at length he is convinced, and seeks Him only with all his heart. He rises in the morning early and takes up his Bible, which informs him that he is not far from the kingdom of God. He listens to his Church declaring that with God is the forgiveness of sins. He hears Luther's testimony, now more than a century old, and he believes it. The Holy Ghost comes upon him. He feels his heart strangely warmed. He has been baptized with fire; and immediately he becomes a witness of the power of God, and for more than half a century testifies to the power of grace. "And being dead, he yet speaketh."—Anderson.

LITTLE LIGHTS.

Faithful Christians, those who are the real children of God, are exhorted by St. Paul, in his letter to the Phillippians, to "shine as lights in the world, holding forth the word of life." Not all lights are of the same magnitude, but the nature of light is always the same. There are places where the smallest light may be of essential service. Lighthouses are good illustrations of this fact. Of the lights on the coasts and rivers of the United States there are some fourteen hundred, but only forty-five are of the first order. Some of the smallest show the path of safety through very narrow, intricate, and perilous channels. We cannot all be lights of the first order like St. Paul, or Martin Luther, or John Wesley, but we can all shine to the measure of our ability in the sphere of influence which God gives ues. By our fidelity, our purity, our love, our joy, our courage under most the trying circumstances, we can constantly hold forth the word of life. The light of life must be made manifest in homes and workshops, in stores and factories and mines, on battlefields and in hospitals, and to the multitudes that throng the streets, or the world will be in darkness. The feeblest saint may cheer many and save at least a soul or two by letting his light shine. A candle in a cottage may be a more blessed luminary than a star in the sky.—N. W. Christian Advocate.

What a mercy it is that we are not allowed to choose our trials.—Dean Hodges.

THE DANGER OF A DEARTH OF DOCTORS.

All loyal citizens of the United States doubtless desire that the war be prosecuted to a successful issue, and thereby a permanent and a righteous peace be brought to pass. It is now clear that in association with the Entente powers we must fight Germany in Europe or later fight Germany alone. Such being the case, there is no longer room for hesitation.

But in prosecuting the war we must not lose sight of everything else. The war is a means to an end, and we must not sacrifice the end for the means. It is to save life rather than to destroy life that the war is waged.

This we are in danger of doing unless we give very careful consideration to some aspects of the situation. One of these aspects which we are in danger of overlooking is the possibility of a dearth of doctors.

The demands of the army and navy call for about 25,000 surgeons. So many physicians thus withdrawn from the practice of medicine in our country will be seriously missed. England and France have lost very many of their physicians, and it is quite possible that when the war is over a number of American physicians will remain in those countries.

The only means by which we can reasonably hope to make up for this drain upon the number of physicians in the United States is to educate medically an equal or greater number of young men at the earliest possible moment. Hence young men who are prepared to begin the study of medicine, should be encouraged to do so. Under the bill providing for selective conscription theological students are exempted: but there is no provosion for exempting medical students. It is to be hoped that this blunder may yet be repaired, either by executive order, or by legislation amendatory of the plan of conscription. If medical students are drafted both the army and navy will be ill affected, and the civilian population of the United States, especially in the rural districts and small towns, will suffer seriously for lack of medical attention. This matter should be brought to the notice of the authorities at Washington, especially to the members of the Senate and the House of Representatives.

With respect to the supply of physicians and surgeons England and France made a serious mistake at the outset of the war, and those countries are now feeling the effect of their blunder. Our country must not repeat their unwise policy. There is no real necessity for us doing so. We have men enough for service as soldiers and for servlce as physicians and surgeons, if only a wise method of engaging them is adopted by the federal authorities.

Without the aid of the federal authorities at Washington, much may be done by encouraging young men who are under military age and who are prepared to undertake the study of medicine to enter schools of medicine this fall. The medical schools of the country ought to receive especial attention and the enrollment of students in them ought to be increased rather than diminished on account of the war. Otherwise there will be a dearth of doctors. WARREN A. CANDLER.

A LETTER FROM HONOLULU.

Fort Shafter, Honolulu, H. I.
July 4, 917.

Mr. Editor: I reached these beautiful islands some weeks ago and have been as busy as a man could well be ever since reaching here. We have a large post, and only two men to do the medical work formerly done by four. It keeps us busy, but there is never a complaint.

My first Sunday here was enjoyably spent at the Congregational Church. I did not go to the Methodist Church because the pastor was not to fill his pulpit. The first prayer-meeting found me on hand, and it was most pleasant. They have a church built on the Spanish Mission style, and it is beautifully finished both outside and inside. The pipe organ has quite a sweet tone, and is designed to fill the corner of the church behind the pulpit. The congregation looked much like one that one would find in New Orleans, or Jackson, or Meridian. Only the presence of men in the army uniform seemed out of place—or I should say, out of keeping with such a scene in ordinary times. This is a popular church for the enlisted men, and four joined last Sunday—all by transfer. Curiously there is no Baptist Church here, and two of the letters were from Baptist churches.

Dr. Loofborouw, the pastor, came out last Sunday afternoon—through my invitation—and made a splendid talk to the men at the quarantine camp. They listened with almost painful attention, and many asked how to reach the church from the post. The church is about three miles—on the car-line—from the post, and is easily reached. Yesterday 200 were released from quarantine, and more will leave shortly. It was a fine opportunity, and Dr. Loofborouw made excellent use of it. His talk was on "foundations" and moved many to tears, as he told how many of their fathers or mothers have tried to lay the correct foundations for an abiding life. What an opportunity the church is missing! All these young men (many of them college men and students of the best class), having enlisted because they felt it "was the only thing to do at this time," need the sympathy and love of the Church more than at any time of their lives. What a work could be done at the great encampments and cantonements by men on fire with the love of God and burning to save souls! Yet we sorrowfully see men called of God for his highest work wasting precious days doing work laymen could do better. Let us pray that the churches everywhere will wake up to this marvelous opportunity, and spring forward to grasp it before it passes.

The army uniform is very prevalent in the city of Honolulu. We see it everywhere. I am glad to say it is respected by all people. We wear it all the time—no officer or enlisted man is permitted to wear anything else. The enlisted men are as a rule well thought of, and deserve to be. The officers are a picked body of educated men—nearly all are graduates of the best colleges and universities. They have the habit of making good, and we may expect results from the new army when it is organized.

The trip out here was pleasant and without incident. We had over 2000 people on the ship, and some sickness. I am a good sailor, so was not affected by the great rollers of the Pacific when we "crossed the bar." The rookies wilted like nothing else in the world, but were all right in a few days, and enjoyed the warm sunshine and bright days that marked the last four of the trip. It was my duty to inspect the food furnished, and to see that the decks were clean and the ventilators all open. I never saw a better mess, and the men made no complaint. The crew kept things nice enough to please me—and I am not easily pleased, when cleanliness is imperative.

Later I will write more fully about things as I see them. This town seems to be alive to the war, and all news is eagerly read. Fraternally,

J. C. BALLARD,
Capt. Medical Officers R. Corps.

A SILENT PREACHER.

A single verse written on paper, now yellow with age, hangs on the wall of a nobleman's study in England. It has a remarkable history and has in two notable instances at least been blessed of God to conversion. The verse was originally composed by Dr. Valpy, the eminent scholar and author of standard school books. He was converted late in life, and wrote this verse as a confession of faith:

"In peace let me resign my breath,
And thy salvation see;
My sins deserve eternal death,
But Jesus died for me."

On one occasion the eminent Dr. Marsh was visiting the house of Lord Roden, where he held a Bible-reading with the family. He mentioned Dr. Valpy's conversion by way of illustration in the course of his remarks and recited the verse. Lord Roden was particularly struck with the lines, wrote them out, and affixed them to the walls of his study, where they still are.

Lord Roden's hospitable mansion was often full of visitors, among whom were many old army officers. One of these was Gen. Taylor, who served with distinction under Wellington at Waterloo. He had not at that time thought much on the subject of religion, and preferred to avoid all discussion of it. But soon after the paper was hung up he went into the study to talk with his friend alone, and his eyes rested for a few moments upon the motto. Later in the day Lord Roden, upon entering his study, came upon the General standing before the paper and reading it with earnest face. At another visit the host noticed that whenever Gen. Taylor was in the study his eyes rested upon the motto. At length Lord Roden broke the ice by saying, "Why, General, you will soon know that verse by heart." "I know it now by heart," replied the General with emphasis and feeling.

A change came over the General's spirit and life. No one who was intimately acquainted with him could doubt its reality. During the following two years he corresponded readily with Lord Roden about the things which concerned his peace, always concluding his letters by quoting Dr. Valpy's verse. At the end of that time the physician who had attended Gen. Taylor wrote to Lord Roden to say that his friend had departed in peace, and that the last words which fell from his dying lips were those which he had learned to love in his lifetime.

A young relative of the family, an officer lately returned from Crimea, also saw it, but turned carelessly away.

Some months later Lord Roden received the intelligence that his young acquaintance was suffering from pulmonary disease and was desirous of seeing him without delay. As he entered the sick-room the dying man stretched out both hands to welcome him, at the same time repeating Dr. Valpy's simple lines. "They have been God's message," he said, "of peace and comfort to my heart in this illness, when brought to my memory, after days of darkness and distress, by the Holy Ghost, the Comforter."—American Tract Society.

REV. R. M. DAVIS—AN APPRECIATION.

When the sad message came to me that Brother Davis had left us, it was a time of gloom—the shadows which fall and wrap the soul in the blackness of despair fell thickly over me. I was dumb with grief in the presence of the sad reality; yet, I could not make him dead. Nor can I now think of my noble friend as one dead. It is easy to class him as one of the immortals. I know that he lives; for such as he, there is no death.

Robert Mathis Davis, son of Josephine Coving ton and McLin Fletcher Davis, was born in Carroll County, Tenn., on July 20, 1839. He removed to Mississippi with his parents in 1842. He was married to Miss Margaret Thomas on December 20, 1860. All alone with God on the battle field, after a long, bloody day in 1862, he sought and found pardon and peace. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1866; was licensed to preach in 1867; joined the North Mississippi Conference in 1872, and died on the morning of May 20, 1917.

Between the dates above given, what a life was begun, contained and ended in its relation to this earthly sphere! Nature, under God, cast R. M. Davis in a big mold. He was a big man, viewed from any standpoint. I think bigness was the original intent of nature—influenced by the divine—to show to all the world, "this is a man." Brother Davis had a big body, a big brain, a big soul—a splendid big type of a man- a trinity of great forces, formulated on the divine plan, to body forth the grandest ideals of both human and divine creations.

It is not too fond an enthusiasm to indulge the belief that our ascended brother is to-day in the full enjoyment of the realities of those ideals which inspired his life's work, and made him "think God's thoughts," as he held forth to the people, on those great days of great preaching, the essential and fundamental truths of the Gospel.

Brother Davis was a great preacher of great texts. He was a profound student of the philosophy of the plan of salvation. The artificial and merely conventional methods he put aside as unworthy to exploit in the name of Christ, in the house of God. He would often say, "I wish our preachers would quit the clap-trap and conventional methods of the so-called High Churchmen, and preach the Gospel." To him, it was all sham and pretense. "It is a thing of great worth—this Gospel of ours—and to be called to preach it to the people, is high honor for us men. We ought therefore to preach as our Lord would have us do the work. It is too sacred to be made a thing of theatrical show, and low comedy is not in harmony with anything our Lord ever did or said." This is, in part, Brother Davis' protest against the way some men exploit themselves at the expense of the Gospel. "I will have none of it," he would say.

I have spoken of him as a great preacher, and so he was. His sermons were thought out and built on solid rock. In orderly arrangement, in logical sequences, in clearness of definition of terms, he was, in very truth, a great preacher—a great expositor. I am not indulging in fulsome eulogy of my old comrade in this portrait of him as a preacher. He richly deserves a place in the picture gallery of these illustrious men who wrought in the realm of truth—where philosophy, logic, and metaphysics are called upon to explain and enforce the deeper significance of the words of life. He was at home and happy when he could range the mountain-tops of the vast scheme of God's creation, the plan of redemption, the final triumph of the Gospel, and have an appreciative audience to go along with him; and, baptized with the ineffable glories of the eternal world, give expression to joy and rapture in tears and smiles and hearty Amens. This was a high day with him. "I love to preach on liberty days," as he called them—the days when his logic took fire, and under the afflatus divine, broke down the barriers, and swept the field with the tread of a conqueror, and made men and women willing captives of the glorious Gospel that he preached.

Such a high day, a liberty day, came to him on one occasion at a district conference. The eloquent Bishop Galloway was there and anxious to hear R. M. Davis, of whom he had heard much, and doubted much of what I had told him of the great preacher. The preacher's theme for the occasion was "God's Love for the World;" the text, John iii. 16. The preacher, calm and self-poised, proceeded in a masterly way to define the terms of his text, vindicated the divine character in the administration of the moral government, proving the universality of the atonement by the very force of the term, "world"—showing that it could not, in the nature of things, be partial and arbitrarily elective, since the subjects of the divine beneficence are all of them in the same category as sinners, and that, therefore, there is not in one sinner, more than another, any merit of works, any special virtue to offer as a propitiation for sin; nothing, in a word, in any sinner, to create a spirit of complacency in the divine mind, to elicit the love of God; and that since the condition of a sinner is such as to repel, rather than produce, the spirit of complacency in the contemplation of a suitable exterior, showing in point of fact that earth has no symbol to fully express the love of God—that it can not be represented by the figures and similes so often resorted to. A mother's love is selfish and can't be used to illustrate God's love; no mother would give her son to save some other mother's son. "God is love," is the explanation of the moral universe of all creation. The atonement makes the salvation of the world a potential fact, but not actual. Faith is the ultimate, the determinative factor in the equation of personal salvation. On and on, in orderly arrangement, in logical exactness, in constructive philosophy, in Scriptural proof, the inspired man of God swept the field with thoughts, "deep as the center" and beautiful as truth, till, under some mighty compulsion, the audience felt the sayings of the preacher to be the very Gospel of our Christ. Bishop Galloway said, "Why, sir, that was a great sermon. I never heard, till to day, the Gospel preached in such a convincing manner. It was the Gospel in syllogisms. Brother Dye, you were not extravagant in your representation of Brother Davis." Dr. J. J. Wheat, of Oxford, Miss., Professor of Greek in the University of Mississippi, was always a hearer of Brother Davis when he had the opportunity, and he said of him: "Bob is wonderful; doesn't he dig deep for his big nuggets of gold?"

Brother Davis had the love and esteem of his brethren, and he loved them with a great passion. He enjoyed the comradeship of Methodist preachers. "None like it," he would say. "I miss all of that now in this enforced confinement, but the law of compensation holds in this instance, as in all the wide universe of God. I live here and think of them all, read their letters of love and sympathy, and find that my heart's love beats responsive to the love notes so softly breathed in their messages, their tender farewells and God bless you's. I am more deeply in love with my Lord, the Church, my friends and brethren, and all that our great Heavenly Father would have us to be than ever. I am going to be cast down, but not destroyed. Death has no sting, the grave no victory. I shall rise again and go out into the fields of wide expanse and make inquiry as to the meaning of some things I wish to know. The eternal verities I long to study out and get free from the law of limitation, which grips and holds us to illogical conclusions, deduced from unwarranted assumptions, in our analysis of subjects. We assume much, but reason little. But some day I shall know. What an inspiration to go on with our work with our imperfect equipment! The energy of an immortal hope sustains us till the coming of the perfect day." No doubt he now has liberty to range the fields he so much coveted, and has begun the study of eternal truth, under the tuition of the Great Teacher.

Brother Davis was a bold and independent thinker, yet he was far from self exploitation. His innate modesty was proverbial. He would blush if you spoke in praise of his best efforts; and yet he felt keenly the want of appreciation on the part of the Church and some of his brethren. The wish to give him a place suitable for the play of his talents came too late. "I am not in tune to the social dilettanteism of the city churches of to-day; but if the Church had used me in the days of my prime, when I was flexible and could bend as the pliant willow wand, to meet the exigencies of social life I would have appreciated it; but it is too late now. I am too old to cater to the social conventionalities of the artificial in the Church and become popular." Brother Davis was too big to grow pessimistic. "I will not sour on the world—that is the frailty of weak minds and poor souls."

In his last days, when the malignant trouble was sapping the life forces, and he felt that his work on earth was done, he was wont to review the works of the great masters and "keep in touch with old time thinkers." "Yes, my books, by big men, are good company," he would say. A rare treat it was to listen to him in his critical moods dissect these "big men," and declare after giving a good reason for his decision, "This book goes into my literary discard." A close student he was, but he did not affect scholastic abstraction.

Brother Davis was one of the most charming men in the social circle that I ever knew. His ready wit and good-humored repartee made him the center of a circle of friends on many a social occasion. He found time to be with his friends and cultivate his own happiness. "The bravest of the brave" is the noble record of his life as a soldier. He stood by his colors until the flag was furled.

Brother Davis was seen at his best in his own home circle. He loved his home with a deathless affection and was in turn loved and honored by each one of the charmed circle. His devoted wife and daughter—Miss Susie, the only child—made his home the one attractive place in all the world for him, and when the evening shadows began to fall he repaired to the spot as to a sacred shrine. His daughter writes: "Oh, I'd not know how lonesome we would be and how much we would miss him! I can never forget his talks to me; but how I shall miss these talks now!"

Yes, they will miss him, as the days go by, more and more sad sorrow for their loved one with a great sorrow, and in loneliness and grief will spend the days in tears till some kindred spirit, perchance their best loved one, will beckon them from the other side to "cross over the river" and come home.

Pain: in suffering—in murmur ravaged his life—yet the old soldier "met it in the middle and a losing battle longed to go home." My last visit to Brother Dye's was a fresh inspiration to me. How grandly he talked of the work of God, of Heaven, of the Church, of the brethren and the North Mississippi Conference." As I was leaving him the next morning he said: "Tell the brethren good-by for me. I love them and want to see them. They will meet me in Heaven." He could say no more; the deep emotion of his great heart choked further utterance. His last hours were void of suffering. "He fell on sleep" and woke not till the joy-bells of Heaven pealed out his welcome. How we miss him! His own loved ones, his friends, his Church, his Conference—all will miss him and "sorrow most that we shall see his face on earth no more." He is at home—the home he longed to rest in. He is with God, with his Lord, enjoying the study of eternal things. Loving hands ministered to his wants in the last days of suffering. His brethren laid him to rest in the cemetery at Byhalia, Miss. On Sunday morning his spirit entered the great Temple to praise. My own dear Bob, we'll meet again.

Clarksdale, Miss. T. W. DYE.

A FAR-AFIELD TEACHER.

expositor concerning either the parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus, or the wonderful passage with which the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew closes. The clear indication, in our opinion, is that the lack of a vital faith was responsible for the final ending of the career of Dives. The writer in question fails in his reasoning to recognize the inseparable connection between real faith and conduct. It has been rightly said, "Whenever this faith is fixed in the soul, it will evidence itself by its fruits." It is not by mere theoretical opinions, but by an active, governing faith that men are saved. However, such a faith exercises sway within the soul and over its attitudes toward God, as well as over the outward conduct and one's bearing toward one's fellow-men. Humanitarianism is not by any means the only avenue for the manifestation of a saving belief in Christ.

In his noble description of the Last Judgment, the Master did not say that neither those on his right hand or those on his left hand knew HIM. What he did say was that those who ministered to the needy did not recognize that service as being done to Him, and that those who neglected it were not aware that they were neglecting to minister to Him. It might be well to consider, over against this passage, the following declaration made in the Sermon on the Mount: "Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name have done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity." Here seemingly a knowing of Christ and "doing the will of God" are made to count rather than works that were apparently good, but which were wrought and depended upon without a knowledge of Jesus. It is the disposition of most modernists to magnify the manward side of religion and ignore its Godward side. They lose sight of the important fact that belief in God honors Him and incites to His adoration and worship, and that unbelief dishonors Him and leads to His being neglected and ignored. Or as St. John has expressed it, "He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself; he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son." I John v, 10.

One of the greatest essays that the renowned Dr. Albert Taylor Bledsoe ever wrote for his matchless Review was on "The Responsibility of Men for their Belief"—a discussion in which he took Mr. Lecky to task for his bold and blatant rationalism and the repudiation of this teaching. (See the Southern Review of July, 1871.) After showing that this was the doctrine set forth in the Divine Revelation, Dr. Bledsoe said: "Now this doctrine of Jesus, whom Mr. Lecky admits to be the greatest teacher the world has ever seen, is [illegible] honored with a serious examination by him. On the contrary, he merely sets it aside as absurd, by an imperial wave of the hand, just as if he, even more than Jesus, were entitled to teach 'as one having authority.' This doctrine, it is true, has in all ages received the sanction of the Christian world; but yet this authority, however imposing, does not seem, in the estimation of Mr. Lecky, to entitle it to a serious examination or discussion. On the contrary, he just puts his ipse dixit in the opposite scale, and the authority of Jesus, together with that of all the great thinkers of the Christian world, is made to kick the beam. The authority of a Newton, a Leibnitz, a Locke, and the whole Christian Church, in all ages, just goes up, as lighter than a feather, in comparison with the word of a William Edward Hartpole Lecky!"

With the substitution of his name for that of Mr. Lecky, these strong words might with propriety be applied to the writer in The Outlook, though rationalists are now much more plentiful than they were when Dr. Bledsoe penned this scathing rebuke, many of them being even in the pulpits of Christian churches. Oh, that we had such a mind as Bledsoe's to defend "the faith once for all delivered unto the saints" in this day when a paralyzing skepticism is spreading abroad like a deadly contagion, and so many trumpets are giving forth uncertain sounds!

BOURG AND FRENCH MISSIONS.

Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

I have heard of French missions ever since I began my ministry in Louisiana eight years ago, and have had some experience as a pastor where 90 per cent of the people spoke the French tongue, but a trip to Bourg, La., with Rev. Martin Hebert, Superintendent of French Missions in the Louisiana Conference, offered the best chance I have had to get a true insight into what French missions stand for.

Bourg Church is a community, just about two miles from the Bourg postoffice and about eleven miles southwest of Houma. The French language is the colloquial tongue of the community, and practically all the preaching is done in French. (I hasten to remark that I did not preach in that language.) There is a church class there of about 125 members, and they maintain a good Sunday school, Epworth League and prayer meeting.

About nine years ago some inquiring minds, dominated by unsatisfied hearts, went searching literature for something besides what Roman Catholicism has for its adherents. The doctrines of Spiritualism became injected into the study of these persons at Bourg, and it looked as if that cult was bound to claim a foothold there. Brother Hebert came on the scene about this time and expounded the doctrine of salvation in the true Methodist fashion, and these inquiring minds brought the preached word to hungry hearts and the result was a little band of Methodists.

That was nine years ago. Then few families cared for anything but the swift Saturday night ball and enough to eat and wear. Then there was no community spirit; no craving for learning, and no personal pride. Nine years of French missions at Bourg, and there is a church building there with a membership and organization as above mentioned. There is a strong community spirit; children from every house are in school, and at least three young men have gone out of there to college. From Bourg we will get some fine preachers for Methodism. From Bourg we will get fine support in dollars and cents. From Bourg we are getting souls all along the line. From Bourg we are getting the inspiration to go into the French mission business in dead earnest and take all South Louisiana for Christ.

French mission work is not done in a day. It takes years to get under headway, but then results multiply. May it be that our General and Conference Boards of Missions will see clearly the opportunity in this fertile field and send well equipped men, with adequate support, there, for the sake of these people and for the future good of our Church!

There is talk among the Baptists of the United States of erecting in Washington City a great memorial church in honor of Roger Williams.

The amount that the Memphis Conference was asked to raise for Emory University was $50,000, and of this amount over $25,000 has been subscribed.

According to report, the Presbyterians have in Manilla a Bible Class in their student church which recently had an attendance of 717. Four months before this class had set out to reach a goal of 99 members.

Mr. Charles R. Crane, a member of the United States Mission to Russia, is said to be authority for the statement that, along with the revolution upsetting the monarchy in that country, has come a complete separation of Church and State.

It has been announced that $5000 will be expended in improving the buildings of the Memphis Conference Female Institute, of which Rev. H. G. Hawkins is president, before the opening of the next session. A campaign looking to the endowment of this institution is being planned.

Bishop Earl Cranston passed his 77th birthday while the Joint Commission on Unification was recently in session at Traverse City, Michigan. Acting for the Southern Commissioners, Bishop Candler presented him with a bouquet of flowers, making in doing so some very happy remarks.

The enrollment in the Candler School of Theology of Emory University during the four terms of the year 1916-17 was 134. This enrollment was from fourteen States, Georgia leading with 44, while Alabama enrolled 16; Virginia, 14; Kentucky, 11; Mississippi, 7, and South Carolina, 5. Five other States enrolled from one to four each.

Bishop and Mrs. J. C. Kilgo will sail for the Orient from San Francisco on July 28, the Bishop going on an official visit to our missions in the Far East. We pray that these faithful servants of the Church may be vouchsafed journeying mercies on their long voyage. The Methodists of Charlotte, N. C., held a very impressive service in their honor a few days ago.

It is stated that in leaving the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City, to serve Westminster Chapel, London, Dr. J. H. Jowett will give up an annual salary of $25,000 to accept a $6000 one. The London Christian world, furthermore, says: "He will leave a church where the pastoral work is probably light, and the social conditions are most refined, for a church that will impose the heaviest tax on all his powers, and which has anything but an attractive environment."

The Northwestern Christian Advocate (Northern Methodist) says: "The Universalist and Unitarian Churches of Concord, N. H., have joined forces for the period of the war. The two are to worship and work under one roof, increasing efficiency and working for economy. It does not mean that the Churches will contribute less for their work, but that less will be spent for purely 'overhead' expense, with more left for promotional activities. Who knows but that Christian union may be hastened by the war?" A Methodist journal that can felicitate over such a merger, along with the suggestion that there will be more money for "promotional activities," is certainly obsessed with the idea of union to a perilous extent.

CHRISTIAN WORKER WANTED.

If some Christian woman capable of leading the Woman's Missionary Society, superintending the Junior Epworth League, and doing general church and religious social work, giving her whole time, and for a moderate salary, will communicate with the Advocate, enclosing stamp for reply, she may thus find an opening for useful service as a city missionary.

The following figures, which are said to be official, show Germany's losses during the three years of the great European war: Killed or died of wounds, 1,032,800; died of sickness, 72,960; prisoners and missing, 591,966; wounded, 2,825,581. The naval and colonial casualties are not included in these figures.

A call has been sent out from New York City urging American municipalities and patriotic societies to celebrate the birthday of La Fayette on September 6. One of the last services of the late Hon. Joseph Choate was to preside over a meeting of the Committee which is pushing this movement.

King George, of England, at a meeting of the Privy Council on July 17, announced the new name of the British royal house and family to be 'The House of Windsor.' King George hitherto has been of the house of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha. It was recently decided to change all titles of German origin.

The New York Herald, in a recent issue, said: "Not since April, 1915, has a British gun been taken by the Prussians on the western front. This in itself is one of the most significant straws showing which way the wind is blowing. It may be that the great crash that will bring peace is nearer than it would be expedient to suggest."

Corn reached the price of $2.28 a bushel, wholesale, in New Orleans on Saturday, July 21. Meal was quoted on the same day at $9.30 a barrel. In speaking of this price for corn, the Times-Picayune remarked: "This is said to be the highest figure paid for it since Joseph gathered together supplies in Egypt and staved off the famine."

The United State Senate, after five weeks of discussion, passed the Food Control Bill on July 21. It will now go to a Committee of Conference representing the two Houses of Congress. The Senate also on the same day passed the House Aviation Bill appropriating $540,000,000 to increase that arm of service. It provides for 22,000 airplanes and nearly 100,000 men to operate them.

It is stated that a student taught in the school of wireless telegraphy maintained by the New Orleans Y. M. C. A. will direct the radio work of the United States forces on the coast of France as an attache of Admiral Sims. It is suggested that wireless telegraphy is a promising field for young women. There are now six female employees at the Government wireless station at Key West, Fla.

Magazines and newspapers bearing a 1-cent stamp may hereafter be posted, unwrapped and unaddressed, by persons other than publishers, and will be forwarded by postal authorities to American soldiers and sailors in Europe. Postmaster General Burleson has suggested that magazines call attention to this fact in each issue and indicate a place where the needed 1-cent stamp may be placed. This having been done, the periodical needs only to be handed to any postal employee.

A QUESTION OF MUCH IMPORTANCE.

By the Editor.

We published some time ago in the Advocate the correspondence between Dr. R. H. Bennett, Bishop Hendrix, Bishop Mouzon, and Dr. Stonewall Anderson concerning the examination of applicants for admission on trial into the traveling connection. These officials co-operated in giving us an interpretation of what they think is required in this respect under the enactment of our last General Conference, which was set forth in the correspondence just mentioned. Two of our editors—Dr. Lovett, of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, and Dr. Branscomb, of the Alabama Christian Advocate—subsequently referred briefly to this very important matter. The observation of the former is printed elsewhere in this number of our paper; and Dr. Branscomb's utterance was as follows:

"We are in favor of education. We are in favor of an educated ministry. But it is our opinion that Methodism is making a mistake to require as an ESSENTIAL FOR ADMISSION INTO ITS CONFERENCES ANY VERY HIGH STANDARD OF SCHOOL TRAINING. We know the arguments in favor of it. But we know another thing. If we are going to make the standard too high it is going to be "good-bye' to our country work. We are getting ready to make the mistake of the Congregationalists and Presbyterians. They boast of an educated ministry, but they cannot boast of a country constituency. A man does not have to know books to know morality, religion, and God. Methodism is not sending its preachers out to teach school, but to save souls. Some of the greatest soul-winners the world has ever known have been illiterate men. At the rate we are going it will be but a short time until we will demand not a high school equipment, but a college and then a university training, with perfect familiarity with Browning and Tolstoi and all the others. And then what is going to become of old Aunt Susan and old Uncle Ben out in the little church in the cove? How are we going to provide and support a college ministry for multitudes of our people in the remote rural sections? If this thing keeps up the day will come when we can no longer rejoice that we minister unto all classes. We will have a little bunch of 'high brows' in the towns and the Baptists will take the earth as well as the water."

In taking this position, Dr. Branscomb is in excellent company. In discussing the criticisms of Wesley's preachers, Bishop McTyeire, who certainly did not underestimate the importance of education, in his noble "History of Methodism," says: "'But I am told they are unlearned men,' said the Archbishop of Armagh to Charles Wesley at the Hotwells, when objecting to lay preachers. Charles turned the point neatly, but his brother would have answered his Grace on the merits of the question. In these well known words, John would have repelled the charge of ignorance brought against his preachers: 'In one thing which they profess to know they are NOT, ignorant men. I trust that there is not one of them who is not able to go through such an examination in substantial, practical, experimental divinity as few of our candidates for holy orders, even in the university—I speak it with sorrow and shame—are able to do.'

"Would not Thomas Walsh or Robert Strawbridge, and scores of Irish Methodist preachers, have excelled the Archbishop himself in teaching the way of salvation to an average thousand of Irishmen. Stripped of the adventitious importance of his office, would they not have commanded the attention of a multitude—taking the people as they are found—as well as he?

"Wise master-builders are needed; but few people would dwell in houses if none but master-builders were to help build them. Many a workman does well on the wall who has not the skill to lay off a foundation, to turn an arch, or carry up a corner. It is as unphilosophical as unscriptural to allow no one to preach the Gospel until he can properly be styled 'learned.' A man whose literary education falls below that standard may nevertheless, in knowledge and experience, be sufficiently in advance of multitudes of hearers to guide and teach them in religion, to their infinite profit. Methodism is a friend of learning; it gave 'the first impulse to popular education' in the last (the 18th) century; it encourages all ministers to reach the highest attainment in knowledge, and has always been able to show a fair proportion of men in the ranks of the 'learned.' BUT METHODISM HAS NEVER COMMITTED THE BLUNDER, THE CRIME AGAINST DESTITUTE REGIONS AND PERISHING SOULS, of saying that none but 'learned' men shall be allowed to preach the Gospel. The Christian ministry must have Greek and Hebrew scholars; but that all Christian ministers must be Greek and Hebrew scholars does not follow. The link connecting such a conclusion with that premise no logician ever has found or can find."

There are to-day, we dare say, men in every Annual Conference who could muster but few Carnegie units to their credit who would accomplish as much good on the average circuit as any high official in Southern Methodism. Rev. R. P. Shuler, the well known Texas pastor-evangelist, recently told in the public prints of a man called of God to preach who was rejected by our Church, but who subsequently had gone to a needy field and built up a live congregation (if our memory is correct) of 300 or 400 people. The question is, Shall we shut the door in the face of such men when they feel that they are moved by the Holy Ghost to proclaim the Gospel, or shall we, while seeking, as best we can, rightly to train and equip our ministers maintain a system that is flexible enough to accept and use them? The latter policy has been the one generally followed by Methodism in the past, and under it she has become perhaps the strongest Protestant denomination in the world. Is she now about to abandon this policy for another, the ultimate fruits of which may be seen in the history of other Churches? So it seems.

AN IMPORTANT MATTER.

The Director of the Census, Washington, D. C., some time ago sent out blanks to all pastors asking for reports from their churches, that an accurate census of the Churches of the United States might be secured. He states that a large proportion of the pastors of our Church have not yet responded to his request for information, and he requests that at an early date they give him the information needed for this census. It is a request that all of our preachers should heed. Address Hon. Sam L. Rogers, Director Bureau of Census, Washington, D. C.

FORTUNATE.

Those of us—we old fellows so to write it—how fortunate we are! if we had delayed applying for admission into the Annual Conference to these later days—the days when "Carnegie units" must be considered—how many of us would have to stay out? It may be all right to have the standard for those who have been admitted high and continually being placed higher, but there is such a thing as having the "entrance requirements" too high. Some "mighty" good men, men who have done a great work for the Church and the world, would be left out now if they had to have the number of "units" required. But we suppose Mr. Carnegie knows what ought to be the educational furnishing of the men who wish to preach the Gospel and become members of an Annual Conference.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE APPRECIATED.

(The following resolutions were adopted at the late session of the Durant District Conference and forwarded to the Advocate with a request for their publication.)

Resolved, by the Durant District Conference of the North Mississippi Annual Conference, that we regard the New Orleans Christian Advocate, our Conference Organ, as a periodical that ought to be in every Methodist home throughout the District; and

Resolved, further, that we hereby most heartily indorse and commend the editorial policy and loyalty to the cause of Southern Methodism of the Advocate under the editorship of its able and brilliant editor, Dr. R. A. Meek.

The Great Battle

IT DARE NOT DO IT.

The saloon is sometimes called a sample room. As such it ought to have its samples in a show window. Should it place them there, they would be a mailman, a cripple, a tramp, a broken-hearted woman, a ragged and perhaps idiotic child, and a poverty-stricken home.—Presbyterian Journal.

GOOD NEWS FROM PORTO RICO.

It gives us pleasure to chronicle the following good news.

"San Juan, P. R. July 17.—Porto Rico voted for prohibition by a big majority at yesterday's election. With four unimportant towns missing, the returns at 11 o'clock this morning showed 36,775 votes for prohibition and 31,253 against it.

"Fifty-one municipalities voted for the prohibition measure, as compared with 21 opposed to it. San Juan's vote for prohibition was 5117 for and 2255 against, and all the other large cities were strongly on the dry side."

CAIN OR CHRIST.

As individuals we may not happen to need a "dry America," but some of our brothers and sisters do—lots of them. Say that they are weak; still we owe help to our weaker fellows. Many of them mean well and vow earnestly and try hard. Why should we not be willing to help them, even at a sacrifice to ourselves? Christ would. Cain wouldn't. And we are named after Christ. Moreover, who can say when the fangs of the serpent will strike our own children or friends? The American saloon is without excuse, either in reason, or justice, or the needs of humanity. Vote it out. Life includes temptations enough without adding the mocking temptation of alcohol. We have a chance to hit it hard.—George Clarke Peck.

THE EMPTY FLASK.

"We affectionately commend to Mr. Gilmore the following philosophy as set forth by Mr. Dooley. Mr. Gilmore, who is president of the National Model License League, in a recent letter to a Congressman, makes a suggestion as to the so-called value of alcoholic liquors to soldiers. He says: 'I believe that a good drink to each soldier before a charge will insure that steadiness of nerve that wins battles. The man who rushes a rapid-fire gun should be given the relief from terror that alcohol imparts.' This is the way Mr. Dooley sizes up the situation: 'It's sthrange, Hinnissey, how the worruld has turned against its lifelong roommate, Jawn Barleycorn. After rollickin' with the old fellow for cinchries th' fickle public has rounded on him an' is rapidly chasin' him off th' map. Jawn Barleycorn might have gone on f'r years if it hadn't been that the wurruld began to suspeet that he was no good in a fight. He was welcome in th' sojer's tent and th' gin'ral's headquarters. People said about him: 'He's a scamp and a false friend, but he's a divvle in a scrap.' An' now they know he ain't anny good at that ayether. His bluff has been called.'"—The American Issue.

UNION OF THE TWO METHODISMS.

By J. W. Beeson, A. M., LL. D., Meridian, Miss.

It seems to me that the greatest danger to the Southern Church that could come from a union with the Church, North, is from the kind of theology that Church is teaching through its Conference Course and through its higher institutions of learning. If it does not matter what is taught our ministers, nor what they preach to our people, all other difficulties, great as they are, might be surmounted. This Church greatly predominates in numbers, and would naturally set the standards of theology. One needs only to examine the books in the course for young preachers in that Church to see the danger ahead. Vanderbilt was a greater curse than a blessing to our Church because of its questionable theology the last ten or fifteen years before we lost that institution, which event was a great blessing. Since we could not reform, convert or regenerate Vanderbilt, to lose it was a blessing. It is difficult to keep the course of study for young preachers in the Southern Church as pure and free from taint as it should be. Dominated by greater numbers of the Northern Church, the modern theology would be forced upon us with increasing rapidity. This is the greatest danger of union.—New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Some weeks ago I predicted that no member of the Commission on Unification would like to see unification accomplished because, if the colored question could be satisfactorily settled, the new Course of Study would effectually prevent it. What Dr. Beeson says, in the above communication, confirms my statement. Our Southern Brethren know what is the character of the new Course of Study, approved by the Board of Bishops of our Church, and that the same un-Methodistic and anti-Biblical teaching that led to their repudiation of Vanderbilt is being promulgated in Methodist schools of Boston, Middletown, Madison, Syracuse, Delaware, Greencastle, Evanston, Denver, Los Angeles and elsewhere, and, being more loyal to God's Word and Methodist doctrines and usages than those in authority in the Methodist Episcopal Church, they have too much sense to tie themselves to infinitely more trouble than Vanderbilt University ever gave them. Much as I desire to see a united organic Methodism, I sincerely hope it may never be accomplished on grounds of disloyalty to the Bible as God's Word, and the doctrines, discipline and usages of historic Methodism.—Dr. L. W. Munhall, in the Eastern Methodist (Philadelphia.)

THE UNIFICATION COMMISSION.

The notices in the New Orleans and Nashville Advocates of the recent meeting of the Unification Commission in Traverse City, Mich., giving an official message from the commission as to the results of their meeting is encouraging news to the large number of the Advocate's readers, who in the spirit of the action of the Oklahoma General Conference, are hoping and praying for the consummation of that action in the final adoption of a plan that will be satisfactory and acceptable to both great Churches and unite them in organized expression of that unity of spirit for which the Master prayed. As one of those who believe that the unification of American Methodism is for many weighty reasons desirable, and that there are many tokens of Divine guidance in the progress of the movement in that direction, and who believe that under such guidance, the strong men who are commissioned to work out the plan, will be able to find solutions for the delicate and difficult questions involved, I rejoice that the recent meeting has made some progress and been characterized by such a spirit of "sweetening fellowship and strengthening hope."

No one doubts that there are still before the commission questions difficult of solution, but may we not hope that, by the guidance of the Holy Spirit and the prayerful, hopeful co-operation of the Church, both North and South, these difficulties may be overcome? May we not in all public expressions of opinion in reference to the issues involved, magnify the desirability of finding a solution rather than emphasize the difficulties to be overcome? If the unification is desirable, as I thoroughly believe it is, it is worth while to be patient, considerate, prayerful and hopeful in the effort to bring it to pass. And even if for the time it should prove impracticable, mutual consideration, respect and confidence in the discussions of it will deepen that spirit of unity that is surely a part of God's plan. May He guide and inspire the future labors of the commission!

A BOOK YOU NEED.

Rev. W. W. Pinson, D. D.

The new Annual Report of the Board of Missions is out. This volume of 500 pages, carefully edited and illustrated, presents an exhaustive survey of the missionary operations of our Church at home and abroad. It contains the annual reports of all the Board officers, men and women, of all the mission conferences, districts, and institutions, and of many individual missionaries. It carries statistical tables, compiled at the cost of no small amount of effort and research, showing in detail the social and religious activities of city mission boards and conference societies; the work of home mission schools and of all the church deaconesses; a summary of Woman's work and of all the Board's foreign work; the gifts for missions of all the Annual Conferences, etc. In addition, it contains full minutes of the Annual Meeting of the Board, Directories of the Missionaries, Conference Boards of Missions and Evangelism, Conference Lay Leaders, Missionary Secretaries, and Conference and General Evangelists. Add the charter, Constitution and By-Laws of the Board, and the Missionary Manual, and you have a fair idea of the contents of this comprehensive volume—invaluable to preachers and other missionary speakers and leaders, men or women. A copy will be sent to any address on receipt of ten cents in part payment of cost and postage. Order of Board of Missions, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

MY FATHER'S SADDLEBAGS.

By Alice Gorton Wynn.

In rummaging around
'Mongst things of use no more,
These saddlebags I found
On the dusty garret floor.

The leather, cracked and stained,
Was stiff and thick with mold;
The rusty clasps, much strained,
Of long, hard service told.

The owner, bent and gray,
Has lost his youthful zest;
They both have served their day
And from their duties rest.

I cleansed the bags from grime,
Packed them away with tears,
Remembering well the time
When both, through toilsome years,

Not counting gain or loss,
Conveyed each Sabbath day
The message of the Cross,
That none might miss the way.

The work-worn veteran
Will make no rich bequest;
Yet, his is nobler than
A coat-of-arms or crest.

SHAKING HIS SHOES.

Ned was watching grandfather put on his shoes.

"Why do you turn 'em over to shake 'em before you put 'em on?" he asked.

"Did I?" said grandfather.

"Why, yes, you did; but I didn't see anything come out. I have to shake the sand out of my shoes 'most every morning."

Grandfather laughed. "I didn't notice that I shook my shoes, Ned; but when I was in India I got in the habit of shaking my shoes before putting them on."

"Why did you do it there?"

"To shake out the scorpions or centipedes or other nuisances that might be hidden in them."

"But you don't need to do it here, for we don't have such things."

"I know, but I formed the habit, and now I do it without thinking."

"Habit is a queer thing, isn't it?" said Ned, thoughtfully.

"It's a very strong thing," said grandfather; "remember that, my boy. A habit is a chain that grows stronger every day, and if you want to have good habits when you are old, form them while you are young."—Maytlower.

ON THE BLUE-LINE CAR.

The Blue-Line street car stopped at the corner, and an anxious-looking woman put a small boy inside.

"Now, Bob," she said, as she hurried out to the platform again, "don't lose that note I gave you. Don't take it out of your pocket at all."

"No'm," said the little man, looking wistfully after his mother, as the conductor pulled the strap.

"What's your name, Bob?" asked a mischievous-looking young man sitting beside him.

"Robert Cullen Deems," he answered.

"Where are you going?"

"To my grandma's."

"Let me see that note in your pocket."

The look of innocent surprise in the round face ought to have shamed the boy's tormentor, but he only said again, "Let me see it."

"I can't," said Robert Cullen Deems.

"See here, if you don't I'll scare the horses and make them run away."

The little boy cast an apprehensive look at the horses.

"Here, Bob, I'll give you this peach if you'll pull that note half way out of your pocket."

The boy did not reply, but some of the older people looked angry.

"I say, chum, I'll give you this whole bag of peaches if you will just show me the corner of your note," said the tempter.

The child turned away as if he did not wish to hear any more; but the young man opened the bag and held it just where he could see and smell the luscious fruit.

A look of distress came into the boy's face. I believe Bob was afraid to trust himself; and when a man left his seat on the other end to get off the car, the little boy slid quickly down, left the temptation behind and climbed into the vacant place.

A pair of prettily gloved hands began almost unconsciously to clap; and then everybody clapped and applauded, until it might have alarmed Bob, if a young lady sitting by had not slipped her arm around him and said:

"Tell your mamma that we all congratulate her upon having a little man strong enough to resist temptation and wise enough to run away from it."—The Myrtle.

THE SQUIRREL FAMILY.

A boy's first impulse upon seeing a squirrel is to make a noise or throw something at it. If you are that kind of a boy, I hope that the next time you see a squirrel, you will try another plan. Just sit down where you are and watch Mr. Squirrel.

I found that near the hiding-place of Mr. Red Squirrel, he had a very comfortable little home in a maple tree. So I sat down to watch the tree. It was the holiday season, and so I had time to watch my little fur-covered friend.

I soon discovered that there was quite a family of baby squirrels living in the old tree, but it was quite a time before I could be sure as to the number. I decided to try and coax them out on my next visit.

With a pocketful of nuts, I returned and crept quite near. I found that there was a front door and a back door to their home. By way of invitation I placed a nut in each "doorway," and then a number along the fence. Then I went a short distance away and sat down and waited.

They did not keep me waiting very long, and soon I counted one, two, three, four, five, six sharp little fellows. They scampered after the nuts along the fence, and, with one eye on me all the time, soon had their treat stored away in their pantry within the tree.

Did you ever receive a scolding from an old squirrel? The next time I returned to my little friends, the mother was at home, and if she did not give me the greatest scolding—why, I never in all my life received one to equal it! I am sure she told me that I had no business about their tree, and that I was a lazy, good-for-nothing fellow to be lying down on the grass. She talked so fast and raced about the tree so angrily that I could not understand all that she said.

But I never answered her back, not a word, for I thought that a family of six, such as she had to keep in order, was enough to make the old lady angry.

I had not watched long, however, before I found that there was trouble in that family tree. Up in one of the topmost branches lived a woodpecker and his family. Now, some of the boys in the squirrel family would occasionally take a run up and pop their heads into the front door of the woodpecker home. Then father or mother woodpecker would suddenly appear, and the squirrels would scamper for their lives.

Sometimes the fur would fly, too, but usually the squirrel would race around the trunk so fast that the bird could not follow him, and so escape the punishment he deserved.—R. S. M., in Virginia Guide.

A LITTLE THING.

Two young ladies were making dresses for the poor and their children, as members of a Dorcas Society. When they had finished the last one, one rejoiced in that their work for that season was done, but the other young lady said, "No, no, wait a minute, just a few more minutes."

Then she got some skeins of scarlet silk, a little ribbon and a little lace. With these she adorned one of the dresses made for the little babe. Said she: "These little stitches take but a moment, and I want to make the dress pretty for some mother's baby."

When these dresses were given out, the ornamented little dress fell to the lot of a baby which belonged to a hard visaged woman with whom the pastor could do nothing before this. When she saw her children with the pretty dress, her heart melted and she cried out: "Oh, to think of doing that for my poor baby! I didn't think that anyone cared!"

The pastor was nearby, and with gentle voice he said: "God cares for you."

Through this incident he succeeded in leading the woman into the Kingdom. Was it all a mere chance? No. God put it into the mind and heart of that girl to put the few fancy touches on that dress, meaning thereby to win the mother to the Christ and eternal life. God moves on the minds and hearts of His people to serve those who need His help. He works through consecrated men and women.—Christian World.

DOING A GREAT WORK.

The report concerning the work of the evangelists of the North Mississippi Conference up to June 1 shows that these men of God, the Rev. J. A. Bowen and the Rev. J. H. Bell, are doing a great work. Brother Bowen's work shows that in addition to the good done in the churches in revivals, in reclamations, in reconsecrations, and a fresh vitalizing of the spiritual forces he has had 316 persons to profess faith in Christ and 169 to join our Church. Brother Bell got a late start, but he has held some great revivals and has had 79 accessions. You see this is a great work. When I was a boy preacher great emphasis was placed on the number of accessions to the Church, and I believe that this should be the place of emphasis to-day. Then the preacher did well to get from 40 to 80 accessions in a year, and if he secured from 100 to 150 in a year, he felt greatly encouraged and sought to accomplish more the next year. On my first pastoral charge, the Corinth Circuit, I had 350 accessions in the four years of my pastorate, and less than half a dozen of them made shipwreck of their faith. But to-day how few preachers even try to hold their own revivals, and they are not wholly to blame, for the people do not pray and work, or co-operate with pastors as they did thirty years ago. So the evangelist and the specialist have a great responsibility now. The Church is not as responsive as it was in the past; the praying is formal and so is the singing. Our people seem to be religious. They are more liberal in their responses to all the interests of the Church, but we have lost the sense of inward sin, the Spirit's power, and hence the spirit of praise and joy and thanksgiving and shouting are lost. So the evangelists, men in vital touch with God, who can lead sinners to Christ and into the Church, are an absolute need to-day. Our men are doing a great work.

We are to have Brother McIntosh with us in a revival beginning on July 22. We look for a great meeting. Shall we ever have the old-time revivals again?

Editorial

THE PRESIDENT ON SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

Bishop Warren A. Candler, the far-sighted Chancellor of Emory University, was one of the first men in the country to see the importance of keeping the attendance upon the schools and colleges of the Nation up to a good average and to issue through the public prints an appeal looking to the accomplishment of that end. Many others have since discerned the possibility of having the student bodies of our institutions of learning greatly reduced because of the existing war conditions and the ill effects that must inevitably follow if this development should take place, and have likewise sounded notes of warning in this respect. A few days ago Secretary Lane, of the Federal Department of the Interior, brought this matter to the attention of President Wilson, who gave out for publication the following letter:

"The question which you have brought to my attention is of the very greatest moment. It would, as you suggest, seriously impair American prospects of success in this war if the supply of highly trained men were unnecessarily diminished. There will be need for a larger number of persons expert in the various fields of applied science than ever before. Such persons will be needed both during the war and after it closes.

"I have therefore, no hesitation in urging colleges and technical schools to endeavor to maintain their courses as far as possible on the usual basis. There will be many young men from these institutions who will serve in the armed forces of the country. Those who fall below the age of selective conscription and who do not enlist may feel that by pursuing their courses with earnestness and diligence they also are preparing themselves for valuable service to the Nation.

"I would particularly urge upon the young people who are leaving our high schools that as many of them as can do so avail themselves this year of the opportunities offered by colleges and technical schools, to the end that the country may not lack an adequate supply of trained men and women."

A NORTHERN VIEW.

The following sent out by the Church News Association (New York) makes interesting reading:

"Another meeting of the Methodist Unity Commissioners has just been held at a Michigan summer resort, and still another is called for Savannah next January. Northern Commissioners returning from the Michigan meeting are talking in public, even if they do not in print in Methodist periodicals, that American Methodist unity is a long way off. * * *

A Northern Methodist leader, in a position to talk, says: 'There are four Bishops from the South, sincere men, all of them, but still fighting the Civil War. One of them, Bishop Hoss of Nashville, is ill, and so long as he and the other three survive, it is extremely doubtful whether American Methodism will ever come into organic union. The three are Bishop Candler of Atlanta, Bishop Denny of Richmond, and Bishop Murrah of Memphis. A fifth member, Bishop Mouzon of Dallas, is young and reconstructed, or rather he never needed reconstruction. But only he, it is feared, would save the Kingdom rather than the Church. The others, sincere no doubt, would save the Church. The Methodist, South, General Conference will meet a year hence, and an adjourned Methodist, North, General Conference is ready to be called for the same date. We of the North do not believe it will be called. There will be no need for it."

It is just such utterances as this that are causing not a few Methodists in the South to fear that the time may not yet have come for the union of the two Episcopal Methodisms upon any basis.

This picture of Bishops Hoss, Candler, Denny, and Murrah as unreconstructed rebels is rich, especially as no one of them was anything more than a lad during the War between the States. There is not one of them who is the least unkind in his feelings toward the North, or who is lacking in breadth or brotherliness, or who will suffer by comparison with any other member of the Commission, from the South or from the North, as to his devotedness to the interests of the Kingdom. By the way, we should like to have it pointed out by some of the gentlemen who talk thus what there is in the Southern Methodist Church that is inimical to the Kingdom and which is barring its progress. Seemingly, it is held by them that to stand up for any of the important principles upon which Southern Methodism has been builded and to seek to safeguard the welfare of the people of the South is to be narrow and sectional. Can the Kingdom only be made to go forward by the disintegration and absorption of the Southern Methodist Church? What about the Northern Commissioners? Are they all free from the spirit of sectionalism? It would be interesting to note what an appeal to the records in this respect would disclose.

The suggestion that the attitudes of Southern Methodists toward union may be determined by their ages is not at all sustained by the facts. There are Bishops in the Southern Church quite as old (if not older) as any on the Commission who apparently are for union upon almost any terms, and there are many young men who are very conservative on the subject.

We venture to predict that when the curtain lifts on the proceedings of the Joint Commission, the position of Bishops Hoss, Candler, Denny, and Murrah, and those who are standing with them, namely, that union must come along right and safe lines, or not at all, will be overwhelmingly endorsed by the rank and file of Southern Methodists.

THE HATTIESBURG CANTONMENT.

Brother L. E. Wicht, of Hattiesburg, Miss., writes as follows: "Our little city is all aglow with enthusiasm over the coming to us of one of the United States Army Camps. We hope to be profited by the large addition to our community that will result from this selection. Already a 'Welfare Committee' has been appointed by a mass meeting looking to the improvement of conditions in the interest of the troops to be quartered and trained here."

This cantonment will be known as Camp Shelby. We congratulate the city of Hattiesburg upon having secured it, and we are pleased to learn that the surroundings will be made wholesome for the soldier boys, though this does not surprise us. The churches situated near these camps will doubtless have a great opportunity to do a telling work, which they should be quick to seize. We doubt not that our Hattiesburg ministers—Brothers Jones, Hardin, Adams, Terry, and Downer—will see that Methodism does not lag in this important service where they have sway.

MRS. T. W. LEWIS DEAD.

Rev. H. S. Spragins, pastor of our First Church at Memphis, sends us the following note: "Rev. T. W. Lewis, pastor of St. John's Church of this city, is greatly bereaved in the death of his good wife, which occurred at the Lucy Brinkley Hospital here on July 7. The funeral service was conducted from St. John's Church on Jan. 8, in the presence of many sorrowing friends. The body now rests in Elmwood Cemetery, Memphis. A truly good woman, after many years of suffering, has gone to her reward. Brother Lewis and his son, T. W. Lewis, Jr., have the sympathy of a host of friends in the great sorrow which has come to them."

It is with a feeling of profound regret that we publish this message, which will touch with sadness many hearts in Mississippi. Sister Lewis was indeed a noble woman. She was a Christian whose light shone with a steady flame, and, though she was never strong physically, she filled well the difficult place of an itinerant preacher's wife. To know her was to love her, and in every field in which her gifted husband wrought her saintly influence was appreciably felt for good. The bereaved ones have our deepest sympathy. May the Divine Comforter and the precious truths of the Gospel sustain them in this trying hour.

A BIBLE FOR THE SOLDIER BOY.

Our soldier boys are away from home and loved ones. No doubt they are often lonely and homesick. They haven't the privilege of attending Sunday school and church service like they had at home, but they do have the opportunity to read the Bible. The placing of a Bible in the hands of the soldier is a definite Christian work in which all of our people may have a part. We have already distributed hundreds of Testaments, but the demands are greater than our means to supply them. The New Testament in khaki binding can be furnished for $30 per hundred, or 30 cents each. What better investment can a church or individual make than in giving the Word of God to these young men who are to fight our country's battles? Churches, Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues, and Woman's societies can render a helpful service by aiding in this great work. Contributions in any amounts may be sent to Rev. W. E. Thomas, 815 St. Charles street, New Orleans, La. If any one making a donation wishes that a special soldier be given a Testament, the wish will be granted if the correct address of the soldier be given. There should be a liberal response to this appeal.

Presiding Elder of the New Orleans District.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. Loyd Decell, our gifted young pastor at McComb, Miss., is assisting Rev. H. K. McKee in a revival meeting at Sandy Hook, Miss., this week.

Rev. C. A. Battle, of Baton Rouge, La., spent Monday of this week in New Orleans. He reported a good attendance upon the services held in his church last Sunday.

A good audience greeted Rev. R. H. Harper at the Parker Memorial Church, New Orleans, last Sunday morning, and he gave his hearers, as he invariably does, a helpful message. The future of this church seems to be a promising one.

Dr. John T. Sawyer preached at the St. Charles Avenue Baptist Church of this city last Sunday at 11 o'clock a.m. He reports having had a delightful service, the congregation being large for the summer, and giving him close attention, while he discoursed upon the words, "While I was musing, the fire burned," found in Psalm xxxix, 3.

Rev. C. W. Perkins, of Alice, Texas, an esteemed member of the West Texas Conference, spent a day and night in the Crescent City last week, being a guest of the Editor. He was en route to Pavo, Ga., to visit a daughter residing there. Brother Perkins will be pleasantly remembered by many in North Mississippi, where he spent the first years of his ministry.

Rev. E. B. Daniel has an interesting revival meeting in progress at Ida, La. He has promised us a report concerning it later.

Rev. Dan E. Kelly, evangelist of the Mississippi Conference, will assist Rev. A. S. Oliver in a meeting at Carter, Miss., which will begin next Sunday.

Rev. W. M. Langley, of Pickens, Miss., reports that the work is progressing favorably in that charge. Brother Langley is serving an excellent flock.

We have learned with regret that Sister Leggett, the wife of Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, has lately been quite ill. We pray that her health may soon be completely restored.

Rev. J. L. Neill, the active and tireless Field Secretary of the Sunday School and Mission Boards of the Mississippi Conference, is at Lake Junaluska, having gone there in the interest of the important work of which he has charge.

We acknowledge ourselves indebted to Rev. John W. Bell, our pastor at Okolona, Miss., for 4 subscriptions to the Advocate. We have learned from other sources that Brother Bell's efforts are meeting with a goodly measure of success in his present field.

Rev. J. C. Ellis, of the Topisaw (Miss.) charge, writes: "You may say to our friends that young Bishop David Ellis Register, son of Rev. and Mrs. D. Y. Register, arrived at the parsonage on July 22, 1917, at 7:40 o'clock p. m." The Advocate extends congratulations.

Thanks to the courtesy of Rev. W. W. Jones, the popular pastor, we have on our table the Directory of the Lula and Dubbs charge, North Mississippi Conference. It is a neat and informing pamphlet, which evidences enterprise and ability upon the part of Brother Jones.

Mrs. Callie Allen, of Plantersville, Miss., renews her subscription to the Advocate and sends us another for a friend. She states that she has been taking the paper for 14 years, and that she is much pleased with it. We appreciate her kindly interest in the Conference organ.

Rev. and Mrs. B. P. Jaco, of Lexington, Miss., spent a day at Black Hawk, Miss., last week, being guests in the hospitable home of Mr. J. B. Streater. While there, Brother Jaco preached an interesting and helpful sermon, the pastor, Rev. J. G. Johnson, having a protracted meeting in progress.

Mr. Julian B. Fiebelman, of Jackson, Miss., the representative of Millsaps College, was awarded the medal at the Crystal Springs Chautauqua in a recent competitive debate with representatives of the Mississippi State University, the A. & M. College, and Mississippi College, at Clinton. Hurrah for Millsaps!

Mr. Julian Lee Lipscomb, who is the eldest son of Rev. and Mrs. Lee Lipscomb, of Winona, Miss., and a law graduate of Millsaps College, has entered the aviation service of the Government. He won distinction in the aviation school at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., and has now gone to Toronto, Canada, for further training.

Through Dr. R. H. Wynn, of Centenary College, we have received a copy of the paper on "The Country Church," by Dr. C. P. Atkinson, of the Southern University at Greensboro, Ala., which was awarded the first prize at the late session of the Seashore Divinity School. It will appear in the next issue of the Advocate.

Rev. W. B. Hogg, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, at Laurel, Miss., has been appointed to a chaplaincy in the United States Army, and Rev. J. V. Bennett, who has been doing evangelistic work since the last session of the Mississippi Conference, has been designated to serve the pastorate thus made vacant in Laurel.

The following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, have our thanks for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Dr. T. B. Holloman, Vicksburg, Miss., 2; Rev. N. N. Maxey, Waterford, Miss., 2; Brother and Sister T. S. Randle, Farmerville, La., 2; Rev. T. B. Cottrell, Mt. Olive, Miss., 6.

In a business note bringing us 4 subscriptions to the Advocate, Rev. L. A. McKeown, our pastor at Iuka, Miss., adds the following item: "Rev. W. M. McIntosh is to be with us in a meeting which will begin on the first Sunday in August. We are expecting a great revival. This is Brother McIntosh's home town and he is much loved here."

Rev. G. D. Purcell, of Dubach, La., says: "The work is moving along smoothly here. We have new oak pews in our new brick church at this place, giving us a house of worship as up to date as most any of our city churches. We have a room for each class in the Sunday school. We are busy in our revival campaign and are looking for good results. Pray for us."

The fight in the Louisiana Legislature to make the city of Alexandria "dry," because of the location of a cantonment for the training of troops there, failed, we regret to state. Uncle Sam, however, may have something to say on the subject later. Anyhow, the prohibition forces were right in making the fight that they did. It is better to fight in a good cause and be beaten, than to submit tamely to the prevalence of wrong.

From Moscow, Miss., Rev. George P. Fikes writes: "Please announce that our new church at Mellen will be dedicated on the fifth Sunday in July, the 29th inst. The sermon will be preached by Rev. Wiley J. Ferguson, of Meridian, Miss. All former pastors are invited to be present." Though Brother Fikes' letter bore the date of July 14, for some reason it did not reach us in time for this notice to be inserted in the last issue of the Advocate. We regret this delay.

The eighteenth annual session of the Epworth Leagues of Louisiana will be held in Baton Rouge, July 28 and 29. This Conference was originally expected to be held in Lake Charles, June 14-17, but was deferred because of conditions incident to the war. The place of holding the delayed gathering was changed from Lake Charles to Baton Rouge, because of the more central location of the latter city. We trust that these young Methodists will have an assemblage that will give a forward impetus to their work.

"Is Woman Suffrage Right?—The Question Answered," is the title of a 23-page pamphlet from the gifted pen of Dr. Isaac Lockhart Peebles, of the Mississippi Conference. The following are the chapter headings of this interesting pamphlet: 1. The Origin of Woman Suffrage; 2. Bases Adopted for Woman Suffrage; 3. The Proper Bases for Discussing Woman Suffrage; 4. Unanswerable Objections to Woman Suffrage. This pamphlet may be had by writing the author at Meridian, Miss. If we mistake not, the price is 10 cents.

A dispatch from Drew, Miss., to the Memphis Commercial Appeal on July 17 reads as follows: "Last night a special service was held in the M. E. Church, South, for the soldiers who have enlisted at this place—65 in number—and all were remembered in the prayers offered. More than 500 persons attended the service. The church had been beautifully decorated by the ladies of the Red Cross, and Old Glory adorned the drapings. All responded in wishing these noble boys Godspeed and honor for the cause for which they stand."

Rev. T. B. Cottrell, of Mt. Olive, Miss., writes: "We are in the midst of a meeting here. Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, of Yazoo City, is doing the preaching, to the delight of all who are hearing him. Last night every available seat was taken. We closed a meeting at Cohay last Thursday night. Much good was done. We will go to Mize next week. Brother Norsworthy will help me in all my meetings. Many say that they have never heard better preaching. The Advocate gets his support wherever he goes, and I am sending you in this letter some renewals and new subscriptions."

We have received a note from our esteemed pastor at Oakland, Miss., Rev. W. F. Rogers informing us that his wife is seriously ill and that she was expected to go to Memphis for an operation Monday or Tuesday of this week; and from Lake Junaluska, N. C., Mr. Marvin L. Rogers also wired us concerning his mother's condition, and requesting that prayer be made for her recovery. Our heart goes out in tender sympathy to these friends in this hour of keen anxiety. Let the readers of the Advocate join us in remembering the stricken one and those who are so deeply concerned about her at the throne of grace.

Rev. S. L. Pope, our efficient pastor at New Albany, Miss., writes: "The work of the Church is moving on nicely here. We had about 100 at prayer meeting last night. Our congregations at the preaching services are holding up to the winter standard these hot days, which I think is good evidence of spiritual life. Rev. G A. Klein, one of our General Evangelists, is to be with us in a two weeks' meeting next October. I had him with me in a series of services during the last year of my pastorate at Itta Bena, and I think that it was one of the best revivals that I was ever in. I wish that he might spend the remainder of the year within the bounds of our Conference."

From a personal letter from Rev. C. M. Chapman, our hustling pastor at Waynesboro, Miss., we extract the following: "I am leaving for some educational studies and travel in the Northwestern States and Canada. My pulpit while I am away will be filled by Brothers Peebles, Hargar, Walters, and others. The work is doing well in my charge. Our recent meeting, in which I was assisted by Rev. George H. Thompson, our presiding elder, brought 28 persons into the Church—26 of them on profession of faith." We trust that Brother Chapman will find his stay in the North pleasant and profitable in every respect. He well deserves a season of rest.

Rev. J. D. Harper, our pastor at Opelousas, La., sends us the following note: "Our church at Opelousas has suffered a great loss in the death of Mrs. M. M. Hayes, who passed from labor to rest on June 8. She was the last of the White family, of which three brothers—B. F., T. B., and H. O.—were honored members of the Louisiana Conference. She had been a member of the church here for more than 50 years, and was to the end of her life a leader in all lines of Church work. She taught school here for 19 years, and hundreds were brought under her influence and helped by her instruction." In chronicling the death of this faithful servant of the Master, we extend sympathy to the bereaved, though the earthly ending of such a life could not be aught else than a triumph and a coronation.

DOES THIS APPEAL TO YOU?

Just as the last rays of a golden sunset had faded into twilight, the life of a girl which had been lingering for days at the Charity Hospital quietly ebbed away. Her husband died when her baby was only 4 months old. She was only 18 years of age, and had been struggling for eleven months to maintain herself and baby. She was a Methodist, but they had no way to assist her, and she had to place her baby in the St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum, which was against her will. She was taken seriously ill, and the one thought which concerned her most was that her child be not raised a Catholic.

We gave her a Christian burial and brought the baby and placed it in the care of competent ones until it can be adopted by some one. The girl herself was an orphan from another State, and had no one to whom she could give her baby.

Two godly women said, Now is the time for us to start to doing a work that we have so long talked of—that is, providing a Protestant home for our own children. On the very same day another beautiful six-months'-old baby was placed in our keeping.

This baby, whose mother had died, is a beautiful, soft brown-eyed girl, fifteen months old. She has pretty features and is an attractive child.

We want some good Methodist family, who can educate her, to take her to raise.

CAN YOU USE HIM?

Dear Brother: Please say to the brethren that Rev. Otto Porter, of Rose Hill, Miss., who is a graduate of the Mississippi Conference Training School, is a Senior at Millsaps College for the next session, and who is striving to get means by which he may finish his course at that institution, would be glad to assist any of the brethren in their meetings as a choir leader. He sings all parts, first and second tenor, and first and second bass. No brother would make a mistake in securing him as a choir leader. Write him and see about dates, and if you can get him, you will not only get a good choir leader, but you will be assisting one of our young men to get an education.

This is voluntary on my part. Use him if you can, brethren.

Respectfully,
H. R. McKEE, his pastor.

YOUR BOY'S YOUR ALL—IF HE IS LOST ALL IS LOST.

Who are "Your boy's associates" The character of a boy's associates is a most powerful factor for good or evil in the shaping of his life. Your boy's greatest danger is local associates. They teach more than you. If they are bad, what is the remedy?

Mrs MATTIE JOHNSTON, daughter of Sanford and Demaris Cummins, was born in Johnston County, Mo., on Dec. 4, 1856. She moved to Lafayette County, Miss., with her parents when about 7 years of age. She professed faith in Christ early in life and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. She was married to Dion Wesley Johnston in Oct. 31, 1884. God blessed this union with nine children, four boys and five girls: namely Jasper, Blanche, Pearl, James, Lola, Sallie, Clion, Newt, and Wesley. She died in April 20, 1917. Blanche and Lola preceded their mother to the better world. She was a woman of strong character and high purpose. The departure of this friend is peculiarly sad to all who knew her. She was a good Christian. She had faith in God and loved her church. Her health kept her from attending its services many times when she really wanted to be there. It was always a pleasure to visit her home and converse with her about the affairs of the Church. May the Lord bless the children and help them to so live as to meet her in heaven.

MISS MAY W. McPHERSON.

This most estimable lady died on June 26, 1917, at her home near Holly Springs and was tenderly laid to rest at the Sylvestria burial-ground the succeeding day. Rev. Thomas H. Porter of the Methodist Church officiating. The deceased was a daughter of Rev. Malcolm M. and Susan Wall McPherson. She was born in North Carolina in 1832, but moved, with her parents, to Mississippi when she was yet a child. Her life was a beautiful one. She was gentle, quiet, true and faithful to her Church, to her friends, and to her God. She was a devout member of the M. E. Church, South. She is survived by her brother, Dr. John McPherson, and a niece, Mrs. Sue Burns, both of this place. None knew "Miss May" but to love her. She will be greatly missed and mourned by many friends and loved ones.

AN APPRECIATION OF MISS LULA PURVIS.

Resolutions drawn and adopted by the Wesleyan Society of the Methodist Church at Yazoo City, Miss.:

Death has unexpectedly taken from among her friends the earthly presence of our sister. A sharp illness of one week, and her kind hands minister no more, her voice is still. We will miss the encouraging pressure of her hands, we will miss the sincerity of her voice.

From long association with her in the society whose sessions she always met, whose spirit she constantly enlarged, we came to feel her to be a vital part of it.

The passing years show one thing surely to us all—that the saints depart from us into the upper and better kingdom, prepared for them—for which they are prepared. And the years have shown, besides, how full are the saints of life as well as light. So we cherish the memory of this dear friend, lovely woman, gracious lady, and benediction to her church.

We bow toward the heavens, lifting our eyes in all the beauty of faith and trust that our sister lives, and her life is hid with Christ in God.

We seem able to understand that she is wanted for her place with those she loved—for all the nearest of her kin had gone before her. We never can escape the sadness which the going of such as she leaves with us. But we mingle sadness with sweetness of comfort, as we say "our loss is her gain."

She leaves the broken circle here to complete the circle above.

These words convey the sentiment of the Wesleyan Society, and will go upon our records as a sincere memorial to her who entwined is from the remembrance of her gentle life among us.

THE ABERDEEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Aberdeen District Conference, recently held in the enterprising town of Amory, Miss., was an enjoyable, as well as a spiritual event, that has already become permanent history in our great Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The Conference was well attended by both pastors and laymen, all of whom gave gratifying reports from their fields, and are hopeful of a great year in their work.

Our popular and efficient presiding elder, Rev. Thos. H. Lipscomb, graced the president's chair and it goes without saying that the work of the conference was dispatched with ease, but accurately and rapidly. He presided like a man of ripe experience, although he is serving his first district.

A Christian spirit, brotherly love and good will characterized the Conference throughout. It was indeed a spiritual feast.

The Rev. J. E. Thomas, host of the Conference, is in high favor with his people. Every detail of the Conference received perfect attention, thereby adding largely to the pleasure and success of the occasion.

The closing service came only too soon, but each pastor returned to his work feeling better, and with a determination to render his best service to those to whom he ministers, and thus enrich his own life and enlarge the Master's Kingdom.

Houlka, Miss. Secretary.

REVIVAL AT BRANCH, LA.

Notwithstanding weather conditions, we have just closed a very successful revival at Branch, La. I had with me Rev. J. H. Brooks, of Senatobia, Miss., who is a former pastor of the Branch Church. He was also a schoolmate of mine at Wesley Hall. The people came in spite of the mosquitoes and daily showers. Quite a number accepted Jesus Christ. Twelve united with the Church. The Christian people were revived. Brother Brooks did splendid preaching. He is good help in a meeting, and, in fact, a very promising young man.

We have splendid people in our Church at Branch. I doubt whether there is a country church anywhere in the Lafayette District superior to Branch, everything taken into consideration. The Lord is with us this year in our work. C. E. FIKE, P. C.

WHEN WILL IT END?

When, three years ago, the news was flashed to every part of the civilized world that a great war had broken out, there were few who believed it possible that such a war could last more than a year, or at most two years. A few suggested that it might last for three years, but it was generally believed that it would be utterly impossible to protract such a strife, on account of the utter national collapse which it was held to involve. Yet now, near the end of the third year, the collapse has not come, and there is no reason apparent on the surface why the struggle should not last three years longer.

It was firmly believed that the Central Powers would be compelled to make peace because of complete financial exhaustion, but although the expenses of the war have been very much greater than was formerly estimated, and although some financiers insist that Germany is now practically bankrupt, there are few bold enough to assert that the speedy end of the war is assured by the financial difficulties of the enemy.

And it was believed most firmly, and British statesmen declared most positively, that the British fleet would soon secure such a strangle-hold on the enemy as to force them to sue for peace. Yet three years have gone, and Germany is still unconquered. It is no doubt true that food is scarce in Germany, and woollens and cottons and certain metals are exceedingly scarce, yet there are very few who would care to assert that the British blockade can force Germany into submission in the very near future. The truth is, the war is teaching all the nations that while many things are deemed absolutely necessary to ordinary existence they are not absolutely neeessary, and can be done without in war-time with no serious diminution of a nation's military efficiency.

And it was boldly asserted that in a modern war the surprising accuracy of scietific gunfire, and the phenomenal power of high explosives, would mean such wholesale slaughter of the combatants that peace would come quickly from sheer exhaustion of manhood. But despite all the new horrors of war it seems probable that the wearing-down process is still a matter of years with any determined nation.

Again it was widely, very widely, believed that in case of war the masses would soon insist upon peace, and in the case of Germany it was confidently expected that the tremendous Socialistic vote would be so increased by the privations and losses incident to a great war as to insure the speedy overturn of autocratic government and the institution of democraey, with a consequent peace. But even here all prophecies have failed, and apparently the Socialism of Germany is helplessly bound to the Kaiser's chariot-wheels. So far as all former calculations are concerned we can only say that they have shown us how easy it is for the best informed men to make most serious miscalculations. The incalculable factors spoil the solution of the problem.

And yet, when we have said these things, we have not said all. It is true, as we have asserted again and again, that German defeat is assured. Her attempts to divide the Allies, her attempts to make a separate peace with Italy and Russia, have hopelessly failed. Russia may yet come back, and even this summer may strike telling blows at the enemy. And the submarine campaign, while serious enough, stands no chance whatever of forcing Britain into an early peace, although it has resulted already in the placing of a United States embargo upon shipments to neutrals, and this will undoubtedly intensify the privation already existing in Germany.

Just how conditions stand in Germany and Austria we do not know exactly, but we know that at best they are serious enough, and the idea of facing another winter of war is not viewed without fear. If the war lasts another year it will find Germany and Austria weaker by some millions of men, and probably with a well-nigh fatal shortage of metals and food. But it will find the Allies the stronger by the entrance of one or two millions of American troops, and the pooling of the enormous manufacturing and financial resources of the two greatest and wealthiest nations in the world, the United States and Britain. And, unfortunately for Germany, these nations are not only amongst the best fighters in the world, but they are also the most determined, the veritable "die-hards" of the nations.—Christian Guardian.

CONSTIPATION, BILIOUSNESS, AND LIVER DISORDERS.

Cleanliness is the first law of health and it means more than keeping the hands and body clean. It demands that the inside of the body shall be kept clear of impurities. It demands that the waste produets be not allowed to stay any longer in the body than Nature normally provides.

The importance of keeping your bowels normal is seen when it is remembered that there is not a solitary disease in the entire list that does not demand as one of the first requisites in its treatment the thorough elimination of waste matter from the bowels.

Two of the commonest causes of constipation are wrong diet and irregularity in going to stool. The liver failing to secrete enough bile is another potent reason.

Dr. Miles' Liver Pills are an ideal remedy for such a condition. They gently stimulate the aetion of the liver and the bowels, and with eareful attention to habits of stool and diet, insure their proper and regular aetion.

The following are some of the reasons why we so strongly advocate the use of Dr. Miles' Liver Pills in cases of torpid liver, biliousness, eonstipation and indigestion: Beeause they do not eause griping or other unpleasant sensations like ordinary pills. Becauso their use does not derange the stomaeh, liver or bowels. Because they are a very gentle laxative and if properly used cause natural movements of the bowels. Because they are small, mild and sure.

A NOTE FROM VICKSBURG.

Dear Dr. Meek: "Showers of Blessings" have been falling at this place. We rejoice because of the good season of rain that at last has come to water the parched earth. Other kinds of showers have also been falling. The Gibson Memorial parsonage was hit hard by a storm last Wednesday evening. It had been sprinkling along during the day, but at 7 p. m. the storm broke and a tremendous shower fell that flooded the pantry. When the storm had subsided and Mrs. Lewis and I had time to take stock of "what was left" by loving friends and faithful members, we beheld our dining room literally covered with all sorts of good, substantial things to eat. It seems that nothing that a preacher loves to eat had been overlooked. I had to get busy and build a coop for some frying-sized chickens that had come in addition to bacon, ham, and eggs. This makes the second "pounding" we have received within the last month. Some of the people did not know of the first in time, but they learned that an "encore" would not be objectionable; so they came strong on the "encore." Now is a mighty good time to come to see me, Doctor.

The best news is reserved for the last. A week ago last Sunday I began a series of services that have steadily increased in interest and power. The Church here has been wonderfully revived and many brought into the Kingdom, and still the good work goes on. We have been having the largest congregations I have ever seen in this church. To God be the glory for the Spirit's work in waking up the people and getting them to work more earnestly for souls.

We have been greatly blessed in having Miss Bessie Cook of Hattiesburg to conduct the singing. Everyone has fallen in love with her singing and work as choir directress. She possesses unusual qualifications for this work. In addition to a well trained chorus in the choir, she has organized and trained a chorus of children whose inspiring singing has been a feature of the meeting. She possesses a rich, cultivated contralto voice that is peculiarly adapted to singing solos that can be heard and appreciated by all. Being a consecrated Christian and in love with her work, her singing of Gospel songs make a profound impression for good. Miss Cook is also an accomplished pianist and when necessary can do the playing in a way that makes all love to sing.

Our people are highly delighted with her work. She is thoroughly at home in an altar service, and her prayers and Christian testimony add greatly to the good of the meeting.

Many will recognize Miss Cook as having had charge of the singing during the Conference at Laurel. Any one desiring her services will do well to correspond with her at 614 Bay Street, Hattiesburg, Miss. She loves the work and will be glad to assist in meetings.

We are greatly encouraged in our work at this place. There is so much to be done. I need the prayers of all.

Your brother,
OSMOND S. LEWIS.

WORTHY OF IMITATION.

"'I want some one to be glad that I was born.' said a lonely woman; so she celebrated her birthday by carrying gifts to others as lonely as herself—to the poor, the sick and the sad. It is pleasant to be remembered, and to receive presents, but the noblest, best and happiest thought that can come to us on our birthdays is that we can make some one happier because we were born."

PATRIOTISM AND THE SABBATH.

We have noticed that patriotic meetings and benefit entertainment and sports have made serious inroads on the sanctity of the Lord's Day and we are glad to see The Presbytrian speak out on this matter as follows:

"Patriotism is much to be admired where it exists and ought to be cultivated where it does not exist. It is hard to see how any man who has a spark of manhood in his composition should fail to have in his heart a love for his country. In many cases this love seems to be lying dormant and needs to be aroused into an activity which will make it do something. To awaken this dormant patriotism, at this time when our country is at war, many means are being used. Most of them can be very cordially commended. But there is one plan that Christians ought to think about very seriously. This is the holding of patriotic meetings and parades on Sunday. The plea is made in behalf of this practice that more people will attend on Sunday than on any other day. The same thing would probably be true of a free prize fight. Another plea is that patriotism is simply a man's performing his duty, and that duty is closely connected with religion. Man does owe a duty to the State, but he also owes one to God. And God has set apart the Sabbath for Himself and we have no right to use it to advance our interests as individuals or as a nation, except as to matters of religion. Whatever is done on God's holy day ought to be for the purpose of bringing us closer to God. This will not be done by brass band parades, nor by speeches and songs in regard to the war or matters pertaining to it. If the Sabbath is devoted to the performance of the duties we owe to God there will be little question as to our performances of the duties we owe to our country. When a man is faithful to God, the great ruler, he will be faithful to his government."

Loss of Vitality is loss of the principle of life, and is early indicated by failing appetite and diminishing strength and endurance. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the greatest vitalizer—it acts on all the organs and functions, and builds up the whole system.—Adv.

A NOTE OF THANKS.

Please let us through the Advocate thank our many friends who have helped us in adding the much-needed improvements to the Farmerville parsonage. The sleeping porch and the bathroom are both finished and paid for. We will celebrate the 50th anniversary of our marriage on August 6, and we want our many dear friends in Louisiana to think of us on that day and to pray God to help us to appreciate as we should all of his blessings to us and ours. Especially do we love and appreciate our friends. May God bless each one of them who may read these lines!

When the Skin Seems Ablaze With Itching and Burning

There's just one thing to do.

If your skin seems ablaze with the fiery burning and itching of Eczema, real and lasting relief can only come from treatment that goes below the surface—that reaches down to the very source of the trouble. So-called skin-diseases come from a disordered condition of the blood, and the proper treatment is through the blood.

Search far and near, and you cannot find a blood remedy that approaches S. S. S. for real efficiency. It has been on the market for fifty years, during which time it has been giving uniform satisfaction for all manner of blood disorders. If you want prompt and lasting relief, you can rely upon S. S. S. For expert advice as to the treatment of your own individual case, write to-day to Chief Medical Adviser, Swift Specific Co., Dept. C Atlanta, Ga.

SPURGEON'S FRUITAGE.

Zion's Herald culls from the British Weekly an interesting instance of Spurgeon's remarkable influence, as follows: "Sir W. Robertson Nicoll, editor of The British Weekly, who was a close personal friend of Principal Denny, whose death was recorded in these columns recently, pays a touching and discriminating tribute to this great Christian leader in the number of the Weekly just received. In the course of the editorial notice he lifts the veil on the intimate spiritual history of Dr. Denny. 'He was reticent in relating his spiritual history,' says Dr. Nicoll, 'but we believe that his wife, who gave him the truest and most perfect companionship, led him into a more pronounced evangelical creed. It was she who induced him to read Spurgeon, whom he had been inclined to despise. He became an ardent admirer of the preacher and a very careful and sympathetic student of his sermons. It was Spurgeon perhaps as much as any one who led him to the great decision of his life—the decision to preach Christ our Righteousness.' The secret of Dr. Denny's preaching was that he thought himself through and determined early, as says Dr. Nicoll, 'to preach the cross of Christ—on the one hand its power to save, and on the other its sharpness and sternness, its imperious calls to duty and self-denial. From this preaching of the cross he was never moved.'" —Christian Intelligencer.

WE MUST LOVE GOD.

We must love God in order to find Him in His works. There is a sentiment that men call love to God, which the plain old Bible calls "enmity." We cannot stay here to define things, but simply to put you on our guard against a very common error. If a man loves God, he loves men and keeps God's commands. That is the test. He must love men as he loves himself, and God he must love with his whole heart and soul and mind, in order to come up to the standard. Oh, you say, that is a Christian! Well, in that you are right, and just that sort of man is the one who enjoys the world to the full. The only man who gets the most and the best enjoyment out of this world is the one we know as a Christian, one who has learned to love God heartily and wholly.—Rollin A. Sawyer.

BILLY SUNDAY ON THE SOUTH.

During his Boston revival Billy Sunday made the following statement about the South:

"Sixty-eight per cent of the men of the South are in the Church. Why? You may not like it, but the truest, the purest, the finest men and women in America are south of the Mason and Dixon line. That's the reason it took thirty millions to lick six millions. There's more pure-blooded Americans south of the Mason and Dixon line than anywhere else in this country. That's why so many of them are Christians. I say that, even if my old daddy was one of the boys in blue and fought against them. They were hard to lick because they were real Americans. South of the Mason and Dixon line they have got the North licked to a frazzle in religion and morals."

RENWAR RELIEVES RHEUMATISM.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says: "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanitarium treatments, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should anyone doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." For sale by druggists, price 50c; or by mail on receipt of price from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, , NASHVILLE, TENN.—Adv.

Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician & Medical Author says:

EVERY WOMAN EVERY MOTHER EVERY DAUGHTER NEEDS IRON AT TIMES

To put strength into her nerves and color into her cheeks.

There can be no beautiful, healthy, rosy-cheeked women without iron. The trouble in the past has been that when women needed iron they generally took ordinary metallic iron, which often corroded the stomach and did far more harm than good. Today doctors prescribe organic iron—Nuxated Iron. This particular form of iron is easily assimilated, does not blacken nor injure the teeth nor upset the stomach. It will increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, irritable, careworn, haggard looking women 100 per cent in two weeks' time in many instances. I have used it in my own practice with most surprising results.—Ferdinand King, M. D.

Woman's Missionary Work

All communications for this department should be sent to the Editor at the address given above.

The Church has a suggestions number that set in the war. She carries the missionary collection in the whole world comes that program. There will be a tendency to cut down contributions for regular religious purposes, but retrenchment must not be allowed.

Hold fast to the things of God, for times. Remember that the program of the Kingdom is not changed by war, but that our country is not work going for a time does not.—The Continent.

"BILLY" SUNDAY ON MISSIONS.

"The devil is just as great a menace in Africa and Asia as in America. People are not born heathen in Christian. They become heathen under conditions that could be remedied if the people of Christian lands would do their duty by their less fortunate neighbors. The world is so small now and we have become so dependent upon the people of these seas, lands for grain and special materials that enter into our manufactures, that we cannot repudiate our moral responsibility for their welfare. A man would be a fool to suppose that God intended to save Americans or Englishmen only.

"The devil is just real and he is real all around the world. Much of the devilment we see in America comes from other lands, and every year we ship enough rum to Africa to send the whole continent to hell. Think of it—rum from Boston and brass pots from Philadelphia. If we can send them rum and brass pots, we surely ought to be able to send some live men.

"I believe in the whole missionary business from 'a' to 'izzard.' I don't what the Turks have done to the Armenians and Syrians would do me. Was there ever such a record in all history? Such atrocities are a blot upon civilization. So long as such things are possible anywhere missionaries are needed. One mad dog is a menace to a community. So long as one saloon exists our boys are not safe. Freedom for the Turk or anybody else to murder his neighbor breeds a situation calling for attention. Shall we apply the Turk's medicine to ourself? No, that is not the Christian way. But it is Christian to make him behave. Encourage our missionaries among the Armenians and Syrians and throw such a cordon of good around those Turks that they will have to be good or die in the attempt.

"President Wilson says that the whole country—every man, woman and child—must be mobilized for the war. So every Christian of every Christian Church must be mobilized for the Christian conquest of the world. Don't want to be drafted. Do your duty. Give your money. Pray for the men and women in the firing line in Armenia, China, Africa, India, and the islands of the sea.

"There is aid and help to them in the whole world. If you leave a bad spot anywhere as this will run over in the good places. To make any one part of the world really safe, we must make all parts safe. In order to be sure that one man is safe, Christ must save all. This is what the missionaries have always said. The great war has proved that they are right."

EDUCATION FOR POOR FILIPINOS.

Under the provisions of a bill recently introduced in the Philippine Legislature, all Filipinos who have one or more children will be entitled to government assistance in their education.

Persons who desire to avail themselves of this will present to the municipal board an application giving the following facts: Name and residence; application number of children; a statement that the applicant is too poor to furnish the children with an education; with names of persons who will act as references. Under this bill the bureau of education will co-operate to the extent of furnishing poor children with the necessary school supplies, including textbooks, notebooks, pencils, penholders, etc.

It is further provided in the bill that Filipino students receiving government aid will serve the government for one-half as long a time as they studied at government expense, receiving during this time a salary of one-half the regular remuneration of the positions they fill.—Missionary Review.

SOME INTERESTING FACTS.

It took 137 African carriers, each with a sixty-pound load of unlimited uses on his head, to deliver a consignment of some 3000 Bibles to their destination in the bush.

It is extremely difficult to get news from Syria, but it is authoritatively stated that from 100,000 to 150,000 have died from disease, starvation and exile in the province of Lebanon alone.

A special correspondent of an Arabic paper in New York writes: "The land is without medicines and doctors. And if there were medicinal relief there is no food to nourish the emaciated bodies. I do not exaggerate when I say that almost every one alive in Syria to-day is at least partially demented because of the awfulness seen at every side."

That American missionaries are appreciated in Turkey is clearly shown from some of the reports reaching the American Board. During the recent illness of a prominent missionary a Mohammedan priest and several Turkish notables went in the doctor's house and offered prayer for the recovery of the doctor friend who cannot be spared from this country. Again, when a young woman missionary was critically ill with fever, an official ordered ice to be brought by motor from Tarsus, and this kindness was the means in God's hands of saving her life.

Luebo, in Central Africa, is the principal station of the Southern Presbyterians. They have a congregation of 1000 in Sunday's school numbering 600, and two services daily attended by nearly one thousand people. On Wednesday and Sunday nights there are prayer-meetings all over the village and these meetings were started by the natives without any suggestion from the missionaries.

The following comes from a missionary in Japan:

"In the increasing number of men in public life who become Christians on the one hand, and a strong reaction in favor of maintaining the ancient institutions on the other, there has arisen a desire on the part of the authorities and of many Christians to find some workable compromise. The contemplation of the country guarantees religious liberty, but the government wishes the ancient rites to be kept up, and of recent years has insisted that school teachers take their pupils to the temples to do reverence. To close over the inconsistency of this position, the government declares that the shrines are not religious institutions, but are intended to keep alive the memory of the illustrious dead and that to worship them is not a religious act."

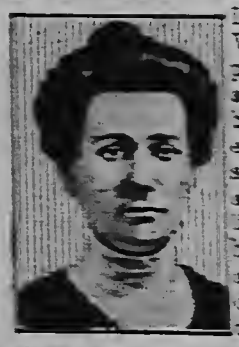
WOMAN HAD NERVOUS TROUBLE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her.



West Danby, N. Y.—"I have had nervous trouble all my life until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nerves and for female troubles and it strengthened me so I am in good shape. I work nearly all the time, as we live on a farm and I have four cows. I do all my sewing and other work with their help so it shows that I stand it real well. I took the Compound when my ten year old daughter came and it helped me a lot. I have also had my oldest girl take it and it did her lots of good. I keep it in the house all the time and recommend it."—Mrs. DEWITT SOWERBUTTS, West Danby, N. Y.

Sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, backache, headaches, dragging sensations, all point to female derangements which may be overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Dear Doctor Meek: We have just brought to a close the best meeting that has ever been held in our little city. We had with us Rev. J. H. Bell, Conference Evangelist of North Mississippi, and Brother Templeton, of Meridian, Miss. They are both thoroughly consecrated Christian gentlemen, and I believe I echo the sentiments of the entire community when I say it was the best meeting we have ever had. Everybody fell in love with Brother Bell, regardless of denomination. He is a splendid minister, and a man who walks with God daily. Thirty-five members were added to the Church and many backsliders were reclaimed. We feel that words are inadequate to express just how much good Brother Bell has done. Eternity alone will reveal this. That the Lord may continue to bless him and Brother Templeton is my prayer.—Ida Moore.

July 16, 1917.

Crowville, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just closed a three weeks' revival meeting at Winnsboro, resulting in a large number of conversions and reclamations. Thirty-one joined the M. E. Church, South, and a goodly number united with the Baptist Church. The preaching was done by Rev. J. H. Bell, Conference Evangelist of the North Mississippi Conference (except four sermons by the pastor.) Brother Bell preached the gospel with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. Sin was uncovered, and men and women were made to quake and tremble on account of their sins. He held up Christ as the only way of escape from sin and its penalty. The singing was led by Brother Paul Templeton, of Meridian, Miss., the traveling companion of Brother Bell. The singing was very fine indeed. Eternity alone can tell the vast amount of good done by these brethren during their stay in Winnsboro. The churches were drawn closer together than ever before. The pastor of the Baptist Church called off his services, and attended and helped in the meeting. The people as a token of their appreciaton of Brother Bell and his singer presented them with a purse of nearly $300.

Brother Bell has gone home for a much-needed week's rest, while Brother Templeton is leading the singing in a meeting at Crowville, and your humble servant, the pastor, is doing the preaching. The meeting just opened here last night.—S. D. Howard, P. C.

UGH! A DOSE OF NASTY CALOMEL

It sallvates! It makes you sick and you may lose a day's work.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful to-night. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling great. It's perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't sallvate, so let them eat anything afterwards.

REPORT ON BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

The following is the report of the Committee on Books and Periodicals unanimously adopted by the Aberdeen District Conference and requested printed in the Advocate:

Your committee feel in these strenuous times that our young people do not read good religious books as they should, and since dear Brother Bachman, who was our capable colporter for so long, has been taken to heaven, this arm of service to our people has been really neglected. So we recommend that the preachers select the best books, those suitable to the needs of our young people, and bring these books to the attention of our people, and urge all parents to purchase good books for their children, and in this way seek to enlarge the circle of readers of our own books, published and sold by our Publishing House. Since there are so many books of questionable soundness, the preachers should seek with diligence to inform themselves so that they may act as safeguards to the young as to the character of the books they should read.

Your committee feel there should be many more preachers and laymen who take and read the Methodist Review, edited by Dr. H. M. Duhose: also the Epworth Era, the Missionary Voice, and the Nashville Christian Advocate. All of these are of a high-class and deserve a much greater patronage than is given them. Now since there are so many calls upon the time and service of the preachers, we recommend that in each pastoral charge there should be appointed some capable person under the supervision of the pastor as agent for all our periodicals and furnished with copies to show what this literature is. We feel sure that in this way much can be done to increase the circulation of our periodicals.

And now we call special attention to our Conference organ, the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The Editor, Dr. R. A. Meek, and the publisher, Mr. C. O. Chalmers, are giving the Church a great paper, a vigorous inspiring Christian Advocate, whose editorial pages sparkle with vital force and commanding influence. The courageous Editor, Dr. Meek, is one of the strongest defenders of the doctrines of Methodism as expounded by the fathers whose service to the Church has made the history of Methodism glorious. He stands for all that is best in our present civilization, not failing to observe and attack the shams and false tendencies in the religious world of to-day. He is the invincible champion of the rights and sacred heritage of Southern Methodism just now, when her very life is in peril. We cannot overestimate the value of the New Orleans Christian Advocate at this time as an able exponent of Southern thought and feeling on the question of union with our big sister to the north of us, when the glitter of numbers and the sentimental supplant for the time reason and judgment, causing many good men to ignore or overlook facts that would mean much harm, if not ultimate ruin, to our Church if such union should be effected. At a time when so much is being written by great men that mislead and obscure the real issues to the average mind we have in the New Orleans Christian Advocate a clear defense of our rights and interests that all Southern Methodists should know. This Advocate stands for all that is best and true in the Christian life, and we believe the preachers and laymen will have a growing appreciation of the value of this Christian Advocate in comparison with other religious newspapers. The make-up of the paper is to the credit of the efficient, untiring publisher, Mr. C. O. Chalmers. In view of the hard period in money matters, let us redouble our diligence to increase the subscription lists.

Signed: W. M. YOUNG,
Chairman.

THE BOSTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The 1917 session of the Boston District Conference convened in the town of Winnfield on Tuesday afternoon, July 17 at 2 o'clock, with Rev. J. M. Henry D.D. presiding elder in the chair. The business was carried through with such dispatch that the conference adjourned Wednesday evening.

Rev. L. V. Dodson, of Minden, preached a very helpful sermon on the evening of the first day. On Wednesday evening Rev. V. V. Trice, of Noel Memorial, Shreveport, spoke to the conference and visitors on the cause of Christian Education. Throughout the day on Wednesday, the second day addresses had been arranged for different phases of the work of the Church. The following men made addresses. Mr. W. M. Spinks, Lay Leader for the Boston District; Rev. J. S. Spelling, of Boston; Rev. C. E. Carter, of the Alexandria District; Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., of Homer; Mr. R. O. Randle, Lay Leader of the Monroe District and Representative of the Board of Church Extension. Dr. Wynn and Prof. Bodcau were also present and represented the work at Centenary College and at Mansfield. The Conference was gratified to know of the good things with reference to these noble institutions.

Visitors present at the Conference were: Rev. C. E. Carter, Rev. J. C. Bennett, Dr. R. H. Wynn, Rev. W. W. Drake, Prof. R. E. Bodcau, Mr. R. O. Randle of Monroe, and Mr. Edgar Allen, of the Bernice charge. The Conference was particularly pleased to have these men present and was glad to hear what they had to say.

There were eighteen preachers-in-charge present at the session of the Conference. There were three who were absent throughout the whole of the session having been detained at home on account of causes that could not be overcome. There were thirty-three lay members regularly reported in attendance. There was one local preacher reported as present.

The following brethren were elected members of the Licensing Committee: W. H. Florian, C. E. Purcell, W. E. Allen and J. G. Snelling. E. T. McClendon, P. A. Abels, W. M. Spinks and C. H. Henry were elected delegates to the Annual Conference. T. W. Neal and J. P. Dring were elected as alternates.

The reports of the preachers were hopeful. Some had had meetings that had been of great help to the communities where these had been held. Many others were planning their meetings. Some were kept away because of meetings that were in progress and could not be arranged otherwise. The reports of the preachers generally seemed to be hopeful with reference to the financial affairs of the Church in the District. Most of them believed that the people were making a fair effort to meet these obligations.

The Conference regretted to find that Brother Walton, our obliging host, had been sick so much of the year, but were glad to note his great improvement and wish him well on the road to recovery. We found the people of Winnfield kindly and hospitable and enjoyed our stay in their midst.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT NOTES.

By Rev. Elmer C. Guin.

The great Culpepper revival conducted by J. B. Holland of the Y. M. C. A. with the cooperation of all the Protestant Churches of Meridian, came to a close last Sunday with the evening service. The preaching was done by General Evangelist Burke Culpepper, the singing by Prof. Harold R. Coffin of Chicago, and the extension work by George Tucker, a railroad switchman of Jackson, Tenn. There were more than 300 professions of conversion and reclamation. Brother Culpepper is a power in the pulpit. The audiences that faced him night after night in the "big tent" are said to have been the largest that ever assembled to hear preaching in the city of Meridian. The spiritual life of all the churches is quickened as a result of this meeting, and we feel that the best fruit of the meeting is yet to be gathered.

Brother C. M. Martin, superannuate, is enjoying good health, though still unable to get about without the aid of crutches. He is in his place every Sunday at the morning services, and his faithfulness is an inspiration to us all.

Quite a number of the preachers from our district attended the Divinity School, among them our beloved presiding elder. All report the best program they ever listened to at this great institution, which has become famous for its talented speakers.

The second number of the Meridian District Bulletin will be out within the next few days.

Brother Thompson was with Brother Abbey last week in a meeting, and reports a satisfactory campaign.

Brother Ben Sutherland is in Louisiana this week preaching three times a day at a camp meeting within the bounds of the charge of his father-in-law, Rev. Geo. D. Anders.

We have had quite a bit of interesting discussion among the Methodist preachers lately as to which one of us is the most handsome. As might have been foreseen, the honors were easily carried off by Brother Wiley Ferguson, pastor at Fifth Street.

It is thought by most of us that Brother H. E. Watkins will be able to resume his new Church propaganda now that all of his time is not taken up with the vast issues that have to do with various phases of the Sunday school work of the State.

A FINE RURAL CHURCH.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have this week assisted in a revival at Bay Hill Church, on the Bunkie charge, where Rev. J. M. Alford is pastor. Up through the services Thursday night there were 30 accessions to the Church, most all of them on profession of faith. The congregations were good at both the day and night services, and a good interest was manifested from the start. This is all but an ideal country church. The church membership is in a large degree spiritual; there is a splendid Sunday school with a thoroughly organized Wesley Bible class; and, strange to say, they have only an afternoon preaching hour. Some of the choicest spirits of the land compose this loyal little band. They are giving to the world the highest type of Christian citizenship. All forms of worldliness and lawlessness find it extremely unhealthy in that community. The pastor enjoys the confidence of his people; his salary is paid by the month, and every indication points to a great future for the church.

Fraternally,
J. A. ALFORD.

NOTICE.

The annual camp meeting at Poplaw Campground will begin Aug. 11, 1917, and continue one week. We are to have Revs. J. S. Purcell and W. N. Thomas to assist us, and cordially invite all the preachers of the district. There will be transportation from McComb and Summit for all preachers who will come to aid us during the camp meeting. Address J. H. Felder, Summit, Miss., for any further information.

The hotel and refreshment stand will be in charge of Mr. H. E. Reeves, whose address is McComb, Miss., Rt. 1.

The public is invited to attend these services. Christians of all denominations are asked to be with us, to work and pray for the salvation of souls.

Signed: J. H. Felder, President; J. T. Leggett, Presiding Elder; J. C. Ellis, Pastor; T. G. Felder, Secretary.

MARTIN LUTHER AND THE PROTESTANT REFORMATION.

The celebration by Protestant Christianity of the four-hundredth anniversary of the Reformation, which is now under way, is eminently fitting, and it is much to be regretted that the awful war now raging over more than half the globe will prevent a general commemoration of that mighty movement which has so profoundly influenced the history of the world. The land of Luther, having largely lost the apostolic faith which he rediscovered and gave to the nations groping in darkness, is chiefly responsible for the present unhappy situation, and, being the main contenders in the terrific struggle that is now shaking the earth, the German people are in no position to join in doing honor to the greatest man that ever came up from among them. But Martin Luther belongs to no one country—the service which he rendered has reached out to all mankind, and he is the hero of the whole of Protestant Christendom. Therefore, it is to be hoped that in so far as is possible every congregation connected with the Protestant Evangelical Churches in the United States will arrange to have exercises that are appropriate to this interesting occasion. It was on October 31, 1517, that the peasant monk, who had been so wonderfully led into the light as to God's unchanging truth, posted his ninety-five theses on the door of the church at Wittenburg, thus heralding the dawning of a new day for the misled millions of the human race; and we would respectfully suggest that on the Sabbath nearest to the anniversary of this historic date each of our pastors preach a sermon on Luther and his remarkable work. This is a noble theme—one that should kindle the imagination and fire the heart—and, if rightly handled, it may be made the means of inspiring our people with a higher appreciation of the value of an untrammeled liberty of conscience and of a pure Christianity.

It would be well-nigh impossible to exaggerate the importance of the Protestant Reformation. From it came the forces that have done most to speed the march of human progress, and all that is best in modern civilization is a part of its rich fruitage. Fisher, the Church historian, says: "Protestantism as a religious system had two main principles, viz: the exclusive authority of the Bible as a rule of faith, as opposed to the normative authority of the pope or the Church—a principle that involves the right of private judgment; and the doctrine of justification by faith alone, in contradistinction to salvation by works or human merit. Protestantism claimed for the individual a direct access to the blessings of the Gospel, without the mediatorial intervention of the Church or priesthood. In opposition to the doctrine of a particular priesthood, it asserted the universal priesthood of Christian believers." He who would measure the influence of the Reformation must measure the effect among men for the past four hundred years of the open Bible and of the glorious truth, that by faith human spirits may be freed from the dominion of sin and live in conscious touch with the risen Christ.

Like most men who have wrought enduringly in human affairs, Martin Luther seems to have been specially prepared by Providence for the great work which lay before him. As was the case with most of those who have been outstanding figures in the building of the Kingdom, he was blessed in his early years with excellent religious training, his father and mother being devout and faithful Christians, who had him baptized the next day after he was born. Touching upon this point, Rev. Lovick Pierce Winter, in his admirable life of the great reformer, says: "And these days of youthful danger to his moral character were not marred by youthful excesses and dissipations. Even his worst enemies never charged him during his lifetime with dissolute habits. Men whose youth was marred by gross sins have in after life rendered mighty service in the rescue of the fallen, sometimes outstripping in their zeal the activity of men of chaster lives; but when the Lord hath need of a great apostle, a great reformer, a great revivalist, or a great religious pioneer, he has chosen a Paul, a Luther, a Wesley, or a Francis Asbury—men of clean youth, who never knew the debasing effects of drunkenness and debauchery. Great sinners have found a place for repentance and great usefulness in the saving of other great sinners; but sin has never been good training for great service in the Church."

Like Wesley, Luther had the helpful discipline of poverty during his school days; and, like Moses, Paul, and most of the other "chosen vessels" of the Lord for the achievement of arduous tasks, he had superior educational advantages, being privileged to study at the famous University at Erfurt, and subsequently becoming an instructor of note in the University at Wittenburg. He was, furthermore, a prodigious toiler who did not spare himself in laboring for the Master. Besides being a diligent teacher and preacher, he did an immense amount of literary work, spending much of his time for a quarter of a century in the translation of the Bible, which he went over again and again—even studying Hebrew that he might be able to render the Old Testament into German. He was proficient in Greek, and, of course, being a monk, he was familiar with the Latin language. One says of him, "Few men of the age had read so much; fewer still knew so much; and none were more generous in dispensing knowledge." He loved the common people and ever carried their interests on his heart. He gave them the Scriptures in a way that they could grasp their meaning; he provided hymns for them to sing, and it was his delight to minister to them from the pulpit.

"The governing principle of his life was to stand for whatever he believed to be true." No nobler exhibition of physical and moral courage can be found in human history, profane or sacred, than which he manifested before the Diet of Worms. He there rose to the most majestic proportions and achieved a triumph that will grow brighter to the end of time. He died with a profession of faith on his lips, and for four centuries has quietly slept in the churchyard at Wittenburg; but the work that he was instrumental in starting has widened and increased with the passing decades. The place that he holds in human thought is vastly larger than that of any pope that ever reigned in the Vatican, and in his career has been splendidly illustrated the correctness of our Lord's teaching, that service is the way to the highest and most lasting greatness.

ROMAN CATHOLICS ALERT AND ACTIVE.

Though it is the oldest religious denomination, the Roman Catholic Church is yet vigorous and aggressive. She is quick to see an opportunity and is usually swift to seize it and make the most of it. An illustration of this may be noted in the steps that she has so promptly taken to conserve and promote what she conceives to be her interests in connection with America's part in the great European war. Already she has secured from the United States Government a promise that 36 per cent of the chaplains to be appointed for the military forces now being organized shall be Catholics, and a campaign has been launched, under the direction of the Knights of Columbus, to raise $1,000,000 "to be used in erecting recreation camps at the sixteen concentration places selected for the training of troops, and possibly at the regular army expansion camps, and of supplying and supporting priests where the chaplains are not of the Catholic faith, both in this country and in Europe."

We have no patience with much of the teaching and many of the practices of the Romish Church, and the low standards of conduct that she sets up for her people are to us a constant source of mortification and regret; but we think that in the concern that she is evincing for what she apprehends to be the moral and religious welfare of her communicants who are going to war she is setting an example that other religious denominations would do well to imitate.

The Protestant Churches will be given the other 64 per cent of the chaplains to be named, the selection in each case to be approved by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. We do not at this time care to express our views as to the wisdom of this arrangement, since it is already in operation and a discussion of it could now do no good.

A work corresponding to that which the Knights of Columbus will undertake to do for the soldiers in behalf of the Catholic Church will be done by the Young Men's Christian Association, which is Protestant, and which has shown great efficiency in this kind of service. We are fortunate in having such an organization to meet this imperative demand in the present great crisis.

However, there will still be left much that the various religious denominations can do in the way of looking after the moral and spiritual welfare of the soldier boys in the various circumstances incident to the war, and we hope that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will measure fully up to her obligations and opportunities in this respect.

FLOWERS FOR THE LIVING AND DEAD.

Rose Terbune Milliken.

Flowers for the dead we bring—
Roses with sweet perfume
Pansies for thoughts, and lilies pure
We scatter o'er the tomb
Wherein our dearest lies at rest
And we cover with our tears.
The blossoms fair which tell of love
Kept 'mid the passing years.

But for the living friends
Whom for a merry season—
What shall we bring to them?
Flowers to make them glad?
Let us bring flowers of love,
If kindly thought and deed
Let us bring smiles and tender words—
These are the flowers they need.

Scatter them all the way
Water them with our tears
Of loving, tender sympathy
Then 'mid the coming years
We shall have no regrets
For the good we might have done
As flowers for the dead we bring,
When these dear friends are gone.

—Lon A. Hamm.

THE TRUTH THAT SAVES.

There are faiths and faiths, each with their appropriate objects and results. But there is only one which brings to you, as a present matter the gift of God which is eternal life, through Jesus Christ your Lord.

SATAN AGREEABLE.

The devil does not object to modern worldliness provided it is a monster with horns and hoof and fiery breath. Christ maintained him as "the prince of the world." He is thus the prince of all that homes itself in agreeable sensuous, material, worldliness.

SPECIAL PROVIDENCE.

It is the fault of the present day to think and to act as if man could do everything, and to forget God's special providence. Hence that impatience which dismembers the religious world and prevents that depth of piety which is the result of sober, calm reflection, and which shows itself in living calmly, and unostentatiously not what seems to be attended with the greatest results but simply the duty at hand indeed to do.—Dean Hook.

POWER TO DRAW MEN.

None the universal excitement which John produced. He did not come out of the desert with his message. If men would hear it, they must go to him. And they went. Wherever a religious teacher has John's qualities, unalterable conviction, conscious superiority to considerations of ease and comfort, a fresh vision of the unseen, and a message from God, the crowds will go out to see him. The demand for righteous living as the only test of religious emotion is needed in this generation as much as it ever was.—Maclaren.

LONG PLANS FOR ETERNITY.

If a young man were heir to the throne of England, would he not be foolish if he spent all his time learning how to play tennis? Yet we who are the heirs to all eternity spend our time in interests that are transient. Character is the only thing that we can take into eternity—character and memory. Our plans are inadequate for eternity only as they concern character and memory. It is easy to live for the day and forget to-morrow—the endless to-morrow. Earthly pleasures and tasks are engrossing, but it is the height of folly to be engrossed by them. The practical man is he alone who arranges his life so that it will count the most for eternity.—Amos R. Wells.

HOW TO INCREASE THE EFFICIENCY OF THE COUNTRY CHURCH.

By Rev. Charles P. Anderson, A.M., Ph.D., D.D., Professor of Philosophy and English Bible, Southern University, Greensboro, Alabama. This article was awarded the first prize in a contest conducted by the Managers of the Seashore Divinity School.

The importance of the country church is appreciated among the Methodists more than the people of any other of the large denominations except the Baptists. These two churches especially have had a truly evangelical insight and evangelistic fervor which caused them to feel the value of men and women as human beings. They have been less biased by superficial and merely conventional considerations than have other leading denominations. If Methodism is the last to order of vehicles a "horseless" vehicle it was also under free grace the first to see a potential unity if not united of the heavenly kingdom. There is another purely empirical reason. The country people have been necessary to make large numbers in thorough organization a population, and in spreading a pervading public opinion. Country people, being found so much more freely responsive than urban, have appeared more available for accomplishment. Evangelizing agents of greatest fervor have always regarded unsophisticated people as more religious than those with the aberrations of conscious culture. They think of the country as the place where the people are unspoiled by tomes and the wonders of learning. Learning and confidence have often guaranteed the heart against religious interest and response. In the past the population of the country has been more free from these aberrations and conceits than in cities. Religious workers have thought them more easy of access and responsive to the truth. The churches mentioned, Methodists and Baptists, have especially felt that the success of the country church was essential to their success as denominations.

While this high estimate of the importance of the country church has prevailed in some denominations, there have developed social and economic conditions which have threatened the vigor and power of the country church, and in some cases its very existence. All at once in the first decade of the twentieth century the American people realized that they were no longer a distinctly country people. We had been so largely so, that it came as a surprise when we found that we had become in such an extent a town and city people. When Washington was inaugurated the first President of the United States, Philadelphia, the largest city in the continent in a whole hemisphere, contained a population of only 42,000, about the same as the largest of Mississippi's cities. There were three other port cities which had a population above ten thousand souls—New York with 33,000, Boston with 18,000, and Baltimore with 13,000. Other than ports in the Atlantic there was no city of ten thousand. Only 5 per cent of the people of the Union lived in cities of eight thousand and upward, while probably twice so large a percentage might have been called city rather than country people.

But in marking the change in the first day of this new century almost exactly half of the population of the United States, including much recently just passing from pioneer conditions of life settlement, lived in municipalities, with all the inducements and political conditions to differentiate them from country people. The rate of relative increase has been even greater since that time. It is no doubt a fair estimate which puts the actual country population at 35 per cent of the whole, and that would normally or possibly come under the influence of the country church at a still lower figure. Within two decades of the present time the problem of the country church was the problem of nearly or quite half of the population. Now it appears to be the problem of much less than a fourth of them. In considerable sections of the country there is no country church for many miles in a single area, because cities and villages are sufficiently near to one another that people living within the territory are at any point within reach of a church.

But here we in ascertaining these facts practically removed the whole problem, or made it of no importance? We have merely found instead that it is a problem for certain sections only. But in those sections it is just as great a problem as it ever was, with certain features of added complexity and difficulty as well as importance. In the South where our interest and work lie we know that there are many country churches and large areas where only the country church has ministered to the spiritual needs of the people. Without country churches the people are essentially churchless. In the West the same thing is equally true, and will be accentuated as the filling up of the country shall both swell the cities and spread large areas of agricultural country people.

The influence which will complicate the question comes from influences of the city over the country. It means in an important connection of the city over the life and spirit of town and country. There will be more cities and larger ones. In matter what the country may become. Newspapers and more evangelical literature will offer as more the voice of the city and its spirit, assuming the tone of authority as it speaks. The country will be partly urban will e'er be more than ever. These circumstances cannot be overlooked in their effect upon people and the church in the country.

There is a prominent circumstance touching the country and great importance. It is the tendency being made upon the country and its people for their recruits. Before the special inquiries of the World's Fair report of the present war it was already noted that population is increasingly native and intensive, production is increasing in terms possible to increase. This we see that there must be increase in intensive production of a variety of those things which the rural mind wants for its support. This is a large-city mode information to rural mind. That the country will be firms and dairy it just as it is the farm is not to be, it patronage is to present time, to in the not distant future the real to the farm and the country will be the best powerful to be spoken service to mankind. This penalty the market would be.

It is pointed out that for ten years the number of men in the United States has steadily increased, while in that time the number of people has increased in more than 20 per cent. From the census of 1900 to that of 1910, agricultural production was increased not 10 per cent, population more than half as great in increase as that of the people who must be provided by the product. In other words we find that with increased more than 7 per cent, wheat but 4 per cent, while in dairy products less than 1 per cent. In the same time increased facilities for transportation and marketing made the rural industry from these have more trouble in being had.

These things will bring the country and especially greater permanent importance in economic, social and civil life. In the centers to be attracted from these lines produce more people will become country people. Country dwellers will have more leisure more getting than at present, and communities will become less isolated. Good facilities for travel as good roads and motor vehicles will operate in country life will to promote this and to retain it. People will be more willing to live in the country because they can travel from home with more ease and freedom. But they will feel less local responsibility and identification with the community because they will be easily away for work if desired. Associations and pastorates they prefer and are not so truly local or influence thereby dear. The church must like a preacher than ordinary grain to hold and minister to people who are to live from sunday to sunday.

Country people have always manifested greater to the town life in number of the removal from country to town, it is as yet the seeking other economic and economic opportunities. It has been thought and said that many city ministers would not accept the pastorate but for these transitional centers. The have turned the weight of interest a very big country material in the less busy country church. There have been found valuable for volunteer personality, vital in religious public opinion, and money.

In the new order of things the country church will be more and more the center of the general church life. But it is not in the present state due to keep pace with the change and progress of conditions and opportunities. The the country church is under great pressure and very little, almost without life is the point aimed at from all quarters. This is the source from which the suppression of such a impression as the words. A vital conception of rural church should have two parts. They put a responsibility upon the church of here in the nation, and especially upon those denominations that have been most identified with the work of the church in the country.

In order to make the country church more efficient there must be special attention given to the instruction and enrichment of pastors of country churches. While all other interests of the country people and all other features of their life are affected more with a new order of efficiency and progress the rural pastor holds respect and more force if he is an intelligent man. It is abnormal with the few and the people ever are not to be distinguished from the rest in wisdom and morals. There are communities in these United States where it is a reproach the ministers of the community life have attained several hundred per cent, and where the people feel the power of a spirit of progress in connection with their work. Their neighbors there other ministers have. But the church in their eyes is the same thing it was when they lived in log huts, rode in ox wagons, and worked in shifts on the broad fireplace of a slave-built chimney. In those days a poorly educated and inexperienced preacher proclaimed a plain message of atonement for sin and hope of heaven. He was more acquainted with this world and the other than they, and he could therefore impart some inspiration to them of both. Now they have the same sort of preacher, except that he is not young nor inexperienced, since the support is a little better. He is not now so well acquainted with this world as his people, has not youth with its inspirations and is not able to make his knowledge of the other world inspire the people when he is so far from being able to do so in matters of this world. They find nothing to quicken the mental life, and do not discern a spiritual life. They are apathetic as to this one thing which seems to them the deadest thing they ever encounter.

The remedy must be found in the equipment and instruction of the man who is to be the pastor of all such churches in the country. It is at once suggested by these things to some minds that the country preacher should be a specialist, and should be equipped as one. But such a suggestion must be dismissed as impracticable, because preachers as a rule would not consent to be specialists of this kind. They start in the country, but they also want to get into town as rapidly as possible. They are longing to be of the utmost use to country churches while they are in the pastorate of such. But they would deplore the prospect of continuing in such a pastorate all their lives or even most of them. They feel an unwillingness to continue in the country similar to that which has all these years been taking many prosperous members of country churches out of the country. The preacher has no property interests to hold him as many of the country people have, and his outside stimulations are often much greater.

Now, if it is not practicable to use specialists in providing pastors of country churches, we must seek a definite way to get men properly trained and equipped. In a general way, the needs of the ministry, when once they are realized by the Church, are met by giving the requisite training to all candidates alike. Such is the general character of theological education. That part of the ministry which lacks systematic professional training in the schools is nevertheless trained, in part at least. We consider two special means of this training. One means is the practice which it has been necessary for him to see kept up by those who were his pastors before he entered the ministry. The other is the training given by older to younger ministers and that derived from the literature which they are advised or constrained to read. Most men who are ever pastors of country churches are trained for the work in the work, as are our other ministers in the majority. The creation of a longing, interest, or appreciation for anything in the mind of the ministry, is the beginning of a process of equipment more or less adequate. When the rank and file is aroused on any subject, there will be agitation which will disseminate ideas of method. In the same way they will rise to the achievement of the efficiency of the country church, if we sufficiently realize the need.

The ministry as a whole must grasp, then, the essential features of this country church problem. If all are equipped, then the men who must deal with the actual work will be equipped. There must be developed in the Church a sympathy with rural life, just as at present there is growing a deep interest in the rural school or the new agriculture. Elsewhere the country is coming into its own. Let the Church take its part in the new appreciation of the country. This is growing in some aspects out of the felt need of the race for a fuller food supply and out of the educator's realization that the rural school holds a large part of the possibility of intelligence of the masses. Let the Churches develop such a general interest in virile and active church nuclei.

A few of the matters of training for country preachers may be suggested. They should no doubt learn, both for urban and rural churches, that the key to efficiency in future must be found in making the church more a real center for the life of its people. It is the fundamental and essential service of the church to the souls of men to bring them to regeneration, and then to cultivate them in the spiritual life. But this is most successfully done, not by narrowly ignoring every other interest of the life, but by organizing and articulating every other interest which can possibly be so associated with the prime one. There are those yet among us who are seriously afraid of this truth, because they think it looks to the substitution of social service for the Cross. But it is a broader vision of the matter to see that it is showing men the power of the Cross through social service. This is being more generally discerned. It was in that way that a country preacher like Amos in the eighth pre-Christian century revived the genuine interest of country people in religious concerns. One needs but to read the Book of Amos intelligently to see that this is so.

The preacher who treats the recreations of his people as generally evil, while the whole world is buzzing with educational discussion recognizing play and its creative quality, will find it hard to make his ministry a permeating influence. While educators are finding new secrets of the worth of recreation and appreciating play as a creative activity of mind, the ministry must have an open mind to the cheering things in the life of the people. The church need not become a purveyor of mere pleasure. But it can in recognition of the need of recreation make provisions which shall uplift diversions and bring them into subordination to the essential life which the church is trying to cultivate. The country church ought to give effective encouragement and aid to the greatest economic effort of the country, which is farming. It should be looked to as a center from which inspirational and instructive suggestion should emanate and affect all questions of the economic good. It should find ways of being the center of intellectual inspiration. It has been the inspirer of education in the past and it should seek again to be. It should not reluctantly follow the school which has advanced in method and versatility, but become recognized again as its inspiration. Let the Church in all these things cease to seem afraid of progress. Some men cannot do these things well till they grow accustomed. They have ideas of what is sacred which they must never disregard, and which they cannot correct suddenly. But they may see that these efforts can be made without violence to the greatest sacredness of the task of the Church. These are brief and hasty suggestions of a line of training and equipment which would make a more effective ministry for any church in city or country. Development, assimilation, adjustment, are necessary.

II. It is also necessary that the pastor have capacity for and development in leadership. It is so in city or country, but his leadership is more probable in the country. Young and inexperienced preachers so often overlook the need of leadership. They piously think that their work is to deliver a message and pray. It would be a great calamity to any man's ministry if he should cease to think this, but he should not leave all the motor energy to be imparted from above. He should also think that he is to lead his people into activity and service of a noble order, and thus deliver as effective a message as by formal discourse. Development in leadership is difficult, and there are two special reasons. In many cases one does not know how. Recognizing the need, to practice it is the best way. In many cases the effort to develop leadership makes one bossy or apparently egotistical. If it is awkward or tactless, it may be very repulsive. Comprehending the greatness of the work and consecrating one's self till all is forgotten in the worthy end, will transform. Let it not be sought for the sake of self.

III. Among the factors of efficiency in the country church cannot be omitted the development of leadership and loyalty in the congregation. Though the pastor is the first link of responsibility, he cannot do his work effectively without developing and using others. The activity of the people is the means by which they are developed in character. It is what one does that makes him to be something. One is what one does. The essential desire for the country church is that its people shall become a certain thing in themselves. It is the transformation of the people into something which they were not, which is to mark and measure the efficiency of the country church. Achieving certain material results, doing tasks or paying money, will be but an index. The really important thing is what they have become. In order that this may be worthy of sanctified desire, they must be led into activities and keep up activities all the time. To this end local and internal leadership must supplement and join with the over-leadership of the pastor. To find and train such leaders, will require on the part of the pastor both a discernment of and skill in influencing persons.

Effective local leadership depends upon loyalty. If a leader is found and his activities enlisted, it will be naturally necessary that in the particular task of the congregation the others shall cooperate with him. This is loyalty. No one can do a work for the common good apart from the others. He cannot hold off from the effort which aims at the accomplishment of the common desire. Together, loyalty and leadership will make effective organization. But without them, the wisest planning and most perfectly conceived aims of pastoral leadership will come to nought.

This leadership may be happily developed in its simplest and most primary elements by finding a suitable person for each most important part of the work. Let him be quietly assisted if need be, till he and others recognize his sphere and capacity. So he will come to be a part of a definite organization, and others will fall into place with him. It will be found helpful to organize groups of training for some kinds of service. The inauguration of teacher-training has been an example. It has by no means produced trained Sunday school teachers everywhere. But it has helped many to realize that certain tasks require certain gifts and certain ways of acting. They see, too, that ignorance is an obstacle to service. It has shown them that one must learn for efficiency in religious service as elsewhere.

Loyalty must come from love of the organizing interest, and hence its origin must be in moral and religious training and motive. But loyalty will be promoted by drilling in co-operation in community work. If people do certain things together, where each one has his part and place, one in step with another, there is developed a spirit of co-operation and team work. It is easy and even natural for us to assume that, in religious work, every one will be readily and loyally willing. But we find in experience with human nature, that this is not safe to count on. One must be trained to fall in with the step of his crowd. Individualism is not the essential spirit of the Christian, but we actually find that many a Christian is yet an individualist. He has not realized his proper loyalty. His spirit is to be developed through activity till he becomes what we want him to be, a loyal member of a brotherhood, one identified with the whole enterprise.

IV. The efficiency of the country church is undoubtedly retarded at the present time by certain property conditions. If efficiency is to be restored and advancement made, these conditions are to have as vigorous treatment as the other conditions which seem more worthy of the efforts of the ministry, because they are moral and spiritual in nature. Property in the vicinity of the church is often owned by absentee landlords. Those who occupy often feel their tenure very temporary. Such members do not contribute to church support and especially to building and improvement as they would if they owned property and occupied it in the church community. The land owner who lives elsewhere and has church relations and obligations which he usually considers more pretentious and important, cannot usually be interested to any extent in this little country church. In the denominational machinery, church extension movements usually somewhat provide at this point. But the need is not fully met by them, and they, like charity, tend to weaken the recipients.

The weakness in support and equipment also often results from the sharp divisions of the people in denominational sections. There are churches of the principal denominations, and often there are sporadic congregations of the petty denominations which have no real part in the general religious life of the people, and can only get congregations in remote country places. This division of the people often multiplies churches to the serious weakening of the work of any one of them. The mistaken zeal of evangelists and pastors is too often the cause of this condition. If the country preacher and the authorities under whom he works would learn that it is better to have efficient congregations of other Churches saving the people and enriching their lives, than to have a decadent church of their own faith and order merely holding a few names on the orthodox roster, it would tend to the glory of God.

Inadequate buildings will be a cause of inefficiency for a long time to come, and doubtless always in the country community. But it is not impossible to greatly improve these conditions. The Sunday school seems to have pointed the way to improvement. Churches are learning to build to adequately provide for the Sunday school. Country churches have not generally been persuaded up to this time. Their leaders are often heard to say, "We do not need that; that will do for town churches, but we cannot afford it." Country or town, it should be seen, that one cannot do the best without the best. Facilities and proper room are needed in the country as much as in town. People are prone to think that in the country they must get along without them, though they are needed in town. This is because they have learned in their homes to get along without a great many things which they would have in town, where facilities are supposed to be multiplied. The provision of these facilities is imperative. What has been conceived and partly done for the Sunday school must be operated in other departments of the church as needed. This will provide the material side of the work of making the church the center of intellectual and social development, discussed above in connection with the training of the preacher. The traditional room "for church" must be part, but not all, of the house.

V. It would seem to many a grave omission not to discuss in a paragraph or two the necessity of education to the efficiency of the country church. This has always been seen. But it is now plainly the case in nearly all States in this country that the public school is a leader in enterprise and the spirit of progress. Though the church ought to lead, educational thought is now definitely in advance. Schools of pedagogy and professional training, though still probably not adequate, have aroused the public mind to the necessity of a forward movement for the efficient teacher and school for every child. This will soon remove most of the difficulties of ignorance, but it detracts much from the prestige once held by the church in these country communities. There is yet good work to be done in inspiring and broadening education; the church should address itself to the task. It will win credit to itself as well as the good it will objectively accomplish.

VI. A feature which cannot fail to commend itself as a very important aid to the country church, is the general improvement of the standard of country life. This is a material and worldly good with great possibilities for spiritual we could reasonably expect it to be. Three fine Children's Day services have been held, and $14.31 has been sent to the Treasurer of the Sunday School Board. Something over $100 has been raised on the Conference collections. All this is not because I have any extra tact for doing things—the credit belongs to the people whom I serve. We have effected some improvements on churches and have also made quite an improvement on the parsonage—yet there remains much that ought to be done.

As I have said, I am not so popular with my people as to make it a hard job for any good man to succeed me; but it is due my good people to say that they have been kind to me in all things.

Buena Vista, Miss. W. R. WILLIAMS.

AS THINGS USED TO BE.

By the late Albert Taylor Bledsoe, LL. D.

The extraordinary success of Methodism in the United States has been variously accounted for; and it has been asserted with truth, as we think, that its success is mainly owing to the fact that it is Methodism, God's truth, God's method for evangelizing the world, or the nearest approach to it that has yet been made. It may be that it has lost much of its primitive efficiency, and is declining in vital force. On this there is a wide difference of opinion, among its friends as well as among its foes. * * * On this point we express no opinion here, but we affirm that, in view of all the glorious facts of her history, the Methodist Church may trace her success mainly to the truth that her doctrines, discipline, and institutions are in harmony with the oracles of God. * * *

Another reason may he found in the adaptation of an itinerant ministry to thinly populated agricultular communities. The Methodist itinerant ministry, with its efficient aid from local preachers, exhorters, class-leaders, and stewards, is admirably adapted to regions in which the necessary arrangements for settled congregations, and the support of pastors cannot be made. Itinerating evangelists, who devote all their time and talents to the work of the ministry, making no stipulations about their 'salaries,' but living on the voluntary contributions of the people to whom they minister, will seldom, if ever, fail in such communities to do a greater work than is accomplished by settled pastors. And further, in numerous places, the itinerant minister finds no competition from other denominations. With the field entirely to himself, he reaps a harvest which, under other circumstances would be impossible. The itineracy, too, as it was managed in the heroic age of Methodism, was at much less expense than it has been since. Mr. Foote tells us, as we have seen, of one Presbyterian minister who was a "bachelor for Christ's sake"; but Dr. Bennett mentions a Conference of eighty-three preachers of whom only eleven were married. It is well known that the Virginia Conference was for some time spoken as "the old bachelor Conference." When the itinerant preachers married they almost invariably "located;" and many amusing stories are in circulation about the dismay of Asbury, the old bachelor Bishop, when, one after another, some of his best men were taken away from him by ladies, who had a passion for taking care of Methodist preachers.

Another reason for the success of Methodism may be found in her camp-meeting and protracted meeting system. And these meetings, it must be observed, could only be held in the United States, or in communities of a similar character. It seems almost incredible to English people, that American Methodists would leave their comfortable homes and go into a forest, sometimes a hundred miles from home, to spend a week or a fortnight in religious exercises, and earnest efforts to get sinners converted to God. But such meetings were held annually in many places for many years, and they were attended with most glorious results. It was at one of these meetings, held in Putnam County, Georgia, that the Rev. Dr. Capers, of South Carolina, delivered an exhortation, the effects of which will never be forgotten. "In his address," says Dr. Wightman, "he rose to the highest mood of impassioned feeling. He seemed to drive the chariot of the earthquake, his steeds the storm-clouds. The world of woe, at his bidding, uncovered its horrors, and its despair-riven victims, incarnated, so to speak, passed in awful procession before the audience, crying, Woe! woe! woe! The very heavens seems to send back, in reverberating crashes, these terrific woes. The effect was awful beyond description. One gentleman was put into a state of derangement. Judge Shorter, who was present, declared to a friend some days after that the 'woes' with which Dr. Capers' address had closed had been ringing in his ears ever since, and that he heard them day and night, asleep or awake. At the invitation of Dr. Capers, the mighty crowd, as one man, dropped on the ground, and the voice of weeping and intercession smote the heavens. It was supposed that not less than a thousand persons were convicted of sin as a result of the meeting, and a revival of religion ensued which seemed to sweep everything before it."

These meetings were, it is true, sometimes perverted into mere meetings for social enjoyment, in the name of religion, and attended with some evil results; but what is there in which multitudes engage that has not been thus perverted? And if we were to cease to use all the means for the advancement of the Kingdom of God which have been thus made an occasion of evil, the ministry of the Gospel, the Sunday school, the printing press, and all other human instrumentalities would have to be abandoned.

Again, we may, without presumption, claim for the fathers of Methodism an unusually large portion of the spirit of prayer; and it is a trite saying that "prayer moves the hand that moves the world." When that saintly man, John Fletcher, of Madley, had been detained from a company of young ladies until they were tired of waiting for him, he apologized by saying that he had met a poor woman who talked to him so sweetly about Jesus that he could not tear himself away from her before. One of the ladies exclaimed: "I'll be hanged if our tutor is not going to turn Methodist." "A Methodist," exclaimed Fletcher; "Pray, what is a Methodist?" "I do not know," responded the lady; "but I believe they are a people who are always praying." "Take me to them," said Fletcher, "for they are a people for whom I have long been looking." This people he soon found, and became one of their most distinguished and successful workers, setting an example of holy living before them which has seldom been equaled and never surpassed.

It was owing, to a large extent, to the high estimate which the pioneers of Methodism set upon faithful, perserveing, prevailing prayer, that the early Methodists were enabled, by the grace of God, to accomplish what they did in the great work of spreading Christianity over the United States. It has been said by some one, whose name we cannot at present remember, that, for the first eighteen years of its existence in this country, the only pecuniary aid it received from England was fifty pounds; it had not among its lay preachers a single man of profound learning, nor extraordinary mental accomplishments. It was encountered and interrupted by the storms of a revolutionary war, and by hostilities from ferocious savages and half-civilized men, and yet it prospered until it became the prevailing religion of the land. It has made its conquests among all classes of people. The Indian in his wigwam, the Negro in his cabin, and all classes of white people, from the poorest of the poor to the highest in the land, have been made to bow before the Cross, to study the Wesleyan theology, to sing the Wesleyan hymns, and to rejoice in the knowledge of sins forgiven. Those who, in all this, will not acknowledge the hand of God in answer to prayer, would not be persuaded, though one should rise from the dead.

"The mental faculties cannot do the work that belongs to the spiritual, and, therefore, we cannot think our way into faith."

SOME UNIFICATION ECHOES.

From the St. Louis Christian Advocate.

We fully believe that a carefully arranged reorganization of Methodism, sufficiently flexible to meet any future contingencies and fully respecting the essential rights, and, as far as possible, the inherent prejudices of all concerned, would be for the glory of God and the great good of humanity. But we as fully believe that a hasty and ill-advised union, to be followed by misunderstandings and recriminations, would be harmful and is altogether undesirable.

As already stated, more than once, we—both Churches, North and South, and our brethren of the Methodist Protestant Church—have done well in the past, and to doubt that, separately, we shall continue to succeed is to doubt ourselves and our God. No order of Christianity in all the world and in all time has made a better showing than Methodism, and our Southern Church is not behind any branch of the vine in that regard. We have done well—we shall, under God, continue to do well. The movement in question is a great one—too great to be accomplished, or even considered in haste. And it may be best, even if some are disappointed, that the matter be delayed, even for another quadrennium.

From the Raleigh Christian Advocate.

The Commission on Unification has sent its second official message to the Church. We are carrying it on another page of this issue. There are seven points reported on which tentative agreements have been reached. Nothing is said to indicate what these agreements are, and we can therefore determine nothing as to whether these agreements will be satisfactory to the Churches involved. It is further stated that these agreements may be changed before the Commission itself is ready to report its findings to the Church. The next meeting of the Commission will be held at Savannah, Ga., on January 23, 1918. It seems that the status of the Negro in the reorganized Church was not reached at the recent sitting of the Commission; and the subject that has been distracting the Church more than any other one feature of it has yet to be dealt with. "The mills of the gods grind slowly."

MISS HELEN LEE RICHARDSON DEAD.

A cablegram was received last week by Colonel Frank L. Richardson, an attorney at law in this city, announcing the death of his sister, Miss Helen Lee Richardson, Principal of the McTyeire School at Shanghai, China. Miss Helen went to China from St. Louis in the year 1890. She was a rarely gifted woman, beautiful in character, broad and catholic in her sympathies, and strong and independent in her convictions. Her death is a great loss to our missionary force in China. The particulars of her death I have not heard, except that she succumbed to an attack of tonsilitis. She was the sister of Senator Caffery's wife, and also of Mrs. Dan Bissel, of Bellefontaine, near St. Louis. Her father, Mr. Frank Richardson, was formerly a planter on Bayou Teche, near Jeanerette, La., and a man of God, filled with the Spirit. After the Civil War he made his home near St. Louis, and it was from this home that his devoted daughters, Helen and Mary, went to China as missionaries. Miss Mary, a sweet and gentle soul, did not long survive after her advent in China, and Miss Helen has now joined her girlhood companion in the City of God.

Lives like these, literally given to the self-sacrificing work of bringing the heathen to the knowledge of Jesus Christ, are the most eloquent exponents of real Christian discipleship. These young ladies, cultured and highly educated, with every social advantage might have lived as the average women do; but, animated by the highest Christian ideals, and impelled by self-abandoned love for Christ, they left home and native land, and lived and died for the redemption of China. In that distant land their graves will witness to their undying devotion to God and those for whom Christ died.

The Great Battle

NOTES.

Nobody seems inclined to appeal to the patriotism of the liquor forces of the country. Everywhere and all the time they show that they are concerned only for their own selfish interests.

Accordlng to report, the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal, which has perhaps fought prohlbition harder than any other paper in the South, has announced that hereafter it will not carry liquor advertisements. This shows the way the wind is blowing in the fight to redeem the Nation from the curse of the rum traffic.

Rev. A. W. Turner, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Louisiana, commented as follows upon the defeat of the Upton Bill in the State Legislature: "The Stewart telegram from the War Department came after the liquor defenders had defeated the Upton Bill, but it shows clearly that the backers of the Upton Bill were in line with the War Department's conception of modern warfare. Had the Upton Bill been aimed at ticks to defend the average long horn yearling, it would have passed, and properly so; but why so much interest in the long horn and so little in our soldiers?"

At this time (July 27) the papers have reported that the United States Senate will vote on the prohibition amendment to the Federal Constitution on Wednesday, August 1. The resolution to be passed upon provides that: "The manufacture, sale, or transportation of intoxicating liquors, withln, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from, the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof, for beverage purposes, are hereby prohibited. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation." It will require a two-thirds vote of each House of Congress to pass this measure, after which it will need to be ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the States. The bill carries a proviso requiring the States to act within six years if the amendment is submitted to them.

WHY THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE ACCEDED TO THE PRESIDENT'S REQUEST.

By P, A. Baker, General Superintendent.

On last Thursday, June 28, the Legislative Committee of the Anti-Saloon League of America, which was in session with the National Executive Committee of the League in Washington, was summoned to the office of United States Senator Martin of Virginia, the Democratic floor leader of the Senate. On arrival at his office we were informed that the President had just sent a messenger to him to ascertain, in view of a prolonged threatened fillsbuster by the representatives of the liquor lnterests in the Senate, if we would not consent to strike from the food administration legislation, then pending in the Senate, beer and wine, as he was very anxious that this legislation should speedily be adopted. The appeal was made in the name of patriotism.

We asked if the appeal had been made to the other side and were informed that it was no use, as Senators like Penrose of Pennsylvania and his type declared they would fiilbuster all summer before it should pass unless beer and wine were exempted. Knowing as we did that that traffic always puts personal gain above patriotism, we informed the Senator that if the President would put his request in writing, thus assuming the responsibility, we would give the matter careful consideration. This was done.

The liquor interests, finding themselves thoroughly whipped by fair means, resorted to the despicable filibuster in the time of the nation's peril and forced the President to act as life preserver for the treasonable traffic in order to secure imperative legislation for the protection of the foodstuffs of the country. The League may feel congratulated that, knowing the character of the liquor traffickers, he appealed to the temperance people on the lofty plane of patriotism in order that he might secure speedily this emergency legislation.

After taking counsel with a number of our friends in both branches of Congress, we were thoroughly convinced that the wise, patriotic thing to do was to accede to the President's request. It will be observed, however, that he has only made that request concerning this one measure and that the way is open to secure the results either by direct legislation or in connection with other army measures, and the battle will be pressed to the very gates by the most strategic aud forceful methods that can be employed.

GOVERNOR BROUGH'S APPEAL.

Though it seems to have had little effect upon those to whom it was sent, the following communlcation from Governor Brough, of Arkansas, to Governor Pleasant, of Louisiana, is well worth a careful reading:

"As Chief Executive of Arkansas, on behalf of the fathers and mothers of the 6000 Arkansas troops belongiug to our national guard, under the command of Gen. Lloyd England, I most respectively request you to exert your official and personal influence to secure a reconsideration of the measure which would abolish the sale of liquor within 10 miles of Alexandria, one of the training camps for the national guard.

"Our boys have been reared in a State where for many years they have not had access to liquor, and the citizens of our State very keenly protest against their being placed for training in an environment where there are wide open saloons. I have no desire to interfere with the internal affairs of our great Sister State, and I speak only because of solicitude for the 6000 Arkansas boys whom we will soon turn over to you. I firmly believe that the city of Alexandria would better measure up to the requirements of the Secretary of War and of the general commanding the southeastern department lf that beautiful city should free herself from the liquor traffic and other contaminating evils, at least during the continuance of the training camp.

"Will you kindly present this message to both Houses of the General Assembly of your State? I send this in the most fraternal and cordial spirit and with best wishes and hearty congratulations to our Sister State."

THE MYSTIC SCALES.

By Rev. J. H. Jowett, D. D.

"By Him actions are weighed."—1 Samuel 2:3.

The ordinary human inclination is to measure things and not to weigh them. We are the victims of bulk and size. We are impressed by the spectacular. We are fascinated by the glare of the big stage. And therefore we love to use the lineal measure rather than to estimate the weights of things. But God weighs everything. There are many sensational things which arrest the public eye, but which weigh little or nothing when placed in the scale of the Lord. And there are many seemingly insignificant things which, when God weighs them, are heavy with imperishable gold. Here and there, in the Word of God, we are privileged to see Him weighing the actions of His children.

"Thou didst well in that it was in thine heart." Here is the Lord weighing an inner desire. David yearns to build a temple, and the yearning is not to be realized. But the gracious Lord puts the longing into His scales, and it is found to have the weight of a perfected act. God does not wait for material creations, and then measure the value of our life by visible results. Our hungers are the vital part of our character, and a discerning judgment will estimate their force and intensity. "Blessed are they that hunger!" God weighs the inner things, the yearnings, the prayings, and the dreams. We measure only finished accomplishments. We revel in the dimensions of the temple which is built. God weighs the desire for a temple that was never built, and in His gracious judgment it has all the solidity of a temple made with hands. The man or the woman who longs to be a missionary, but whose yearnings cannot be realized, is counted as a missionary in the eyes of the Lord, and the will to do is reckoued as the deed done. "Thou didst well in that it was in thine heart."

Here are rich men ostentatiously dropping their offerings into the temple treasury. How the temple officials rejoiced in the sensational gifts! How they sounded the praises abroad! And there came a poor widow, and she quietly left her offering for the Lord. Judged by measure it was next to nothing; when put into the scales of the Lord it outweighed all the other offerings put together. On a subscription list it would never have been noticed. Nay, it would never have been published at all, but it shone radiantly in the Lamb's book of life. The widow's service had in it something of Calvary, and the poor contributor was a blood-relation of the Lord. God weighs everything, and love's sacrifice is the heaviest thing in the world. —British Weekly.

HIS MERCIES FAILETH NEVER.

The thing that lasts in the universe is His kindness, which continues from everlasting to everlasting. What a revelation of God! O dear friends, if only our hearts would open to the full acceptance of that thought, sorrow and care and anxiety, and every other form of trouble, would fade away and we should be at rest. The infinite, undying, imperishable love of God is mine. Older than tho mountains, deeper than their roots, wider than the heavens, and stronger than all my sin, ls the love that grasps me and keeps me and will not let me go; and lavishes its tenderness upon me, and beseeches me, and pleads with me, and woos me, and rebukes me, and corrects me when I need it, and sent his Son to die for me.—Alexander Maclaren.

CONSCIENCE.

Donald A. Fraser.

Of earth did God make man,
Hence his desires
Are earthy; but God's plan
High thought requires.

And so He placed within Each bosom's shrine,
To warn our souls of sin,
A voice divine.

And man should listen, for
In tones of fire
This holy monitor
Bids man aspire.

And he who hearkens well
Grows more like God;
Who strives this voice to quell,
Becomes a clod.

ANY IN HEAVEN, TOO?

Little Mary was sitting with her Uncle George one afternoon. Her uncle had told her to keep quiet, as he had some accounts to go over; so Mary busied herself with a picture book. For an hour all was still, then Mary heard her uncle say: "There! I have quite a nice little sum laid up against a time of need."

"What are you talking about, Uncle George?" asked Mary.

"About my treasures, little girl, that I have laid up."

"Up in heaven?" asked Mary, who had heard her father that morning read about laying up treasures in heaven.

"Oh, no, Mary! My treasures are all on earth, some in banks and some in other places," answered Uncle George.

"But haven't you any in heaven, too?" asked Mary.

"Well, I don't believe I have," said Uncle George, thoughtfully. "But run away to your mother now, for I am going out."

Uncle George went out and was gone a good while; but all the time he was thinking that, after all, perhaps he was not so well off if he had no treasures laid up in heaven to be ready for him when he left this world and his money behind him. He was so impressed with the thought that he wisely determined to lay up treasures in heaven. He did so. Little Mary never knew until years afterward that it was her childish question that started Uncle George on a generous, active, Christian life.—Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate.

HAS MESSAGE FOR ALL BOYS.

"I wish I could send a message to every boy in the world of a sad and strange coincidence that happened to me when I was a boy," exclaimed a young man the other day.

"One hot, sultry July afternoon—the hottest day we had that summer—I had just turned our street corner when I met my father.

"'I wish you would deliver this package for me, Joe,' he said rather weakly, as I remembered afterward. Now I was only thirteen years old and had been out playing in the hot sun all morning and was all in when I met my father after playing a ten-inning game with our side the losers. My first impulse was to refuse, but one glance at his kind, gentle face stopped me. 'Surely I will go, father,' I said pleasantly.

"'Thank you, son,' was the answer. 'I was going myself, but I don't feel very well to-day and I thought you would not refuse, as you have always been a good boy to me, Joe.'

"I walked away thinking father did not care much about his only son, or he would not send me on this jaunt (about one mile and a half), on such a hot day. But somehow the words, 'I thought you would not refuse,' and 'You have always been a good boy to me, Joe,' seemed to ring in my ears and before I reached the end of my journey I was whistling a merry tune.

"Returning home, I saw our doctor's auto and a crowd of people at our door. One of my aunts hurried to meet me with tears rolling down her cheeks. 'Your father fell dead just as he reached the stoop,' she said.

"I found out later that the last words my father spoke were, 'You have always been a good boy to me, Joe.'"—Christian Intelligencer.

A DOG THAT RINGS A FOG BELL.

Off on the coast of Alaska, on a small, rock island, is a little station. A fog bell is connected with the light station, and when there is a dense fog the bell is used to warn vessels of the danger of coming too near the coast.

The light-keeper has a large shepherd dog, named Carlos. This dog has been trained to toll the fog bell when the weather is bad. So well trained is Carlos, that, when the fog comes, he will rush to the bell and begin to tug at the rope without waiting for his master. Carlos often takes his turn at the bell during the night, when the keeper is busy looking after his light.

"I do not see how I could get along without Carlos," the keeper declared. "I am all alone, and have no other assitant; but I can always rely on my dog. He knows his duty, and faithfully performs it, whether he is told to do so or not."—Apples of Gold.

GOD CARES.

Winnie had laid away her largest, rosiest apple to give to a sick girl. "What do you do that for?" asked Johnnie.

"Because I want to please God, and he likes for me to be kind to sick people."

"Do you think God cares about such little things? "said Johnnie. "Isn't he too busy taking care of big things?"

Winnie pointed to mamma, who was just then lifting the baby from the crib. "Do you think that mamma is so busy with the big folks that she forgets the baby? Of course not; she thinks of the baby first, because he is so little that he needs her most. Don't you think God knows how to love as well as mothers?"—Unidentified.

TROUBLESOME MEMBERS.

Sometimes it is hard to decide which is the greater trial, the Church member who will not do anything at all or the one who is forever pressing some incidental or subordinate activity as if it were the only thing for which the organized churches exist. There are many people who seem not to belong to the Church but to the Sabbath school or to the missionary society. There are others who have but little use for the Church except to promote the work of temperance, or who think of the League as the center around which everything revolves. The Church is more than any of these, its subsidiary forms of activity. And its main business is to bring human souls into subjection to a divine Lord.—The Christian Advocate.

A KINDLY REMONSTRANCE.

It might seem to a few of our readers unpatriotic to object to the popular desecration of the Lord's Day, especially when the proceeds of baseball games, athletic contests and sacred concerts are devoted to such a worthy cause as the Red Cross. We all remember the plea of the highwayman for the clemency of the court, because he always gave a part of the spoils to the orphans in the community cursed with his depredations. "The end justifies the means" is not an adage to be quoted in Protestant circles in this Reformation year. Our Committees on Ways and Means should not adopt mean ways of furthering their object. "In God we trust" is on our coin and His aid we invoke to win our cause. "Let not your good be evil spoken of."—Christian Intelligencer.

The answer to prayer may be, as it was to Paul, not the removal of the thorn, but, instead, a growing insight into its meaning and value.—J. F. Clarke.

Secular News

Mr. Sigmond Saxe of New York City has promised to give $1000 Liberty Bond to the first American aviator who will drop bombs on the city of Berlin.

It has been announced that because of war condition the Mardi Gras will be dispensed with in New Orleans next February. These festivities are said to have been started in the Crescent City in 1857, and to have been intermitted only during the period of the Civil War.

The glass bowl, from which the 10,500 capsules were drawn in the Capitol at Washington on July 20 to determine the order of calling the men registered on June 5 into the national military service, will be added to the collection of historic relics kept at Independence Hall, Philadelphia.

Though there has not been a case of the bubonic plague in New Orleans since September 8, 1915, the work of making the city safe from this dreaded malady continues to go on. Since the campaign against it was started 1,555,649 rats have been killed, and 115,770 buildings have been made rat proof.

The following dispatch from Copenhagen appeared in th secular press a few days ago: "The takers of the census in the occupied districts in Russian-Poland, according to a Berlin report, found a woman 119 years old. Church records attest her age. She was fourteen years of age when Napoleon's 'grand army' marched into Russia."

According to the press dispatches, the Russian woman's battalion, raised by the twice-wounded girl officer, Vera Butchkareff, has lately been in action in battle, and gave a good account of itself. "The Command of Death" is the designation of this battalion. Most of the recruits are from the higher educational academies or secondary schools. Some married women were accepted, but none who had children. Most of them are between the ages of 18 and 25 years and are of good physique. They carry the cavalry carbine, which is five pounds lighter than the regular army rifle.

The extra session of the Louisiana Legislature has adjourned. Referring to its work, the Times-Picayune says: "The Farm Loan Bank Bill, the need for which was given as the reason for assembling the Legislature, was adopted, and all the war and defense measures necessary to put Louisiana in full co-operation with the United States and other States in the conduct of the great war into which we have entered are now on the statute books." So far as our knowledge of its proceedings extend, we concur in this commendation of the State's legislators, except that we think that the Upton Bill designed to safeguard the moral welfare of the soldiers quartered at Alexandria should have been passed.

"A man who is willing to begin his work in a small way shall be led into a large one."

Editorial

SOME UNION PROPAGANDISTS.

The Southern Churchman (Episcopalian) in an editorial speaks in terms of high appreciation of two publications maintained to promote Church union: The constructive Quarterly, a Protestant Episcopal periodical, and The Christian Union Quarterly, edited by Dr. Peter Ainslie, a minister of the Disciples (Campbellite) Church. The Churchman thus refers to the purpose that Dr. Ainslie is said to have in view: "He strongly holds that a Church divided is a Church in error, and that this error attaches to every member thereof who is willing to have it so; that the first step toward unity is to induce Christians to overcome the VICE OF DENOMINATIONALISM and really to desire it, and that interdenominational co-operation and federation of Churches, however desirable as paving the way, is not Church or even Christian unity, and cannot be substituted for it."

The spectacle of these two most "sectv" of the sects thus walking arm in arm and waving aloft union banners is a most remarkable one. But if either of them has offered to promote it by surrendering any of its most prized characteristics, we haven't heard of it. We would respectfully suggest that the most effective way for these Churches to promote this precious cause would be to come together themselves, thus preaching by deed as well as word. A Campbellite minister conducting services in a gown and drawling out, "Ah-men!" or a priest of "the true Church" "highsting" a baptismal tune on the bank of a creek and dipping converts in its muddy water, would be worth going some distance to see.

But the Campbellites and Episcopalians are not alone in holding the view that "denominationalism" needs to be wiped out. Bishop Hendrix, the real leader of the extreme unionists of Southern Methodism, in an address at the famous "Working Conference on Union" at Evanston, Illinois, in February, 1916, said: "If we deem that the work of the Lord's Church can best be done under the Episcopal, or Presbyterian, or Independent form of government, why not reduce to these three forms of polity the countless numerous subdivisions that adhere to these forms until the various united bodies may merge themselves into a common Church with what each can contribute of its own life and government?"

And Dr. Edgar Blake, of the Northern Methodist Church, who seems to be leading the circuitous procession toward (?) Methodist union, declared in his latest deliverance: "If the Methodists can get together, the Baptists can get together, and the Presbyterians, and every other divided family can be and should be united again. (How the Doctor knows this, he does not tell us.—Ed. Ad.) And if the Methodists and Presbyterians and Baptists can unite among themselves, they all can unite, and ultimately will unite."

Why this one Church will keep pure and get along so beautifully, when the one Church that existed before "denominationalism" was born failed to do so, none of these one-Church brethren has yet had time to explain. But obviously they are sincerely convinced that something urgently needs to be done to rid the world of the evil of having religious denominations. Why, Dr. W. F. Tillett, who once was a Methodist theological instructor, but who has "evoluted" into a Dean of a "School of Religion," in a recent extended article in Dr. Peter Ainslie's Quarterly, solemnly asseverated that the existence of religious denominations on this side of the Atlantic had contributed appreciably to the bringing on of the European war. Nor is he entirely alone in this view, for, in an address at Hattiesburg, Miss., some two years ago, Dr. E. Y. Mullins, the well known Baptist minister, also a theological professor, affirmed that one of the potent causes of the present awful conflict was infant baptism. This would seem to place him pretty much in accord with Dean Tillett, since, from his standpoint, the splitting off of sects from the "true Church" (the Baptist Church) made infant Baptism possible.

We should like to hear more from these theological luminaries on this subject, for if "denominationalism" is really the cause of the present world catastrophe, it ought most assuredly to be wiped out immediately—by governmental edict, if necessary. But, of course, we want the proof of this—not merely anybody's ipse dixit. If in maintaining separate Churches through the centuries (following the lead of Luther, Calvin, and Wesley), we have been "wandering in the wilderness and playing the fool," and thus paving the way for the upsetting of civilization, it is high time that we were coming to our senses and getting together. And while we are going in this direction, why not go all the way back to the fold of the mother Roman Catholic Church? Indeed, some of the most pronounced of the union propagandists have already flung up toward the sky a banner with such a hope inscribed upon it. Truly, some strange things are happening in these strange times. (All the Italics used in this editorial are ours.)

THE KIND OF CHRISTIANS NEEDED.

The world has not changed nearly so much as many imagine in its bearing toward those who have experienced the deep spiritual truths of Christianity and who live a holy life before men, faithfully witnessing for Jesus. The outward forms, the superficial aspects, of Christianity are comparatively popular in this day, but there is still a sharp antagonism between its diviner teachings and the notions of unregenerate and unconsecrated men and women. To be wholly the Master's, and stand resolutely for his Gospel in its full significance, with an unwillingness to approve of its accommodation to new notions and desires, is yet to dwell apart from the shifting multitude, with a sense of loneliness, to say nothing of the sneers and reproach that such a course often brings. The following utterance, under the caption, "Alone," the author of which we do not know, but which is being distributed over the country in leaflet form by the Bible House of Los Angeles, California, sets forth the thought that we have in mind so impressively, that we cannot resist the temptation to reproduce it:

It is human to stand with the crowd; it is divine to stand alone. It is man-like to follow the people, to drift with the tide; it is God-like to follow a principle, to stem the tide.

It is natural to compromise conscience and follow the social and religious fashion for the sake of gain or pleasure; it is divine to sacrifice both on the altar of truth and duty.

"No man stood with me, but all men forsook me," wrote the battle-scarred apostle in describing his first appearance before Nero to answer for his life for believing and teaching contrary to the Roman world.

Truth has been out of fashion since man changed his robe of fadeless light for a garment of faded leaves.

Noah built and voyaged alone. His neighbors laughed at his strangeness, and perished in style.

Abraham wandered and worshiped alone. The Sodomites smiled at the simple shepherd, followed the fashion and fed the flames.

Daniel dined and prayed alone. Elijah sacrificed and witnessed alone. Jeremiah prophesied and wept alone. Jesus loved and died alone.

And of the lonely way His disciples should walk He said: "Straight is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."

Of their treatment by the many who walk in the broad way, He said: "If ye were of the world, the world would love its own; but because ye are not of the world, therefore the world hateth you."

The Church in the wilderness praised Abraham and persecuted Moses. The Church of the Kings praised Moses and persecuted the prophets.

The Church of Caiaphas praised the prophets and persecuted Jesus. The Church of the popes praised the Savior and persecuted the saints. And multitudes now, both in the Church and the world, applaud the courage and fortitude of the patriarchs and prophets, the apostles and martyrs, but condemn as stubbornness or foolishness like faithfulness to truth to-day.

Wanted, to-day, men and women, young and old, who will obey their convictions as to truth and duty at the cost of fortune and friends and life itself.

ANNUAL CATALOGUE OF EMORY UNIVERSITY.

This publication, which has just reached our desk, numbers 243 pages, and is brimful of interesting data. It shows that this phenomenal young institution now has four schools in regular operation, viz.: The School of Liberal Arts; the School of Theology; the School of Medicine, and the School of Law. All of these were well attended during the past year, and each of them is making an enviable record. The enrollment in the Theological School was 134; that in the Medical School, 154, and that in the Lamar School of Law (the first session), 27. Another development of this fast-growing educational plant is the Emory University Academy, at Oxford, Ga., a high-class training school, away from the temptations of the city, in which boys may, with safety, be prepared for college or university courses. The School of Liberal Arts, of which we have made no specific mention, is one of the best in the entire South and is commanding a liberal patronage.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has a right to be proud of Emory University, and Chancellor Candler and his coadjutors are to be heartily congratulated upon the fine showing they have made in the administration of the great trust committed to their hands. It is to be hoped that our pastors will secure copies of this splendid catalogue, examine it carefully, and call the attention of their congregations to it. This University is wholly the property of the Church, and it richly deserves its patronage and support. Particularly should we direct young men to its professional schools, in which the facilities are admirable, and the moral surroundings are wholesome and helpful. Information concerning any department of Emory University may be had upon inquiry.

A QUESTION TO PRAY OVER.

Read the article from the great Dr. Bledsoe which we are publishing this week, and note what he says about the extent to which the noble, Scriptural doctrines of Methodism have contributed to her success. Then turn to last week's Advocate and re-read the statement from Dr. Munhall, the able Northern Methodist evangelist, from which we take the following: "Our Southern brethren know what is the character of the new Course of Study, approved by the Board of Bishops of our Church (the Church, North), and that the same un-Methodistic and anti-Biblical teaching that led to their repudiation of Vanderbilt is being promulgated in the Methodist schools of Boston, Middletown, Madison, Syracuse, Delaware, Greencastle, Evanston, Denver, Los Angeles, and elsewhere." And, having noted these two statements, let every true Southern Methodist preacher who has done so, ask himself prayerfully and in the fear of God, whether he is willing to see his Church united with another body, nearly twice as large, that has largely thrown overboard the Wesleyan theology and which is teaching to every preacher that enters its traveling connection the new-fangled stuff just mentioned. Ought there not to be a firm and emphatic insistence that the Church, North, must clean up doctrinally and go back to Methodist paths before union is permitted to take place? Whatever others may think, we do not believe that the plain, faithful preachers of Southern Methodism will stand for wrecking our beloved Church with an alliance that would bring along with it such teaching. They are the men who have chiefly made the Methodism of the South what it is, and it is they who must save it in this perilous hour. And, as we have said, it is our conviction that they may be depended upon to do so.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. C. P. Moss, of Tchula, Miss., continues to have success in his pastorate. He is an effective preacher, and usually accomplishes much for the Master in any field in which he labors.

During the session of the Southern Epworth League Assembly at Lake Junaluska, July 17-22, twelve young men and women volunteered for the ministry and the foreign mission field.

One hundred young preachers were enrolled as students in Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas, during the past session. Of the seventy-two graduates, twenty-four were young preachers.

Rev. James L. Cady, of Clinton, La., says: "Our work is making some progress. We have held two meetings and will begin another on Sunday, July 29. We have observed Children's Day at Clear Creek, the occasion being quite a success."

Rev. H. S. Spragins, the gifted pastor of our First Church in Memphis, is reported to be giving an excellent account of himself in his present great field. There is no choicer man in the Connection than Brother Spragins, whose work in both the pulpit and pastorate is always of a high order.

During the 1917 session of the International Training School (International Sunday School Association), Lake Geneva, Wis., a portrait of the late Dr. H. M. Hamill was unveiled. One of the buildings of the Training School is Hamill Hall, erected as a memorial to our beloved Dr. Hamill.

The work of the Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference, is going forward encouragingly under the leadership of Rev. T. H. Dorsey, the resourceful and tireless presiding elder. Brother Dorsey's associate workers speak in terms of high appreciation of the service which he is rendering.

The State Epworth League Conference, held at Baton Rouge, La., a few days ago, was an occasion of much interest. A number of admirable addresses were delivered, and a goodly sum was pledged for missions. We trust that some one in a position to do so will furnish us a report of this gathering of our young Christian workers.

The Greensboro (N. C.) District Conference adopted a resolution asking the Western North Carolina Conference to memorialize the General Conference of 1918 to double the present lay representation in the Annual Conference and to make the Conference lay leader and the district lay leaders members of the Annual Conference.

The annual meeting of our Sunday School Board was held recently at Junaluska, N. C., practically the full membership of the Board being present. Most encouraging reports of the progress of the Sunday school work of our Church were heard. All of the Divisional Field Secretaries were re-elected for another year's service.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, our capable young pastor at Macon, Miss., has lately been conducting a revival meeting in his church, with Evangelist J. A. Bowen to do the preaching, and Mr. John N. Robinson, of Kentucky, to do the singing. With so efficient a corps of laborers co-operating in these services, we expect to have a good report as to the outcome.

We are carrying in this issue of the Advocate a statement concerning the Faculty of Whitworth College for the next session. This historic institution obviously has an unusually strong corps of instructors in its various departments. Dr. Cooper has high ideals as an educator and is bestirring himself to realize them. Whitworth deserves a generous patronage.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, is forging ahead with his work in a manner which indicates that the excellent record made last year will be duplicated during the year 1917. It would be difficult to find a more diligent worker than Brother Atkinson in this responsible office anywhere in Southern Methodism.

Rev. T. J. O'Neil, the capable President of Port Gibson Female College, and Dr. Ulysses Grant Foote, pastor of the Rayne Memorial Church of New Orleans, were scheduled to deliver addresses at the Crystal Springs (Miss.) Chautauqua on Tuesday of this week. The announced theme of the former was "The Beauty of a Life of Service," and that of the latter "Some of Hugo's People."

Rev. H. B. Watkins, of Meridian, Miss., says: "The Culpepper meeting here, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., which closed on Sunday, July 15, was in every way a success, and made a deep impression on this city. The most conservative ones can say that Burke Culpepper is a great preacher, whose ministry God is greatly blessing. Meridian has been blessed in its revivals, and this last compares splendidly with those of the past."

Rev. V. C. Curtis, the diligent presiding elder of the Greenville (Miss.) District, writes as follows: "The work in these parts is moving on well, so far as I am able to judge. Rev. R. O. Brown will soon be in his new church at Clarksdale, and Rev. T. M. Bradley and his people at Cleveland are forging ahead with their new church enterprise there. Quite a number of good meetings have been held, and other revival campaigns are in prospect."

Through the kindness of our genial Church Extension Secretary, Dr. W. F. McMurry, we have received a new set of Church Extension charts. These charts convey information that all our people should have, and our pastors should see that they are exhibited to the best advantage in our churches. Dr. McMurry misses no opportunity to set forward the great cause which has been so largely committed to his hands. His fidelity is worthy of much praise.

Brother J. G. Parham, of Rolling Fork, Miss., sends us the following note: "Our Sunday School Institute for the Port Gibson District will be held at Fayette, Miss., September 3 and 4, 1917. May I, through the Advocate, urge the pastors, superintendents, teachers, and members of the Sunday schools in the district to be certain to be present on this occasion?" Brother Parham is the President of this institute, and will see that a helpful program is prepared. We trust that the attendance will be large.

We acknowledge ourselves indebted to Rev. H. B. Watkins, pastor of our Central Church of Meridian, Miss., for a list of 14 subscriptions to the Advocate, with a check to correspond, forwarded on July 23. We scarcely need to say that this remittance was refreshingly acceptable to the Publisher at this time when the summer dearth is on, and the state of our exchequer is distressingly low. We trust that other brethren will remember the Advocate in this dull season, when our expenses are still going on and it is hard to make tongue and buckle meet.

Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Superintendent of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, has sent out the following notice: "Saturday, September 29, will be our 'Work Day' for this year, and it will be immediately followed by 'Harvest Day,' Sunday, September 30. This will be a few days earlier than our 'Work Day' of last year; but we trust that it will suit the majority of our churches and Sunday schools, and that it will be the most successful occasion of the kind in the history of our orphanage work in Louisiana. It must needs be, if we are to meet the serious conditions that confront us. Further announcements and appeals will be made later."

Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, together with Mrs. Holmes and the little ones, recently visited relatives in the Mississippi Delta. Dr. W. H. Huntley, our accomplished pastor at Yazoo City, Miss., reports that on his way back home Brother Holmes and his family paid the parsonage there a visit, which was especially appreciated by Mrs. Huntley, who knew Brother Holmes quite well while she was engaged in Sunday school and Epworth League work in connection with our First Church in New Orleans. Referring to his own charge, Dr. Huntley says: "All is moving on well here. We are among a fine people, who are happy over the prospect for the best crop in years."

From a letter from Rev. H. E. Carter, of Magee, Miss., we extract the following: "I have recently closed my third meeting. Brother Bowen, of the North Mississippi Conference, came to us at Magee in May and stayed ten days. The meeting was an excellent one. Brother Bowen's preaching was of a high order. There were a number of conversions and 13 persons united with the Church. Sister Bowen was with Brother Bowen and we shall never forget their visit to our home. It was an inspiration. In the other two meetings that have been held on the work the pastor did the preaching. The services were profitable, much good being accomplished. Up to date, we have received 33 members, 21 of them on profession of faith."

We take the following from the Louisiana Orphanage Visitor, edited by Rev. R. W. Vaughan: "In the recent death of Mr. C. W. Blair, the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage has lost one of its most devoted friends. He always gave it an annual contribution, the amounts ranging from $100 to $2000. For the last few years he had given annually $500. In the early part of the year the Institution was given $6000 on the annuity plan—that is, he turned this amount of money over to our Board, with the stipulation that we were to pay him 8 per cent interest until his death, the whole sum then to come into the ownership of the Orphanage. In addition to the above gift, Mr. Blair made a bequest of $2000 to the Home in his will. That instrument, however, is being contested. In all, he gave to this cause about $12,000, the largest amount ever given by one man."

NOT IN VAIN.

"I have labored in vain," a teacher said,
And her brow was marked with care;
"I have labored in vain." She bowed her head,
And bitter and sad were the tears she shed
In that moment of dark despair.

"I am weary and worn, and my hands are weak,
And my courage is well-nigh gone;
For none give heed to the words I speak,
And in vain for a promise of fruit I seek,
Where the seed of the Word is sown."

And again with a sorrowful heart she wept,
For her spirit with grief was stirred;
Till the night grew dark, and at last she slept,
And a silent calm o'er her spirit crept
And a whisper of "peace" was heard.

And she thought, in her dreams, that the soul took flight
To a blessed and bright abode;
She saw a throne of dazzling light,
And harps were ringing, and robes were white—
Made white in a Savior's blood.

And she saw such a countless throng around,
As she never had seen before;
Their brows with jewels of light were crowned,
And sorrow and sighing no place had found,
For the troubles of time were o'er.

Then a white-robed maiden came forth and said,
"Joy! joy! for thy trials are past!
I am one that thy gentle words have led
In the narrow pathway of life to tread;
I welcome thee home at last!"

And the teacher gazed on the maiden's face;
She had seen that face on earth,
When, with anxious heart, in her wonted place,
She had told her charge of a Savior's grace,
And their need of the second birth.

Then the teacher smiled; and an angel said:
"Go forth to thy work again;
It is not in vain that the seed is spread;
If only one soul to the cross is led,
Thy labor is not in vain."

At last she woke, and her knees she beat
In grateful, child-like prayer;
And she prayed till an answer of peace was sent,
And faith and Hope as a rainbow blent
O'er the clouds of her earthly care.

And she rose in joy, and her eye was bright—
Her sorrow and grief had fled;
And her soul was calm, and her heart was light,
For her hands were strong in her Savior's might,
As forth to her work she sped.

Then rise, fellow-teacher, to labor go!
Wide scatter the precious grain;
Though the fruit may never be seen below,
Be sure that the seed of the Word shall grow.
Toil on in faith, and thou soon shalt know
"Thy labor is not in vain!"

Of all forms of service in the army, it is said that service in the aviation corps is the least dangerous, while that in the medical corps is the most dangerous.

A faded newspaper is said to have been turned up in New Orleans within the past few days which was issued during the Civil War. It is reported to quote a poor grade of flour at $25 a barrel, and to contain a statement that bread was so scarce that a surging mob had surrounded the bakeries, demanding enough to satisfy hunger.

Girls! Use Lemons! Make a Bleaching, Beautifying Cream

The juce of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quarter pint of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold creams. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It naturally should help to soften, freshen, bleach and bring out the roses and beauty of the skin. It is simply marvelous to smoothen rough, red hands.

Freckles

The fairer the skin the more ugly it is when marred by freckles; and they are not necessary at all. As soon as the warm sunshine or the hot winds bring them out, and with the natural embarrasment that every woman feels, get a package of Kintho; this is the easy way to remove them. If Kintho is used at the first sign of the ugly spots, they'll sometimes disappear overnight. Any druggist has or can get Kintho for you. Use Kintho soap too. It's astonishing how it helps keep the freckles away once Kintho has removed them.

BYRON McKINNON, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. McKinnon, of near Pachuta, Miss., was born on January 1, 1900, and died on March 7, 1917. He was 17 years, two months, and six days old. He was born and reared in Jasper County, Mississippi. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life and was a faithful attendant upon its ordinances all of his life, and his pastor always had his attention, and was respected by him in and out of the pulpit. He made it his business to see that his pastor had an invitation to his home. And he was also mindful of his pastor's financial condition, and he paid his quarterage. Byron was a fine student in the High School, acquiring knowledge rapidly, and he was as much interested in literature and history as any young man I ever saw. He was a good boy, and while he had made mistakes, he was ready to acknowledge them and repent, and during his sickness, which lasted for only eleven days, he said to the writer, his pastor, that even under these afflictions (and he suffered a great deal), God was exceedingly good to him. And he said to his father and mother, afterwards, that he believed that God had a better place for him. The remains were laid to rest in the Pleasant Grove Cemetery in the presence of a host of friends and relatives, and it was one of the saddest funerals I have ever attended. I would say to the loved ones, learn hard upon the God of peace and combort. He will not leave, nor forsake you. H. R. McKEE.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Be it Resolved by the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Holcomb, Miss., That we hereby express a deep sense of the loss that our Society has sustained in the death of our beloved President, Mrs. Lida K. Holcomb, who was one of its charter members.

Resolved (2), That we tender to her family our sympathy in their great bereavement.

Resolved (3), That in our sorrow over our dear sister's decease, we feel assured that she is numbered among God's redeemed in the world beyond.

Resolved (4), That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our Society, and that copies of them be sent to the Grenada Sentinel and the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: Mrs. B. F. Smith and Mrs. L. H. Hightower, Committee.

AN APPRECIATION.

Some one has said that "we are not dead when we live in the hearts of our friends." If this be true, then Miss Mary McPherson is not dead, for while she departed this life on June 26, 1917, she still lives in the hearts, not only of her immediate family, but of many itinerant Methodist preachers, who in the days gone by found welcome, comfort, and rest under her hospitable roof, for that house was ever the preacher's home. No nobler spirit ever lived than this true Christian woman. Modest and shrinking, she was yet withal inspiring, and many a drooping heart has been cheered, and many a faith made stronger by coming in contact with her quiet, beautiful life. She and her brother, Dr. J. W. McPherson, have been a great power in the Silvestria Church, and Miss Mary will be sadly missed. All hearts go out in sympathy, love, and prayer for the lonely, bereaved brother. May God keep and bless him, and all the loved ones! And may we all so live that we shall meet the departed one in the great beyond, where trials and parting are over! Her friend.
J. H. MITCHELL.
Indianola, Miss.

MRS SARAH ELIZABETH McGEE.

SARAH ELIZABETH HENRY was born in Perry County, Alabama, on November 17, 1837. She moved with her parents to Lincoln Parish, Louisiana, in 1848. She was married to Abraham Stow, on November 2, 1854. Of this union four children were born—only one surviving, Mrs. J. D. Calhoun. Mr. Stow, in response to his country's call, laid down his life for the cause of the South during the first year of the Civil War. Mrs. Stow was married to Mr. L. E. McGee, on October 3, 1867, to whom one child was born. Mr. McGee died about thirty years ago, and Mrs. McGee made her home with her only surviving child, Mrs. J. D. Calhoun, near Ruston, in the old Douglas community, until the day of her death, on April 10, 1917.

It was the writer's pleasure to have known Sister McGee for about twenty-three years. Among the noble Christian characters that appealed to the admiration of the earlier years of our ministry, none occupied a higher place in our mind or heart than Sister McGee. A devoted member of the Methodist Church from her thirteenth year, consecrated, sympathetic, sane and loyal, she was a pastor's friend, a wise counselor, and a noble helper in his work.

Sister McGee was the personification of that gentle, modest, noble type of Southern womanhood of the Civil War and reconstruction periods, who so richly blessed the South in its days of greatest need and peril. God alone knows how much our generation owes to such noble women, nor can we ever estimate the contribution they made through suffering and sorrow to the South of to-day and the South of the future.

We count it among the rare privileges of life that we knew Sister McGee. She was an inspiration in the struggling days of our early ministry, and a blessing to us in these last days of her noble life. With a heavy heart, we assisted her pastor, Rev. J. G. Snelling, in laying her body to rest in the old Douglas cemetery, among the Pine trees and the picturesque hills, so near the home where she spent the larger part of her earthly life. That she sleeps well, none can doubt who know how well she lived.

She is survived by her daughter, Mrs. J. D. Calhoun, her husband, and their children, Mrs. Agnes Barksdale, Miss Belle and Lane Calhoun, all of whom live in or near Ruston. These loved ones we can but commend to our Heavenly Father who alone can bring them comfort in their sorrow, and compensation in their loss. May God bless them!
ROBERT W. VAUGHAN.

The Cause of Gray Hair.

Hair grows gray by reason of the same cause which produces dwarfed, yellow stalks of corn instead of strong, dark green growthy stalks—lack of nutrition. Hair, like the crops of the field, must be fed, either naturally from the scalp as the stalk of corn is fed from the soil, or artificial hair food may be applied as fertilizer is applied to the soil to enrich it. Unless your hair is supplied with natural oil—the food on which it subsists—you may expect it to cease its flourishing and lose its natural luster, color and beauty. The hair must have food on which to live. Don't neglect it or it will lose its luster, become stiff and coarse and eventually gray. Begin now and prevent the appearance of age by using a natural hair oil, "La Creole." It will keep the hair soft, fluffy and beautiful. Ask your dealer and if he can't supply you send $1.00 to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn., for a trial bottle.

CHURCH NEWS.

Bishop Collins Denny has recently been meeting some engagements in Alabama, a portion of his episcopal district, to the profit and delight of the people.

Notwithstanding the war, the Church of Scotland is said to have increased its gifts to foreign missions 20 per cent, wiping out a debt of $25,000, and beginning the new year with a small balance on the right side of the ledger.

The Baptist Record (Jackson, Miss.) says: "Bids will be opened for the building of the new wing to the Baptist Hospital in Memphis at once. There is a very pressing demand for more room. The work will be pressed to completion."

The British and Foreign Bible Society is stated to have issued during the past year 11,059,617 volumes, the largest number for any year in its history. The total distribution in war areas during the first twenty months of the war was 1,500,000 volumes.

The Gideons of America, lately in session at Chattanooga, Tenn., elected Mr. J. Harris Humphreys, of Huntington, West Va., President of the national organization, to succeed Mr. A. B. T. Moore, of Iowa. The next annual meeting of the order will be held in Denver, Colo.

Galloway College, at Searcy, Ark., recently received a gift of $20,000 toward the endowment of the Chair of English. The Methodists of Arkansas are to be commended for the manner in which they are seeking to equip and strengthen their schools financially. We know of no other State within the bounds of our Church in which our people are more energetic in securing money for educational purposes.

The famous cathedral at Rheims is reported to be in a pitiable plight as a result of being struck by the German artillery fire, great gaping holes in the roof being apparent and the magnificent windows having been shattered and largely destroyed. Some fear is said to be entertained that the great structure may collapse if any additional injury is done to it. Cardinal Lucon, the Archbishop of Rheims, has remained at his post in that city throughout the war, though its population has dwindled from 115,000 to 5000. He is said to be grateful for the service which the Americans have rendered the people of his diocese and to be confident that the Allies will win in the war.

STOP THAT PAIN!

The few misguided people who argue against the relief of pain as a first step in treatment, either have never suffered from any pain themselves or else they do not know what they are talking about.

It is all right to realize that pain may be the danger signal for some more serious complaint and it is well to look deep into the reason for pain, but the first step is to gain as speedy relief as possible in a safe way.

Pain is the greatest ally that disease has. Pain is the artillery, it batters down the nervous defenses of the body so that disease can safely take hold of the body.

But not only does pain do physical harm to the body, but it also does moral harm which may be tremendously far-reaching in its effects.

The nagging effect of pain is such that it will change the disposition of a person to such an extent that they will become a burden to themselves and to everybody else. The person who has normally the sweetest temper may be readily turned into an irritable crank by a succession of unrelieved headaches or pains.

Stop that pain by using Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills according to directions. They are effective, safe and harmless. They can be purchased at any drug store, and the druggist is always willing to return the purchase price if the pills fail to relieve pain. You are the judge yourself. It will cost you nothing to try.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

The annual meeting of the Holly Springs District Missionary Societies was held with the Grenada Auxiliary June 28-29, 1917. The Conference opened at 3 p. m., Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Patton, our District Secretary, of whom we are proud, acting as president.

The first afternoon was given to the young people and Junior rallies, under the leadership of Mesdames Tucker and Brownlee, whose faithful efforts were reflected in the ability and ease of manner of the young people taking part in the well prepared programs.

On Thursday night, our Conference President, Mrs. Conger, under the inspiration of a beautiful vocal solo by Miss Countiss, was at her best in the delivery of her "Message from the Council."

On Friday, excellent reports from each organization represented were heard, and institutes were conducted, which proved to be very profitable because of their being so instructive as to the different departments of the work. The cause of the Co-operative Home in Corinth was presented by Mrs. Floyd, of Holcomb. No doubt the Home will receive benefit from so worthy a presentation.

The subject of Junior Rallies was discussed, and the rally for this district was dispensed with for this year. Water Valley and Holly Springs cordially invited the Conference for next year; but, as it was decided that it was Water Valley's time, the vote was cast in her favor; so Water Valley will be our next place of meeting. Let us hope that Miss Louise Dunstan, our Corresponding Secretary, will favor us with her presence and be willing to be used as a "ready reference," as she was at Grenada.

At the close of the Conference, Mrs. Patton gave a splendid report of the work done in the Holly Springs District, and urged the delegates to have their societies pay especial attention to our slogan for 1917—"A ten per cent increase in members, organizations, and money."

No Auxiliary could have been more hospitable than was the one of Grenada. To use a common expression, "They must have tried themelsves."

On Thursday afternoon, Mrs. Tucker agreeably surprised the Conference with an invitation to a reception at the parsonage, which Mrs. Tucker says, is the best in North Mississippi.

The meeting at Grenada was such a pleasant and profitable one that a big attendance is expected at Water Valley next year. Mrs. E. R. SMOOT, Secretary.

HOW TO REPRESENT CHRIST.

If heaven's joys are in our souls, they will often be on our tongues. If we live with Jesus, men will have knowledge of the fact. If the love of Christ be in our hearts, it cannot long be hid. If the Rose of Sharon be in our bosom, it will fill with its fragrance the atmosphere in which we move. If we are Christ's, men will know the fact by the tones of our voice, the grasp of our hand, the glance of our eye, and the dominant spirit of our entire life. Tell out this blessed experience. Tell it to every one, rich or poor, learned or ignorant. Tell it to all of every nation and in every land. Tell of Christ's wondrous love and tell of your joy in believing in Him.—Southern Churchman.

While misery loves company, the company may be pardoned for packing up and going home.—Anon.

REVIVAL AT NEWTON.

On Wednesday night, July 25, we closed our meeting at Newton, Miss. It began on July 1 with a great sermon preached by Rev. H. M. Ellis, after which he took an offering for the Methodist Hospital located at Memphis, which amounted to $47. Brother Ellis preached Monday night also. The pastor continued the services till Wednesday, when Rev. W. B. Hogg arrived and took charge.

Brother Hogg is an unusually attractive preacher. He makes the strongest attack on sin, not discriminating, that I have ever heard. He shot volley after volley. God honored the message. After the 13th inst. we had to move the congregation out of the church. We arranged seats west of the church for about 500 and soon had to enlarge the seating capacity. The people came and came. From all sides they say it was the largest gathering of people Newton ever saw at religious services.

On Sunday, July 22, Brother Hogg had a funeral service in which a "hatchet," representing the quarrels and heartaches and heart-burns of the community, was buried under flowers. The stewards were called before the altar and cast the first flowers after the pastor, and each one who dropped a flower said he was at peace with all mankind and resolved to stand by the preacher and officials of his church. The officials of the Presbyterian church were asked to do so and took part in the service. It was a most powerful and heart-searching service.

I have never been in a more powerful revival. God wonderfully blessed our church. Men were saved who had been members of the church for years and many were reclaimed. The outstanding feature of the meeting was the wonderfully powerful testimonies of those who professed conversion.

Forty-five were received into the Methodist Church—five by letter and forty on profession of faith. Four on profession of faith and one by letter went to the Baptist Church; and one united with the Presbyterian Church by letter. This by no means indicates the influence of the meeting. The last night of the meeting Brother Hogg took a collection for the Conference claims and raised $500 on the same. Another touching scene was the presentation by the ladies of the church of a purse to Mrs. Hogg, with a note of love and appreciation.

Brother Hogg is a great preacher and a great soul. God honored and used him with us, and we all pray God's blessings upon him.

STOP! CALOMEL IS QUICKSILVER!

It's mercury! Attacks the bones, salivates and makes you sick.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when 50 cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and does not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel to-day and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated to-morrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

Loss of Appetite is commonly gradual; one dish after another is set aside. It is one of the first indications that the system is running down, and there is nothing else so good for it as Hood's Sarsaparilla—the best of all tonics.—Adv.

THE BOY SCOUTS.

The Boy Scouts of America performed a notable service to the country in their campaign for the sale of the Liberty Loan Bonds. Through their efforts more than $25,000,000 of the bonds were sold directly. How many sales were due indirectly to their activity can not be known.

The Boy Scouts worked systematically and thoroughly and with an earnestness that was inspiring. They covered fields that could not have been well covered by other agencies and effected sales that would not have been made without their efforts.

The Scouts have not only proven their patriotism. They have shown their efficiency and their civic value.—U. S. Publicity Bureau.

ABIDING IN CHRIST.

To "abide," then—what is it? It is to give and to take. Both are absolute, both are continuous, calling for daily and hourly renewal. We are entirely Christ's—that is the first step: we have decided ourselves over, body and soul, with every faculty and power, to be His exclusively. And then He is entirely ours, with the wealth of His nature, with the riches of His wisdom and strength and love. We live for Christ; and Christ lives for us. We make the self-renunciation involved in the first. We claim the riches involved in the second. And we do both because Christ lives in us, the hope of glory!—Sunday School Times.

SHUT IN.

In the darkness and seclusion of a shadowed home or an invalid life, the finest Christian character may be developed. The lace makers whose product is the costliest and best do not work in a glaring light. They are put, usually alone, in a darkened room, where the light of a very small window falls upon the pattern and work. They cannot see themselves or their surroundings. They see only the pattern and their effort to reproduce it. So it is with the believer. The providence that shuts one in is God's hand placing his servant where he may do the most perfect work. The pattern is illumined and the worker is obscured. The Lord increases; the worker decreases. The less of self one sees, and the more of Christ, the better it is to him. Transformation into Christ's likeness follows such a state. The conditions which shut in the believer, then, are oftentimes gracious conditions and are not to be deplored.—Presbyterian Journal.

PAY HIM PROMPTLY.

Remember, the high cost of living has struck your pastor's pantry. And in not a few instances his "support" has not been advanced proportionately. Bacon at forty-eight cents a pound will be economical for him, because he won't buy any. A man always made a certain dish a part of every meal; it helped fill the table and no one could eat it.

But whatever is done, do not let the charge get behind in "pastoral support." No charge can humiliate its pastor by making him the object of grocers' duns and not humiliate itself in the long run. The credit of a charge is little better than the credit of its pastor. Moreover, the pastor's children get hungry. They have a right to their necessary food. The good name of a charge depends upon the respect the pastor's family have for it. And it is pretty difficult for the feelings of the children to be in preserves when there are none on the table.

These are days when the village pastor might well own a cow and a little garden and a chicken house. For though times are good, prices are high and the prosperity of the country is often the one thing in which the village pastor does not participate.

Our stewards will be doing wisely and justly, as between man and man, if in the days that are ahead they see to it that the pastor is paid in full at least once a month.—Central Christian Advocate.

GETTING MUCH OUT OF A CHURCH SERVICE.

Some one who did not attend church very often gave as a reason that he could not get much out of a service. Much depends on what he went to church for and upon the spirit in which he went. To get something out of a service one must be willing to put something into it—prayer, praise and thanksgiving. Dr. Jowett puts the matter very pointedly thus: "What is my attitude toward the Church of which I am a member? Is it entirely defined by what I can get out of it, or have I an equal concern as to what I can give to it? You will sometimes hear one man say to another as he leaves public worship: 'I didn't get much out of the service this morning.' Well, here is a very searching test to apply to such a man. What did you contribute to it? When we sit in the house of God, what is our conception of our relationship to the service? Are we merely critics or contributors? How do I regard my functions in the worship? Am I a performer, even though I am sitting in the pew, or am I there only to be entertained?"—Lutheran.

Conditions that are both scrofulous and anemic are very common. Many persons whose faces are "broken out," cheeks are pale, and nerves are weak, suffer from them.

There is an effective, economical remedy in the combination of Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron Pills, one taken before eating, the other after.

In these medicines taken in this way the best substances for the blood and nerves are brought together.

CHEMISTS PERFECT A DE-NAUSEATED CALOMEL TABLET.

Retains All Medical Virtues But Purified From Dangerous and Unpleasant Effects—Now on Sale Under the Name, "Calotabs."

Science has given us smokeless powder, wireless telegraphy, colorless iodine and tasteless quinine—now comes the good news for everybody that the pharmaceutical chemists have at last perfected a nausealess calomel tablet that does all the work of the old-style calomel without the slightest danger, griping, nausea or sickening after-effects. After the most extensive and critical tests, all of which proved eminently successful, the new tablet known as "Calotabs" is now on sale at the drug stores. It presents all of the system-purifying and liver-cleansing qualities of the old-style calomel, but is pleasant to take and entirely safe and delightful in its after-effects.

One tablet on the tongue at bedtime, a swallow of water; no taste, no nausea, no griping. The next morning you are feeling fine, liver clean, appetite splendid. Eat what you please—no danger nor unpleasantness of any kind.

Calotabs are sold only in original and sealed packages, containing twenty doses; price thirty-five cents. Your druggist offers to refund the price as a guarantee that you will be thoroughly delighted with Calotabs.—Adv.

The Composition of Coca-Cola and its Relation to Tea

Prompted by the desire that the public shall be thoroughly informed as to the composition and dietetic character of Coca-Cola, the Company has issued a booklet giving a detailed analysis of its recipe which is as follows:

Water, sterilized by boiling (carbonated); sugar, granulated, first quality; fruit flavoring extracts with caramel; acid flavorings, citric (lemon) and phosphoric; essence of tea—the refreshing principle.

The following analysis, by the late Dr. John W. Mallet, Fellow of the Royal Society and for nearly forty years Professor of Chemistry in the University of Virginia, shows the comparative stimulating or refreshing strength of tea and Coca-Cola, measured in terms of the refreshing principle:

Black tea (hot)	1 cupful (5 fl. oz.)	1.54
Green tea (cold)	1 glassful (8 fl. oz. exclusive of ice)	2.02
Coca-Cola (fountain)	1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.21
Coca-Cola (bottlers)	1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.12

From the above recipe and analysis, which are confirmed by all chemists who have analyzed these beverages, it is apparent that Coca-Cola is a carbonated, fruit-flavored modification of tea of a little more than one-half its stimulating strength.

A copy of the booklet referred to above will be mailed free on request, and The Coca-Cola Company especially invites inquiry from those who are interested in pure food and public health propaganda. Address

Mrs. T. B. COTTRELL,
District Secretary.

Mrs. Cottrell is the new district secretary for this district, and we hope the auxiliaries in her district will rally to her support at this meeting and greatly encourage her by a large representation. She has worked faithfully and planned wisely for a "live" program and if the different auxiliaries will carry out their special feature, it will be a time of much inspiration and gaining of knowledge. Several of the Conference officers will be there—Mrs. Middleton, who will conduct a Young People's program, and Mrs. B. F. Lewis, our Corresponding Secretary, who will speak of "Our Work." The work of the Wesley Houses will be presented, also stewardship, our literature, and several other very pertinent subjects, not forgetting our duty to the Negro.

SOME CHANGES IN APPOINTMENTS.

Because of the fact that the missionaries appointed to Africa are to leave in August, there are some changes in the home appointments. Miss Woolsey was appointed to the Nashville Bethlehem House; Miss Almstead, who served at the Nashville Bethlehem House last year, was moved in order to give place to Miss Woolsey for training in settlement work. The Bethlehem House people are happy over the return of their beloved Miss Almstead. The vacancy at the Wolff Mission, Tampa, caused by the removal of Miss Almstead, is filled by Miss Mary Lee; and the vacancy at the Warioto Settlement, caused by Miss Lee's change, will be filled by Miss Bessie Brand. Mrs. Field, who has been serving as a supply at Biloxi, will remain in the work, at the earnest request of the workers and the people at Biloxi.

SOME CHANGES IN OUR FRENCH WORK.

Those who are interested in the French work in Louisiana will be glad to know that Miss Ella Hooper and Mrs. Laura White are to have charge of the work conducted by the Woman's Missionary Council in the Terrebonne country. Several years ago Miss Hooper taught in the public schools of this "sugar bowl" of the country and really opened the French work for the Council. These women will go to their appointments in September. Plans have not been perfected, but they will establish a small settlement, with a school attached, in the section which is most densely populated. From this center they will radiate their services in the Methodist churches which have already been established in this section, and a more effective work is expected to be accomplished.

MISSIONARIES SAILING IN AUGUST.

The following missionaries, who have been at home on furlough, will return to their fields of labor, sailing on the steamship Empress of Japan on August 16: Miss Annie Belle Williams, Japan; Misses Carrie Una Jackson and Ida Hawkins, Korea. The new missionaries who will go in company with them are Misses Marie Raffo and Sallie Lou McKinnon, China; Misses Mabel Whitehead and Katherine Hatcher, Japan; Miss Grace McCubbins, Korea. Dr. Louise Ingersoll, who is also a member of this party, will go to Soochow, China, to assist in the medical work in our hospital.

A PLEA FOR THE WESLEY HOUSES.

Great stress is laid on the use of money throughout the Scriptures. In Proverbs we have the injunction, "Honor the Lord with thy substance;" and in the New Testament many of our Lord's parables teach lessons concerning its use. We shall be judged not only by what we have given and done, but also by what we have failed to give and do. It is to the latter phase that we wish to call attention.

A little over a year ago we women of the Mississippi Conference Society passed a recommendation that we would raise $100 for the Meridian Wesley House and $200 for the Biloxi Wesley House for three successive years. Last year we fell short of our pledge. Oh, my sisters, how can we face our Lord and Master with such failures upon our hearts? It is our work, but His first; and are we going to fail Him? He is standing with outstretched hands pleading for His work and workers, and we are so indifferent and dilatory about meeting our obligations which we voluntarily took upon ourselves.

These Wesley Houses need the money we have promised and need it NOW. We hang our head in shame as we look upon the figures of the Treasurer's report and see the item, "For Wesley Houses, $11.25"—$10.58 of that amount was specified for Biloxi, leaving the small pittance of sixty-seven cents for Meridian. We are living in strenuous times, but any call of our Government is met with a prompt and liberal response, and rightly so; but do we love our God less? If we are to be judged by our response to His calls, we are forced to answer in the affirmative.

A letter from Mrs. J. R. Whitaker, of Meridian, tells of the immediate need for help for the Wesley House there. She first speaks of the splendid work accomplished during the past eight months and the women associated with her, and that institution could add a great deal more to her statement.

During the year it became necessary to rent a cottage to be used for a Day Nursery, and it was the understanding that one of the organizations of the city would be responsible for the rent. For some reason they failed to meet their pledge, and, with the high cost of living, with which we are all familiar, the Wesley House finds itself in debt. Can we as a band of Christian women let this institution suffer? Let us get busy right now and make some special sacrifice and raise this pledge of $100. If we cannot send all, let us try to send three-fourths of it, and do not wait until the end of the quarter to send it, either. They need it at this very time, and during these hot, enervating days let us do something to cheer the hearts of these workers, as well as the women of the City Mission Board who are standing back of them. Do not add to their burdens by turning indifferently away. Oh, remember you are doing it for Him who gave the most precious and costly gift the world has ever known. Do not grieve His heart, but make some offering worthy of the great love He bestowed upon you.

The Biloxi Wesley House needs its pro rata of the pledge, too. Some very necessary repairs are needed, and, without our aid, cannot be undertaken, thereby crippling the work and retarding much of its progress. Will you not awaken to your responsibilities and shoulder them while it is yet day, for the night cometh when no man can work?

In conclusion, we ask you to ponder prayerfully your blessings, and see if they are not worthy of a thank-offering such as Mary of Bethany poured out upon her Savior.

Renew Your Health At Nature's Fountain

Without the Expense and Loss of Time Necessary for a Visit to the Spring

THE CRISIS

There comes a time in the life of practically every man and woman when their digestive or eliminative organs, or both, fail to respond to drugs prepared by human skill. In fact drugs seem to do them about as much harm as good for their systems rebel against all drugs. These are the cases which physicians call "stubborn" and "chronic" for the reason that they persist in spite of drug treatment. I do not refer to incurable diseases such as cancer and consumption, but to that larger class of functional disorders which we meet every day, where the organs of digestion and elimination are impaired.

For this class of cases our best physicians and our big city specialists send their wealthy patients to the mineral springs where, in the great majority of cases they are permanently restored or decidedly benefited. But what about the poor man who has not the money or the busy man or woman who cannot spare the time to spend several weeks or possibly months at a health resort? Shall circumstances deny them the restoration to health which Nature has provided? Read my answer in the coupon at the bottom of this page.

I have the utmost confidence in the Shivar Mineral Spring Water for to it I owe my Restoration to Health and probably my Life. It has made me tens of thousands of friends in all parts of America and even in foreign countries, whose faces I have never seen. Yet I count them my friends for the Shivar Spring Water has bound them to me by lasting gratitude.

I ask you to read their letters, a few samples of which I publish below for your benefit, and if you find among them any encouragement as to your own health do not hesitate to accept my offer which has no limits or conditions except those shown on the coupon. If you could read the letters that come to me daily, numbering about ten thousand a year, and the vast majority of them similar to those printed below, you would not wonder that I make this offer displaying my absolute confidence in the restorative powers of Shivar Mineral Water.

INDIGESTION

Savannah, Georgia.

I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all its train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had lived on milk, soft eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and, of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered ten gallons of your Mineral Water which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months gained twenty-nine pounds, was strong and perfectly well, and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice, and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantities as possible, for its properties are so happily blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely Nature's remedy.

A. L. R. AVANT, M. D.

La Grange, Ga., Nov. 25, 1914.

I feel it my duty to suffering humanity to make public announcement of the benefits I have derived from Shivar Spring Water. I have been a sufferer for the past twenty-five years from indigestion and dyspepsia. After one week's trial of Shivar Water I commenced to improve, and after drinking it for four weeks I gained fifteen pounds. I feel better and stronger than I have in twenty-five years. I strongly recommend this Water to any one with stomach trouble of any character, and truly believe it will cure ulcer of the stomach. I am writing this voluntarily and trust it will fall in the hands of many who are so unfortunate as to be afflicted with indigestion and nervous dyspepsia.

C. V. TRUITT,
President Unity Cotton Mills.

Johnston, S. C.

I wish to add my testimony to the wonderful curative powers of the Shivar Mineral Water. For a number of years my wife has been a sufferer from indigestion and nervous debility, and her condition had reached such a stage as to baffle the skill of our most eminent physicians. Her extreme nervousness and heart troubles at times were alarming and she had become almost a nervous wreck. The latter part of last May she began using the Shivar Water, which she has continued to this date with most satisfactory results.

Editor Johnston News-Monitor.

DYSPEPSIA

Blaney, S. C.

I have suffered for many years from gastric troubles, stomach puffed and food sour. I have tried many remedies and a good many waters. Some have helped, but none have given me such relief as your Spring Water. I use it and recommend it to my patients.

W. D. GRIGGSBY, M. D.

Baltimore, Md., April 30, 1914.

For many years I suffered with stomach trouble as a direct result of asthma. I consulted the very best specialist in this country, and spent quite a large sum of money in my endeavor to get relief. However, I had about come to the conclusion that my case was hopeless, but by accident I happened to get hold of one of your booklets, and decided to try Shivar Spring Water. After drinking the water for about three weeks I was entirely relieved, and since that time have suffered but little inconvenience from my trouble. I cheerfully recommend the use of your Water to any one that may be suffering from stomach trouble.

OSCAR T. SMITH,
Vice-Pres. Young & Selden Co., Bank Stationers.

RHEUMATISM

Leeds, S. C.

I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will produce a permanent cure. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter.

C. A. CROSBY, M. D.

Fredericksburg, Va.

Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints upon her hands, caused by rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement.

WM. C. CARTER.

I am anxious to get more of the Water. It has done me more good than anything I have ever tried for rheumatism.

MRS. H. C. EDWARDS.

Florence, S. C., Dec. 1, 1911.

I suffered with indigestion and kidney trouble, and a year ago was stricken with acute articular rheumatism; was helpless for months, and since using your Spring Water I am walking without any crutch and improving daily. Indigestion much relieved. I wish I could write Shivar Spring Water in the sky so that the world could become acquainted with it.

MRS. THEO. SUKER.

Warrenton, Va., Nov. 24, 1914.

It is doing my rheumatism so much good. My limbs are beginning to feel like new ones.

MRS. JAMES R. CARTER.

BILIOUSNESS

Greenville, S. C., Feb. 25, 1914.

For over two years, following a nervous breakdown, I have suffered with a liver so torpid that ordinary remedies were absolutely powerless. Under such circumstances, I came to Shivar Spring, and began drinking the Water. Upon advice however, the first night I took a laxative; the second night a milder one. Since then I have taken none at all. The effect of the water has been remarkable—its action on my liver most marked, and my health and spirits greatly improved. I am satisfied that the laxative, followed by the Water, was the proper treatment in my case. My condition is now perfect.

S. A. DERIEUX.

Buena Vista, Va., Oct. 2, 1914.

It is a great pleasure to tell you that your Water has been a great benefit. I may say a great blessing, to me. My wife says it has helped me more than anything else I ever tried. I have been, for thirty years, a sufferer from stomach trouble.

REV. E. H. ROWE,
Co-President Southern Seminary.

LIVER AND KIDNEY

Cheraw, Ga., Aug. 21, 1914.

I feel that it is due you that I should give my testimony, unsolicited, as to the benefits derived from the use of your Shivar Springs Water. I was unable to do my work, and had been under the treatment of physicians for six months for kidney and liver troubles when I decided to try your Spring Water, and now after using it for about thirty days I am able to do my work, feel good, and have gained about twenty pounds. I most heartily recommend its use to all who suffer from disorder of the liver and kidneys.

RENAL AND CYSTIC

Columbia, S. C.

I suffered for eight years with kidney trouble and inflammation of the bladder to the extent that I would have to get up during the night some five or six times. After using this water only a few days, I am entirely relieved and suffer no more effect of the trouble whatever.

Virgilina, Va., March 28, 1914.

Your Water has done me more good than anything I ever tried for bladder trouble.

Wesley, Ga., May 12, 1914.

I had been down with bladder trouble. Couldn't stand on my feet three minutes at a time. In three days after I commenced drinking your Mineral Water my pain was all gone, could walk where I pleased, and felt like a new man.

S. B. D.

High Point, N. C., Oct. 6, 1914.

My wife has had a bad kidney trouble for several years. She has been using the water only about three weeks and it has already made her a new woman. Her color is much improved, her appetite is all that she could wish for, her digestion seems to be perfect. We give Shivar Springs credit for it all.

GALLSTONES

Greenville, S. C.

Shivar Spring Water cured my mother of gallstones, or, I might say, it snatched her from the hospital door, as the doctors had said nothing short of an operation would do her any good. After drinking the Water she was able to get out of bed, and is today stout and healthy. I hope these few lines will be of help to some one suffering as my mother did.

W. J. STRAWN.

Williamston, N. C. Oct. 8, 1914

My doctor said I would have to be operated on for gallstones, but since I have been drinking your water I haven't had to have a doctor.

W. H. EDWARDS.

Columbia, S. C.

My wife was a chronic sufferer from gallstones. She was stricken critically ill, and nothing but morphine seemed to relieve her pain by rendering her unconscious. My physician, who is a good one, seemed to do very little good. Rev. A. J. Foster, pastor of Shandon Baptist Church of Columbia, S. C., advised me to take her immediately to Shivar Springs. On consulting my physician he agreed that it would be best to do so without delay. In about three days after arriving at the Springs she was apparently relieved and had regained her appetite. She has suffered no ill effect of the trouble since. Please publish this for the benefit of sufferers.

Editorial

"O, Jesus Christ, grow thou in me,
And all things else recede;
My heart be daily nearer thee,
From sin be daily freed.
Make this poor self grow less and less,
Be thou my life and aim;
Oh, daily make me, through thy grace,
More worthy of thy name."

* * *

There is a sphere in which tolerance is noble, and a sphere in which it is ignoble.

* * *

Even a good heathen should be truthful and trustworthy. What, then, should be said of a minister of the gospel who is capable of dealing in any kind of duplicity?

* * *

Some one has said: "Nothing is settled until it is settled right." It might be added, "And nothing is settled right until it is settled in harmony with the will of God."

* * *

Intellectual honesty is not less important than other kinds of honesty. For one designedly to resort to sophistry to win his point is very wrong. In interpreting and applying Scripture we should be careful not to misconstrue it and pervert its teaching. The Christian minister cannot be too careful in this regard. The true import of God's Word is too important to be lightly set aside, while a significance of which the inspired writer never dreamed is ascribed to it. There is far too much of this pernicious practice in this day.

* * *

A contemporary strikingly says: "A preacher may be patriotic at the expense of his ministerial integrity and usefulness. Unless the preacher has spiritual illumination and discernment to explain and expound war conditions in their deepest meaning and widest relations, he would better let that subject alone and stick to the old Gospel, lest he fall in a responsibility and advertise his ignorance. * * * To be rash and rank and vehement and tempestuous is not to be patriotic. * * * This is a good time for the preacher to deal with the great fundamental condition of sin, with a view to showing that the sin condition of the world makes war, and all other bad conditions, and that wars will not cease until sin has been uprooted."

* * *

It is not merely CHURCH education, but CHRISTIAN education that the world needs. Our Church schools are in a position to make their instruction and training pronouncedly Christian, and this they should do. They should not secure patronage with the promise (expressed or implied) of a service which they do not really render. A great responsibility rests upon those who are directing the educational institutions of religious denominations. The youth of the Churches are committed to their care when they are most impressible, and they should faithfully endeavor to see that they are developed into young men and women of the highest type in every respect. In the make-up of any man (or woman), one's faith, character, and ideals are the elements that count for most.

WORSE THAN O'KELLEYISM.

The article on another page entitled "An Improper Procedure," from the pen of Judge H. H. White, of Alexandria, La., one of the ablest laymen in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, merits, we think, a careful reading. In our opinion, this utterance is timely, and sets forth a view of the matter discussed which is so sound and just that it can hardly fail to command widespread approval. Though Judge White has conveyed to us no information concerning this movement which does not appear in his published communication, we are moved to make some additional statements concerning it, based upon reliable data which came to us from other sources.

First, we will state that this movement was started in Nashville, Tenn., four of the seven signers of what seems to be the first letter that was sent out (dated March 1, 1917) being members of the West End Methodist Church—the Church that serves Vanderbilt University, though it was affirmed in the letter that no one of these gentlemen was connected with that institution. Subsequently the seat of correspondence was shifted to Chattanooga.

The following, as stated in the communications of its promoters (which we have in hand), are some of the chief aims of this carefully guarded propaganda:

(1) The enlargement of the powers of the laity by increasing their number in the Conferences and making them members of the Cabinet.

(2) To limit the powers of the episcopacy to executive phases of government; to restrict the Bishops to areas and have a committee of preachers and laymen to assign them to their fields of work; to limit their tenure of office, and to do away forever with the unit rule and secret sessions of the episcopacy.

Let us examine briefly these declared purposes. The connecting of the suggestion that the laity should have larger rights and more representation in the Annual Conferences with this sweeping attack upon the episcopacy of our Church, whether designedly so or not, is calculated, we think, to produce a wrong impression. Our Bishops are not standing in the way of having an increased number of laymen in the Conferences, and any intimation to that effect is utterly unwarranted and misleading. At the last session of the North Alabama Conference, when called out on this subject, Bishop Wilson, then the most influential member of the College, though confessing doubt as to the wisdom of having ex-officio lay members of the Annual Conferences, expressed himself as favorable to having an increased number of laymen in them duly elected by the votes of the laity. There has been, and is, no conflict between our Bishops and the lay members of our Church, and any attempt to create such an impression is wholly unjustifiable. No lay brethren should allow themselves to be deceived for one moment by such an insinuation. None believe more fully in their rights or are more anxious to open to them the door to a larger activity in the Church than our chief pastors.

The proposal to have laymen in the Cabinet as counselors is not one which would necessarily affect the powers of the Bishops—it rather concerns the rank and file of the itinerant ministry. Such an arrangement, as we see it, is wholly uncalled for. To be able to give advice concerning the appointments for all the charges in a district would necessitate accurate information, such as could be gained only by traveling over it and coming into direct contact with the people. What layman would have time for this? And how would his expenses and compensation be provided for? The preachment that there is such a vast difference between the clergy and laity that neither class can rightly represent the other in any matter pertaining to Christian work, has no sound basis in fact, and is most hurtful, tending to create a feeling of apartness and distrust which ought not to exist. We know of no reason why a presiding elder may not faithfully and efficiently represent both the preachers and the people in the Cabinet. It can hardly be said that Bishops and presiding elders are not responsive enough to the will of the laity in the assignment of pastors; on the contrary, there has long been a pretty general feeling that they perhaps are too easily influenced by them. Methodists need ever to keep in mind the fact that the itinerancy is based upon a mutual compact between the pastors and the congregations composing the charges. If the people are to be allowed to select their pastors, by every right of justice, the preachers should be permitted to pick their appointments. What then would become of the itinerancy? This is not saying that the churches and pastors should not be counseled with—this is done now in a manner which, in our judgment, is as effective for the accomplishment of this end as would be any other arrangement that could likely be devised. Indeed, we have never seen any other scheme proposed that we thought was anything like as good as the plan that we now have.

The program outlined for the overhauling of our episcopacy is one of the most radical that has been suggested by any disaffected element in the history of American Methodism. Indeed, it is utterly revolutionary in character. To make the duties of Bishops purely executive would be to dispense with them as general superintendents of the Church—thus unmaking the episcopacy that Wesley established, and that Asbury, McKendree, and Soule defended—the episcopacy for which our Church has stood ever since it has had an existence. Likewise, to limit the terms of office of the Bishops, to restrict each of them to a certain area, and to have them to work under the direction of a committee of preachers and laymen, would be to impair seriously, if not to destroy, our connectional episcopal supervision, upon which the great fathers of Methodism laid so much stress. Such an episcopacy would be vastly weaker than even that of the Northern Methodist Church. But this is not yet all. These reconstructionists would do away with "the unit rule" of the College of Bishops and forbid them to have

SINS OF OMISSION.

It isn't the thing you do, dear,
  It's the thing you leave undone,
That gives you a bit of heartache
  At the setting of the sun.
The tender word forgotten,
  The letter you did not write,
The flower you did not send, dear,
  Are your haunting ghosts at night.

The stone you might have lifted
  Out of a brother's way;
The bit of heartsome counsel
  You were hurried too much to say;
The loving touch of the hand, dear,
  The gentle, winning tone,
Which you had no time nor thought for,
  With troubles enough of your own.

These little acts of kindness
  So easily out of mind,
Those chances to be angels
  Which we poor mortals find,
They come in sight and silence,
  Each sad, reproachful wraith,
When hope is faint and flagging,
  And a chill has fallen on faith.

For life is all too short, dear,
  And sorrow is all too great,
To suffer our slow compassion,
  That tardies until too late;
And it isn't the thing you do, dear,
  It's the thing you leave undone,
Which gives you a bit of heartache,
  At the setting of the sun.

HEART IN HEAVEN.

No one ever went to heaven whose heart was not there before.—Robert Smith.

SELFISHNESS IMPEDES.

"On one occasion Rubenstein was playing for a company of musicians, when they began to applaud. 'Friends,' exclaimed the great musician, 'please do not applaud! Your applause distracts my attention from the music to myself, and I can not play.' Do not ministers sometimes think more than they should about self?"

EVIL WITHIN.

All the forces of evil may come upon a soul from without, and fail to shake it. But the smallest evil within, that is loved and desired and continued in, will accomplish what the outside attack has failed in. The only hopeless evil is the evil that we do not hate, nor endeavor to escape from, but allow to remain. We can, if we choose, avoid evil companions; but we have to live with ourselves every day. It is our business, then, to make ourselves the best we can, to elevate our minds, to cast out evil thoughts, to build up our souls. Then we are safe company for ourselves.—Unidentified.

THE POWER OF A CHRIST-FILLED LIFE.

In speaking of the power of true Christian character over a mind filled with prejudice, Sir Henry M. Stanley says: "In 1871, I went to Africa as prejudiced against religion as the worst infidel in London. But when I found a solitary old man there, I asked myself, 'Why does Livingstone stop here? What is it that inspires him? For months after we met, I found myself wondering at him carrying out the words, 'Leave all and follow Me.' But, little by little, seeing his piety, his gentleness, his zeal, his earnestness, and how he went quietly about his business, I was converted by him, although he had not tried to do it."

THE BURNING HEART.

Dr. John Robertson tells of a Scotch village where, years ago, all the hearthfires had gone out. It was before the days of matches. The only way to rekindle the fires was to find some hearth where the fire was yet aglow. Their search was fruitless until at last they found a flaming hearth away up on the hill. One by one they came to this hearth and lighted their peat, put it carefully in the pan, shielding it from the wind, and the fires were soon burning again throughout the community. Are the fires getting low in your heart? Has the chill of worldliness settled down upon you? God has plenty of fire on the hill. Climb up into his presence through the path of surrender, and he will take the live coal from the altar and lay it upon your lips. This is the fullness of the Holy Ghost. This is the passion for souls.—Selected.

DR. LEE'S COMMENCEMENT SERMON.

By Bishop H. C. Morrison.

(This sermon, besides being preached at the Commencement of the Southwestern University, was, if we mistake not, also delivered at the recent Millsaps Commencement. It has lately been published in the Texas and St. Louis Christian Advocates. Its length is such that we do not feel at liberty to reproduce it, but, since many heard it in Mississippi, we are moved to print this timely review of it.—Editor of Advocate.)

Mr. Editor: Will you allow a brotherly review of the sermon by Dr. J. W. Lee, published in your issue of June 21? We have known and loved the Doctor for many years and have esteemed him as one of the strong thinkers of our Church; but this once the Doctor has thought beyond "what is written." And we love him too well to let him remain unmolested in the theological fog into which he has fallen.

We shall speak as if "face to face" with him as a brother; and at the same time use the directness used in the sermon. The sermon, as a whole, is a peerless admixture of truth and error. I will quote and then comment.

"The mystery which has been hid from ages and from generations but now is made manifest to his saints, is this: Christ in you and the hope of glory."

Here the Doctor overlooks the fact that this revelation is made to his saints, and not to all men. And this mistake is carried entirely through the sermon, making what is said of saints and sons of God to apply to all men. He further says:

"The discovery of the Christ within, as the divine half of himself, and the yielding of that divine half, constitutes man's new birth." Again he says, "God is the infinite divine other half of the finite human half of man."

Here he makes Christ the half of every man, and therefore every man is divine. Whereas Christ was never the half, or any other part, of any unregenerate man; and for the simple reason that "all men are conceived and born in sin." Now, if the Doctor is correct, what of the unfortunate men who are turned into hell?" The Master said the way is broad and the gate wide that "leadeth to destruction, and many there be that go in thereat." If Christ be the half of every man, then Christ, in the lost man, is either lost with the other half of the man, or else the lost one gets to hell a half-man. By this logic hell will be filled with half-men, which is an absurdity.

The Doctor illustrates his position by the natural sun. He says, "The light of the sun would mean nothing if the half of the sun were not already in men." Here he makes the eyes, which are only the organs for recognizing and receiving the light of the sun, to be one-half of the sun. Whereas the eyes are no part of the sun whatever. They are only the organs which admit or shut out the sun. Just as the sovereign will in man (that which makes a man a man) is that power by which he admits or rejects the Christ who says, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock. If any man will open the door (surrender that will), I will come in and sup with him and he with me." The capacity in man to admit or reject Christ is no more "Christ in the man" than the eyes are the sun in men. Here the Doctor runs his fancy over his logic. He will have to revise.

Again he says, "The necessity for the new birth, then, does not rest upon an inherent corruption in human nature, or any fact of total depravity. The new birth consists in rising up into a new consciousness." Now, either the Doctor or the Psalmist one is under a mistake. The Psalmist says, "Behold, I was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me." And because of his actual sin he says, "The pains of hell gat hold upon me." Ah! if he had only known how "essentially good" he was, and had risen up to the "higher consciousness;" then had he been saved from all those horrible hell-pains. Think of it!

The Master also said to certain ones, "Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father will ye do." And again, "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?" Now, add to these the antediluvian multitudes and the Sodomites, who were so corrupt that God swept them from the face of the earth. Then add Judas Iscariot, of whom the Master said, "It were better for him had he never been born." Then put into the list all the children of the devil in all the ages, including the German Kaiser and his officers, who sanction the butchery of helpless women and children; cutting off the hands and feet of the little ones while they are yet alive; running bayonets through babies and carrying them aloft on those bayonets as they march; cutting off the breasts of defenseless women, and doing other fiendish deeds sufficient to make hell itself to blush with shame. Yet, according to this sermon by the Doctor, every one of these men were, and are, "half divine"—"Christ being the inner divine half" of every one of them.

Again, the Doctor has found what he calls "The new way of being born again." While the old way said, "You must be born again because you are so bad;" the new way says, "You must be born again because you are so essentially good and don't know yourself."

Then, if I am called to instruct a penitent, to whom the Holy Spirit has revealed his own sins and inherent corruption, and who, loathing himself, is crying for mercy; I must somehow manage to set him out of his delusion. When he cries in his distress and says, "I am a great sinner, and God says my depraved heart is 'deceitful above all things,' 'and out of the heart proceedeth evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, false witness, blasphemies.' Oh! I am so wicked; and God says, 'The wicked shall be turned into hell, with all the nations that forget God.' I fear I can never be saved!"

I must then assure him of his mistake. I must tell him, "You are not so bad. You are 'one-half divine.' Christ is in you, and is 'one-half of you.' You are so essentially good, but you do not know yourself.' Just rise up now into the 'new consciousness' of how good you are.' This is all you need. This is the 'new birth.' This is salvation."

What would the poor penitent think of me, and of my instruction? My! My! Such theology and such teaching!

No, my dear Doctor, there is no "new way." It is only a fancy. There never was but one way to be saved. That was the way the Master taught when he said, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." The way the Apostles taught when the multitude cried, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" The answer was, "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, for the remission of sins."

The old way, Doctor! The way in which your father and mother, and mine, were saved; the way in which many have been saved as you and I have preached the old gospel to them, perhaps, for half a century! There is no new way. The old way is "the everlasting gospel," and, like its founder, "the same yesterday, to-day and forever."

"The most remarkable event in the history of man on earth was his arrival at a level high enough above that occupied by the lower animals for him to become aware of himself and of a world that was not himself."

Here we have something seemingly akin to evolution. Although inspiration tells us that "God created man in his own image," so wise as to be a fit associate for God himself; wise enough to give to every beast and fowl a name in accordance with its nature. And this association with God continued until man became self-separated from

God, and desperately allied to sin. Notwithstanding his wisdom and his association with God, the Doctor says, "The most remarkable event in his history was when he reached a level a little above the lower animals." He does not tell us when this "remarkable event" took place, but leaves us to inquire of the "wise men" who know the progress and the processes of evolution.

Now, Mr. Editor, I am not surprised that you said, "The sermon will shock the reader at times as it shocked at times those who heard it." And I submit that this kind of theological pabulum, served upon so important an occasion as a university Commencement, and sent abroad through the minds of the multitude of youths who heard it, and through the future preaching of some of them, is unfortunate even unto sadness. How we wish our friend had made that momentous occasion tell by a gospel sermon in and on the old way!—Texas Christian Advocate.

CHRIST'S CONQUEST OF THE WORLD IS BY CONVERSION.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

In the Scriptures there are militant words, which bespeak a warfare between the powers of evil and the forces of good. For example, in the Epistle to the Ephesians is set out with minuteness the "whole armor of God" with which the Christian soldier must be armed in order to resist successfully the assaults of Satan.

But these militant words of the Christian Scriptures are generally used by the inspired writers to rally the human soul to resist bravely and heroically the temptations to evil and the attacks of the devil whereby virtue is so often overcome and loyalty to God vanquished. They are rarely, if ever, applied to the work of the Church in bringing the world to Christ.

In our times, however, these martial conceptions are used constantly to set forth the conquest of mankind by Christianity. Bugle notes are sounded in all the Churches, calling the members to all sorts of "campaigns." The phrases of worldly wisdom are employed with reference to "leadership," "strategic points," and "skillful organization," as if the mission of the Church were "to round up" the human race, overwhelm mankind by irresistible combinations, and drive the inhabitants of the earth into obedience to Christ as captives might be brought under subjection to a foreign power by force of arms. Thus used, the militant passages in the Bible are mis-used, and, thereby, become misleading.

Christ proposes nothing but conversion for the conquest of the world. If such a word as "plan" may be properly applied to his purposes of redeeming love, we may say that overwhelming men, by any outward force whatsoever, is utterly foreign to the plan of Jesus. He does not propose to fill his kingdom with vanquished souls, brought into subjection by campaigns, but with regenerated souls redeemed by the saving grace of conversion. According to His teaching the kingdom of God is within us, and men can not be brought into it except with their free and full consent secured by the renovating power of the Holy Ghost. Any other conception of His kingdom is antagonistic to its essential nature and unfriendly to the benign results which it is designed to achieve.

That group of ideas now so prevalent in which the kingdom of Christ is conceived to be a great movement which is to overcome communities and nations by its enthralling plans and invincible management is hurtful to the Church and harmful to the world. To the Church it tends to bring a domineering spirit, to substitute for the tender spirit of compassion the proud purpose of conquest, and to the world it imparts a spirit of resentment and resistance to all that the Church proposes.

Moreover, by such an un-Christly conception of its mission the Church is led to discard Christ's method for the promotion of the kingdom of heaven among men, and to adopt pretentious plans for managing mankind in bulk rather than for making loving appeals to individual souls to be reconciled to God. Before her eyes shines the delusive vision of a renovated world without the regeneration of individual souls, and the delusion leads her astray from her Scriptural mission and diverts her from the methods by which her mission is to be fulfilled. Hence the multiplied and ever multiplying schemes of present day Churches to manage men rather than to save men.

Discussing the method of Jesus in contrast with these popular programs of worldly wisdom, James Martineau says: "I conceive that Christ preached a gospel wholly at variance with the prevailing temper and philosophy of our times. It is their tendency not to excite men to become what they ought to be, but to manage them as they are. The present age has been prolific (like many of its predecessors) of inventions and proposed social arrangements, by which we may sit still and be made into the right kind of men; which will render duty the smoothest thing on earth by warning all interfering nations off the spot, and turn the Christian race into a stroll upon a mossy lawn. The trust and boast of our period is not in its individual energy and virtue, not in its great and good minds, but in its external civilization, in schemes for social and political improvement in things to be done for us rather than by us; in what we are to get, more than in what we are to be."

Methods of this sort appeal strongly to an unspiritual and ease-loving type of Christianity. The work of bringing individual souls to Christ and leading them to repentance, faith and the new birth is not easy; it calls for a deep and personal experience of saving grace, and demands painful, prayerful and patient efforts of earnest appeal to individuals. This is too much for churches and preachers who love their ease and dislike strenuous, spiritual endeavors to win souls to Christ. Hence, they resort to "labor-saving machinery" in the spiritual world.

But in the spiritual world there is no place for "labor-saving machinery." Life in even its lowest forms can not be produced or nourished by machine methods. It is born, not made. Spiritual life, above all other forms of life, cannot be manufactured; and when an ease-loving Christianity seeks to turn it out by mechanical processes, it deceives itself and spends its efforts for naught. Its pretentions and showy schemes for conquering the world by machine methods, instead of converting the world through the regenerating forces of redeeming love, end in nothing better than a confusion of tongues and social contentions.

Akin to these machine methods, and breathing the same worldly spirit of conquering rather than converting manhood, are those proposals for saving the world by imposing and overwhelming ecclesiastical combinations. These schemes may be described as plans of salvation by syndicate. They partake of the spirit and methods of "big business" in the commercial world, and thus they "savor of the things which be of men and not of the things which be of God." They spring from a mundane megalomania, bawling for bigness in order to overpower the heathen world by bulkiness of organization, rather than to convert the heathen world to Christ by the saving processes of the gospel.

If the heathen world could be dazzled by the spectacular exhibition of huge agglutinated ecclesiastical organization and so dismayed by it as to surrender to it, the heathen world could not be saved thereby. A subjugated world would not be a saved world. An affrighted and subdued heathenism would not be a Christianized body at all; a servile submission to mere bulkiness of organization would not be salvation for the pagan nations.

But the heathen world can not be conquered. Campaigns for its conquest will arouse national antagonisms and ethnic hostilities which will delay, if they may not defeat, the conversion of the heathen world. Christ has not called his Church to conquering campaigns, but to converting ministrations.

The method of Jesus for the propagation of Christianity is set forth in the parable of the leaven in the meal. "The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened."

Leaven acts upon the meal not by its larger bulk, but by its pervasive power and by its capacity to convert the meal into a substance like itself. In what sharp contrast is the method of Jesus, as set forth in this parable, with the faithless programs of those who would have us believe that the vast bulk of the heathen world can never be leavened with the saving power of Christianity unless a somewhat corresponding bulk of ecclesiastical organization and machinery be brought to bear upon it. They trust the leaven little, and fear the meal much. They can not believe that the leaven can be effective, if it be so small that it can be hidden in the meal. In faithlessness toward Christ and distrust of the gospel, they doubt the Scriptural statement that "a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump."

JEWS COMING TO CHRIST.

Dr. Ignatz Zalton, of Wein, Australia, the well-known learned Jew, and author of a book on the Jewish race, has in a lecture brought out startling figures about the number of Jews that have been baptized in the last one hundred years. He has shown through statistics that, in the one hundred years which closed some ten years ago, not less than 204,000 Jews left their religion and went over to Christianity. These fallen-away Jews were 22,000 in Germany, 28,000 in England and her colonies, 44,000 in Austria-Hungary, 84,000 in Russia, and 13,000 in America. The number of Jews accepting Christianity increases every year. In the year 1890, 300 Jews in one city left their religion and were baptized as Christians, while in 1904, 600 Jews became Christians in the same city. Missionary Review of the World.

WORSE THAN O'KELLEYISM.

secret sessions." "In what way would they make every Bishop a type and all Methodist books and the administrative work of the Church. The wisdom of the entire College which is certainly greater than that of any one man is to be allowed to exercise no restraining power. Concerning this question as to the veto power we would refer the reader to the excellent article taken from the Wesleyan Christian Advocate which appears in this number of our paper.

But the climax of the radical program is reached in the proposal to compel the Bishops to meet in secret, or executive sessions. Any other body in the Church might have such a meeting but not they—with all the delicate interests that they have to handle. Better—far better—would it be to do away entirely with our episcopacy than thus to reflect upon and discredit it.

Two other things we wish to say in this connection: 1. There is not, in our opinion, the slightest warrant for this attack upon our College of Bishops. We have never had a body of chief pastors who were more kind, brotherly and considerate of the lay than those now serving the Church in this capacity, or who were more faithful. It is a physical impossibility for men or twelve men to serve more than two million Methodists scattered all over the world, and be more in evidence in any particular locality. This spoiled complaint from the mission fields is nothing new. It was more loudly heard when Bishop Galloway was editor of the New Orleans Advocate thirty years ago than it is now, and was duly discussed by him. It would doubtless be easy to go into almost any city in the homeland and get statements that the superintending Bishop does not visit the churches as much as he ought. It was never designed as a general form of episcopacy that pure should make Bishops as numerous and bring them as much into touch with every locality as does the modern form.

2. All this talk about democracy is nothing new. It has been heard all through the history of Episcopal Methodism. Nor is there any more force in it now than there has been at the past. The Methodist Church was not organized on the basis of giving every one connected with it a voice and a vote in its administration. It was organized with a view to efficiency, that the Gospel might be given to the nations and the kingdom of Christ set up in the hearts of men. Its underlying basis is not self-government, but self-direction. It is not to speak in any way to the living God, and I very much doubt if it is possible to do so. The Episcopal Methodists has succeeded far and away better than any other Methodist church. The Wesleyan Church in Britain, the Methodists in Canada, and the Methodist Protestant Church in the United States have made no great headway. The most ultra Democrats in the world, the Methodists in the post-bellum South, how could they be more democratic? There is the Congregational Church, or the Baptist, or the Disciples, or the Friends, or the Unitarians. Each of these is democratic to the core. Why, then, should Methodism, which has always practically been governed by its Bishops, immediately on entering a new country, or on the organization of a new conference, begin to agitate for a change in its government? Why not, if it is a failure, as they claim, go to one of these churches, where they will get what they want? Why not go to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, where they will get what they want? Why not go to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, where they will get what they want? Why not go to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South

Dr. A. L. P. Green, of the Tennessee Conference, said, "As we recognize the Episcopacy as a unit, the names of all the Bishops were necessary and ought to be attached."

Rev. Dr. Thomas Madden, of the Tennessee Conference, said, "He believed the Episcopacy to be a unit, and that if one name only was attached it would be sufficient to give the document an official character."

It will be remembered by those who attended the General Conference of 1902 that the unity of the Episcopacy seemed at that Conference to be in danger, and accordingly the Committee on Episcopacy sent to the College of Bishops a communication calling attention to this fact and exhorting the Bishops to maintain their official unity. And in the communication which Bishop Hargrove addressed to that Conference on the occasion of his superannuation, he emphasized the necessity of preserving the unity of the Episcopacy, as it had always been preserved.

It must be obvious to any thoughtful person that the Church would suffer great harm if the executive officers of the Church appeared in their public deliverances as holding divergent and antagonistic views. It is to be regretted that anything has ever occurred, whether in former years or at the present time, to mar in the slightest degree the unity of our Episcopacy, and it is to be hoped that the Bishops, instead of being less united will be more so.

They should give no heed to the criticisms of the small number of successors of O'Kelley who are in our Church to-day. Such men abused Bishop Asbury, and we shall have a few such always with us.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

REV. W. D. McCULLOUGH.

Whitfield D. McCullough was born at Oxford, Miss., on January 21, 1860. But little information concerning his parents is available. His mother died when he was three years of age; and in his early childhood his father moved to Panola County, where he was reared to manhood on a farm. He was converted in the neighborhood in which he grew up and joined the Methodist Free Church, becoming intimately associated with its founder, Rev. A. B. Fly, and his brother, Rev. M. D. Fly. As to his early educational advantages, nothing definite is known. But having entered the ministry of the Church with which he had connected himself, he studied diligently under the direction of its leader, Rev. A. B. Fly, who was a very strong and capable man, and such was his aptitude for acquiring knowledge that he soon became remarkably well equipped for his life-work. Especially was he interested in questions of doctrine, and he became thoroughly familiar with the differences between the Calvinists and Arminans and the points at issue between the immersionists and pedo-baptists. He was unusually strong in the discussion of such themes, and to the end of his life he delighted in upholding the Methodist position touching them, in which he heartily believed, though it could not be said that he was a controversial preacher in any sense that was objectionable, his object always being to instruct and establish the members of his own denomination, rather than to disaffect the communicants in other folds.

In 1889, Brother McCullough became convinced that the field for doing good was larger in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, than in the Methodist Free Church, and, together with his friend and brother minister, the late Rev. A. J. Jones, he joined the North Mississippi Conference in its session at Holly Springs at the close of that year. One whose judgment is entitled to weight, says: "He was much the strongest man that ever entered the ministry of the Fly Church, and in doing so he was influenced by deep convictions and the highest motives. He was cordially welcomed in the new communion into which he came, and his career therein was a laborious and useful one. The following are the appointments that he served in the M. E. Church, South: 1890, Banner Circuit; 1891-2, Indianola; 1893-4, Sallis; 1895-6-7, Pickens; 1898, Batesville; 1899-1900, Cockrum; 1901-02, Black Hawk; 1903-04, Schlater; 1905, Louisville; 1906, Shaw; 1907-08, Jonestown; 1909-10, Leland; 1911-12, Eupora; 1913-14, Ruleville. In the fall of 1914, Brother McCullough was assigned to Moorhead, but left in a very short time to take charge of Iuka Station, which had been made vacant by the transfer of Rev. C. P. Moss to the Florida Conference. He labored there two years, though during the latter part his pastorate in that field, his health was quite feeble. In 1916 he was sent to the Shannon Circuit, but soon had to give up his work, probably never reaching more than one or two appointments, but holding on until his presiding elder could come to the first quarterly conference and relieve him.

In 1886, Brother McCullough was married to Miss Georgia A. Hawkins, of Holly Springs, Miss., the wedding taking place at Pine Valley, Miss., at the residence of Rev. D. E. Cannon, an uncle of the bride. Of this union six children—five sons and one daughter—were born, all of whom, together with their mother, are living, viz: L. Boyce McCullough, New York City; Burnard E. McCullough, Belzoni, Miss.; Walter A. McCullough, Interne King's County Hospital, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Jesse H. McCullough, Memphis, Tenn.; O. Mitchell McCullough, Little Rock, Ark., and Mrs. P. McMullen (Miss Clara McCullough), Shelby, Miss.

Brother McCullough had a splendid physique, being stalwart and possessed of unusual strength, and one would hardly have predicted that he would reach the end of his earthly pilgrimage at the early age of fifty-seven years; but alas! how little can we discern of the future. The malady with which he was seized during his pastorate at Iuka was Bright's disease, and the best medical skill was powerless to arrest its progress. He was faithfully treated by deeply interested local physicians, and tarried for a time in the Baptist Hospital at Memphis, where all that was possible was done; but soon after he reached Shannon, his last appointment, it became evident that his work was finished and that the end of his earthly life was near at hand. Facing the inevitable bravely, and with no words of complaint upon his lips, he surrendered his charge, and went to the home of his daughter at Shelby, Miss., where after lingering about six weeks, during which time he is said to have exhibited a strikingly sweet and patient spirit, he died at 6 o'clock on Saturday morning, March 10, 1917, his serious illness having covered a period of about twelve months.

Such, briefly stated, were the leading events, in the career of this active itinerant minister. Viewed from almost any standpoint, he was more than an ordinary man. His personality was strong and forceful, and his individuality was marked. He was no reed easily shaken by the wind; he had rather the sturdiness of the oak. His convictions were deep and firm, and there was never any difficulty in ascertaining where he stood on any question. Of the tact that represses and conceals one's real feelings, he had little; but he was honest, open, and straightforward. Popularity he did not seek, and the flexibility by which it is won in the largest measure he did not possess. The arts of demagogy he despised, and he hated shams. He was a true friend, and could be trusted. His attachments were ardent and seldom changed. The friends of his early ministry, except as they passed into the great beyond, or as the circle was widened by the formation of new ones, were the friends of his later days.

The pulpit gifts of Brother McCullough made him an impressive and attractive preacher. He had a good presence, a pleasant voice, and a forceful, fluent utterance. His mind was clear and vigorous, and his messages were informing, stimulating, and helpful. The range of his discourses was wider than that of the average minister, and in them there was much variety. Besides being, as has been stated, an able expounder of important doctrines, he measured up well in his Sabbath sermons as a pastor, and was an effective revivalist. The people heard him gladly. He was never known to serve a charge in which he was not ranked high as a dispenser of God's precious Word.

But, best of all, Brother McCullough was a man of God. He had a sound experience and a living faith. One could not know him well without becoming convinced of this. His was a rugged nature, virile, outstanding, and aggressive, but back of his somewhat brusque exterior were a gentleness, a kindness, and a brotherliness that attested the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. Faultless he was not—perfection does not belong to human beings—but the trend of his life was strongly in the right direction, and he bore the marks of the Lord Jesus. If he made missteps, as most men do, he had the redeeming faculty of recovering himself, by the grace of God. There is no better place in which to take one's true measure than in the home—a religion that stands the home test will usually stand any test—and in that hallowed circle our friend won and held all hearts. A more devoted husband and father the writer has never known, and of his wife and children he was the loved and reverenced prophet, priest, and king. How these bereaved ones will miss him until they overtake him in the City of God!

It was beautiful and inspiring the way this stricken toiler acquiesced in the will of the Heavenly Father and approached the river of death, which he knew could not be far away. His presiding elder, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, wrote the writer, when he left Shannon with the shadow of eternity upon him, of his impressive resignation and wonderful serenity of spirit. Rev. W. M. Campbell, our pastor at Shelby, sent us soon after he had passed from earth the following message: "Brother McCullough was here about six weeks before he died, and I was with him a great deal of the time. It inspired me and strengthened my faith to be associated with this splendid and courageous minister. I knew he was a strong preacher, and about a week or ten days before the end came, I asked him for a few outlines of his favorite sermons; and, as he proceeded amid his suffering, to talk from James 1:25 the text of one of his last discourses, his mind flashed and he caught the old-time fire. When he had finished, he broke down, and, while weeping, said: 'Campbell, how I do wish I could live and preach! If he spoke of death as fearing it, I never heard of it. He went to the end as only a child of God can." The night before he passed away, he whispered to the anxious wife beside him, "It is all over." Upon being asked, "What was over, he said: "I see Jesus and the great white throne. Tell Clara and the boys to meet me." A few hours later "the weary wheels of life stood still," and the immortal spirit was gone.

On the next day, the holy Sabbath, the tenantless body was laid away at Shelby to await the resurrection morn. The obsequies, as the deceased had requested, being conducted by Rev. J. R. Countiss, who was licensed to preach under his ministry and whom he called his "preacher boy," assisted by Rev. W. M. Campbell. The throng in attendance was reported to be one of the largest ever assembled in the Mississippi Delta on a similar occasion, and the floral offerings, were numerous and handsome, betokening the love of many sorrowing hearts. Thus lived and wrought and triumphed another of the spiritual sons of Wesley.

"Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his!" R. A. MEEK.

Bishop J. H. McCoy is reported to have delivered recently an address to the Birmingham District Conference of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. This was a good example. Our preachers everywhere need to come into closer touch with this communion, which worthily represents the work of Southern Methodists among the Negroes in the United States.

Your Brain Must Have Pure Blood.

No more important physiological discovery has ever been made than that the brain requires a due supply of pure blood. It is estimated that this organ receives as much as one tenth of all the blood that is sent from the heart—a great deal more than any other organ of the body. If the vitality of the blood is impaired, the blood then affords the brain cells [illegible] stimulus and there is mental and physical [illegible] or inactivity.

Pure blood is blood that is free from humors. It is healthy blood, and the term pure blood as it is generally used means blood that is not only right in quality but also in quantity. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes pure, rich, red blood. This is one of the great truths about this great medicine.—Adv.

The Great Battle

PROHIBITION WINS IN THE SENATE.

The following press dispatch was sent out from Washington, D. C., on August 1. We give the whole of it that our readers may see exactly what took place:

A resolution for submission to the States of a prohibition amendment to the Federal Constitution was adopted late to-day by the Senate. The vote was 65 to 20, eight more than the necessary two-thirds.

As adopted the resolution contains a provision that the States must be asked to ratify the amendment within six years. The House still must act on the resolution.

Senators opposing the resolution were:

Democrats—Broussard, Culberson, Gerry, Hardwick, Hitchcock, Husting, James, Lewis, Phelan, Pomerene, Reed and Underwood. Total 12.

Republicans—Brandegee, Calder, France, Lodge, Penrose, Wadsworth, Warren and Weeks. Total 8. Total against amendment, 20.

Senators voting for the resolution were:

Democrats — Ashurst, Bankhead, Beckham, Chamberlain, Fletcher, Gore, Hollis, Jones of New Mexico, Kendrick, King, Kirby, McKellar, Martin, Myers, Newlands, Overman, Owen, Pittman, Ransdell, Robinson, Saulsbury, Shafroth, Sheppard, Shields, Simmons, Smith of Arizona, Smith of Georgia, Smith of South Carolina, Stone, Swanson, Thompson, Trammell, Vardaman, Walsh, Williams and Walcott—Total 36.

Republicans—Borah, Brady, Colt, Cummins, Curtis, Fernald, Frelinghuysen, Gronna, Hale, Harding, Johnson of California, Jones of Washington, Kellogg, Kenyon, Knox, La Follette, McCumber, McNary, Nelson, New, Norris, Page, Poindexter, Sherman, Smith of Michigan, Smoot, Sterling, Sutherland and Watson—Total 29. Total for amendment, 65.

The proposed constitutional amendment is the first initiated by Congress since that providing for popular election of United States Senators, approved in 1911. It is the first time that either branch of Congress has approved a constitutional amendment for prohibition. A few years ago a similar resolution in the House received a majority, but failed of the required two-thirds.

Prohibition leaders of the House now claim enough votes to insure the submission of the amendment to the States, and will seek early discussion in the House.

The Senate's action came to-day after three days of debate. All efforts to amend the resolution failed except for the addition of Senator Harding's amendment fixing the six years' time limit within which three-fourths of the States must ratify the amendment to make it effective. This was approved by a vote of 56 to 23.

As adopted, the resolution, which was submitted by Senator Sheppard of Texas, Democrat, would add the following article to the Federal Constitution:

"The manufacture, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from, the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes, is hereby prohibited.

"This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the Legislatures of the several States, as provided in the Constitution, within six years from the date of the submission hereof to the States by the Congress.

"The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."

Although most of the debate on the resolution had been perfunctory, brief, spirited speeches under a ten-minute limit were made to-day to crowded galleries, with the Senate sweltering in one of the hottest summer days.

On the final roll call several senators said to oppose prohibition voted for the resolution, desiring, they said, to have the wet and dry battle transferred from the national capital to the States and to prevent the prohibition propaganda from impeding other matters before Congress.

An amendment by Senator Stone, requiring the government to make compensation for losses to liquor manufacturers in carrying the proposed article into effect, was defeated, 59 to 31.

Those voting for the Stone amendment were:

Democrats—Broussard, Gerry, Gore, Hardwick, Hollis, James, Newlands, Phelan, Pittman, Pomerene, Ransdell, Reed, Saulsbury, Stone, Underwood and Williams. Total Democrats 16.

Republicans—Brandegee, Calder, France, Frelinghuysen, Harding, Johnson of California, La Follette, Lodge, New, Penrose, Sherman, Wadsworth, Warren, Watson and Weeks. Total Republicans 15. Total for, 31.

Those opposing:

A HORRIBLE ACCIDENT.

On the night of July 24, Clyde Atchison and Dolton Pitts, two boys who had formerly been inmates of the Orphanage, were struck by a Y. & M. V. railroad passenger train near Asylum Switch, outside the corporate limits of Jackson. Clyde Atchison was struck on the head and lived only a short time, something less than an hour, dying a few minutes after he was carried to the Baptist Hospital. He had a fracture of the skull. He was buried on July 25 in Cedar Lawn Cemetery after funeral services conducted by Rev. W. G. Henry, pastor of Galloway Memorial Church, assisted by the Superintendent of the Orphanage. Dolton Pitts had his right arm badly mangled and an ugly cut on his lower limb, just below the knee, also a fractured ankle and, perhaps, internal injuries. His right arm was amputated at the Baptist Hospital by the railroad surgeons, Drs. Hunter and Hamilton, and his other wounds dressed. He regained consciousness both before and after the amputation of his arm, and he said that he and Clyde were resting on the side of the railroad track and dropped off to sleep, and were struck by the train. Dolton Pitts lived about sixty hours after the accident and died on Friday morning, July 27, about six o'clock. After funeral services conducted by Dr. A. F. Watkins and Rev. W. G. Henry at the H. M. Taylor Funeral Parlors, his remains were carried to Charleston, Miss., and laid to rest beside his father and mother.

Clyde Atchison was born January 24, 1901, at Moss Point, Miss., and was received into the Home August 23, 1912. He went out for himself January 11, 1917, the Superintendent of the Orphanage buying him a ticket to Moss Point, Miss., where he went to his relatives. His mother died shortly after his arrival and he remained with relatives for some time; then later returned to the Orphanage, May 8, 1917. He stayed at the Orphanage farm until June 11, when he was given permission to go out for himself again, being directed to Brother W. M. Williams, the former Manager of the Home, who said that he had a good home for a boy. On the following day, June 12, Dolton Pitts, who was in his fifteenth year, left the Orphanage farm without the knowledge or consent of the Orphanage authorities, and reported to Brother Williams, in company with Clyde Atchison. Brother Williams, after consultation with the Superintendent of the Orphanage, placed these two boys in excellent homes near Ora, Miss., where they stayed for some weeks; then later both left their homes and went to Moss Point, Miss., where they stayed for some time, and, according to the statement of Dolton Pitts, returned to Jackson on Monday night, July 23. He said that they came on the passenger train and paid their fare.

On the afternoon of July 24, these boys were seen in the neighborhood of the Orphanage farm. They went to a neighbor's house near the farm late in the afternoon and asked for supper; they later were seen coming down the Y. & M. V. railroad track in the direction of Jackson and at nine o'clock the horrible accident happened. They had not reported either at the farm or at the Orphanage. We are all grieved over the sad accident and the tragic manner in which these boys passed away. It will be noted that they had been from under the authority of the Orphanage for several weeks. Every attention was given them, but to no avail. This is one of the unfortunate circumstances in life that all regret but none are able to prevent. Clyde has a brother and sister still in the Orphanage, and Dolton has two brothers still in the Orphanage. Our hearts are all made sad with grief on account of this horrible accident.

THE CHEERFUL LITTLE WORKER.

For such a little tot of a girl, Ruth could do some wonderful things. She could sew very neatly; her stitches were almost as small and neat as grandmother's.

"Why, how this child can sew!" exclaimed grandmother, raising her hands in surprise when Ruth showed her a dress she had made for Angelina, the head doll in the doll room. "Why, Ruth, I can't beat that myself. I'll have to be more careful with my sewing after this, or my little granddaughter will be a neater stitcher than her grandmother."

After supper grandmother went into the kitchen. Ruth was helping mother with the dishes. "Well, dear me!" exclaimed grandmother again. "What a fine little worker you have, Mary!" she said to Ruth's mother.

"O yes; I really don't know how I would get along withouut Ruth," said mother. "She's my cheerful little worker."

"Cheerful little worker!" repeated grandmother. "What a beautiful name!"

"You would hardly believe how many things she can do to help," said mother.

The next morning, as grandmother waited for the rest to get up, she said to herself: "Ruth can sew and wash dishes as well as fly kites and play hide and seek. I saw her do all these things yesterday. I wonder what I will see to-day. How glad I am that I came on this visit; I know now what a fine little granddaughter I have."

After breakfast Ruth brought her own little red broom and dust pan which mother had given her and swept up the crumbs from the floor. Grandmother smiled as she watched her. Pretty soon grandmother went upstairs. Ruth's door was open, and grandmother peeped in. Ruth was making up the bed. She fixed the sheets nice and straight, smoothed the white spread, and shook up the pillow until it was light and fluffy.

"That's fine," said grandmother. "There isn't even a weeny hump left on this spread. You've smoothed them all out."

When grandmother and Ruth went downstairs mother had swept the parlor with the big, grown-up broom. Ruth went to the cupboard and came back with two dust cloths.

"It's quite a help to have Ruth dust the chairs and table legs," said mother, taking one of the dust cloths. "She can't reach the high furniture. Together we can get it done in a very short time."

After the dusting was done, Ruth went out to play with Fido and the girl next door.

At the breakfast table one morning during grandmother's visit mother said: "I want to do a little shopping; and if grandmother and Ruth can get along alone, I'll go to town with father."

"Of course we can get along," said grandmother.

When they were starting, mother said: "We'll be back by dinner time."

After they had gone, Ruth said: "O grandmother, do you suppose I could make biscuit for dinner? I would just love to surprise mother. I've never baked anything. I guess mother thinks I'm not big enough. I've just wanted and wanted to bake biscuits. They're cut in little round, fat hills, you know, and"—

"Of course you can," said grandmother. "I'll show you, but you can do all the making. I'll not really touch them."

At eleven o'clock grandmother and Ruth went to the kitchen. Ruth got the rolling pin, the board, and the mixing bowl. Then she brought the flour, baking powder, salt, shortening, and milk; and grandmother told her how to make biscuits. When the dough was a soft, creamy ball, Ruth rolled it into a sheet half an inch thick with the rolling pin. With the cutter she cut it into little, round, fat, white hills. These little hills she laid close together in a floured pan and popped the pan into the oven. By this time grandmother had the rest of the dinner almost ready. Just as the white hills were getting nice and brown on top, grandmother listened. "There, I hear the buggy wheels," she said. Ruth hurried to get the table all fixed before father and mother came into the dining room. The biscuits were just right.

"Ah, I was just wishing grandmother would bake biscuits for dinner!" said father, biting into a big, fat one.

"They're delicious!" exclaimed mother. "I've tried and tried, but my biscuits never are as good as grandmother's. If I could make biscuits like these, I would be so proud."

"Enough to make any one proud," said father, taking another biscuit.

Grandmother winked at Ruth, and Ruth giggled. Father and mother looked up quickly. "What's all this winking?" asked father. "And what does the giggling mean?" asked mother.

"Your cheerful little worker made the biscuits," said grandmother. "I didn't touch them. She did everything, even to measuring the baking powder."

"I'm surprised," explained father, looking proudly at Ruth.

"I'm surprised!" exclaimed mother.

"Well, I'm not surprised at all," spoke up grandmother. "A cheerful little worker like Ruth can do almost anything, I think."—Anne Porter Johnson, in Evangelical Messenger.

THE BOY WHO WON.

The first applicant for the position of office boy at Barclay & Hinman's was not attractive in appearance. His nose was crooked and his mouth was big. His jacket was too large and his trousers too short. There were holes in his stockings and his shoes were not brushed.

"What is your name?" asked the man at the desk.

"Martin Barry, sir."

"Where do you live?"

"No. 10, Veteran Court."

Veteran Court boys were not in demand. Martin was dismissed.

As he passed out into the street he spied a crumpled bit of green in a step corner. It was a dollar bill. He put it in his pocket and went back into the store. For an hour Mr. Hinman was busy with boys. Martin waited. As soon as the last applicant had gone, he approached the desk.

"Did you lose this?" he asked.

The merchant ran through his pockets.

"I must have," he decided, "for I had one when I came in. Where did you find it?"

Martin told him.

Mr. Hinman eyed him keenly, and recognized him as the first applicant.

"Have you had any experience as an office boy?" was the query.

"No, sir."

"Suppose I should hire you, and should want something done that you didn't know how to do."

Martin looked straight at the questioner. "I'd do it the best I could, sir, and the next time perhaps I'd do it better." The position was his.

"I knew," said Mr. Hinman in relating the story, "that a boy who would return a dollar to a man whom he had every reason to dislike, and wait patiently a whole hour to give it to him, was too honest and faithful a boy for us to miss. I'd trust Martin Barry with a million dollars."—Southern Churchman.

THE HIGH DIGNITY OF WORK.

"Who puts back into place a fallen bar,
Or flings a rock out of a traveled road,
His feet are moving toward the central star.
His name is whispered in the gods' abode."

When, some years ago, the late Colonel George E. Waring took charge of the street-cleaning department of New York City, he found the street cleaners doing their work in a careless, carnal, joyless fashion. There was no mind in their muscle, no heart in their handiwork. The men were ashamed of their calling. They went at their work in sloven clothes, with slouching gait, feeling that they were the scavengers of the city, the rejected of men.

Here was labor divorced from ideality. Colonel Waring knew that some ideal light must be made to shine from even the meanest work that the worker must have some joy and pride in his toil or his work is a failure. Or more tragical still, the man himself will be a failure.

What did Colonel Waring do this man of heart and imagination? Not all that could be done—not all that ought to be done; but he did something. He called the street sweepers before him, and, with a fine enthusiasm that was infectious, he fired their minds with a sense of their high mission to the city; he made them feel that they were verily the Knights of Cleanliness, the Custodians of the Public Safety, the Guardians of the Public Health. He especially called them to the duty of defending the little children of the metropolis from the wolves of disease.

The words of Colonel Waring stirred the hearts of the workers. For the first time they saw themselves entrusted with a great treasure; felt themselves lifted to a place of dignity and honor, knew themselves to be valued and honored by at least one man of worth and distinction.

Colonel Waring dressed his men in white uniforms, symbolic of the purity that was to be their aim in all their labors. We all knew the result. With this ideal in their hearts, and this man as a center of energy, the workers went out like a white army; the atmosphere clarified, the death-rate went down, New York became, perhaps, the cleanest city in the world.

These men labored at the most humble and thankless work, with some feeling of their partnership with the purifying and protecting powers of the universe. In a degree they worked as gods, not as stolid and joyless hirelings of the hour.

So all true work is more than a deep necessity laid upon life—more than a precious discipline laid upon the soul. Necessity and discipline—these words are too cold and too hard to express the loftiest beauty in the face of Labor.—Edwin Markham.

UNSOUND ADVICE.

In a course of lectures before the students of DePamo University, recently published, Bishop McConnell of the Methodist Episcopal Church advised the young men to read widely from the critics. If one has been well-grounded in the faith and has leisure to pursue scholarly studies of the Scriptures, the counsel is pertinent. The average pastor to-day has only limited opportunity for special research. The time required for the preparation of his pulpit, prayer meeting and Bible school work, leaves but a small margin for surseys in the field of Biblical criticism. It seems to us that a pastor has to make a choice regarding the use of his study hours. If reading widely from the critics means that the Bible itself is neglected, it is far wiser to pass up the critics. In the matter of Biblical criticism, a little learning is a dangerous thing. Considering the many demands on a pastor's time, the better counsel is to read widely from the Bible itself. We think it would have been much more to the point if Bishop McConnell had come before his student audience with the message of the old hymn, "Cling to the Bible."—Christian Intelligencer.

Bishop McConnell is understood to have had much to do with committing the Northern Methodist Church to the un-Wesleyan New Course of Study for its preachers.

A FINE EXAMPLE.

Dear Editor: In the Second Quarterly Conference for Central Church, Meridian, the answer to "Question 7" was: "Conference Organ, 20; General Organ, 17." Mr. G. C. Randall, a faithful official, said: "That answer is a reflection on the membership of this church. The membership of the Quarterly Conference should furnish more subscriptions than the number given. The presiding elder said, "Amen." Mr. L. C. West, a young man of few words and splendid action, followed this exhortation with paper and a pencil and in one minute had secured 20 new subscriptions to the Conference organ. These brethren have not applied for a patent on their method. Who next? GEO. H. THOMPSON.

FAITH ESSENTIAL.

"According to your faith, be it unto you," is the great law of the spiritual kingdom. It is in response to faith that the sinner is justified before God and that the Holy Spirit regenerates his soul. Faith, furthermore, determines the progress of one's growth in grace—in being slow or rapid according to the measure of one's belief. The achievements of the Christian in the fields of service are also largely the fruits of faith. In proportion as they have faith in the living Christ as the divine Son of God, as the Savior of the world, and as the leader of his Church, will men be ready to dare, and do, and sacrifice, and suffer to carry forward the scheme of human redemption.

Faith is susceptible of cultivation, and it is the part of wisdom for one to nourish and strengthen one's faith in every way possible—by proper reading, by the right kind of association, and, most of all, by holy living, by communion with the Master, and by learning to lean upon God in life's experiences and work. As St. Peter represents it, faith is truly the foundation virtue, and where it abounds the other Christian graces are certain to be found in full cluster. Happy is he who accepts the teachings of Jesus and seeks wholly to obey and trust him. This is the one true demonstration of a strong and vital faith.

THE FIGHT AGAINST THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

August 1, 1917, is, in our opinion, destined to become a historic day for the United States Senate. As will be seen elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate, that distinguished legislative assembly, pronounced by some to be the greatest deliberative body in the world, passed by a considerably larger vote than was necessary a resolution submitting to the States a prohibition amendment to the Federal Constitution. This measure will now go to the House, which it is predicted will adopt it, though this action may be somewhat delayed.

We have noted in the secular press a suggestion that the provision limiting the time in which the States may ratify this proposed amendment to six years was a scheme of the liquor men, and that the prohibition leaders had been outwitted. There seems to be no foundation for this claim. The men at the head of the temperance forces of the Nation affirm that they are satisfied with the six-year limit, and that they feel confident that within the prescribed time the Legislatures of the necessary three-fourths of the States will act favorably upon the pending resolution, if it is submitted.

Truly, the growth of prohibition sentiment in the United States has been rapid and most gratifying. It has been but a short time since the Committees handling matters pertaining to the liquor traffic were kept well packed in both Houses of Congress, and arguments of prohibitionists could hardly be heard at all, or if they were heard, it was only to be laughed at as unreasoning fanatics and sat down upon. But to-day there are no intoxicants sold in the Capitol at Washington, and a large majority of both branches of the National Legislature are openly hostile to the nefarious business.

It now looks as if the day is not far distant when there will not be an open saloon within all the wide borders of this great Republic. But let us remember that the battle is not yet won—that there is still a great fight ahead. It behooves every man who is in sympathy with the moral forces of the country in this mighty struggle to be up and doing. Let your Congressmen hear from you concerning this momentous matter. Write the man who represents your district and urge him to vote for the resolution which the Senate has passed and to support it with the full weight of his influence.

And in Louisiana we ought to put on such a campaign against the accursed rum traffic as this State has never known. We should rally to the support of the Anti-Saloon League, and give it our money and our assistance in every other possible way, that it may be equipped and strengthened for the combat with this giant evil. We should have an ambition to show that we can do something for ourselves, and not go complacently along, waiting for Uncle Sam to bring us deliverance. And there is this consideration that should spur us to energetic action: THE VOTE OF THE LOUISIANA LEGISLATURE MIGHT BE NEEDED TO WRITE THE SUBMITTED AMENDMENT IN THE FEDERAL CONSTITUTION.

HUMILIATING LAWLESSNESS.

A spirit of mob violence toward Negroes has been breaking out to an unusual extent of late, both in the North and in the South. This is most regrettable, and some way should be found to put a stop to such lawlessness. The colored people of the United States are as much entitled to just and humane treatment as any other class of our citizens beneath the flag, and it devolves upon our civil authorities to see that it is accorded to them. If a man is charged with a crime, whatever may be his color or his position in society, he is entitled to a fair and impartial trial in the courts of the country, which alone have the right to mete out punishment to violators of the law. If the accused persons are weak and defenseless, this is all the more reason why the strong arm of the State should protect them and see that they are dealt with by judicial process, and not by excited and irresponsible mobs.

It is to be hoped that in every community where a lynching has occurred a faithful effort will be made to ascertain the names of the participants and that they will be indicted and brought to trial. It behooves every good citizen to stand for the suppression of this menacing evil. The majesty of the law must be upheld, or we shall not be entitled to be called a civilized people. Such occurrences are a shame and reproach, and we most earnestly protest against them. Let our Governors and Legislators grapple with this problem and find a solution for it. It certainly deserves prompt and prayerful consideration at the hands of the entire citizenship.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. H. F. Tolle, our accomplished pastor at Biloxi, Miss., after a pleasant vacation spent in the West, was again in his pulpit last Sunday, and delivered interesting messages to good-sized congregations.

Rev. C. A. Parks, our promising young pastor on the Kosciusko (Miss.) Circuit, says: "We held our third quarterly conference yesterday, July 31. The work up to this date is considerably in advance of last year's record along all lines."

"We are in receipt of a card which reads as follows: "Born to Mr. and Mrs. George Avery, Jr., at Donaldsonville, La., on July 26, a daughter, Helen Marie. The mother and babe are doing well." The Advocate extends congratulations.

Writing from Pioneer, La., Rev. C. F. Starnes says: "Everything is moving along nicely on the Amite Circuit. We have no cause for complaint if the present pace is kept up, the Conference year of 1917 will wind up most creditably."

Rev. J. S. Rutledge, of Longville, La., sends us a cheering message concerning the work in his field, which, because of its late arrival, we are forced to carry over until next week. This faithful toiler is meeting with success in his efforts.

Rev. John L. Williams, our pastor at Many, La., was a pleasant caller at the Advocate office last Friday. Brother and Sister Williams had come to New Orleans to bring their son for medical treatment, who, we were pleased to learn, is improving.

Under date of August 1, Brother J. G. Cammack writes us from Los Angeles, Calif., ordering his paper to be sent to Mint Hill Crest, that city. He sends greetings to his friends in Mississippi, and says: "We came here through the country in a Ford, being on the road 21 days. We had the trip of our lives."

Rev. H. W. Bowman, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge (La.) District, recently spent a day in McComb City, Miss. We wonder if Louisiana is getting to be too small to hold this energetic leader of Israel's hosts. Brother Bowman is winding up a quadrennium of fruitful service in his present developing field.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Fernwood, Miss., writes: "On Sunday, July 22, Dr. A. F. Watkins preached at Fernwood at 11 a.m. a sermon of great power, which delighted the people, and at night he spoke on 'Our Duty to Our Country,' delivering what many pronounced to be a great address. His visit was much enjoyed."

A note from Rev. Robert Selby, Emory University's gifted Commissioner for Mississippi, received a few days ago, indicated that he is alert and active in behalf of the great cause committed to his hands. Brother Selby is one of the strong men of his Conference. Let the brethren lend him a helping hand in his important work.

We have been gratified to learn that the health of Mr. L. P. Brown, of Meridian, Miss., which within recent months has been far from good, is now thought to be improving. Brother Brown is a layman who lives upon the heights, and who has behind him a shining record of usefulness. We pray that he may long be spared to work and witness for the Master.

The Kosciusko community, within the bounds of the Fernwood charge, Mississippi Conference, has recently enjoyed a gracious season of spiritual refreshing. Brother Saunders, the pastor, was assisted by Rev. C. M. Crossley, who is reported to have done some most excellent preaching. The church was greatly revived and there were 6 additions to its membership.

The press dispatches reported a few days ago that Rev. J. W. Ramsey was on the eve of starting a revival meeting at New Augusta, Miss., with Rev. Paul D. Hardin, of Hattiesburg, to do the preaching, and Miss Cooke of the same city to direct the singing. We shall expect to hear good results from a series of services participated in by so efficient a team of workers.

After an absence of some weeks in the West, Brother W. S. Holmes and Mrs. Holmes, his accomplished wife, have returned to Baton Rouge, to the delight of Pastor Battle and their many other friends in the Capital City of the State. Brother Holmes is the lay leader of the Louisiana Conference and one of the most active and useful Christian workers in this section.

Rev. R. T. Pickett sends us the following note: "We have just closed a meeting at Good Hope Church on this (the Williamsburg) charge, in which the preaching was done by Rev. W. M. Williams. There were 24 additions to the Church, nearly all of those received being grown people—10 of them young men." We are pleased to hear of this successful revival and line ingathering of members.

We are pleased to be informed that Mrs. Crichlow, the wife of Dr. R. S. Crichlow, and the daughter of Rev. R. A. Davis of the Louisiana Conference, who has been dangerously ill for some three months, is much better, having lately been removed from the Touro Infirmary to her home, 924 Lowerline Street, this city. The many friends of Mrs. Crichlow will be rejoiced to have this good news concerning her condition.

After spending some time at the residence of her brother, Mr. J. B. Streater, at Black Hawk, Miss., Miss Elizabeth Streater, who for the past two or three years had done such fine work at Guadalajara, Mexico, and who is well known in missionary circles, has gone to Memphis, Tenn., where she is visiting her sister, Mrs. H. C. Williamson. From the Bluff City she will probably go to Chicago for a brief season of rest and study.

The Chattanooga (Tenn.) News reports that Miss Grace Wilson, the gifted authoress and writer, who resides in Chattanooga, has gone to Battle Creek, Michigan, to spend the remainder of the summer there, with her brother, Mr. A. A. Wilson, of Shaw, Miss., who is at that famous resort for his health. We are happy to note that Mr. Wilson's physical condition is said to be improving, and that it is stated that hope is now entertained of his ultimate recovery.

Rev. H. M. Whaling, Jr., a member of the Faculty of Southern Methodist University, writes: "Through the generosity of Mr. W. A. Sutherland, of Las Cruses, New Mexico, the Library of this institution has come into the possession of more than 250 volumes taken from the collection of the Rev. A. H. Sutherland, who was one of the pioneer missionaries of Methodism in Mexico and a life-long friend of the Mexicans. This gift included many valuable books."

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, Treasurer of the Board of Education of the North Mississippi Conference, writes: "Rev. C. A. Parks, of the Kosciusko Circuit, has the honor of being the first pastor in the Durant District to send in a remittance to cover the educational assessment on his charge." Keep your eye on Brother Parks. We predict that if his life is spared his achievements will be writ large in the annals of the North Mississippi Conference in the coming years. Who next?

A letter from Rev. J. F. Foster, pastor of the Bayou La Chute charge, Louisiana Conf., bears the stamp of Lake Junaluska, N. C., where he is sojourning for a brief season. His communication reached us too late to be published in this issue of the Advocate, but will appear next week. We are tempted to steal a note from it, but that would hardly be fair to our worthy correspondent; so we will only say that he and some other Louisianians who are with him are having a great time in the beautiful "Land of the Sky."

Under date of July 31, Rev. W. F. Rogers, of Oakland, Miss., wrote us as follows: "I have just gotten home from Memphis. My wife was operated on at the Baptist Hospital there on Tuesday, July 24, and I am thankful to be able to say that she passed through the trying ordeal all right. She is now thought to be doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances." We are pleased to have this encouraging news concerning Sister Rogers' condition, and we trust that her health will soon be completely restored.

Rev. James G. Galloway, our beloved pastor at Forrest, Miss., writes us as follows: "Things are moving along well with us. It is gratifying indeed to see the large attendance that we are having at prayer meeting. We have a loyal people. Our church here will be dedicated on Sunday, August 19, by Bishop W. B. Murrah." Brother Galloway wrote on a postal card which contained a picture of the house of worship that is to be set aside to sacred uses at the time mentioned, and obviously it is an attractive and most creditable structure.

We have on our desk a pamphlet, entitled "Heaven—Its Meaning, Location, State, and Duration." It is from the pen of Dr. Isaac L. Peebles, of Meridian, Miss., a picture of the well-known author constituting the frontispiece. This discussion is able, clear, and thoroughly Scriptural. Dr. Peebles knows and believes the Bible, and is never so happy as when setting forth its inspired teachings. One could not read this publication without being profited by it. We wish for it a wide circulation. The price is 10 cents a copy, and it may be had by writing the author.

The Bulletin of St. Mark's Hall for July shows commendable activity in the work of that growing mission. The number of visits made was 180; nearly 300 patients were treated in the clinics, and 654 prescriptions were filled. The Boy Scouts and Campfire Girls connected with the mission are measuring up to a good record. Miss Gibson and her associate workers are making their influence strongly felt for good in that section of New Orleans. Two large boxes of clothing were received during the month from the Woman's Missionary Society at Lafayette, La.

The following message was written by Rev. S. A. Brown, our pastor at Kosciusko, Miss., from the Winona Infirmary, at Winona, Miss., on August 5: "I was brought here in a car over a distance of 50 miles and was operated on by Dr. Barksdale on Sunday, July 29, at 7:30 p. m. I had appendicitis and came pretty near waiting too long; but I am doing finely now." We are sorry to be apprised of the illness of this esteemed friend, but are happy to know that he is thought to be on the road to a safe recovery. We pray that he may soon be able to resume his "loved employ."

We have on our desk the catalogue of the Memphis Conference Female Institute at Jackson, Tenn., for 1916-17, which is a finely illustrated and most interesting publication. The Cameo, the College magazine, issued at this institution, is also before us. This school seems to be enjoying a goodly degree of prosperity under the presidency of Rev. H. G. Hawkins, who is pleasantly remembered by many friends and acquaintances within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference. We note that Miss Stella McGehee, a niece of the lamented Bishop Galloway, and an A.B. graduate of Millsaps College, is a member of its Faculty.

We take the following from the Lincoln County Times (Brookhaven, Miss.) of August 2: "Rev. B. F. Jones occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Church here last Sunday night, preaching a scholarly and powerful sermon. He found many new faces in the congregation that were not in it when he served as pastor here, but there were also present many old friends to welcome him." The Times also stated that Dr. Jones, accompanied by Mrs. Jones and their daughters, Misses Janie and Katie, came to Brookhaven in their own Dodge car, greatly enjoying their trip, and that they would visit relatives and friends in Lorman, Leland, Jackson, and Shubuta before returning to their home at Moss Point.

Rev. J. H. Holder, presiding elder of the Sardis (Miss.) District, sends us the reports of the stewards and the treasurer of our church at Coldwater, Miss., made to the congregation for the month of July. These reports are printed, are admirable in form, and make an excellent showing. Brother Holder says: "These reports will give you some idea of Coldwater's plan of financing the church and how it is succeeding. You will note that no assessment has been made and that no one has been asked for a dollar, but that all obligations have been met in full." Brother Holder states that he may give the Advocate a full account of this plan later. The pastor of the Coldwater congregation is Rev. H. G. Roberts.

The Alexandria (La) Daily Town Talk of July 30 contained an extended report of a very strong sermon preached on the preceding Sabbath by our pastor at Alexandria, Rev. W. H. Coleman, from the text, "Render, therefore, unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's, and unto God the things which are God's." After setting forth the Scriptural significance of these words of the Master, the gifted speaked applied them to local conditions, taking the position that, in view of the fact that thousands of troops are soon to be quartered near Alexandria, the high interests of patriotism demand that the saloons he closed and the best moral conditions established there. The Town Talk says: "At the conclusion of the sermon, Mr. Coleman made the proposition, 'All who think that we cannot be truly patriotic in Alexandria without getting rid of the saloons, please stand up.' The large congregation stood up simultaneously, with the exception of possibly half a dozen people." Brother Coleman may be depended upon to speak the right word at the right time.

AN IMPROPER PROCEDURE.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have received what purports to be an "Address to the Church," accompanied by a postal card self-addressed to "The Laymen's Committee, Chattanooga, Tennessee." The Committee desires me to say that I am in substantial accord with the spirit and purposes of the "Address to the Church," and that my name may be used in connection with it.

I am constrained to refuse to allow the use of my name, because I am not in substantial accord with what I conceive to be the spirit and purpose of the address. My reasons, among others, are as follows:

(1) There is nothing to indicate what convention or assembly created the "Laymen's Committee." While there are attached to it the names of several gentlemen, it is not signed by anybody. I would not care to enter into relations with this Committee unless I knew its origin, and to whom it is responsible.

(2) These documents are accompanied by a pamphlet purporting to be published under the authority of Dr. Ed. F. Cook, at one time connected with our Board of Missions. This pamphlet deals with certain differences alleged to have arisen between the Bishops and the Board. In my opinion, these matters should have first been presented before a General Conference, and not, in what appears to be a clandestine manner, to a select few.

(3) I cannot endorse the spirit of this movement because it has the ear-marks of what would be called in any other than ecclesiastical circles, a conspiracy. It appears to be an attempt to organize a clique to influence the next General Conference—for the purpose of affecting the legislation of the Conference and of attacking the status and action of the Bishops. So to speak, an attempt to submarine the Bishops without warning.

(4) I cannot endorse what I understand to be the purpose of this "Laymen's Committee." The Southern Methodist Church has prospered under its present organization. While modifications in our form of government may be needed, the purposes set forth by this Committee would, in my opinion, have the effect of changing our Church from an Episcopal government to a Congregational government. Incidentally, another purpose is apparently to settle a few old scores with the Bishops.

(5) I do not like this form of attack on the Bishops. Our Bishops are men who may, perhaps, from time to time fall into error, but I believe that Bishops, as well as other men who are accused, have a right to be presented with a formal statement, to know who their accusers are, to be confronted by the witnesses who testify against them, and to be tried in open court. I do not like the "Laymen's Committee" plan of secret organization of court, trial and judgment all in advance of the public proceedings of the great Methodist tribunal—the General Conference.

The Bishops cannot defend themselves before this "Laymen's Committee" because they have not been publicly accused, and because it would be beneath their dignity to plead before any other tribunal other than that of public opinion, or the General Conference. The gentlemen who have initiated these proceedings have not reflected that in some quarters their methods of procedure would be characterized as unfair and unmanly, if not cowardly.

The writer holds no brief for the Bishops. His judgment has not been in accord with all of the actions of the College of Bishops. But he does believe that the Bishops, as a body, are wise, able, and consecrated men, and that if any change in their status is contemplated, or any penalty for any action that they may have taken is to be imposed, that change and that penalty should be at the hands of the General Conference in open session, and not at the behest of a self-appointed "Laymen's Committee," whose plans are laid, and whose decisions have been arrived at, prior to the meeting of the Conference.

"Difficile est satiram non scribere."

Yours truly and fraternally,

H. H. WHITE.

Mrs. J. Y. Bradfield, of Daingerfield, Texas, the mother of Dr. W. D. Bradfield, editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, died at a sanitarium in Dallas on July 20, after a brief illness. Dr. Bradfield will have the sympathy of many friends throughout the Church in the great sorrow which has come to him.

Rev. George H. Crowell, D. D., has been elected to the presidency of Logan Female College, at Russellville, Ky. Dr. Crowell was formerly engaged in school work in Arkansas. As some will perhaps remember, he visited some of the Annual Conferences down this way a couple of years ago in the interest of the Junaluska enterprise.

YOUR BOY DESERVES THE BEST.

Every great school, college or university has been built around the personality of some one man. The educated men of America who have accomplished great things and who stand well in professions look back on their college training and attribute much of their accomplishments to the dominating personality of the school in which they were educated. The dominating personality of Morgan School is that of Professor R. K. Morgan. His influence for good and better things does much toward the molding of morals and stimulating of broader ideas in the students who are so fortunate as to attend Morgan School.

The thoughtful, considerate parent feels that the school to which he sends his son must be equipped and its faculty chosen with the primary end of training the boy to become a man—to teach true Christian faith, to develop manly independence and self-confidence, to inspire high ideals of life and service, to strengthen and develop mind and body alike.

Such an institution is the Morgan School, of Fayetteville, Tenn., which has been built up around the Christian character and wholesome, inspiring personality of Robert K. Morgan, who has been principal for 25 years. Graduating from the Webb School, Bellbuckle, Tenn., and Vanderbilt University, Mr. Morgan has devoted his life to the training of boys. He is the man to train your boy. The close, personal instruction and association with clean, high-minded men will help him wonderfully. A postal card to Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Fayetteville, Tenn., will bring you a catalog and full information about this school.

Freckles—

The fairer the skin the more ugly it is when marred by freckles; and they are not necessary at all. As soon as the warm sunshine or the hot winds bring them out, and with the natural embarrasment that every woman feels, get a package of Kintho; this is the easy way to remove them. If Kintho is used at the first sign of the ugly spots, they'll sometimes disappear overnight. Any druggist has or can get Kintho for you. Use Kintho soap too. It's astonishing how it helps keep the freckles away once Kintho has removed them.

WILLIE ANDERSON CARLISLE, son of Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle, was born on Feb. 24, 1906, and died on July 12, 1917. He had been sick with typhoid fever for five weeks. He was a patient little sufferer, never complaining of anything until Friday before he died. He was delirious for several days and often talked of going home in his wanderings. The first week that he was in bed he sang much of the time "Little ones like me." After he began to suffer so much he said "Oh, Lord, help me," and then looking up into my face he said, "Mother, will he help me?" He seemed to realize that he was in a dangerous condition. He joined the Church at the age of nine years and often spoke of how he would tell the gospel when he became a man. Our home has a vacant chair. A little voice has been stilled, and a father's heart is sore and bleeding. The little brother is lonesome, but he tries, in his childish way, to comfort "daddy" and sister by telling them, "Willie has gone to live with our other mamma and is in heaven, having a good time. We can go to him." MOTHER.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolutions were recently adopted by the Woman's Missionary Society at Coahoma, Miss.:

Whereas, God in his infinite wisdom has removed from this Society one of its members, Mrs. S. F. PHILLIPS, and realizing that we sadly miss her, not only in our Society work, but in all church associations; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That our Society has lost a most faithful and efficient member and that we sorrow that she is with us no more.

2. That we hereby express our sympathy to her family in the great loss that they have sustained.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes; a copy sent to her family, and a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: Mrs. J. W. Wheeler, Mrs. J. E. Stephens, Mrs. E. M. Fant, Committee.

MRS. SARAH ELIZABETH SMYLIE.

Physical life ceased with Sister Sarah Elizabeth Smylie, of Meridian, Miss., on March 20, 1917, at the advanced age of 86 years and 3 months.

As Moses would term her period of life, it was by "reason of strength" that she spanned it. Three score years and ten were fixed by our Lord as the average life of our race because of its sins, but despite that fact he has left latitudes for four score years and more to those of super-average from superior stamina.

Sister Smylie's body was so fortified against the weakness and waste of diseases that she was able by God's grace to reach an unusual limit of earthly existence. Her resisting, recuperating and eliminating powers were of that type that prolonged physical life and retarded her progress towards eternity.

She was born at China Grove, near Columbia, Miss., on December 20, 1831. Subsequently her parents moved to Hinds County, near Jackson, Miss., where she was favored with the freedom and joys of life on a large plantation. Her parents were Mr. Ralph and Mrs. Sarah Stovall. On Oct. 24, 1854, she was wedded to Rev. J. J. Smylie, who subsequently died, being an honorable member of the Mississippi Conference. To them ten children were born, of whom the following survive: Mrs. Norman Ferguson, familiarly known as Miss Sallie Smylie; R. N. Smylie, Miss Eva Smylie, and W. S. Smylie.

In 1870 her husband received his first appointment as an itinerant preacher during the session of the Mississippi Conference in Meridian. After her husband's decease on January 1, 1881, she moved to Meridian, where she lived and died.

Being a devoted Methodist, her home was always a resting-place for yearned preachers. Nothing seemed to afford her more pleasure than that of entertaining preachers. Soon after her arrival in Meridian, she deposited her membership with the Central Methodist Church, where it remained until her departure.

She was very fond of Miss McLelland who was married in her home to Rev. J. W. Lambuth, D. D., and who, with him, went to China, and later to Japan. Her children were very devoted to her and if any one of them deserves special notice in the matter, it is Mrs. Norman Ferguson (Miss Sallie), whose attention and devotion to her mother was unusual.

Sister Smylie's exit from earth to eternity was undisturbed by the gathering shadows that closed her vision on terrestrial scenes, in order to open it on those of the celestial regions.

May God comfort her children who miss her presence and counsel, not only with the proof they have of her glorious triumph and that she now rests on the throne with our blessed Jesus, but with those blessings so essential to the training of their faith and intensifying of their love in bereavements—those blessings that are helpful to readiness to meet Christ in Judgment. (John. 5:22.)

LET IT NOT BE SO.

May I say to you solemnly, if England should lose this war because of drink (and drink, we believe, is now the only enemy that can defeat her), or if England should unnecessarily prolong the war with great sacrifice of life in her effort to protect the drink, or even if England should win the war in spite of drink, you will have put upon the bonds of empire, in relation to the overseas dominion, such a strain as they have not known before, and such a strain as we cannot promise they will be able to survive.—Rev. John McNeil.

Men who say they don't go to church now because they had too much of it when they were boys are seldom observed to apply the same rule to apple pie.—Continent.

WHAT? WHAT? WHAT?

To write or not to write—"that's the question," and what to write is another. But the Elder, "came and saw," and said please write. Of course, not about himself, and how can I in modesty write about myself? "Aye, there's the rub," for when one begins to write of either himself or the other fellow what "dreams may come"—("in the sky.") As to the Elder, I must ask consideration; don't shoot him, brethren; don't mistake him for one of those creatures of which Job writes in the 11th Chapter, 12th verse, and the last three words; for I assure you he's a real, live Elder, though dressed up cap-a-pie in "Kool Kloth;" and some said, "Who'd a tho't it?" To any who ever heard Dr. Palmore's story of the typical presiding elder, I would say ours doesn't class; he's a sui generis. He loves to preach, and does it well, and comes as near "scatterlofisticating" himself all over the "equinimity" of the district as possible, with the railroads at his command. Briefly, he's a hustler, eats no idle bread, and no grass grows under his feet (nor in his garden, I'm told.)

Occasionally, we see Wells. He and Oak Ridge are still in statu quo in their mutual admiration party. Wells is burning much gasoline, covering large ground, and "they say," preaching fine sermons. I haven't heard him, therefore can't endorse this statement. Suffice it to say that the Elder and the dear people say he's the man. Since Chapman left the work, we don't hear much from there. Chapman stuck to the railroads, but Graves rides in an auto which has been auto-matically sealed up, because of the river road. At this writing, we learn that he is at Harriston helping Brother Hopper. They are "the before-and-after takings" of the district. We wish them great success. I was told that Chapman passed through the hub recently on his way to Rolling Fork. Whether on fish or pleasure bent, could not be learned. Whenever a fellow gets a taste of these Delta perch, no amount of resin can hold him away, and that explains. Chap, we two are mad.

I met a man from Anguilla the other day and asked about Ferguson, the silent, only to be told laconically that "Napoleon and Grant were silent men, and Ferguson's in their class." I suppose he meant as a doer of things.

The mud line has been under water, and Foreman has been cut off, but, by way of the Yazoo Sentinel, we hear favorably of him and the folks up the creek. When I was working under regular commission the Elder said the territory extended from Harriston north; but all the other fellows are of age, so let them speak for themselves. If they have received as many personal letters from Mr. Hoover, Secretary McAdoo and President Wilson, as I have, telling of their importance in the Liberty Bond, Red Cross, and Conservation movements, they may feel too puffed up to write even to the New Orleans Advocate. Seriously, Doctor, the Church has come to her rightful place in the estimation of the world powers, and I have wondered if one of the beneficial results to humanity to come from this awful conflagration—may not be a "back-to-God" movement and the development of more respect for his Church, than has existed these fifty years. I have both French and German friends who tell me that the Bible has never been so prized as now among their boys in the trenches, and that prayer was never more serious among their people. God be praised. "Ho! every one that thirsts."

Lest some one should think that I had forgotten McVey, I must remind that his borders are like unto those of Dan of Laish, and even something like the possessions of the lamented Blennerhasset, all to himself; and that he is lord of all he surveys, for does he not border on the great Mississippi, with the Yazoo on his south, and Steel's bayou on his east, and his borders on the north extendeth even to the North Mississippi Conference line. Great are his possessions from Mayersville, to the mouth of the Yazoo River. Just yesterday I learned of his visit to Brunswick in the interest of peace—not, however, the German place of that name. His message was well received; so said Brother Millsaps.

For two weeks Brother Lewis at Gibson Memorial, with Miss Cook of Hattiesburg in charge of the music, has been making a good record—good congregations, good sermons, good singing, and good reports. He has set no limit to the efforts, but moves as the interest indicates best. Already several have joined the Church and reclamations are frequent. Gibson Memorial is rapidly coming to the front. This is resulting from the wise guidance of faithful men, and is it not written, "One soweth and another reapeth?" David the collector, Solomon the builder, and Nathan the prophet all entered into the success of the Temple worship.

One of your readers has charged that I never report from Crawford Street. Well, how can I, and escape great condemnation, for are we not warned, "woe unto you when all men speak well of you," and then again, we are admonished, "Think not more highly of your self than you ought to think. So, is a fellow not in a "strait betwixt two?" A visiting brother asked, "How are you getting along?" without thinking, it came: "Not at all; standing still." We hope, however, that we keep St. Paul's injunction to the Church at Ephesus, as to breastplate, shield, helmet, and sword. Twenty-eight have we been added to the roll, and half as many have gone elsewhere.

Our Sunday school keeps up to the high water mark, despite the hot days. The Epworth League is taking on new life; but the pastor, though he prepare ever so diligently, gets little chance at these; and, Doctor, what a responsibility rests upon the leaders of these departments in this day! I heard Bishop Keener on one occasion lament the fact that there were two streams every Sunday in our cities: one of the children from the Church, while the parents were going to it; and I fear that that stream has only grown the larger and the stronger as to the children. But here's a good place to stop. My, how hot it is!

Calomel To-Day, Sick To-Morrow

Dose of nasty calomel makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Calomel sallvates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel to-day you'll be sick and nauseated to-morrow; besides, it may sallvate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.

HUSBAND SAVED HIS WIFE

Stopped Most Terrible Suffering by Getting Her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Denison, Texas. — "After my little girl was born two years ago I began suffering with female trouble and could hardly do my work. I was very nervous but just kept dragging on until last summer when I got where I could not do my work. I would have a chill every day and hot flashes and dizzy spells and my head would almost burst. I got where I was almost a walking skeleton and life was a burden to me until one day my husband's stepsister told my husband if he did not do something for me I would not last long and told him to get your medicine. So he got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and after taking the first three doses I began to improve. I continued its use, and I have never had any female trouble since. I feel that I owe my life to you and your remedies. They did for me what doctors could not do and I will always praise it wherever I go."—Mrs. G. O. LOWERY, 419 W. Monterey Street, Denison, Texas.

If you are suffering from any form of female ills, get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and commence the treatment without delay.

How Long Must I Suffer From the Pangs of Rheumatism?

Is there no real relief in sight?

Doubtless like other sufferers, you have often asked yourself this question, which continues to remain unanswered.

Science has proven that your Rheumatism is caused by a germ in your blood, and the only way to reach it is by a remedy which eliminates and removes these little pain demons from your blood. This explains why liniments and lotions can do no permanent good, for they cannot possibly reach these germs which infest your blood by the millions.

S. S. S. has been successfully used for Rheumatism for more than fifty years. Try it to-day, and you will find yourself at last on the right track to get rid of your Rheumatism. You can get valuable advice about the treatment of your individual case by writing to the Chief Medical Adviser, Swift Specific Co., Dept. D Atlanta, Ga.

LOUISIANA EPWORTH LEAGUE.

The seventeenth annual session of the Louisiana Epworth League held a successful session in Baton Rouge First Church, July 26-29, 1917, with 37 delegates representing the four corners of the State present. Addresses on League topics, especially emphasizing the devotional and missionary sides of League endeavor and the part the organizations should play in war times, were made during the two days' session.

As a result of the meeting, a conservative pledge of $555 was made by the twenty chapters represented for the African Mission Special, which is supported by money raised by the Leagues of the Church. Each district represented pledged itself to pay at least $35 before September 1 for the support of State work.

It was reported that there were about 80 active Leagues in the State, with a membership of 3009. The Treasurer's report showed $80.60 collected for the Central Office, $118.80 expended for State work, and $477.96 raised for the African Mission.

The new State Epworth League Cabinet elected is: President, T. L. Caroway, Shreveport, First Church; Vice President, S. A. Mayo, Lake Charles; Secretary, Miss Thelma Cayard, Algiers; Treasurer, Miss Bessie Wells, Lake Charles; Junior League Superintendent, Mrs. J. M. Henry, Ruston.

The new President intends to have State departmental officers appointed, and has named H. L. Johns of Baton Rouge as Fourth Department Superintendent.

Extension work in the seven districts and a vigorous campaign to collect the African Special missionary money will feature the year's program. A cabinet meeting will be held in Lake Charles early in September.

SENSATION OF THE YEAR IN MEDICINE NOW ON SALE.

Calotabs, the New Calomel Tablet That Does Not Gripe, Nauseate Nor Salivate, Proves an Interesting Surprise to Druggists.

The horrors of Saturday night Calomel-taking are a thing of the past. According to druggists, the new de-nauseated calomel tablet is a grand success, the triumph of modern pharmacy. Not the slightest danger or unpleasantness attends its use and yet it exhibits all of the liver-cleansing qualities of the old-style calomel.

There can be no doubt that calomel is the most valuable and universally useful of all medicines and now that its objectionable qualities have been removed its popularity will have no bounds. One tablet on the tongue at bedtime, a swallow of water, no taste or unpleasantness whatever. The next morning you are feeling fine, liver clean, splendid appetite. Eat what you please—no danger. In ordering the new de-nauseated calomel tablets ask for "Calotabs." Sold only in original and sealed packages containing twenty doses, price thirty-five cents. Your druggist has authority to refund your money if you are not perfectly delighted with Calotabs.—Adv.

A GREAT MEETING.

Dear Mr. Editor: We closed a meeting last week on the Greensburg work with Brother Henry, the pastor. This was a great meeting. More than 300 persons were either converted or reclaimed in the revival. Two young men, as fine young fellows as could be found in the State, gave themselves to the ministry. One of these is already an upper classman at the Southern Methodist University, and the other will, I feel sure, present himself to the Conference, finally, with a college degree. Twenty or thirty family altars were erected. To God and our King be the glory!

We are to begin the Bluff Creek camp meeting to-morrow night. All indications point to a great meeting.

AS GOD SEES IT.

As we see death, it means decay, removal, absence—things which we do not prize. But as God sees death, He beholds something really precious to Him, and, we may justly infer, precious to us, for whatever is against us cannot be precious to our Father. We are looking on the wrong side of the tapestry, where all is tangle and confusion. God sees the right side, where the design is intelligent and the colors are harmonious. We stand in the dark, believing and hoping: God is in the light, seeing and knowing.—A. C. Dixon.

TRY THIS FOR YOUR HEALTH.

For diseases which do not readily yield to drug treatment, such as chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, rheumatism, uric acid poisoning, and diseases of the kidneys, bladder, and liver, the best physicians send their wealthy patients to the famous mineral springs. Some even spent months at the Spas of Europe and were almost invariably benefited, or permanently relieved.

I believe that the Shivar Spring is the greatest mineral spring ever discovered and I believe it so firmly that I offer to send you enough water for a three week's treatment (two five-gallon demijohns) on my guarantee that if it fails to benefit your case I will refund the price. You would hardly believe me if I told you that only about two out of a hundred, on the average, say that they have received no benefit. The water is restoring thousands. It restored my health when my friends and physicians thought my case was incurable and I am willing and anxious for you to match your faith in the Spring against my pocketbook. If I win you become a life-friend of the Spring. If I lose I will be sorry for you but I will appreciate your courtesy in giving the water a trial and will gladly refund your money on request. Sign the following letter:

Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold, rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts, which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood. The cause of rheumatism is uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expells the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of your rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh, of the Nashville Railway and Light Company, says: "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. GIRLS! MAKE A BEAUTY LOTION WITH LEMONS

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier, by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It should naturally help to whiten, soften, freshen and bring out the roses and beauty of any skin. It is truly marvelous to smoothen rough, red hands.

ECZEMA Ringworm, Tetter, and other skin diseases promptly and permanently disappear when Tetterine is used. Tetterine is a fragrant salve; perfectly harmless. It is the best remedy known for cutaneous diseases and itching piles, and is used extensively by the best physicians. 50c a box. Sold by druggists or by mail from

UNCHANGEABLE TO THE LAST.

A dour old Scot upon his deathbed was informed by his wife that the minister was coming to pray with him. "I dinna want anybody tae pray wi' me," said he. "Well, then, he'll speak words of comfort tae ye." "I don't want tae hear words of comfort," said the intractable Northcountryman. "What do you want, then?" asked his wife. "I want," was the characteristic reply, "I want tae argue."—Arch. Alexander.

THE SCARRITT BIBLE AND TRAINING SCHOOL.

Commencement Events.

Mrs. H. R. Jackson.

On this, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Scarritt Bible and Training School it was most fitting that the exercises should commence with a pageant showing forth the work accomplished in these years of constant effort in the Master's service. Friday, May 11, was a rarely beautiful spring day—one that seemed made to order for the purpose of celebrating the Silver Anniversary out of doors. Miss Edna Lee Booker, of California, had prepared a pageant called "The Spirit of Scarritt," and dainty programs in white and silver were ready to be distributed to the audience. The lawn on the east side, being about four feet above the tennis court, presented a natural stage, beautifully arranged as a woodland scene in which the dainty drapery of the young ladies created an animated flower garden. The "spirit of Scarritt" was well represented by Mrs. Grace Driver in a flowing robe of white and green, the school colors emblematic of purity and perennial youth. The heralds were attractively attired in rose-colored cloaks and caps.

The Prologue gave a short history of the school and this was followed by a representation of the school life, beginning with the seniors welcoming their "dear juniors" at the station; then the domestic life was represented by the wheel song, telling of the "system of great merit" originated by Miss Billingsley. All phases of the work engaged in by the students, and the school curriculum were personated in a charming and skilful manner. The costumes of many lands displayed knowledge of foreign customs and rendered the scene gay with vivid colors. The stately Chinese mandarin and Korean lady and child were strong contrasts to the mountain maid and Zulu belle. Miss Sue Mann well represented "the heathen in (her) blindness," which the sweet "spirit of Scarritt" changed to light and joy. Not the least attractive feature was the pretty Blue Birds and Camp-fire girls of Institutional church representing the field work of the students. The Westport High School orchestra, directed by Mrs. Hedges, furnished music for the occasion. The audience was large and most gratifyingly appreciative. Much credit and thanks are due Miss Anna McCoy Francis who so ably counseled and assisted the gifted author and assistants. The conclusion of this long-to-be remembered afternoon was the Ivy Planting and Alma Mater song.

Sunday was bright and the usual Commencement sermon was preached by Rev. C. N. Clark, of Troost Avenue Church. Kind friends had as usual made Melrose Church bright with flowers to honor the graduates. As Bishop Hendrix was not at home, the afternoon communion service which he makes so solemnly beautiful and sacred, was not held—much to the disappointment of the Scarritt seniors who claim him as spiritual father and "our Bishop." Miss Gibson conducted the closing vesper service wherein several former students testified to the influence of the school upon their lives. Miss Mattie Anderson, deaconess; Miss Bess Combs, missionary at home from China, and Miss Raffo who will sail for China in August, all told of their gratitude and love for their Alma Mater, their main thought being that "the passing years but add to our love for the dear Training School home."

Monday being Alumnae Day the Silver celebration was beautifully continued. After the business session in the parlors, an audience assembled in the chapel for the regular program. Miss Scott, the President of the Alumnae Association, presided. Mrs. Hargrove gave one of her inimitable Bible lessons on "Heroic Womanhood," followed by Miss Scott in a brief tribute to her Alma Mater and a poem to "our own Miss Gibson." Miss Combs read numerous letters bearing loving messages and congratulation from Scarritt's daughters in various fields of work. The strong note in all these was a tribute to the principal, Miss Gibson, who had been the color-bearer of the white cross for twenty-five years. Rev. J. F. Caskey spoke on the theme: "What Miss Gibson Has Meant to the Church Work;" then Mrs. Owen told what Miss Gibson had meant to Melrose Church and this community, which she did in her own gracious way, giving just tribute to the one we all "delight to honor." After a violin and piano musical selection by two children representing the second generation of Scarritt as grandchildren, Miss Scott had a small table brought forward and requested Miss Gibson to come to the chancel where she presented her with a silver sandwich plate from some of the Scarritt nurses; then Miss Shaffer presented a small velvet case containing a silver tablet on which was engraved a picture of the school, and dates commemorative of the years of consecrated service. This was a token of love from the sixty members of the Alumnae who had met at the recent session of the Woman's Missionary Council in New Orleans. After this, Miss Scott uncovered the table and displayed three hundred silver dollars which, with faltering voice and moist eyes, she presented to Miss Gibson as a love gift from her loyal daughters. Only our own Miss Gibson's wonderful poise could have stood the test of all this gratitude and love so freely poured forth to do her honor, and even she could not altogether keep the tears out of her voice as she responded in a short appreciation. How beautiful it was thus to "bring flowers to the living" when she could feel the throb of the warmly beating hearts of those whom her prayers and holy living had upheld and influenced for years!

When the formal program had closed, and congratulations were over, all were invited to the parlors where an immense cake decorated with shamrock leaves occupied the center of a round table, and Miss Gibson was requested to cut it and distribute to her friends. The president of the junior class, with her assistants, refreshed the guests with fruit punch. The only shadow on the occasion was the absence of two whose personality and service have meant so much to this institution: Miss Belle H. Bennett, in whose great heart God planted the seed thought which has grown into the school, and Bishop Hendrix, the President of its Board of Trustees and its adviser throughout the years.

On Tuesday night, May 15, the chapel looked beautiful in flowers and palms, and never did a fairer, sweeter or more lovely class assemble to receive their diplomas, or to listen to the inspiring message given by Bishop Hendrix, which they will hear with them as "precious seed" to scatter in their fields of labor.

Having thus celebrated the Silver Anniversary of the School, and the Commencement exercises, the Alumnae and Faculty, look forward toward a still fairer future, with the school motto as their watchword:

"Attempt great things for God—Expect great things from God."

CALLED HOME.

Word reached us a few days ago of the passing away of Miss Helen Lee Richardson, of McTyeire School, Shanghai, China. No particulars were given except that tonsilitis was the malady to which she succumbed, passing from her earthly home to her heavenly one where she is at rest from her "labors abundant."

Miss Richardson was born in 1864, on Bayou Teche, La., but afterwards moved with her parents to Missouri. The Woman's Board accepted her for work in China in 1889, and, after attending the Training School in Chicago for one year, she left San Francisco on September 4, reaching Shanghai on October 9, 1890. Her first four years in China were spent in the Clopton School. Since then her work has been in the McTyeire School, and only eternity will reveal the strength and beauty of the work she wrought among her beloved Chinese.

Such a life as hers cannot easily be replaced, for truly Christ was "all, and in all" to her, and not only the girls and young women who came under the influence of her consecrated life "will rise up and call her blessed," but officials and men from every walk in life will hasten to pay their tribute. She was "fruitful in good works" and "increased in the knowledge of God" daily, and thus was enabled to wield a mighty influence for God in China. We cannot estimate the loss which her going home will cause!

Her one desire was "to know Him and the power of his resurrection," and now her body is "fashioned like unto his glorious body" and her "patience of hope" is at last realized, for she no longer waits for the Son but is at home with Him in heaven.

Iron Is Greatest of All Strength Builders, Says Doctor

A Secret of the Great Endurance and Powers of Athletes

Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Delicate, Nervous, Rundown People 100 Per Cent. Stronger in Two Weeks' Time in Many Cases.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Most people foolishly seem to think they are going to get renewed health and strength from some stimulating medicine, secret nostrum or narcotic drug, said Dr. E. Saner, a Boston Physician who has studied widely both in this country and Great European Medical Institutions when, as a matter of fact, real and true strength can only come from the food you eat. But people often fail to get the strength out of their food because they haven't enough iron in their blood to enable it to change food into living matter. From their weakened, nervous condition they know something is wrong but they can't tell what, so they generally commence doctoring for stomach, liver or kidney trouble or symptoms of some other ailment caused by lack of iron in the blood. This thing may go on for years, while the patient suffers untold agony. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next, take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr. E. Saner, is one of the newer organic iron compounds. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The Manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

Homewood, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: I have just closed my meeting at Homewood, Miss. Brother J. M. Corley assisted and gave me splendid help. We were well organized and ready for the meeting. We owe much to our great Sunday school, as nearly all the new members came from it. There were 51 accessions to the Church. We have a fine Sunday school of 130 pupils. Mr. W. M. Tadlock is our very efficient superintendent. We have a class of nine in this school taking the teacher-training course, which adds much to the spirituality of the church. Brother Corley is good help in a meeting. He never tires. We are happy out here, but the people of this section are hard run financially.—M. L. White, P. C.

Dear Brother Meek: We closed our revival services at New Hope Church last Sunday. We were assisted by Brother J. H. Bell, one of the Evangelists of the North Mississippi Conference, and his singer, Brother Paul Templeton, of Meridian, Miss. Brother Bell is a good gospel preacher. He "cries aloud and spares not." Sin in all forms is rebuked. His methods are plain. Thus he gives the Holy Spirit a chance to do His work. Brother Paul Templeton with his splendid voice brought the gospel to us in song. These brethren are mighty men of God and would do any church good. We were so glad to have them with us. We had a good meeting, and we think the work done will abide. Quite a number gave testimony to the blessings that came to their hearts. A number believed to their salvation. Some who had never prayed in public prayed aloud and some family altars were erected. We "praise God from whom all blessings flow."—R. E. Rutledge, P. C.

NERVOUSNESS AND DISORDERS OF THE NERVOUS SYSTEM.

The energy that gives life to the body is known to be nerve force. It is this hidden energy that creates the difference between the living and the dead body. It is the indefinable something that the body is robbed of in death.

Irregular distribution of the nerve-force is responsible for many of the disorders of the system. Consequently any remedy that has the power to soothe the irritated nerves, thus regulating the supply of nervous energy, is of inestimable value.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is such a medicine. It not only soothes the irritated nerves, but it induces a more regular distribution of the nerveforce, and thus assists the bodily organs in performing their proper functions. Furthermore, it induces a natural sleep, which is nature's greatest tonic and strengthener.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is especially recommended in cases of Sick, Bilious and Nervous Headache; Epilepsy; Fits; Irregular, Profuse and Painful Menses; Neuralgia; Sciatica; Sleeplessness; Melancholy; Backache; Nervous Irritation and Nervous Dyspepsia.

For more than 25 years Dr. Miles' Nervine has been largely used, and the success that it has met with on all sides is the best proof of its merit.

If you think that Dr. Miles' Nervine is suited to your case, procure a bottle from your druggist, take it according to directions, which you will find wrapped around the bottle, and then if you are not benefited return the empty bottle, one only, to your druggist and he will return your money in full. The Miles Medical Co. repays him the full retail price, so there is no reason why he should not return your money promptly.

AN INTERESTING BIRTH-DAY CELEBRATION.

On July 19, Brother Aaron Spain, familialy known as "Uncle A.," celebrated his 80th birthday, in the midst of quite a concourse of relatives and friends. The affair, which was in the nature of a surprise to the honoree, was planned and perfectly carried out by his three daughters, the only surviving members of a family of eight children. Brother Spain is one of the founders of Oak Grove Church (Methodist) on the Booneville Circuit, where a meeting was being conducted by Brother T. H. Dorsey, for the pastor, Brother J. D. Boggs. After the 11 o'clock service, a large number of relatives and friends repaired to a neighboring Baptist Church, where there is a perennial spring of unusually fine water. Here, under the spreading boughs of sturdy oaks, suggestive of the rugged strength of Brother Spain, was spread such a repast as one rarely sees—it would have been graded perfect in quantity, quality and preparation, by any Committee on Domestic Science or Culinary Art. It is well no tables were used; they would not merely have groaned—they would have staggered beneath their burdens of good things; the bare mention of which, Meek, would set even an Editor's mouth to watering. About 100 partook of this feast for the physical man, which was a fitting supplement to the splendid, helpful sermon, full of spiritual food, with which we had just been uplifted and edified by Brother Dorsey.

All present were in their happiest mood, each heart delighting to do honor to this fine citizen, splendid Christian, and true man, for these three phases epitomize the character of Brother Spain. Born in the rugged, pioneer days of the South's history, he boasts not the education of colleges and schools; but by self-training, close observation and right, progressive living, he has grown broad, robust and strong with his eighty years; and is to-day as clear of mental vision, as sound in judgment and keenly alive to all that is best in Christianity and citizenship, as if the sun of his life were standing at its noon-day meridian. He is an octogenarian only in ripeness of wisdom, fullness of experience, and richness of character; otherwise the years have failed to exact their full toll at his hands.

As a Confederate soldier, he made an enviable record in the defense of his country's cause; as a Christian citizen through the half-century since that unfortunate struggle, he has scored high in all that makes for the best advancement of the home, the community, and the State. His fine native ability and rich store of "common sense," combined with a physical energy and industry which make him at eighty the wonder of all who know him, have rendered him through these years one of the leading spirits of his county. The years have not outrun him, but he has kept pace with all their development, in the application of scientific knowledge and methods to farming, road-making and the other practical affairs of life.

He projected and personally helped to build the first good road—in the modern acceptance of that term—in Prentiss County; advocating such progressive enterprises when younger men opposed and fought the movement. Unassuming and modest, by virtue of his simple faith in God, kindly disposition and Christian integrity, he is a leader among his fellow-men.

For fifty years and more, he has been a faithful, liberal steward in the Methodist Church. The neat, attractive church building at Oak Grove, is the offspring of his love, to the Church of his choice.

May many more years be added to this useful life; and may God continue to bless the country with men of his type!

LET PARENTS GIVE ATTENTION.

The disclosure made by Prof. James H. Lueba, of Bryn Mawr College, in his book, "The Belief in God and Immortality," concerning the religious views of eminent scholars and teachers (made after a careful investigation) has attracted considerable attention and provoked a good deal of discussion. Not so much, however, has been said concerning the equally important revelation respecting the influence that some educational institutions are exercising upon the religious faith of their students. We venture to quote from a current magazine the following summary of Prof. Lueba's inquiries and findings concerning this momentous matter:

"Two of these investigations were with college students, the first group represented by 927 replies from 289 men and 638 women, located in nine representative colleges and one normal school. These people were from eighteen to twenty-one years of age. The questions put to them were:

"1. Do you think of God as a personal or impersonal being? 2. What difference do you make between a personal and impersonal being? 3. Describe as fully as you can how, under what image, or images, you think of God—distinguish here between what in your description is for you merely an image, and what is the reality. 4. What difference would the non-existence of God make in your daily life? (p. 187).

"The answers were returned signed or unsigned at the pleasure of the writers. Most interesting variations in the replies are given in excerpts in the chapter, but the tabulation of conclusions showed that 31 per cent of the men and 11 per cent of the women conceive of God as impersonal; if doubtful replies be added to these figures, the percentages will be 40.5 per cent for men, and 15.7 per cent for women. * * *

"The second investigation is a study exclusively of belief in immortality in one representative American college of high grade, whose students represent affiliations among all the important Protestant denominations and a few Roman Catholics. Here, the most striking result is the high percentage of believers in the lower classes, and the relatively high percentage of disbiievers in the higher classes. Only 15 per cent of the Freshmen reject immortality, while 32 per cent of the Juniors have given it up." (Prof. Lueba, who conducted this investigation, is not a sectarian, but is himself a "liberal;" his object was not to aid the cause of orthodoxy or Christian education.)

The students mentioned above as being affiliated with Protestant religious denominations, and probably from Christian homes, as they are seen in such an atmosphere with their faith in God and immortality dwindling away, certainly present a pathetic spectacle. Truly there is in this day no more important question for Christian parents than that of where to educate their sons and daughters. AND WE DO NOT HESITATE TO AFFIRM THAT THE SAFEST PLACE FOR THEM IS IN OUR OWN CHURCH SCHOOLS.

It may not be amiss, in this connection, to mention by name the educational institutions of our Church in Mississippi and Louisiana, which we heartily commend to our people. They are: Grenada College, Grenada, Miss.; Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss.; Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss.; Port Gibson Female College, Port Gibson, Miss.; Mississippi Conference Training School, Montrose, Miss.; Seashore Campground Training School, Biloxi, Miss; Centenary College of Louisiana, Shreveport, La., and Mansfield College for Young Ladies, Mansfield, La. Besides these, there are our two Universities in Atlanta and Dallas, Mississippi being in the patronizing territory of the former, and Louisiana of the latter.

A SIGNIFICANT EXPRESSION.

"Honoring the Holy Spirit," was an expression frequently upon the lips of Methodist preachers two or three decades ago—by which they meant that a due regard must be had for the deity of this Third Person of the Trinity and the need of his leadership and assistance in Christian growth and effort. The fact that this expression is not so much heard among us now may help to explain why there are not more penitents at the altars of our churches and more earnest seekers after high attainments in grace in our congregations. The Holy Spirit does not, as a rule, thrust his co-operation upon people, but manifests his power most where the need of his aid is felt and his presence and help are earnestly sought. He may be resisted or neglected until he largely withdraws himself from men and women and leaves them to struggle and toil in their own puny strength.

Nothing is more outstanding in the farewell messages of our Lord to his disciples than the emphasis he put upon the coming of the Holy Ghost after his departure and the importance of his mission. "And I will pray the Father and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him; but ye know him, for he dwelleth with you and shall be in you." (John 14: 16, 17...."But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." (John 14:26)....."Nevertheless, I tell you the truth: it is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart I will send him unto you. And when he is come he will reprove the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment. * * * I have yet many things to say unto you but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit, when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth." (John 16:7, 8, 13.)

The first disciples, notwithstanding their years of training at the Master's hands, were not adjudged fit for the tasks that lay before them until after Pentecost; and all through the Book of Acts we see them moving and laboring under the conscious direction of the Holy Spirit. Are the privileges of believers less in this day? May we not -at least still have a realizable empowerment and guidance by this great Executive of the Godhead?

Glibly we recite in our temples of worship on the holy Sabbath: "I believe in the Holy Ghost." is it really true that you do, as the Scriptures set forth his nature and work? This is a question that many of us would do well to meditate upon prayerfully and searchingly.

"THE PERSONALITY OF GOD"—AN ILLUMINATING DISCUSSION.

The July number of the Biblical Review Quarterly, a periodical published by the Bible Teachers' Training School, of New York City, contains the first part of a production, entitled "The Personality of God," from the pen of Dr. James H. Snowden, Professor of Systematic Theology in the Western Theological Seminary, Pittsburgh, Penn., which we consider the most illuminating article that we have seen in any review in a long while. It scarcely needs to be said that the theme of this discussion is one of the most important in the whole realm of religious truth—indeed, it is doubtful whether there is another single subject that is so basal and so far-reaching in its significance as this. The fact is, there can be no religion worthy of the name if God is not a personal being. We remember hearing Dr. Calkins, the well known missionary, declare in a very able lecture in New Orleans, a couple of years ago, that the most distinguishing characteristic between Christianity and the great heathen faiths is that the former teaches that there is a personal God, whil the latter teach that there is not. Herein, he affirmed, lies the root difference between the religion of Christ and the larger cheerless, degrading false religions of the world.

Touching upon the importance of this doctrine of a personal God in the introduction of his paper, Dr. Snowden says: "The question is one of fundamental importance. Our answer to it will frame our conception of God, of his character and worth and relation to the world; shape our views of the universe; determine the reality and worth of our own personality; measure all our values; decide character, and destiny; and underlie all our psychology, ethics, economics, sociology, politics, science, philosophy, and religion. * * * Decide it negatively, and everything goes down in the market; not an acre of ground or a steel beam, much more not a human soul, will be worth as much as before. Decide it affirmatively, and everything goes up in value; all our goods will be enhanced and human life will be enormously raised in rank and crowned with permanent worth. The question is now a burning one in our popular thought and life and has got out into the street and market, and more and more it will shape and color our character and conduct and whole civilization."

Dr. Snowden's argument to prove the personality of God, as far we have read it, is a strikingly brilliant one. He starts out by showing that man

SOME OBSERVATIONS.

They tell us that one extreme follows another, and I have come to believe that there is a good deal of truth in that observation.

Some twenty-five years ago I was admitted on trial into the traveling connection in the Louisiana Annual Conference. At that time, or thereabouts, a considerable wave of connectionalism had set in and it continued to rise and swell until it had well-nigh overwhelmed the Conference—so that the Conference meant little besides routine work and connectional celebrations. Year after year, it would roll in, in mighty swells until the Conference was like the pebble on the beach—it was under and lost sight of. And still it would come, more and more, until it became hashed and re-hashed, and warmed over, and often served cold, which produced a degree of surfeiting and nausea; so that many found it convenient to be absent at the evening meetings, while others went because they had no other place to go to while the time away.

I am devoutly thankful that that day is over, and that there is every reason to believe that from now on the connectional phase of our Conference will be kept within bounds and in its proper channel. But, with the swing of the pendulum, we are faced with another possible extreme in the evangelistic phase introduced at our last Conference. I am in hearty accord with the evangelical move, but I seriously object to the evangelist phase of it. I see in this phase of the movement an objectionable feature, though possibly less so than the former practice—one by which we cannot possibly attain the greatest good that should be desired from our Conference sessions. That can only be secured by a co-operative work of the Conference body in the development of the powers and ability of its own men.

Therefore, there are several facts to be considered. The first of these is the preacher. I have always believed it unwise, not to say hurtful to the Church and the preacher for the Conference to ignore and set aside its own forces in the preaching phase of its sessions, having that work done by some person or persons from without. I will mention but two of the natural and certain results: the first of these is the impression made on the congregation and the Church that we have no one in our own ranks capable of measuring up to such an occasion, thereby our own ministers are belittled, and, to a degree, brought into contempt. The fact that we are connectional does not avert this conclusion, nor remove the reproach. True, we are connectional, but a Conference without an individuality is something truly to be deplored.

The second result is the stultification and disapproval of our own men, which is an out and out injustice to them, and a veiled contempt for their ability and powers. There is no question but that there has been a public sentiment created by this policy that will be hard to overcome. However, it must be overcome to save the honor of the Conference and redress the men for the hurt they have already sustained. It is my honest opinion that our loss for the past quarter of a century has been very great, owing to the policy of setting aside our young men, and using almost exclusively the connectional or the Conference D.D.'s. It is my observation that neither of these always stand for force and ability to preach the Gospel and instruct the Church in the doctrines as interpreted by our standards. I have, on occasions, heard these exponents of the Gospel, when I have gone out with the mental soliloquy, "Well, if that is the Gospel and the doctrine of the Church, I have read the Bible and the standards amiss.

What I plead for is the development of our young preachers. And right here before an Annual Conference is the time and place to give them a much needed impetus. You may say what you will, but you cannot eliminate that natural and praise-worthy ambition to be honored and trusted to do something worth while and be accounted capable of filling a larger place occasionally, without the risk of destroying the very best in the man.

For a young man to go up to Conference with a sense of the fact that he might possibly be put up to preach, would be a very great incentive to him to apply himself and be prepared for the occasion, should it arise.

I want to say right here, that the man is the biggest institution in the Church, or any other institution or enterprise, as for that; and to eliminate him is to destroy the institution, enterprise, or the Church. We have had Bishops and subbishops who have ruled and acted upon the theory that the Church is everything and the man nothing. From the human side of the question, if you have got the man, you have the prime and first requisite of the Church.

There is no question but that a freer and more liberal use of our own men in the exercise of their gifts and graces in the preaching of the Word at our annual gatherings would go far toward answering the question, Why are there no giants among us, as in days of yore? There is no doubt, but there are possible giants among the young men of our Conference to-day, if we would only seek them out and distinguish between salary and ability. As it is, we have the $500 man, the $800 man, and the $1000 man, and everything below and above. And the man is classed by the salary he gets, and the collections raised, regardless of the conditions and circumstances of place and people; and along with this condition, and keeping pace with it, come the demand for fads, hobbies, and specialties. If you want to rise in the Conference, specialize in this or that. So the all-round man is cheapened and is in danger of being eliminated altogether.

But let me go back to the question of evangelism. Give us preaching, and more preaching, at our Annual Conference, but let it be done by our own men and a goodly part of it by our young men. It is the primary work of an Annual Conference to conserve the forces of the Church, and develop to the highest degree possible its resources in men and means. And right here again, the man—the preacher—is the key to the situation in the constructive work of the Church, and the extension of the kingdom. Building up and reaching out, is a problem that finds its solution in the man.

Those who operate our system of distributing men should remember that they are handling men, not machines—and that a broken machine and the resultant damage is far easier repaired than a crushed life and a broken spirit, and the delay and damage done to the on-goings of the kingdom.

As to the local church or congregation that entertain the Conference, they have a right to expect and to receive an inspirational uplift and a deepened spiritual life from the presence and workings of a Conference in their midst; but a greater blessing would come to them through the evangelical phase of the Conference, and the use of our own members would adequately meet the demand, and serve the double purpose of profitableness to them and the ministry and reach out to the extreme borders of the Conference—thus indirectly becoming a blessing to the whole Church. WHAT'S THE HARM IN DANCING?

By Edward L. Pell.

"What's the harm in dancing?"

The roguish beauty looks up into your face so earnestly with her innocent, inquiring eyes. Will you give her an answer? Oh, no! she does not want it; and if you did, you would make her blush to the tips of her pink-shell ears. And yet you will venture. You will talk to her solemnly of misspent time, and of the power of influence; of late hours, and of low-neck dresses and of midnight air. You will even venture to hint at the evil of social mixture; but you know when you have gone thus far that you have not answered her, and you dare not go farther. And she knows it, too. And what a delicious discovery she has made, that even her minister could not present a serious objection to dancing!

"What harm is there in dancing?"

Are you a Christian? Then you must excuse me: it is not a proper question for a Christian to ask of her pastor. Dancing may be as innocent as a baby's prattle so far as you are concerned, but when you became a Christian, you made a solemn vow to all intents and purposes to give up the "world, the flesh and the devil." If dancing is not of this "world," it is certainly not of a better, and if you cannot see the "devil" in it, you can hardly help seeing a vast amount of "flesh."

But here is a young man who has never taken upon himself any such vows. He is only an honest searcher after truth, and he is willing to walk in it when he has found it. Surely he has a right to ask the question. Shall he be answered? Shall the pastor, whose duty it is to dispense the truth, strive to elude the question with a few trifling arguments merely because the plain truth may be too harsh for politeness?

Let it be understood that we are speaking not of the ideal dance, not the dance of the David, but of the dance as it is now—the modern dance. Is there any harm in it?

Here are a few probes to use in your private confessional:

Why do you dance? "Because it gives pleasure." Whence comes the pleasure? From the music? If you were compelled to sit still and listen through seven mortal hours to the sweetest strains that ever were drawn from a violin, you would wish in your heart that all the violins in creation, and the man that made them, were in the bottom of the ocean. Is it the "poetry of motions?" If you had to trip and slip and slide over a greased floor all by yourself from ten o'clock until the third cock crowing, you would think the "poetry of motion" the invention of the biggest crack brain out of the mad house. Why don't young men enjoy dancing with their brothers? Put two young men on the floor together, and the manager will order them off before they have made the circle of the room. Why don't we have dances like Sam Jones' sermons—"for men only," and "for women only?" Why does the Christian girl, who waltzes with her brother only, get tired very soon, and go home before midnight? Why is it that the grand ball always opens with the less objectionable dances, and later on, when the old folks have gone home, the wildest forms of the waltz are introduced? Why is it that young men occupy a "social" position at a ball which they are never allowed to occupy elsewhere? Why are not high-neck and long-sleeve dresses fashionable at balls? Why may not amen corner folks dance? And what's in the way of a preacher dancing? And why should Sister Dorcas be debarred from the privilege? Why is it that all the great leaders in every Christian Church on earth stand shoulder to shoulder against the modern dance? Why does the girl who has been waltzing during the week feel very uncomfortable at communion on Sunday? Why does a dance in a community nip a religious revival in the bud?

"But dancing is excellent exercise, and our girls do need exercise, you know." That is a fact. There are no girls in the world who are so much in need of exercise as our society darlings. Poor mother, with the dear tired hands, who hasn't complained for want of exercise since Miss Sophia was born, gets up with the dawn, gives out breakfast, dresses the babies, sweeps the house, makes up the beds, bakes a cake and sends a cup of tea up to Miss Sophia's room at eleven o'clock; and an hour after, when the dear darling comes down stairs for another cup for that horrid headache, why, there is nothing on earth for her to do, and she really must go to the ball to-night for a little exercise, you know.

We take the following from the Raleigh Christian Advocate: "General Julian S. Carr, of Durham, N. C., has subscribed $2500 toward the erection of the Jefferson Davis monument at Fairview, Ky. This will be the second tallest monument in the world and will be completed by October 1." This money was well directed. This nation has produced no truer patriot or nobler spirit than the majestic chieftain of the lost cause, and the Southern people cannot honor him too highly. Though famed as an orator, a statesman, and a soldier, he was a humble, faithful Christian who read and believed in the Bible, and who prayed with his family in his home.

THAT COURSE OF STUDY.

Dear Dr. Meek: Of all the objections so far made against the unification of the two great bodies of Methodism in the United States of America the objection founded upon the heresy contained in the books recently adopted by our Sister Church as the course of study for her ministerial students is the one objection that really challenges the careful thought and attention of those who are interested in the establishing of the Kingdom of God on earth. Of course, I have not examined that new course of study, nor the old one, as to that; but if the statements made relative thereto by leading ministers of that Church be true, we just can not afford to consider the question of unification further without some dependable guarantee from our Sister Church of a return to the fundamentals of Methodism, which is a return to the fundamentals of Christianity.

Already there is too much of the spirit of rationism, so-called, abroad in the minds and hearts of some of our ministers in the Church, South. The devil and the world are quite skilfully enough versed in the art of sowing seeds of doubt and distrust in the hearts and lives of men against the Divine revelation of the Bible without the Church adding her voice to such a propaganda. The mission of the Church is to build up faith in God in the heart of humanity. So far as is known, the only human instruments through which a man's faith in God can be built up are the Bible and Jesus Christ. To create a doubt either as to the divine revelation of the Scripture or as to the divinity of Christ is but to destroy the only known foundation for the spiritual redemption of mankind.

Personally, I should be glad to see unification accomplished, but rather than yield up the basic and fundamental teachings upon which our Church rests, we had best remain as we are.

Greenville, Miss. J. TILLERY LEWIS.

NORTHERN METHODIST SUNDAY SCHOOL LITERATURE.

The most important work of our Church is that of the Sunday school. If our young people are rightly instructed in the Word of God and in the doctrines, rules and discipline of our Church, then Methodism will continue to live and bless the world with ever-increasing efficiency and benediction. But if there is failure here there will be failure everywhere; and this God-honored Church will cease to be a salvation for men. There is failure on the part of our Sunday school literature to make our schools what they should be in two important particulars: first, in what is taught; second, in what is not taught.

First—I have shown by many quotations from this literature, in numerous articles in the Eastern Methodist and other of my writings, that not a little of it is in harmony with the destructive higher criticism of the Graf-Wellhausen school, and the so-called New Theology, and instead of helping our young people to know and love the Bible as the Word of the living God, it is calculated to lead them to a denial of its infallibility and authority, and leave them in ignorance of its real meaning and worth, and thus promote skepticism and unbelief.

Second—In what is not taught. This literature is not distinctly Methodist. Our distinctive doctrines are seldom, if ever, emphasized, and our rules and usages are almost wholly ignored; so that our young people are receiving, from this source, no trustworthy information of what we as Methodists really believe, and can never be real, sure-enough, good Methodists.

I am not alone in this contention. Numerous Annual and other Conferences have condemned this literature, including the Philadelphia, Wilmington, New Jersey and Wyoming, and many churches have refused to allow it to circulate in their schools, as all should; for none is under obligation to patronize any publications that are anti-Biblical and un-Methodistic in their teachings, but rather are under solemn obligations to banish and drive away all such teachings.—Dr. L. W. Munhall, in Eastern Methodist.

The August Government Report predicts a corn crop in the United States of 3,191,000,000 bushels, which, if realized, will be the largest ever grown. The prediction concerning the wheat crop, however, is 25,000,000 bushels below that made in July. The present estimate is for a yield of 653,000,000 bushels. The condition of most of the other crops is considered quite encouraging.

New Orleans has been called upon to supply 200 of the 300 cooks which the twelfth military district of the United States, including Louisiana, Arkansas, and Mississippi, is expected to furnish the Federal Army. It is reported that the hotels and restaurants of the city will co-operate with the authorities in securing this quota for culinary service. It has been suggested that the Crescent City style of cooking will tend to make life in the Army more enticing.

The Bishops of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, in their session at Chicago last week, took action appealing to President Wilson to have the Government to interest itself in the race riots in Illinois. According to the press dispatches, "the resolutions adopted declare that while the President has power to act, he has taken no steps and uttered no protest in behalf of the Negro. They call upon him to investigate, and to procure the necessary remedial legislation."

It is stated that all the members of the American Mission to Russia have expressed the view that it would be unwise to send United States troops to that country to fight against Germany except one—Mr. Charles Edward Russell. It is said to be their opinion that the armies of the new democracy would not be helped by the presence of "Sammies" on the eastern front. If this representation of the attitude of our Mission is correct, our forces that are to do service on the firing line will likely continue to be sent to France.

DO YOU KNOW HIM?

He is an officer in the church. He takes the morning daily newspaper, and the afternoon daily of his city, the Saturday Evening Post, a weekly local paper, two papers pertaining to his profession, two monthly magazines, one of them not remarkably for its purity, the Ladies' Home Journal and Woman's Companion for his wife, and one young people's paper for his children. But he cannot afford to take his church paper! In an almost identical case the excuse is not that he cannot afford to take the church paper, but that he has so many papers that he has not time to read what he already receives! He is an officer in the church, but can tell you almost nothing about the great movements in his church. And he does not go to either Sunday school or prayer-meeting.—Presbyterian Journal.

Said a little Miss:
"It is just like this—
When the winter winds are cold,
I read nice tales of summer vales,
Of barnyard fowls and the milking pails,
And the sunshine bright as gold.

"But in July,
If it's hot and dry,
And I musn't stir about,

A PAYING PROPOSITION.

Todd Crane had his blue certificate, signifying that he was a qualified member of the mine rescue crew.

"And what's it going to do for you?" jeered his chum, Dale Jones. "It'll give you a chance to go down after a fire and get blown up some day, but it does you no good as far as your record with the company is concerned."

This made Todd wince. He was getting the lowest wages of any on the company's pay-roll, with no apparent opportunity for advancement. The weeks he had put in studying for his certificate, his chum had been working overtime. This had brought dollars, while Todd had merely "a scrap of paper."

"In spite of it all I'm glad I studied," he answered quietly.

The next day his big chance came, not a chance to step into a salaried position. No, it was the privilege to join those men who go down into the mines in the midst of deadly gas, not knowing how many would return, but bent on the rescue of imperiled fellow-miners.

As the day shift was lowered into the depths of the mine there was no sign of danger, but a few minutes later—after the relieved miners had stepped from the cage on to the platform and scattered to their various homes—the explosion came. At first a dull rumble, then a terrible roar like the sound of many guns; then death-like silence.

At once the rescue crew were called, but it was discovered that fire had followed the explosion. Tongus of flame burst from the shaft, blocking any attempt to rescue the entombed miners below. The only thing to be done was to seal the openings and smother the fire.

Several hours later the shaft was opened and the crew assembled at the entrance. These men about to risk their lives were picked men; all, like Todd, had spent weeks in preparing for such an emergeney; all receiving small wages, yet they believed that it paid.

It was early morning when Todd, with the rest of the crew, stood in the cage about to be lowered into the mine. The east was pink with the first rays of the rising sun, and many of the spring flowers were in bloom; while beyond the village the sheltered ramparts of the Rockies rose. Todd wondered if he should ever again look upon this scene, and as he wondered the cage began its journey and he was plunged into the blackness of the mine.

Stepping out into the tunnel, they at once began to find the victims. A few had been killed. All but one of the remainder were found alive in a side pocket of the passage, half-suffocated by gas.

The rescuers, after sending the unfortunate workers to the top, scattered out to search for the missing miner still imprisoned in some blocked passage-way.

By some blunder there had been no oxygen helmets provided for them. Had they waited for these the imprisoned miners might have perished. The air was very bad underground, in spite of the openings at the exits. Safety lamps went out; some chambers could not be entered at all. Two or three of the crew fainted and were sent to the top.

Todd proved himself to be a very useful man, for the bad air did not overcome him, although it made him ill. With another man he worked down a passage. They found a tiny dead canary bird, which had been carried by the missing miner to detect choke damp—a precaution taken by many foreign workers.

About this time indications of another explosion were detected by the two who were in advance of the main body of searchers.

"He's dead without much doubt," said Todd's companion. "The air's been terrible, you know; I think we'd best get out of here."

But Todd insisted on searching farther. They came to a door leading to the old tunnel of the mine, which was usually latched. The bar was off; it had been blocked by a lump of coal from the inside.

"He came through here," said Todd, and rushed in, closely followed by the other man.

Rumblings could be heard behind them, and suddenly rock fell with a crash into the way through which they had come.

"Shall we go on? Is it any use?" asked Todd's mate.

Todd did not reply, for he caught sight of what proved to be, by the light of the electric lamp, a piece of tarpaulin hung against a wall of the passage. He ran toward it, and as he tore it away his eyes fell upon the missing man, lying with his face to the ground, overcome by gas.

Finding that life still lingered in the body of the suffocated miner, they carefully carried the limp form back through the passage. They had barely started when an explosion occurred in some remote portion of the mine. They sprang forward in fright; but this time, so thoroughly had they gained the spirit of the rescue force, their fears were not for themselves. Todd was conscious of feeling that they must get the poor fellow they had found out of the mine in safety. They gained the door and passed on down the tunnel. Then their path was blocked by the heap of stones and earth that they had heard fall a few minutes before.

With their combined strength they managed, after great labor, to get their unconscious burden over the obstruction and on through the zone of bad air, in which they were themselves almost overcome. At last, faint and utterly exhausted, they reached the exit shaft, and Todd gave the signal for the cage to come down. Somewhere close by the fire had broken out, and a ruddy glow danced on the black walls about them. Would the men at the top ever send the cage? Would they realize the danger that menaced those below? Rescue men are made of sterner stuff.

The cage was already shooting toward them down the shaft. Soon they emerged into the blessed daylight with their burden, and a surgeon pushed his way through the crowd. "Use the pulmotor at once," he ordered.

About this time the dreaded explosion came in the mine below, but no one noticed it save those whose duty it was to close the exits. Everyone was thinking of the man whom the pulmotor was trying to bring back to life. At last he sighed; then, as he opened his eyes, a mighty cheer went up.

It was some time afterward and work was to be resumed at the mine, that Todd's chum sought him out, and, taking him by the hand, said gravely, "Well, Todd, it paid to study after all. I was wrong."

"Best pay I ever got," returned Todd with a smile.

"You know he's to be foreman of the crew," said Dale, turning to a group of miners. It was a fine place for Todd, for in one month he would earn more than his chum had earned in all those weeks of overtime work. Yet that was not what Todd had meant when he said that his study had paid.

A minute before he had seen the man he had saved walking the street with his family. A thing like that is a kind of pay that gives more happiness than that a man receives from his employer. It is a pay cheque on the bank of heaven. Blessed is he who has a cheque of such stability.—C. C. Hanks, in "The Advance."

MISSION APPLES.

A short time ago the secretary of a mission society received the following letter from the pastor of a country charge not far from New York: "Enclosed please find one dollar for our mission treasury. It is the gift of a little girl who, two years ago, departed this life to be with her Lord and Savior.

"One evening she went with her mother into the orchard that surrounded her home. Looking at the trees, she said, 'Mamma, I wish you would give me one apple tree to be entirely my own.'

"'Why, my child,' replied the mother, 'they are all yours—yours as well as mine. If we live until they bear fruit, you will have your share as well as I, and we shall both rejoice together.'

"'Yes,' replied the girl, 'but that is not what I mean. I should like to have one whose apples I could give to God as mission apples.'

"Her mother allowed her to pick out one of the trees as her own. She chose the most beautiful one, and, laying her hands on its trunk, said, 'From now on you belong to God.'

"This year the tree, for the first time, bore fruit, and I send you the profit therefrom for our mission treasury. Thus she, though dead, yet speaketh."—Presbyterian Journal.

PRAYER MEETING RECORD BOOK.

We have recently heard of a church that keeps a prayer-meeting record book. The idea is unique. The names of the people are written in it and a careful record of their attendance kept. Once a month a list of those who were present at all the prayer-meeting services during the preceding month is published in the church paper. No doubt this stimulates the attendance considerably.—Method.

THE GOSPEL THAT SAVES THE WORLD.

(From the Christmas Number of the Seishono-Kenkyu—Bible Studies).

Not the gospel of social reform; not the gospel of the higher criticism; not the gospel of arts and sciences; not the gospel of pure morality; but the old, simple gospel of Christ and His Cross—that is the gospel that saves the world. And this gospel is still, as of yore, foolishness to the intellectual Greeks, and a stumbling-block to the papistical, Pharisaical, ethical, ecclesiastical Jews; but unto them that believe, the veritable power of God unto salvation. And when, as at present, the civilized world is steeped in blood, because of its vaunted civilization, shall we not with increased zeal, preach the old, simple gospel of Christ and His Cross, and so save the world through its (the gospel's) "foolishness?"

A NOTABLE CAREER ENDED.

It was with sincere sorrow that we noted in the press dispatches last week the announcement of the death of the Hon. Edward Mayes, of Jackson, Miss., which occurred at his home in that city on Thursday, August 9, 1917, at 5 o'clock p. m. He had been in declining health for some years, but the acute attack, which was the immediate cause of his demise, was of only a few days' duration. In his decease the State of Mississippi has lost one of her most worthy and best known citizens, and a notable and largely useful career has come to its earthly end.

Mr. Mayes was a native of Hinds County, Miss., having been born there on December 15, 1846. His parents were from Virginia, and he was a descendant of Rev. William Mayes, who, as is recorded, came, in 1611, to Virginia to preach to the colonists. He was a student at Bethany College, Va., in 1860-61, but, upon the breaking out of the Civil War, being too young to enlist, he returned to his home at Jackson, Miss., where he remained until 1864, when he went to the front as a member of Forrest's famous cavalry. After the surrender, he entered the University of Mississippi, at Oxford, and was graduated from that institution in 1868, being a classmate of the late Bishop Charles B. Galloway. He then entered the legal profession, and in 1869 he was married to Miss Frances Eliza Lamar, a daughter of Senator L. Q. C. Lamar. In 1872, he moved to Oxford, where he practiced law, being a member of a widely known firm with which Mr. Lamar was connected. From 1877 to 1891, he was Professor of Law in the University of Mississippi, and was Chairman of the Faculty of that institution from 1886 to 1889, and its Chancellor from 1889 to 1892. Following this, Mr. Mayes moved to Jackson and became attorney for the Illinois Central R. R. Co. before the Mississippi Supreme Court. He had been Dean of the Faculty of the Law Department of Millsaps College ever since its establishment, though for the past three or four years, owing to the feeble state of his health, this relation had been little more than a nominal one.

This brief recital of the leading events in the life of the deseased is wholly inadequate to give one anything like a proper conception of his splendid attainments and of the great service which he rendered in various capacities. As a lawyer, his knowledge was profound and his abilities were of the highest order. His mind was naturally analytical and he had a passion for study which gave him a wealth of learning such as but few men ever acquire. He did not possess the gift of thrilling eloquence, but he had a rare command of language, was a clear and forceful reasoner, and could lay open in a remarkably lucid and convincing manner the most abstruse and intricate questions. He had for many years been generally conceded to be the most erudite and resourceful member of the Mississippi bar; and so high was the plane upon which he moved in the practice of his profession that he was universally respected and honored. Such a thing as questionable tactics in the trial of a case was not to be thought of in connection with him. He preferred to lose a legal battle rather than to win it by a resort to unworthy methods. And he was an ideal teacher of law. Indeed, in that work, with the possible exception of the renowned Dr. Minor of the University of Virginia, it is doubtful whether he ever had an equal among the legal instructors of any Southern college or university.

But wide as were Mr. Mayes' accomplishments in the fields of legal lore, they were by no means restricted to that sphere. His scholarship was varied, and there was scarcely any department of human research with which he did not have far more than an ordinary acquaintance. His information was prodigious, and he was probably the best educated man in his State. He was also a gifted writer and an author of distinction. The best known products of his pen are "Limbs of the Law;" "A History of Education in Mississippi," and "Lucius Q. C. Lamar: His Life, Times, and Speeches." The last-named volume was pronounced by Senator William F. Vilas, of Wisconsin, and other men of national reputation to be a masterpiece; and it will doubtless aid not only in perpetuating the fame of the illustrious Southerner, whose achievements it narrates, but also in keeping alive the memory of the brilliant biographer from whose genius it emanated.

Mr. Mayes felt a keen interest in all the affairs of Mississippi, including politics, but he was never a candidate for public office, though there is scarcely any place in the State or Nation that his talents would not have adorned. He was a member of the State Constitutional Convention of 1890, in which he was Chairman of the Committee on Bill of Rights, and he contributed materially to the formulation of the present organic law of the Magnolia State, which is said to be unsurpassed by that of any commonwealth in the American Union. He was connected with the Mississippi Historical Society and did much to develop its efficiency and promote its interests.

Nor did this busy lawyer and eminent citizen neglect the religious side of his life. He had long been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and held the position of a steward when the Master's final summons came to him. He was an avowed Christian and his life was in every respect above reproach. He was clean, high-minded, and a firm believer in the essential truths of the Divine Revelation. He served the Church in numerous capacities, having, if we mistake not, sat in General and Ecumenical Conferences, and everywhere and at all times he was faithful. No trait of his character was more beautiful than his modesty, and he was remarkably free from selfishness and self-seeking. The relations between him and Bishop Galloway were intimate, and after the latter's lamented death, in our judgment, the finest tribute that was paid him was written by this classmate and long-time friend.

Mr. Mayes had probably been close to more eminent Mississippians than any other man living within recent decades. As has been stated, he was a son-in-law (and also the trusted counselor) of Senator L. Q. C. Lamar; he was a friend of Senator E. C. Walthall, and a kinsman of the Hon. Wiley P. Harris, the well-nigh peerless lawyer; and if he could have left us a book of informally written reminiscences, what a charming volume doubtless it would have been! But alas! his race upon earth has now been run, and he has passed from time into eternity. His work here is finished, and, though it is less conspicuous than that of some others, it will not soon be forgotten. He has left an impression upon many young men which will long be felt for good, and through them and other agencies he will continue to speak, though his voice is hushed in death and his coffined form reposes beneath the sod.

Having been a student at the University of Mississippi when he was its honored head, and having admired and reverenced him from our boyhood days, we claim the privilege, with thousands of others, of dropping a tear upon the grave of this great and good man, and of bearing this imperfect testimony to his stainless character, noble life, and fruitful labors.

Mr. Mayes is survied by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Mary L. Sanders and Mrs. Elizabeth Eakes, and the following sons: Lucius L., Frank L., and Basil, all three of whom have adopted their distinguished father's profession. May the Heavenly Father comfort and sustain these stricken ones in their sore bereavement!

THE EMORY SCHOOL OF MEDICINE.

An advertisement of this School of Medicine appears in this number of the Advocate, and we hope that our readers, and particularly our pastors, will give it a careful examination. This is the only medical college maintained by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and it is one of which she has every reason to be proud. It was formerly known as the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons, under which name it made a creditable record; but was taken over by Emory University in June, 1915, and a quarter of a million dollars was added to its endowment. It is the only medical College in Atlanta, and now has a large and brilliaut Faculty, superior buildings, and an equipment that ranks with the best in the South. It has access to 11 hospitals and dispensaries in the prosecution of its work, and its methods of instruction are complete and thoroughly modern. It is a member of the Association of American Medical Colleges, and is rated as in Class A by the Council of Education of the American Medical Association. The attendance upon the last session was large and the personnel of the student body was excellent. The moral surroundings are good, and the fees and cost of board are reasonable. This is a time when many of our young men need to study medicine. You may render auy who may be thinking of doing so and your country a good service by directing their attention to this splendid institution. WILL YOU NOT DO THIS WITHOUT DELAY? A catalogue may be had by writing Mr. Walker White, Bursar, Emory University, Atlanta, Ga.

WORDS WORTH PONDERING.

Eight years before his death, in a brief essay, entitled "Thoughts on Methodism," the apostolic Wesley, whose heart was on fire to save men and extend the Kingdom of his Lord, wrote the following words, which are well worth laying to heart:

"I am not afraid that the people called Methodists should ever cease to exist in Europe and America; but I am afraid lest they should exist as a dead sect, having the form of religion without the power; and this will undoubtedly be the case unless they hold fast to the doctrine, spirit, and discipline with which they first set out."

Of like import are the following lines, with which the able and far-seeing Holland N. McTyeire closed his peerless "History of Methodism": "The times favor a centennial celebration, and as to the place of meeting Baltimore has no rival. The graves of Asbury and Lee are there, and not far away sleeps the noble Strawbridge. And there, as from a mount of vision, may the people called Methodists, grateful for what God has done for them and by them in the past, catch an inspiring view of what God will do for them and by them, IF FAITHFUL TO THEIR PRINCIPLES, in the next hundred years!"

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. R. T. Ware, of Noble, La., says: "Everything is moving along very well in this charge. We have been having some excellent revivals this summer."

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, presiding elder of the Aberdeen (Miss.) District, recently assisted Rev. E. H. Rook in a revival meeting at Young's

Chapel. We have not been informed as to the results of this series of services.

Rev. E. G. Mohler, of Batesville, Miss., was announced to preach in our church at Sardis, Miss., last Sunday.

Rev. N. B. Harmon, of Magnolia, Miss., will begin a series of revival services in his church next Sunday. He will have Rev. W. B. Hogg to assist him.

Writing from Calhoun City, Miss., Rev. R. M. Evans, whose heart is afiame with a quenchless zeal, says: "We are busy and are moving forward in the good old-fashioned way." It is nothing new for Brother Evans to be having a fruitful ministry.

Mr. J. B. Streater, of Black Hawk, Miss., has gone on his usual visit to Chicago and the Northwest—a trip which he finds it necessary to take late in the summer of every year in order to escape hay fever. We trust that his stay about the Great Lakes will prove enjoyable in every respect.

Rev. R. I. Collins, of Courtland, Miss., has brought us under obligations to him for 4 subscriptions to the Advocate, forwarded on August 6. It scarcely needs to be said that the conditions in Brother Collins' charge are encouraging. His whole heart is in his work and he does not spare himself in its promotion.

The following telegram from Rev. C. A. Schultz comes to our desk as we are about to close the last of our forms: "Our revival campaign at Gallman began on Sunday, August 12, under the leadership of Brother Norsworthy. The Lord has been with us in great power in each service. The indications point to a great victory."

Rev. A. W. Turner, the active Superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, is reported to be wearing a happy smile these days. He has a right to, in view of the way that John Barleycorn is catching it. Let all the brethren lend Brother Turner a helping hand in his great work. He is a tactful and resourceful leader.

Rev. and Mrs. J. L. Decell, of McComb, Miss., went to Jackson, Miss., last week to secure surgical treatment for their little son. It is our understanding that the operation needed was not of a very serious nature; and we hope that the outcome was entirely satisfactory. Brother Decell's work at McComb continues to progress favorably.

Rev. G. W. Huff, of Hattiesburg, Miss., writes: "I have just returned home, after holding four meetings on the Gulf Coast, which were glorious revivals. The churches were wonderfully quickened, and we left the people happy and rejoicing in the Lord. About 100 members were added to our Church." This is certainly a fine report for a superannuate.

Echoes of the fine service which Rev. J. T. Leggett is rendering as presiding elder of the Brookhaven (Miss.) District often find their way to this office. He obviously is fitted for the responsible position which he holds as but few men are. The brethren say that he is a wise counselor, and that both his pulpit messages and administrative work are of a high order.

We have regretted to learn that Mr. Robert W. Barbee, the third son of the late Rev. J. D. Barbee, has recently been ill for several weeks and found it necessary to submit to an operation in Memphis a few days ago. We trust that the surgical treatment which he has undergone will prove a success, and that the complete restoration of his health will quickly follow.

From Tylertown, Miss., Rev. H. A. Gatlin writes as follows: "The work is moving on nicely in this charge. We are laying plans to erect soon in Tylertown a new brick church at a cost of $12,000 or $15,000. A nice lot on which to build has recently been given us by Brother Frank Lampton." We are happy to chronicle this forward movement in this promising South Mississippi town.

Rev. Briscoe Carter, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, was in New Orleans last week, and tarried for a brief time in the Advocate office. He was looking well, and spoke optimistically of both the work of the Church and the crop prospect in his section of the State. He stated that a number of excellent meetings had been held within the bounds of the Alexandria District this summer.

Rev. J. H. Bell, of Columbus, Miss., who is one of the evangelists of the North Mississippi Conference, is having a great year in his work. All his time since April has been occupied in meetings and his slate is full up to November 1. His singer, Mr. Paul Templeton, of Meridian, Miss., is giving fine satisfaction, being an excellent personal worker, as well as a gifted chorister. We are pleased to know that the Lord is so graciously blessing the labors of these faithful young brethren.

Despite the summer weather, Rev. J. R. Jones, the leader of our forces in the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, continue to set a good pace for his associate workers. If that section does not send a satisfactory report to the Conference at Vicksburg this fall, it will not be his fault. Major Millsaps, whose standard for all workers was a high one, was wont to say that Brother Jones could be depended upon to achieve what could reasonably be expected, under any and all circumstances.

Mr. W. A. Percy, of Greenville, Miss., a son of ex-United States Senator Leroy Percy, has lately been making some excellent addresses in North Mississippi in the interest of the Red Cross work. Mr. Percy was for some time actively engaged in relief work among the Belgian refugees in France, being associated in that service with Mr. Herbert C. Hoover. He is a young attorney of distinction, having been graduated from the Harvard Law School, and has published a volume of poems that has attracted considerable attention.

We desire to call special attention to the report of the fine revival at the Gibson Memorial Church of Vicksburg, from the pen of Rev. O. S. Lewis, the consecrated young pastor, which appears on another page. It is well worth reading and considering. Two facts stand out plainly in it: (1) The Gospel is still efficacious to quicken and save when faithfully preached to the people; (2) a pastor may yet conduct a gracious revival if he will throw himself energetically into the work and look earnestly to the Lord for help.

We are carrying on another page in this issue of the Advocate an interesting poem written by Rev. W. S. Harrison, of Starkville, Miss., in commemoration of his 83d birthday. It is difficult to realize that Brother Harrison has passed the fourscore mark, so vigorous is he in thought and so buoyant in spirit. We extend to him our congratulations, and pray that he may yet have on earth many more happy anniversaries of the day of his nativity. The North Mississippi Conference has never had in it a truer, cleaner, worthier man than Brother Harrison, whom to know is to love and honor.

Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Superintendent of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, writes: "Our Board of Directors, after discussing the matter in a meeting recently held, decided to hold to our old-time date for our Orphanage "Work Day"—the second Saturday in October. So our "Work Day" for this year will be Saturday, October 13, and our "Harvest Day" will be Sunday, October 14, instead of the earlier dates that we had announced." We hope that all previous records will be broken in the observance of these "days" on the dates now designated. We must take good care of the orphan children of the Church.

The following dispatch was sent out from Amite, La., on Aug. 9: "Rev. T. M. Burgess of this city fell dead Tuesday night while preaching to a large congregation in Palmetto Church—a rural Methodist church on the Amite River, in Livingston Parish. He had been invited into that community to conduct a revival meeting, and was preaching on "The Uncertainty of Human Life." He was about 50 years of age, and was apparently in good health up to the time of his decease, which was due to heart disease. For several years he had been engaged in the work of organizing Sunday schools in the rural districts of the Florida parishes."

Rev. R. H. Ruff, who was our pastor at Moorhead, Miss., has, we have learned, been relieved of his charge, that he might engage in Y. M. C. A. war work. Brother Ruff is one of the best equipped young ministers that we know, and is certain to render admirable service in the new field into which he has been called. Rev. R. G. Moore, who has been appointed to succeed Brother Ruff at Moorhead, is in place there, and writes us as follows: "I find here a most cordial and warm-hearted people. The new $12,000 church which Brother Ruff enterprised is fast being constructed, and, when finished, will be unexcelled in beauty, simplicity, and completeness. The facilities which it will furnish will stimulate and strengthen the work of the church in every department."

We take the following from The Southern Reporter (Sardis, Miss.) of August 10: "A quiet home wedding took place in this city on Wednesday afternoon at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Carlton, when their eldest daughter, Miss Ora Shelby Carlton, became the bride of Mr. Riley B. Moore, of Courtland, Ala. Rev. R. H. B. Gladney read the ceremony in the presence of the family and a few intimate friends, and shortly afterwards the happy couple left on the train for Memphis, expecting after a brief stay there to proceed to their future home at Courtland. The bride is one of the best known and most lovable girls ever reared in Sardis, and Mr. Moore is a rising and popular young business man at Courtland, his profession being that of a pharmacist." The Advocate extends congratulations and best wishes.

A correspondent sends us a clipping from a Greenwood (Miss.) paper containing the following interesting item of news: "A very quiet and simple home wedding was solemnized this morning (date not given) at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. S. M. DeLoach, when Miss Jennie DeLoach was given in marriage to Dr. W. T. Johnson, Rev. E. S. Lewis, of Oxford, a brother-in-law of the bride, performing the impressive ceremony. * * * Only the immediate families of the contracting parties witnessed the wedding. Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left for the mountains of North Carolina to spend a few weeks. The fair bride is the accomplished daughter of Mrs. S. M. DeLoach and is quite a favorite in Greenwood. Dr. Johnson is a prominent citizen and an extensive planter, and is esteemed by all our people."

In this number of the Advocate may be found the report of Rev. E. S. Lewis, Treasurer of the Sunday School Board of the North Mississippi Conference. It shows, up to the date indicated, exactly what every charge has done for the Children's Day Collection and what it has paid on the assessment to keep this very important work going. It is to be hoped that the charges which up to the present time have done nothing or little for this deserving cause will at once give attention to the matter and immediately remit to Brother Lewis any funds that may be raised in its interest. It may be too late to observe Children's Day, but it is not too late to have the Sunday school make an offering for the purpose to which that fund is applied. Every Sunday school in North Mississippi ought at least to do this much.

We clip the following from a Baton Rouge (La.) dispatch to the Times-Picayune of last Monday morning: "Rev. C. A. Battle at the 11 o'clock Sunday service called the attention of his congregation to what he termed 'Our Soldiers' Honor Roll,' a list of the young men of the church who have gone or are going to fight in defense of America and democracy. The roll is attractively gotten up and is prominently displayed in the vestibule of the church, where all may read the names. As others go their names will be added to the list. Those whose names are already on it are: C. B. Anders, A. Bacon, J. A. Tucker, Carl Walters, Gordon Kean, and A. G. Kean." It is a beautiful thought that while these young men may be far away and exposed to danger and death, the church at home, of which they are members, will have them in their thoughts, on their hearts, and in their prayers.

A correspondent, writing from Basile, La., informs us of the death of Brother N. J. Roberts, which occurred on July 29, 1917. The deceased was born in Amite County, Miss., in 1854. He joined the Mississippi Conference in 1886, and served charges both in it and in Louisiana. He resided for a time in Ruston, La., and later moved to the South Louisiana country, in which the end of his career came. He was when the Master called him (and had been for some time) superintendent of a Northern Methodist Sunday school (there being no Southern Methodist church in his neighborhood), and, as a mark of the esteem in which he was held, the entire school marched in a body to his residence after he had passed away and each member cast a bouquet of flowers on his coffin. Among those who thus came were many French children that he had been instrumental in getting into the Sunday school. We extend sympathy to Brother Roberts' family in the great sorrow which has come to them, and pray that Divine grace may sustain them in this trying hour.

A LOST OPPORTUNITY.

Referring to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, held in Atlanta, Ga., in 1890, Dr. J. M. Buckley, in his "History of Methodism" (Vol. 2, Page 385), says: "The Conference resolved that it would deplore the organic union of all Protestant Churches as an evil which would intensify the differences sought to be removed, and clog for centuries the wheels of progress in Christian thought and work," and respectfully declined "to appoint a commission to meet a similar commission appointed by the Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church for the purposes indicated in their declaration."

Such was the action of one of the great General Conferences of our Church; yet there are now some among us who presume to insinuate that it is certain evidence of a lack of spiritual religion not to favor answering our Lord's prayer for unity by merging all the Christian denominations into one. What a pity it was that the members of the General Conference of 1890 were so lacking in piety and insight into the Scriptures as to let this golden opportunity which came to them pass! If they had only had the wisdom to seize and utilize it, what a saving, before this time, there might have been in men and money!

"The great lesson we need is to take whatever we have and use it."

Lemons Whiten and Beautify the Skin! Make Cheap Lotion

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quarter pint of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold creams. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier.

Just try it. Make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It should naturally help to whiten, soften, freshen, and bring out the hidden roses and beauty of any skin. It is wonderful for rough, red hands.

Your druggist will sell three ounces of archard white at little cost, and any grocer will supply the lemons.

Mrs. ELIZABETH JANE CARPENTER (nee Duvall), was born in East Baton Rouge Parish on Feb. 20, 1846, and died on July 27, 1916, aged 70 years, 5 months, and 7 days. She united with the M. E. Church, South, at Pipkin's chapel in September, 1868. She was married to A. D. Carpenter, Sr., on December 23, 1869. She is survived by her husband, and nine children—six sons and three daughters. Three sons are preachers, another is a licentiate, and all her children are members of the Church. Stephen is pastor at Denham Springs, La. In all her suffering, which she bore with great fortitude, she had an unwavering faith in her Redeemer. Her life was a great light to all about her, and her home a place of prayer. The funeral service was conducted by Brother S. S. Holladay, assisted by the pastor, at Carpenter's chapel, near her home. A vast throng of sorrowful and sympathizing friends and relatives gave evidence of the esteem in which she was held by their attendance and interest. HER PASTOR.

MISS GUS WEST RYLEE died at the home of her sister, Mrs. R. R. Eason, Memphis, Tenn., on Thursday morning, July 26, 1917, at 10 o'clock a. m., after an illness of several months. Miss Rylee's home was with her father, Captain A. J. Rylee, of Tutwiler, Miss.; but on account of ill-health she went to Memphis to visit her sister and receive medical aid. The remains were brought to Tutwiler, where they were tenderly laid to rest in Rose Mound Cemetery, the attendance being the largest and the floral offerings the most beautiful ever witnessed here. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. W. C. Lester, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which Church the deceased was a member—also a teacher in the Sunday school.

Miss Rylee's college days were spent in the Ward-Belmont College at Nashville, Tenn. Truly it can be said of her, There was, there is, no nobler, gentler, stronger, purer, sweeter girl that ever lived. Her life was spent in making life less difficult for others, and she never failed to find the very best there was in everything and every one that she came in contact with. This made her decidedly the most popular young lady that ever lived in this section of the country.

Miss Rylee is survied by her father, Captain A. J. Rylee, of Tutwiler, Miss., and several half-brothers and sisters, among whom are: Mrs. R. R. Eason, Memphis, Tenn.; Mrs. R. P. Turner, and V. B. Cammack, Tutwiler, Miss.; Robert S. Cammack, of the United States Navy, and George S. Cammack, First Lieutenant, Second Mississippi Company, Clarksdale, Miss.
"SISTER."

GORDON W. BATSON, son of Mr. L. W. and Mrs. Fannie Batson, was born in Forrest County, Miss., seven miles from Hattiesburg, on Sept. 7, 1899. Gordon was of an exceptional type of young manhood, having joined the M. E. Church, South, when 10 years of age and being a regular attendant both at Sunday school and church. He would also lead in public prayer. He was an active member of the Y. M. C. A. while attending the Agricultural High School at Brooklyn, from which he was graduated with honors this spring. He was a devoted son and brother, and his many noble traits of Christian character are truly worthy of emulation. His death occurred on the morning of May 27, 1917, about a week after his return home. While bathing in Leaf River in company with his father and two classmates, he unfortunately was drowned. Those with him did everything to rescue him that they could under the circumstances, but all their efforts were in vain, and Gordon sank in about fourteen feet of water. After several hours of diligent search, his body was recovered and prepared for burial. The funeral services were conducted the next day at the home in the presence of a large concourse of grief-stricken relatives and friends, by Rev. E. J. Currie, of Hattiesburg, assisted by the writer. His body was carefully laid to rest in the City Cemetery at Hattiesburg. The floral offerings were numerous and of beautiful designs. Six young men, classmates of the deceased, acted as pall-bearers. The Christian parents, with the little sister, Gladys, and a host of relatives who survive him and whose earthly hopes and plans have been thwarted, have the consolation of knowing that the influence of his godly life is ever a constant reminder to them to strive for that eternal inheritance through Christ where, in the sweet by and by, there will be no more separation and sorrow.
Petal, Miss. C. E. DOWNER.

IN MEMORIAM.

We feel that in justice to her many friends who are readers of the Advocate mention should be made of the departure from this life of Mrs. FANNIE E. DUNNING, of Hazlehurst, Miss. She was born near Crystal Springs, Miss., which locality was the scene of her early childhood and it was there that she attained to her full Christian womanhood.

Mrs. Dunning was better known to her many friends and even slight acquaintences as Aunt Fannie. She had spent the last two years in Florida as the guest of her niece, Mrs. J. C. Bucklin (nee Miss Clara B. Sterling). She was stricken with la grippe in March, and, at her advanced age, all that the treatment of physicians and human hands could do was unable to arrest the ravages of the disease, and she quietly fell into that sleep from which there is no waking until the Master calls.

Aunt Fanny was in her 82d year and was a true and devoted Christian, neighbor and friend. She leaves two brothers—Ira and James Eagan, of Crystal Springs, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her departure—though all the other immediate members of her large family had preceded her to their reward. Her remains were placed at rest in the old Chrystal Springs cemetery beside her mother and sister. She was remembered by her many friends with many beautiful floral offerings, attesting their love for her, for truly her friends were numbered by her acquaintances. Her Bible was her constant companion. Her spare moments were spent in a research and study of its pages. Her God held the first place in her life. She has gone home to her reward. We miss her words of counsel and her love-lit face, which we trust will be a constant reminder of her, helping us to try to exemplify her ways and loving deeds. C. B.

Nothing broadens the soul like work for the wants and woes of men, and nothing inspires men to work like the dreams, the hopes, and promises of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. We have caught a vision of the world as He saw it, yearned for it, and died for it. We also carry the world in our heart; the African, the Hindoo, the South Sea Islander are also children of God, and we will toil for their redemption.—J. M. Jones.

SECRET OF DIVINE GUIDANCE.

Tho whole secret of divine guidance is in an absolutely surrendered will—a will given up to God, ready to obey Him at any cost. Every God-led man in Scripture and history has been a man with a will dedicated to God. The Spirit cannot lead where there is an unsurrendered will. He can drive, but this He will not do. He can drag, but this He does not do. Not until we come where we can say with the Master, "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent me," can we have the full joy of the Spirit's guidance.—John McDowell.

HELPFUL CHRISTIANS.

"Ask Deacon White; he can do it: he is always ready to do any good thing." This was a current formula in the Church that I was permitted to serve for thirty years. If any special job of usefulness was required he was the man on whose broad and benevolent shoulders the load was pretty sure to be laid. He had earned a good reputation for promptness, for unselfishness, and for never complaining of being made a pack-horse. He was the staff of life to the prayer meeting on a rainy night, for he was always sure to be there. His conscience never consulted either thermometer or barometer. He was a prime favorite with all those who like to see things done and are not themselves very nimble at doing them. He was a perfect pattern of the helpful Christian.—N. W. Christian Advocate.

SEEING THINGS.

"The eye sees what it carries with it the power of seeing." God is a pattern of patience. He takes pains to equip his seers after years of education and trial resulting in rich Christian experience. It requires a moment to look through the telescope, but years to produce the lens and more years to produce an astronomer worthy to scan God's world celestial. Are you patiently equipping yourself under God for a "vision splendid." God help us and make us willing to wait for our chance at the prospective glass. The greatest telescope in the world, constructed at Fore River, Massachusetts, is nearly ready for use. The 9000-pound lens, completed after six years of painstaking labor, has been moved without accident to the Mount Wilson Solar Observatory near Pasadena, California, where it will be placed in position in a few days. The rough cast of the lens was made in France in 1905 and was shipped to California in 1909. The grinding was begun in 1911 and completed in 1917. The lens is thirteen inches thick and 100 inches in diameter.—Christian Intelligencer.

SOME POINTED QUESTIONS FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS.

1. Do you know that probably half of all the Sunday school members are never won for Christ?
2. Do you knowthat a half a million boys and girls in their teens drift out of the Sunday school every year?
3. Do you know that sixty-eight per cent of all criminals committed their first crime in the teen age?
4. Do you know that approximately twenty-five per cent of the Sunday school enrollment changes annually, thus increasing the necessity of doing our best to-day?
5. Do you know that only one church member in four in North America is in Sunday school at all?
6. Do you know that it takes four Sunday school officers and teachers a whole year to bring one soul to Christ and into the church?
7. Do you know that the Sunday school is languishing for a sufficient and adequate corps of competent and trained teachers who have a passion for soul-winning?
8. Do you know that every Christian has a personal responsibility upon him in the winning of the world to Jesus Christ?
9. Do you know that by Christ's own word there are but two classes in every Sunday school, the saved and the unsaved?
10. Do you know that the church and Sunday school have greatly neglected their most important mission of soul winning, so that thousands, many thousands of churches every year do not show a single addition upon confession of faith?
11. What are you going to do about it?.—Eastern Methodist.

LETTERS FROM RHEUMATICS.

Possibly you have imagined that you could never get your consent to write a testimonial letter, but if you have ever experienced the excruciating pains of Rheumatism you can at least appreciate the feelings of those who have been relieved of this terrible disease by drinking the Mineral Water from the justly celebrated Shivar Spring. This water overcomes many diseases, including indigestion, Gout, Uric Acid Poisoning and Liver and Kidney diseases, but no patrons of the Spring are more enthusiastic in their praise of the water than those who have been relieved of their Rheumatism. Hundreds of letters like the following have been received by the Management:

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring water in several cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney and Bladder troubles and in Nervous and Sick headaches and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the Liver and Kidneys and Bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant of Savannah writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living when I began using Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time I was entirely relieved."

Mr. Rhodes of Virginia writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for Rheumatism. I know of several who were relieved of Rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for Rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClam of South Carolina writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from Rheumatism and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water was entirely relieved of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter of Virginia writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints on her hands, caused by Rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

If you suffer from Rheumatism or any curable disease accept the guarantee offered below by signing your name. Clip and mail to the

Hair Needs Food

just as every other living thing does, and, just as every other living thing, it will die if it is not fed. Hair food takes the form of the natural oil on which it subsists. Fifty years ago the Creoles of Louisiana, who prided themselves on their hair, discovered a recipe for beautiful hair. By the use of this natural hair oil, "La Creole," they kept their hair beautiful, light and fluffy. This secret has been handed down through generations and presents the very best hair food and hair disease remedy. Does your hair fall out? Is it coarse? Is it stiff? Has it lost its natural luster? Then ask your dealer for a bottle of "La Creole" hair dressing. The price is only $1.00 and it will be the life of your hair. If he can't supply you, write at once to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

The Composition of Coca-Cola and its Relation to Tea

Prompted by the desire that the public shall be thoroughly informed as to the composition and dietetic character of Coca-Cola, the Company has issued a booklet giving a detailed analysis of its recipe which is as follows:

Water, sterilized by boiling (carbonated); sugar, granulated, first quality; fruit flavoring extracts with caramel; acid flavorings, citric (lemon) and phosphoric; essence of tea—the refreshing principle.

The following analysis, by the late Dr. John W. Mallet, Fellow of the Royal Society and for nearly forty years Professor of Chemistry in the University of Virginia, shows the comparative stimulating or refreshing strength of tea and Coca-Cola, measured in terms of the refreshing principle:

Black tea (hot)—1 cupful (5 fl. oz.)	1.54
Green tea (cold)—1 glassful (8 fl. oz. exclusive of ice)	2.02
Coca-Cola (fountain)—1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.21
Coca-Cola (bottlers)—1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.12

From the above recipe and analysis, which are confirmed by all chemists who have analyzed these beverages, it is apparent that Coca-Cola is a carbonated, fruit-flavored modification of tea of a little more than one-half its stimulating strength.

A copy of the booklet referred to above will be mailed free on request, and The Coca-Cola Company especially invites inquiry from those who are interested in pure food and public health propaganda. Address

Sunday School

IMPROVED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON MATERIAL.

In his eleventh annual report as Sunday School Editor for the Southern Methodist Church, made to the General Sunday School Board at Lake Junaluska, N. C., July 18, Dr. Chappell said:

"Improved Uniform Lessons.—January, 1918, will mark the introduction of the Improved International Uniform Lesson. The Old Uniform Lesson was constructed on the plan of one passage of Scripture, one Golden Text and one Topic for the entire school. No effort was made to meet the specific needs of each of the several departments.

"The Improved Course has the following points of advantage:

"(a) It covers a larger part of the Bible than any previous Uniform Course.

"(b) It offers a number of short topical studies in the Christian life, and in missions, temperance, social service, and Church history.

"(c) Special provision is made in each lesson for adaptation to different age groups. This is accomplished by the selection of additional Biblical material and special topics, and also in case of the Primary and Junior Departments by special memory verses which are designed to take the place formerly occupied by the Golden Text.

"The Graded Lessons.—1. The Graded Lessons which have now been in use for about ten years, have stood the test of experience and won their right to a permanent place in the literature of religious education. Use, however, has brought to light defects which needed to be corrected, and so we began a year ago to arrange for a thorough revision of all the Graded Courses from the Beginners to the Intermediate. Many sections are being entirely rewritten and in some cases the schedule itself is being considerably changed. The revised courses will be ready for use October 1.

"2. One new course has been added, namely, the fourth year Senior, entitled 'The Bible and Social Living.' I earnestly wish that this course might be widely circulated among our Young People's and Adult classes.

"The American Revision.—The increased length of the Scripture passages composing the lessons for next year will make it impossible to print both the Revised and King James versions as we have done in cases hitherto. Several of the large denominations, including the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Congregational Church, and the Baptist Church, have already decided to publish only the American Revision. I believe the time has come for us to adopt the same palicy.

"I shall be glad if, after due consideration, you can conscientiously recommend this course." (And the Board did so.—A. L. D.)

To Drive Out Malaria And Build Up The System

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS chill TONIC. You know what you are taking, as the formula is printed on every label, showing it is Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form. The Quinine drives out malaria, the Iron builds up the system. 50c.—Adv.

A GOOD REASON.

The best thing that any man can do for the world is to give it the Gospel of Christ. Voltaire once said to Lord Chesterfield, "Is the Parliament of England composed of the best-informed men?" "Yes," was the reply. "Why, then," continued Voltaire, "do they tolerate so great an absurdity as the Christian religion?" "I suppose," rejoined Chesterfield, dryly, "it is because they have not been able to substitute anything better in its stead!" Until something better than Christianity be devised, and attested by the fruits of moral reformation and spiritualized life, we shall continue to urge the desirability of all men becoming Christians.—Zion's Herald.

THE WORST PARASITES.

The real parasites of society are the idle rich, who give nothing back for all they have received. The man whose daily toil and hard, brawny hands have exchanged a day's labor for the poor wage which he carries to his home in the evening is a nobleman in comparison with the spendthrift, whatever his lineage, who wastes his patrimony on himself and leaves the world no better than he found it.—United Presbyterian.

THE GIBSON MEMORIAL REVIVAL.

Dear Dr. Meek: Our revival campaign at Gibson Memorial Church came to a close last Sunday night, August 5. In many respects it was one of the most remarkable meetings I have ever been in. It began on July 8, and lasted 29 days, going through five Sundays. There was not a day that we did not have service—most of the time two and three services a day. The S. O. S. call was sent to several different preachers to come to my aid in the meeting, but none could come; so we stopped looking around and looked up to God for strength and grace. The people rallied to their pastor and made it easy for him to preach. Cottage prayer-meetings were held that proved to be a power for good. The membership was wonderfully revived. Scores of people were reclaimed and reconsecrated themselves to God. Scores were brought under conviction of sin and were happily converted. There were some remarkable answers to prayer. The spirit of prayer was a feature of the meeting all the way through.

Many family altars were established; difficulties between neighbors were settled; a weekly cottage prayer-meeting was organized; several church letters were resurrected from trunks; and many new workers were added to the League, Sunday school, and Missionary Society. Twenty-one were added to the Church by vows and baptism, and 16 by letter, making a total of 37. Within the last two months, 44 have been added to the Church, 25 of these on profession of faith. "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad." Last Sunday was the biggest and best day of the meeting. Brothers F. B. Gray and F. D. Delabar, two consecrated railroad engineers from Meridian, came to us Saturday and were with us that night and in both services Sunday. The Lord wonderfully used them in their thrilling testimonies and burning messages. This is the second time I have had these men with me, and I count it a glorious privilege to have their help in a meeting. Their visit made it easier for me to work with the railroad men of this place. I have begun holding weekly services at the shops and have a large crowd of earnest listeners.

The change may be in me, but it seems to me that people are hungering and thirsting after God more now than in the past. When the pure Word of God is preached with earnestness and spiritual power the response is truly encouraging. When we let Him, God can still do wonders. I am praying to be kept humble, submissive to God's will, sensitive to the leadings of the Spirit, and to have a passion for souls. An unlimited field lies before me; the responsibilities seem heavier, and I feel the need of prayer—the prayers of my people here and of all the brethren in the ministry. Yours for Christ,

OSMOND LEWIS.

HEADACHES AND OTHER ACHES AND PAINS.

Pain keeps the thoughts of the sufferer continuously on the ailment that is that causing the pain, and in this way it acts to retard recovery.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are their own best advertisers. The wonderful degree of success that they have met with for more than 25 years has been entirely due to their efficiency.

Users are willing to concede that these pills do all that is claimed for them. That is, they promptly relieve headache, backache, neuralgia, rheumatic pains, monthly pains, and almost every other kind of ache or pain and do this without any bad after-effects.

And if the sufferer finds rest from the pain that weakens the mind and harrasses the nervcs pending treatment for the cause of the pain he certainly should be satisfied.

Furthermore, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills do not constipate, do not derange the stomach or leave any disagreeable after-effects when taken as directed.

If you suffer from any ache or pain you will not be out any money to try these pills. Go to your druggist and purchase one box of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. Use them as directed and if the results are not satisfactory return the empty package to the druggist and he will immediately return you your money. No questions will be asked. You are the judge of the merits of these pills. Could anything be fairer than this?

NEW VICES FOR CHINA.

With the abolition of opium, China is being exploited by liquor and tobacco firms of the United States, Europe, and Japan in an effort to introduce the use of alcoholic intoxicants, cigarettes, and other forms of tobacco.

Soon after the prohibition of opium, the United States Consular Reports began to record China's increased importation of beer and cigarettes. The net profits of foreign wines and spirits increased from $2,614,000 in 1906 to $5,026,000 (Mexican dollars) in 1915. The Chinese daily papers are made mediums for advertisements of special brands of beer and whiskey. Billboards and electric signs invite the use of foreign beers. In one brewery in the city of Chefoo there is a running stock valued at $6,000,000 (Mexican) throughout the year. There are several breweries situated in the various foreign settlements.

Through the efforts of the British-American Tobacco Company, which has its slogan, "a cigarette in the month of every man, woman and child in China," China's people are rapidly becoming addicted to the tobacco habit. A banker returning from China says of this same company that its cigarette posters have flooded the country.

Up to the beginning of this enterprise, the Chinese had never used tobacco except in pipes and in very small quantities in cigarettes, which they rolled themselves. Now it is estimated that half of the cigarette consumption of the world is in China.—Missionary Review of the World.

ONE OF CHINA'S NEEDS.

It is taking the Western nations many weary centuries to grant to woman the same rights of education and self-development that the man enjoys. Universities and colleges for Western women are a comparatively recent concession to her natural and just birthright. There is not time, however, even to enumerate the benefits that have already come to the world through this liberation of woman.

In China, we are in danger of repeating our mistakes of the past in the West—that is, of emphasizing the education of man without giving woman an equal opportunity. Aside from the reason that the woman has inherent rights of equal privilege, China is not going to have Christian homes nor be a Christian nation until woman is at liberty in education.

We see high schools, colleges, and universities multiplying for the men, but as yet there is not one literary college for women in East China. I think I am right in this. Therefore, let us give our hearty support and encouragement to the first to be, the Guiling College for Women at Nanking.—Dr. Hattie F. Love.

CLOSING EXERCISES OF OUR PACIFIC COAST JAPANESE SCHOOLS.

These schools have held their closing exercises, and vacation has begun. At Oakland, the kindergarten children did well, and three graduated. There promises to be a larger attendance when the next term opens. Mrs. Ozaki is winning the hearts of parents and children. In Alameda, Mrs. Shimozumi had 23 pupils at the close, and 4 graduated. There was a good attendance of mothers at both these exercises, and the expressions of appreciation and good will by these mothers were accompanied by the usual profusion of Jepanese bows and courtesies. When the Alameda Japanese Language School closed, there was not a vacant seat in the chapel at Mary Helm Hall, and numerous chairs had been carried in. The program was very lengthy. I was the only white person present. Three were graduated from the grammar grade and two from the primary grade. Several of these were pupils that at first left us for the Buddhist school. They do not attend the Buddhist Sunday school, either. We are hoping that their parents will permit them to return to ours before long. We cannot crowd them, however, and rejoice that we have not antagonized them.—The Rev. Mr. Acton.

WHERE EVERYONE GOES TO CHURCH.

John Backland, Captain of the "C. S. Holmes," touched at Point Barrow, Alaska, after the old mission church had burned down. He had bought and transported material to Point Barrow to build a new church. Eskimos from the surrounding country moved in to be near it, and it became very inadequate. Five years later, when he returned, he found men, women and children crowded into the church three times each Sunday, filling it to overflowing. Of the 454 people at Point Barrow, 450 were regular church attendants. The captain estimated the probable cost of an addition to the building to be about $1450, and wrote to the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions, promising to give $250 of this himself.

Last summer he reached Point Barrow again, his boat loaded with all the material necessary for the addition, as well as coal, Christmas boxes and lantern and slides from the Board at home.—Missionary Review.

You Can Tell The People Who Have Iron in Their Blood —Strong, Healthy, Vigorous Folks

Doctor Says Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Nervous Rundown People 100 Per Cent. Stronger in Two Weeks' Time in Many Cases.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—"One glance is enough to tell which people have iron in their blood," said Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician who has studied widely both in this country and in great European Medical institutions, in a recent discourse. They are the ones that do and dare. The others are in the weakling class. Sleepless nights spent worrying over supposed ailments, constant dosing with habit-forming drugs and narcotics for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease and useless attempts to brace up with strong coffee or other stimulants are what keep them suffering and vainly longing to be strong. Their real trouble is lack of iron in the blood. Without iron the blood has no power to change food into living tissue and therefore, nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. The moment iron is supplied the multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. I have seen dozens of nervous, rundown people who were ailing all the time, double and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of every sign of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without any benefit.

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. There is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and sound, healthy flesh on your bones. But you must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

NOTE—Nuxated iron recommended above by Dr. E. Sauer, is one of the newer organic iron compounds. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

Dear Brother Meek: We have just closed a fine meeting at Caswell Springs, on the Escatawpa charge (Miss. Conf.). Brother Sibley, our pastor, was assisted in the meeting by Rev. George W. Huff, our supernumerary preacher who resides at Hattiesburg. Brother Huff preached with great power, moving large congregations to tears and to shouts of praise to God. There were a number of bright conversions. Some of the strong young men took up the cross and worked for the success of the meeting with prayer and exhortation. There were 33 accessions to our Church and a great revival among the membership of the church was experienced. We believe that this is the greatest meeting that we have had in years. It began on July 28 and closed on Auguust 5. Every service was good. Brother Huff did fine preaching throughout the meeting.—Garland G. Goff.

Longville, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: Up to the present time our work is doing very well. When we consider the time lost on the charge this year, due to affliction, we think that everything has gotten along nicely. The little town of Longville is an ideal place in which to live, and if we can ever pull the spiritual standard up to the sanitarium idea, we will have a banner charge; and I hope some day to reach it. Our people are a good, loyal folk. I want to mention especially the faithfulness of Rev. D. W. McLean, a local preacher and steward. No man can excel him in the performance of duty. We have held two of our meetings. Brother Louis Hoffpauir, of Sulphur, did the preaching in each of them, and the people were delighted with him. Our third Quarterly Conference was held last week, with our presiding elder, Rev. Briscoe Carter, on hand, bringing us a good message, and the people bringing out a good dinner. It was a rare occasion for a week day. May God's richest blessings rest upon you in your great work!—J. S. Rutledge, P. C.

Hattiesburg Circuit (Miss. Conf.)

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just closed two revival meetings in the charge. Brother W. W. Moore assisted us at Lux, and he did some splendid work, which was appreciated generally, as many testified at the closing service, by recounting the spiritual blessings received. There were two accessions—one by baptism, and one by vows. Brother J. S. Purcell did the preaching at Batson, and from the initial service the interest and attendance grew. His attack upon sin, which was fearless, but made in a brotherly spirit that won the confidence of the people. His hard work there was appreciated by all who heard him. Three united with us by baptism, and one by vows. The spiritual life of the community was greatly quickened, and I have reason to believe that much permanent good will result.....At McCallum, in the vicinity of the new training camp—Camp Shelby—we are to begin on the 5th inst., with Brother J. E. Williams to assist. We are praying and planning for a gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit at this point. The note throughout the charge has an optimistic ring, as was shown at the third quarterly conference on July 10, at Eastabuchie. The salary was half paid and a reasonable remittance made on the benevolences. Crop conditions are encouraging at the present writing in this section, and, by God's Holy Spirit and the co-operation of the people, we anticipate a successful closing of the year's work in this new charge. The Petal congregation has raised and paid a deficit of $100, each, on church and piano this year above other finances. We can observe some improvement in the different lines of religious activity in the charge, for which we are truly thankful to God. May our passion for souls for His Kingdom grow more intense!—C. E. Downer, Pastor.

High Point, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: I am serving the upper end of the High Point Circuit, and I must say that this year's work has been a source of pleasure to me, notwithstanding that I am a "splice man." This work was assigned to me after Conference by the presiding elder, who told me to do the best I could with it. Things were rather dark for a young preacher to face, but, with the promises of God to back us up, my people and I went to work, and it wasn't long until we could see rays of light running through the sheet of darkness; and now things are running as smoothly as could be expected. We have raised some $80 at one church for the purpose of paying for an organ, which cost about $110. We have had two Children's Day services and collected $9.43 for the great cause that this money supports. The people have fine crops and everything bids fair for a fine year's work in some respects.

We had our first protracted meeting the week following the fifth Sunday in July at New Hope. Rev. T. J. Halfacre, from Artesia, rendered us most excellent help. He is a man with his heart truly set on the salvation of the souls of men and women. He possesses a number of traits which would mark him as an evangelist of ability. Although he is not an evangelist, he has all the needed qualities of one. Notwithstanding the short time he has been in the ministry, he is one of the very best revivalists in our Conference. He is a man to whom a person may open his heart, and in whom one feels free to confide. Brother Halfacre preached six days and as many nights with a mighty outpouring of the Holy Spirit at each service. We closed with a large number of conversions, a vast number of men and women reclaimed, and ten accessions to the Church, all of which were on profession of faith.—W. A. Langley, P. C.

CALOMEL SELDOM SOLD HERE NOW

Nasty drug salivates, makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Every druggist in town—your druggist and everybody's druggist—has noticed a great falling-off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

Your Greatest Problem—That Boy of Yours.

What kind of a man will he be ten, twenty, thirty years from now? You know, every parent knows, that it depends entirely upon the training he is getting right now, his associations, his ideals, his inspirations.

Mr. Robert K. Morgan, Principal of the Morgan School, Fayetteville, Tenn., has been training boys for twenty-five years. He wants your boy. He recognizes in him one of the men who may some day manage big affairs and he wants to train him for that end. His school has been built and equipped, and his instructors chosen with the first and only consideration of giving the boy the mental and physical training, the associations, with clean, high-minded men, the ideals of character, the inspirations to ambition, which the world expects in the men to whom it entrusts its greatest affairs, be they business, professional, religious or social.

Robert K. Morgan is a Christian gentleman of strong, wholesome, inspiring personality, and his school is the material projection of that character. He is a graduate of Webb School, Bellbuckle, Tenn., and the Vanderbilt University.

The boy deserves your most careful thought. Write Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Fayetteville, Tennessee, to-day, and let him send you a catalogue and tell you what this school can do for your boy.

NEW ORLEANS
CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 64—No. 34. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3209.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, AUGUST 23, 1917. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

Editorial

To become a pedant one needs only to learn to quote; but to become a scholar one must learn to think.

• • •

When the self is in the foreground of any action in one's life, Christ is in the background—if, indeed, he is on the ground at all. Egotism is utterly incompatible with deep piety.

• • •

Christianity in order to conquer must be spiritually and morally militant. Yet there are many who have turned pacifists, and who are piously noisy in their insistence that others should do likewise. The Master entered into no truce with evil in any form, and not without being untrue to him can his disciples do so. Paul's message to Timothy, his son in the gospel, was, "War a good warfare, and each of us would do well to heed this apostolic exhortation.

• • •

The "band-wagoners" have existed in every age. We mean those who wait to see whether a cause is going to win before they align themselves with it. Thus many are shouting for prohibition now who until recently had never sounded a note in the interest of that great cause. We should be glad to welcome all recruits in the battle against the rum traffic, but it taxes one's patience somewhat when these new and late enlisters want to assume command of the forces and to seize and appropriate the laurels which legitimately belong to those who have borne the burden and the heat of the long, hard struggle. Earthly rewards, however, amount to little; and the unfading ones of eternity will in every instance be rightly bestowed.

• • •

There is no excuse for mental indolence on the part of the Christian minister. Having been called to be a teacher and leader of men, a weighty obligation rests upon him to gather up all the elements of strength that he can for this work, and among these intelligence is a factor that cannot be ignored. Nor is there any royal road to intellectual equipment; it comes only as a result of earnest, persistent, faithful study, which every man must do for himself. We hear much of chautauquas and lecture courses in this day, and they help a little, but only a little. It is one's daily habit of study that really counts. The pastor who is negligent or slipshod at this point makes a great and irremediable mistake. The effect may not disclose itself outstandingly at first; but it will in the course of a few years. A man of average mental ability, even if he has not had collegiate training, may by steady and energetic application develop himself wonderfully in the Methodist itinerancy. The history of Southern Methodism is resplendent with the names of men who have proven this statement to be true. But no preacher, whatever may or may not be his attainments, can cease to be truly a student without suffering a loss in efficiency.

A GREAT RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE SOUTH.

The fact that the War Department at Washington has decided to have the young men drafted into the Army (several hundred thousand) largely trained in the South has placed upon the Southern people a weighty obligation, while giving them a great opportunity and privilege. The Manufacturer's Record, of Baltimore, recently discussed this matter in a manner so illuminating and forceful that we think it well to reproduce upon our editorial page some extracts from its impressive utterance, for which we are indebted to the Literary Digest. Among other things, The Record said:

"It is incumbent upon every man, woman, and child to recognize that this is the greatest responsibility ever placed upon this section. It is a responsibility individually to the men who should be regarded as guests of the South and treated with every possible courtesy and consideration, and protected to the utmost extreme from every danger and temptation.

"It is a responsibility which the South owes to the parents of these young men, that they may know that in this land which has been credited—and we trust justly—with patriotism, with hospitality, and with devotion to morality and religion, these sons of theirs shall be as safely guarded as if in their own homes.

"It is a responsibility which this section owes to the Nation and to civilization that these million or more of young men while in the South shall be protected from every possible evil, that they may be trained physically, mentally, and morally to be equipped for the mighty task to which the Nation and civilization have called them.

"No man in the South can afford to say that because these camps are not located in his particular vicinity there is no responsibility resting upon him. The responsibility rests upon every man and woman in the South. Those in the immediate vicinity of these camps must give of their time, their work, their consecration to the higher and holier things of life as well as their money, but they must be backed up by the moral and financial forces of other parts of the South, that the work may be carried on with abundant means and with the united strength of the South.

"These men who are coming into this section are going to be the better or the worse for their experience. The destiny of civilization may, to a large extent, be shaped by the way in which the South meets this problem."

The following specific suggestions are made to the citizens of communities in close proximity to the training-camps now being established:

"They should be equipped with books and papers and writing materials, and the men in the camps should be made to feel that at any moment when off duty they can enter any of the churches and find a hearty welcome and an opportunity to read or write or to meet some of the leaders, men and women, in the religious life of the community. Some will say that this will cost money. Suppose it does? What are the people in these communities going to do with their money that is higher and better and nobler than to spend it in the interest of thousands and tens of thousands of these young men, who have come into this section to train that they may be prepared to save the women and the children of this section from the fearful destruction of German barbarism?

"From every pulpit in the South these facts should be proclaimed, and every church that fails to measure up to this situation will be recreant to its responsibility to the Nation and to God."

Not only the Church has its duties:

"Instead of rejoicing that these encampments have been established in the South, merely from the material point of view that their coming will mean increased business activity in the community, this section should be stirred by a profound sense of responsibility, for unless it meets this responsibility in a way worthy of the situation the coming of these men will prove a curse to them and an injury to the Nation and a danger to civilization.

"In this section, where home life is sacred, where a large proportion of the population is true to the old traditions of integrity and honor, where the Bible is still the most honored book, and where the dominant influences are concentrated in religious activities, there should be an immediate awakening to the tremendous responsibility to give to these incoming men every possible advantage of religious life and social life, of protection from temptations which so constantly surround great encampments, that they may be the better for their coming into the South, and that the South may be tremendously broadened and developed by their coming and by the work which it does in measuring up to this opportunity to serve God and humanity."

GOOD FOR THE CHURCH COLLEGE.

The following from the Christian Advocate (New York) is so suggestive that it needs no comment:

"The chaplain of the New York State Prison at Auburn is a Methodist, the Rev. Arthur Copeland. He can be trusted when he makes a statement like the following: 'I have now been chaplain of the State Prison at Auburn for six years. We have eighteen hundred men in that prison. They are as fine and atheletic a group as you can find. They are a bright bunch; it would be difficult to find eighteen hundred men who would come up to their standard in brain power. They are young men; the largest number of any one age is the age of twenty-two. They are graduates of grammar schools, of high schools, of great universities and professional schools. There are a good many college men among them. I have made a diligent search in the records of these men and during these six years there has not been among the prisoners a single graduate of any church college.'"

Some one has strikingly said: "God is never deaf except when men's hearts are dumb." It is truly when the HEART SPEAKS that God hears.

"It will not do to offer God the faded flower when He asks for the bud."

THE LIVING GOD.

God knows
Our every word and deed and thought;
How we have answered Heaven's "shalt" and "ought;"
If paths of peace our sin-curst souls have sought:
God knows.

God hears
If our souls their glad thanksgivings bring;
If hearts in joyous strain His praises sing:
If lips blaspheme, or own Him Lord and King;
God hears.

God sees,
And naught escapes His vigil eye;
E'en though the secret thought concealed lie,
Or creeds confessed which life and love deny:
God sees.

God warns
Against the bitter wage of sin;
The guilty shall in no wise enter in;
Eternal death the judgment they shall win:
God warns.

God loves!
O wondrous thought! That such as I
Should be forgiven! That from His home on high
He sent His only Son, for me to die!
God loves!

—Rev. W. S. Kerschner.

ARE YOU HELPING TO DO IT?

Voltaire said that to kill the Christian religion they, the athesists, must first kill the Christian Sabbath. Whoever then does not keep the Sabbath holy, or allows his children to fail to do so, is doing the work of the atheists in destroying the Christian religion.—Eastern Methodist.

GOD'S WORD INEXHAUSTIBLE.

The man who chooses the Word of God as his moral inheritance may do so in full confidence that it will amply meet the demands of his whole future, and of the whole future of his race. Its utterances are folded in upon themselves like a flower. You see certain petals already exposed to the light; but you see within the circle of these something more which is to unfold in its season. This heritage of the Word grows richer with time. The preacher who thinks he has exhausted a text will find another sermon in it when he goes to it again. The man who goes through his Bible for the fiftieth time finds it richest in fresh treasures. —M. R. Vincent.

NONE OVERLOOKED.

Mark Guy Pearse.

It is said that once when Sir Michael Costa was having a rehearsal with a vast array of performers and hundreds of voices, as the mighty chorus rang out with the thunder of the organ, and roll of drums, and ringing horns, and cymbals clashing, some one man who played the piccolo far away up in some corner, said within himself: "In all this din it matters not what I do!" and so he ceased to play. Suddenly the great conductor stopped, flung up his hands and all was still—and then he cried aloud: "Where is the piccolo?" The quick ear missed it, and all was spoiled because it failed to take its part.....O my soul, do thy part with all thy might! Little thou mayest be, insignificant and hidden, and yet God seeks thy praise, he listens for it, and all the music of his great universe is made richer and sweeter because thou givest him thanks. Bless the Lord, oh my soul!

WHAT THE CHURCH NEEDS.

The Church to-day is in great need of the bright, thrilling experience which came to the first Christians at Pentecost, and sent them over the parapet into the streets of Jerusalem, full of a gracious fury for conquest. These soldiers of Christ had been in the trenches, watchful, tremulous with desire, and content to leave the objective within the counsels of the Higher Command. When the Spirit came they were braced for an enormous undertaking. The exchange of secret confidence gave place to a mighty impulse for action. Waves of men leaped to the attack with irresistible dash. Jerusalem was full of the joyous clash of tongues. St. Peter and the apostles displayed extraordinary courage, and turned the position. Before the close of the day thousands of prisoners were brought in; and "the Lord added to them day by day those that were being saved." Can the essential features of Pentecost be recovered? Can such a wonder-chapter as Acts 2 be rewritten from present-day experience? It can. The Church may repeat her glorious offensive as soon as she is willing to pay the price of effectiveness. The one thing in the way is self-interest. Let the call to deny self and follow Christ be fully obeyed and God will lift us to high levels of witness-bearing and victory.—Central Christian Advocate.

EMORY UNIVERSITY.

By Rev. John A. Rice, D. D.

A call to the Commencements of the Wesleyan and Millsaps gave me the coveted opportunity to see Emory University. I had heard of it "by the hearing of the ear," but had no conception of its beauty and well-laid-out plans. The besetting sin of Protestanism in large enterprises is hurry and consequent inadequacy. A friend of mine once told me that he was going out of the automobile business; and when I asked his reason, he said: "A man will study and ask questions and hang around and try out a machine for two months, and then, when he makes up his mind to buy, he wants it yesterday." Under the pressure of immediate urgency we do many things that we regret at our leisure. But nobody that sees Emory will ever have the feeling that haste there has made waste. There will be no eyesores, nothing to be done over. Bishop Candler appreciates fully the tremendous proportions of the real university of the future and has laid out a scheme worthy of the brain of a true educational statesman. He sees the far side of near things as well as the near side of far things, and that prophetic vision is expressed in noble form. The scale of things provides for quite indefinite expansion along the lines already projected. It will be necessary only to fill in and complete the outline.

Not only in the splendid scope of the whole, but also in the carefully thought-out and wrought-out details, there are the traces everywhere of the master mind and hand. Comfort, convenience, utility, adaptability to practical needs—these are never once lost sight of. It is a glorious workshop. Every cubic foot of space seems to be used for some real service. Nor is the aesthetic anywhere sacrificed to the merely useful. The best materials are used, and no pains have been spared to give everything a pleasing and enduring aspect. As you go from room to room in the spacious buildings, you find rest to your soul. The leisure of eternity seems to settle in your bones, for you feel that the beautiful things so restful to you will feed the human spirit ages hence. Though everything is new, an ancient atmosphere seems already to cling to some of the fittings and furnishings, particularly in the chapel and the theological library where the Wesleyana are kept.

To complete the plans already in mind will require a vast sum of money. At no distant day universities will be counting their equipments and endowments in terms of hundreds of millions, billions even. And this money will have to come from rich people. The poor will do their share—they always do. And their gifts will be as precious in the sight of God and men as the largest. But when they have done their all, noble as that is, it will hardly be a beginning. Money has to come from those who have it, large amounts from owners of large fortunes. One of the dangers is that those who can help may be tempted to ask whether the people want a university. Will a wise man ask that question? Did Amos and Hosea, Isaiah and Micah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel, Haggai and Zechariah? Did any real prophet or philanthropist ever ask whether the people wanted his ministries? Did Jesus give the people what they wanted? Did Paul? Did Luther wait till the people made him nail his theses on that door? Did John Wesley wait till the people cried out for a new kind of religious service and compelled him to give it? Is it not true that the people have, as a rule, to be saved in spite of themselves? Not what they want, but what they need is the question. They do not always know what they need. They cannot interpret themselves to themselves, cannot be expected to. In the matter of education particularly they must depend upon their leaders. They have neither the training nor the data necessary to seeing the vision of spiritual leadership on the part of the Church in this all-important field. And if they could see, they cannot answer the call of the hour. Only those who have money can answer that call, can fully meet that need.

Nor should one rich man wait for others. Each must face his own responsibillties in the lone deeps of his own life. Whether there be any other in all the world that feels the tug of a great opportunity, he who himself feels it cannot turn lightly away. The laws of the spirit are as exact and as exacting as those of gravitation. He who shirks what he is empowered to do runs the risk of impoverishing his own soul. And why should one hesitate to forget himself into immortality?

But even self-interest prompts careful provision for ample support of those agencies which create and conserve spiritual values, for all others rise and fall with these. What are great estates worth where ideals are materialized and men are decaying?

Is there not indeed an inalienable obligation resting upon capital to share with society the profits gained by favor of society? Is not money generally made by contact with people and by using the privileges of protected relationships with them? Does a man not owe something more than his taxes to those by whose help his fortune has been secured? Was not Mr. Carnegie more nearly right than we sometimes suppose when he said that it was a disgrace to die rich? Are not all right-thinking people now scrutinizing not only how money is made, but how it is used? If hoarded for selfish ends alone, is it not tainted? The conviction is steadily growing that one cannot escape a certain definite share in the redeeming work of his day.

Why, anyhow, should a man labor only for those who come after? If they cannot earn money, they cannot keep it. If they can earn it for themselves, they do not need gifts from another. More lives are ruined than are helped by well-meaning bequests. One of the most pitiable sights on earth is the man who gives himself, soul and body, to accumulating what others are to squander—to squander, perchance, with all too little thought of the heart that spent itself for them. All the sadder is such a sight at a time like this, when there is such a call to live forever in those we leave behind.

Emory offers the noblest chance east of the Mississippi for secure investment. It is not impossible that fortunes may melt away before this war is over. Nobody can guess what will happen to incomes; but universities, well managed, will endure. Ho who has the courage to venture here will entrench himself and his earnings for countless ages behind bulwarks that can never fall. Emory should have at least ten million dollars by the next General Conference. She needs twenty-five million to begin with. And these lines will be read by men who can invest that amount in this greatest educational opportunity east of the Mississippi without denying themselves or their people a single luxury or crippling their business enterprises for a single hour.

Bishop Candler understands the situation into which we are now hurled as few men among us do. It were well that we need his prophetic voice "while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work."

Who can realize that European universities are paralyzed and the ends of the earth now compelled to turn to America for training and leadership; that most of ours are secularized to a distressing degree and therefore unprepared to do their proper part in the spiritual reconstruction of the world; that there is not one of any kind south of Mason and Dixon's line and no certain promise of one; that the vital, progressive conservatism of the South offers an atmosphere so congenial to the noblest culture ideals as to attract inquiry from every land in the immediate future; that the foundation already laid and the constituency already secured at Emory give pledge of tremendous powers ready to be mobilized? Who, I ask, that has money can realize these things and not feel the claim of an age's opportunity upon his wealth and the grip of God upon his soul? For unless Jesus Christ be placed in the midst of the new social order, the giving of our blood and treasure to fight for democracy will be in vain. There can be no democracy that leaves him out. And if he is to go to the center, the universities must have large share in carrying him there. But if he be left out of them, to whom shall they, shall we, shall the future go? And who, if not the Church, will keep him in the midst of the education of those who are to be the creators as well as the creatures, of to-morrow and the day after?

UNDER THE TREES.

Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D., in The Messenger.

I.

In the Methodist Review for April there was a fine article from the pen of Dr. Carlton D. Harris, on the life of Bishop Alpheus W. Wilson, who recently passed away at the ripe old age of 83. Bishop Wilson was born in Baltimore in 1834, of good Methodist stock, though he came from a Presbyterian ancestry on his father's side, and was of Quaker extraction on his mother's side. His heredity was all right. He gave little promise of greatness in his early youth, being considered a "dull and backward" boy, an impression due probably to his unusual reticence, for Dr. Harris says he "surprised his friends by taking the full graduate course and successfully passing the examination for a degree at the Columbian University of Washington, D. C., now known as George Washington University." He was refused a degree because he was only eighteen, which strikes us as a very foolish rule.

He was uncertain what to do; concluded to be a merchant and sold dry goods for a week, and gave it up; concluded to be a doctor, studied medicine for two weeks, and gave it up; concluded to be a preacher, stuck to it for sixteen years, got in debt; retired from active work in the ministtry; studied law, paid his debts, and re-entered the regular work of the itinerancy; adhered to the South in the great struggle of the war for the Union; stood firm in Baltimore in spite of threats of violence and imprisonment by the Federal authorities; was made Secretary of the Board of Missions in 1878; elected Bishop in 1882, and filled the office with distinguished ability for 34 years. He was a man of massive intellectual strength, deep spiritual experience, stern convictions, and unyielding firmness of character. He had fine executive ability, while his legal knowledge and judicial type of mind made him an authority on matters of ecclesiastical law.

There was nothing showy, or spectacular, or sensational about Bishop Wilson. He was averse to all that sort of thing. A quiet dignity marked his manner both in the pulpit and out of it. He was not a "mixer," but a thinker, more at home in the library than on the street. He always seemed reserved and serious, but among intimate friends showed a genial and lovable nature. He seldom indulged in humor, but there was a rich vein of it in his composition, and at times he could be sarcastic. At one of the Conferences a presiding elder playfully told him if he wanted to erect a monument to himself, just send him back to a certain district. He replied that he had no desire for a monument of brass. But such withering repartee escaped only occasionally. By the uniform gravity of his manner he inspired a respect that forbade liberties. The writer never heard him tell a joke.

II.

Bishop Candler says Bishop Wilson was the greatest preacher of his generation. This is very high praise, for "his generation" could boast of Charles Spurgeon, and Henry Ward Beecher, and Philips Brooks, and William Morley Punshon, and Matthew Simpson, men of world-wide renown as pulpit orators; and other preachers, who while not so illustrious, some of us regard as even greater men in the pulpit; such as George F. Pierce, Hubbard H. Kavanaugh, David S. Doggett, William E. Munsey, Enoch M. Marvin and the incomparable James A. Duncan. Had these men lived in London or New York they would have filled the world with their fame. Wilson was one of this shining galaxy, and one of the brightest of the starry group.

He was a profound student, a great reader of the best books, and tireless in his pursuit of knowledge. "When for five months in 1909," says Dr. Harris, "he was so seriously ill, and there was scarcely a night when his mind did not temporarily wander, he read and mastered five volumes by such authors as Denny, Hort, Orr and Swete—notwithstanding one-third of Swete's work was in Greek with Latin footnotes." "During the last thirteen years of his life he read his Greek Testament through seventy-six times." This writer met him in a book store in Spartanburg, S. C., a couple of years ago, and he had just laid in a supply of several new books. What a rebuke to the young men coming into the Conferences who plead various excuses for failing to bring up their courses of study! Bishop Wilson's example in this matter was thoroughly in harmony with the great preachers of the olden time, and a splendid inspiration to those of a later age.

Bishop Wilson was known among the Churches as a great expounder of Pauline Christianity. He literally devoured the writings of the great Apostle to the Gentiles. He thought long and deeply on the truth of his gospel and entered fully into the spirit of its teaching. His mind was essentially unlike that of Paul. He was deficient in imagination. He lacked the intellectual quickness and emotional mobility of Paul. He was by temperament more self-controlled than the fiery Apostle; but he lacked his versatility. Paul reached a conclusion by spiritual intuition that Wilson worked out by a slow dialectical process. But they were kindred minds in their apprehension of fundamental truth and the passion for its utterance as the one hope of man. Wilson's insight into the plan of salvation by faith and his grip on the innermost meaning of the Gospel, as well as his ability to expound and enforce his views, were unsurpassed.

Doubtless in his own mental processes there was a logical order in his thinking, but it did not appear in his preaching. There were no seams in the cloth. It was woven in close texture throughout. Like the stones in an Egyptian temple, the parts were so perfectly joined that they looked like a solid piece. There were no visible divisions, no "firstly" and "secondly" and "thirdly" and "lastly." His thought rolled out in a continuous stream, and with the force of a river current. He was never "brilliant" in the ordinary sense of that term as applied to a public speaker; but solid and glowing, and mighty to stir the consciences of men. He was too deep and heavy for superficial hearers. He was a preacher for preachers. Men of thought always went to hear him. I have said he was heavy, but it was the heaviness of pure gold.

Bishop Cranston said Bishop Wilson never failed in the pulpit. This is a mistake. I have heard him fail. I was with him at a District Conference once. It was in August. The weather was hot, close, and stifling. It wilted everything. An archangel's plume would have drooped in such an atmosphere. Wilson preached at 11 a. m. He floundered from the start. He floundered to the end. People went away disappointed. Many had come for miles and miles to hear the great preacher. My host said to me at dinner: "If that is the best he can do we have fifty preachers in this Conference who can beat him preaching." I tried to assure him that Wilson's wings were moist with the humid atmosphere. He shook his head. I had to preach at night. Wilson was in the pulpit. My machine would not work. After perhaps a fifteen minutes' useless struggle to start something, I stopped and said: "Brethren, I'm in the brush. I know it. God knows it. I expect you know it. But one other thing I know, salvation is free, hallelujah!" Some brother shouted out "Amen," then another said, "Hallelujah," and others joined in shouting "Amen." It started a whirlwind and we broke up with a grand "old time religion" meeting. Some time after I met Bishop Wilson. He greeted me cordially, and said, "I haven't seen you since you were in the brush at — District Conference." "Yes," I replied, "if I remember aright, you were 'in the brush,' too. I got out and you didn't." "Well," he said, "you hollered your way out." He sometimes failed, but he seldom failed, and even his failures were beyond the best of most of us.

III.

I first met this imperial man in 1876. He was then pastor of Mt. Vernon Place Church in Washington City and I was pastor of Broad Street Church in Richmond, Va. He wrote to me, inviting me to visit him, and preach for him. I never knew why I was thus honored, but suspect it was suggested to Wilson by Dr. James A. Duncan, President of Randolph Macon College. From the first of our acquaintance, Dr. Duncan seemed to take a special interest in me, and more than once I was indebted to his kindness for distinguished favors. I accepted Wilson's invitation, went to Washington, and preached for him Sunday morning and evening. Later I invited him to visit me in Richmond. He came and preached for me a week, with the power and splendor of his prime. It was the beginning of a life-long acquaintance and friendship. I helped to elect him Secretary of the Board of Missions at the General Conference in Atlanta, and afterwards helped to make him a Bishop at the General Conference in Nashville. He made good in both offices. He planted the cause of missions on the heart of the Church as it had never been before. He made the missionary anniversary at the Conferences he attended occasions long to be remembered. I have often wondered how our Bishops preach as well as they do at an Annual Conference, when from Wednesday to Saturday they are engaged with the business of the session, often involved in much anxiety about the appointments of the preachers, and pestered to death with a hundred details. But if these things ever got in Bishop Wilson's way, he never showed any trace of it in his preaching. And when he swung loose it was good to be there. He was slow getting started, like a big ocean liner. But once in the channel, my, my, how majestically he moved! You did not have the dazzling imagination of Munsey; you missed the polished periods of Galloway; there was none of the emotional eloquence of Kavanaugh, or Marvin's rapturous flights. But you were lifted by a tidal wave of spiritual power and borne upward and onward until heaven seemed to be all around you, and the Delectable Mountains and the Land of Beulah were in full view.

He was full to the brim with his message and always ready. Dr. Harris relates this incident: "In 1901 when he was a delegate to the Ecumenical Conference which met in London, he was comparatively unknown in that city. One morning an eminent man who was to speak on missions failed to appear. An American who was on the executive committee suggested that Bishop Wilson take his place. The leaders thought it impossible that any man, without a moment's notice, could speak to and hold that throng from all the nations of the earth. But he captivated his listeners in a fifteen-minute speech, one of the shortest in his life. Some time after, another notable speaker failed the committee, and all eyes turned to Bishop Wilson. This time he spoke for more than an hour. When he had finished, the large audience arose and pressed forward to hear him in triumph on their shoulders; but with his accustomed modesty, he would have none of this. It was pronounced by many of the pulpit orators present the greatest missionary sermon they had ever heard."

He was loyal to the South, yet popular in the North. There was nothing local or limited in his religion. His fraternity was as broad as his gospel. He was willing for the unification of the two

THE MEETING AT PONTOTOC.

Dear Doctor Meek: We began our meeting in Pontotoc on Sunday, July 22, with Brother W. M. McIntosh, one of our General Evangelists, doing the preaching. The meeting ran through two weeks, closing on Sunday night, August 5. We had a great revival. The services were held in a large tabernacle built for this purpose. We had the co-operation of the Baptists, who agreed to pay half the expense of erecting the tabernacle and who will begin their meeting on the fourth Sunday in this month. We had the hearty co-operation of the Presbyterians, as well as that of the Baptists, from start to finsh. Brother McIntosh did the best preaching that I have ever heard, taking it all the way through. His expositions of the Word were clear, sound, and most convincing. All his texts were made to show the plan of salvation and were enriched with illustrations that could not fail to stir the hearts of the people. His enthusiasm and energy are an abiding wonder. He is an optimist. He evidenly feels the power he proclaims and the divine touch he urges upon others physically and mentally. He seems impervious to fatigue. Toward the end the crowd grew, rather than lessened. One day was given to the soldier boys, when we had 2000 people present. He did our church a great service. All the people seemed greatly helped. There was no compromise of the highest doctrinal standards, or in the plea for holy-living; yet no coarse epithets were used, no abuse of the sinner was heard. We did not have a great ingathering because there were but few out of the Church. McIntosh has grown immensely in the past ten years. Surely we will use him more and more in North Mississippi. Some parts of our territory are suffering greatly for the old-time revival power. We need more evangelists and more pastors with the evangelistic spirit and fire, or the Baptists will take our crown in North Mississippi—especially in the interior.

METHODISM AND DEMOCRACY.

Dr. W. D. Bradfield, in the Texas Christian Advocate.

American Methodism had its birth amidst the throes of the American Revolution. The governments of Europe were autocratic and the theory of the divine right of kings was universally accepted among European people when the colonists of the New World proclaimed their right to organize a representative government.

The Methodists were the first to organize in the New World. They were the first, too, to deny absolutism in Church government. Francis Asbury came to America deeply imbued with English and European ideals of government. In the beginning of the American Revolution Asbury doubtless sympathized with the English and for this reason was compelled to go into hiding during almost the entire period of the war. The days which lengthened into months and years were occupied in study and reflection. During these days the future leader of Methodism had a new vision and it was a vision of democracy.

John Wesley, the autocratic head of English Methodism, was surprised and grieved when Asbury made it clear to him that American Methodism should be democratic in its government and should be free from the control of any foreign power. Asbury declined Wesley's appointment to the General Superintendency. He would accept that position on condition of election by his brethren only. He recognized no inherent right in Mr. Wesley to appoint him to orders; such right inhered in the body of elders and these elders were his own American brethren.

Thus Methodism severed itself from every taint of absolutism in the early days of its history and it would be easy to show that its subsequent growth has been nurtured by the spirit of democracy. In 1808 it made its General Conference a representative body; its Bishops from the beginning have been subject to constitutional authority. The Bishop has no prerogatives; his duties are prescribed and periodically he is subjected to a review both of his character and his official administration. Lay representation in the Church came late, but from the first was inevitable.

We do not say that the process of democratizing the Church is complete, but we deny the proposition that the spirit of absolutism in government ever had any place in the councils of American Methodism; we deny the proposition that Methodism is in any sense a close clerical corporation.

While we are speaking we should like to commend a single piece of legislation to the next General Conference. We should like to see the Quarterly Conference composed of the entire membership of the local Church. This done, in our judgment, the entire system of our government would be representative. For, be it remembered, that the American form of government is representative; the pure democracies of Athens and Sparta have long since passed away.

OUR CHURCH HAS IT.

"Methodism, North and South, needs a body of Bishops who stand resolutely for the Bible, who lay great emphasis upon the fundamental doctrines of the Holy Scriptures, who will have it understood that they will give appointments to no men who question the Deity of Jesus, and the fulness of the Atonement through His Sacrificial death. The time has come for a long, loud protest against false and loose teachings in our pulpits. Usually those clerical gentlemen who make new discoveries and proclaim old heresies in new clothes when they find out that their views are going to cost them something, will deny, explain, trim and dodge, and make themselves to appear thoroughly innocent of any false teaching. Few of them have candor and courage enough to step out and suffer for their views."

With much in the above from the Pentecostal Herald, we are in hearty sympathy, but so far as our Church is concerned, we have now a body of Bishops who stand for the revealed word of God and who believe, from their public utterances, most steadfastly in the fundamental doctrines of the Bible. If Southern Methodism has a single Bishop in its College of Bishops who questions the deity of Jesus Christ, or who denies or questions the fullness of the atonement through the "sacrificial death of Jesus Christ," the fact has not come to us—not even has there reached us a rumor of such a thing.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

A FEATURE THAT IS NOT "TENTATIVE."

In a discussion in our office some days ago—we had no part in it except as a listener—on unification, one of the gentlemen said that it appeared to him that everything connected with the Commission on Unification was "tentative" except the money part of the proceedings. There is no semblance of an experiment about that feature of the business. It is cash down, and there will be a pretty good sum of it before the business is done. —Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

NOTES.

A contemporary says: "Alaska 'dry;' Porto Rico 'dry'—verily, the youngsters shame their mother country."

Utah's bone-dry prohibition law went into effect on August 1. It is said to be one of the most drastic measures enacted by any State in the Union. It carries penalties for the sale, giving away, or possession of intoxicating liquors, and any person who drinks in a public place or becomes intoxicated will he deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

As a result of the order of the War Department to provide a dry zone around military camps, 260 saloons in Kansas City and 44 in East St. Louis were closed last week. Among the places shut up were two breweries and the bars of several large hotels. By order of Uncle Sam, with a view to protecting the soldiers. the red light districts at Jackson and Hattiesburg, Miss., have likewise been wiped out.

According to Mr. Wm. M. Railey, President of the Citizens' League of Louisiana, the police records in New Orleans show that arrests for drunkenness were 25 per cent less for the first half of 1917 than for the same period last year. This, he thinks, should be attributed to the enforcement of the Sunday closing law, though that enforcement is not complete. This would seem to indicate that formerly the Christian Sabbath was the chief day for getting drunk in the Crescent City.

Some weeks ago Police Commissioner Woods of New York called attention to the fact that since January 1, 1917, between 700 and 800 girls had disappeared in that city, and the number disappearing annually in Chicago is estimated to be 1000. The two agencies contributing chiefly to this awful wreckage of young women are said to be liquor (chiefly beer), and the dance hall. Yet the Legislature of Illinois recently refused to enact a law forbidding the sale of intoxicating beverages at dancing places.

SHOULD THE GOVERNMENT BE IN PARTNERSHIP WITH SUCH A BUSINESS?

The liquor dealers make much of an ado over the revenue that they pay the Government. As was shown in the Advocate last week in the article, entitled "A Substitute for the Liquor Revenue," the whiskey traffic does not really pay this revenue—it simply wrings it out of the people, taxing them in doing so many times as much for their own use as they turn into the Treasury. The fact is, the people of the United States are able to pay any and all taxes that may be needed to meet the legitimate expenses of the Governmnt, withouut having it to go into partnership with the accursed rum traffic to get funds. This partnership is morally, not to say criminally, wrong, and the people should demand that it cease. Note the following comments upon the character of the liquor buslness and see if you do not think that this is true.

From the New York Tribune.

Upon what does the liquor traffic depend? Upon debased manhood, wronged womanhood, and defrauded chlldhood. It holds a mortgage on every cradle, a deed written in the heart's blood of many a human life.

5. Increases taxation by filling prisons, madhouses, and work-houses.

8. Therefore, as one of the human family, an individual member has no right to introduce into the household or use for his own pleasure that which hurts even one other member, or to set at work an evil influence he has no well-grounded hope of controlling. It is clear in the light of experience and of recent research work that alcohol ought to be classed in the list of dangerous drugs, along with morphine, cocaine, and chloral, a drug which may so affect the will power as to gain the complete mastery over a patient and in the end destroy him. As a citizen, I note that it is alcohol which fills our prisons, whether taken in the form of a strong beverage as whiskey, or beer, as represented in milder beverages. It is at the bottom of most crimes, domestic infidelity, poverty, seductions, murders; it is allied to all that is evil and destructive of the high aims of civilization.

From the United States Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Crowley v. Christenson (137 U. S. 86) has the following to say regarding the liquor traffic:

By the general concurrence of opinion of every civilized and Christian community there are few sources of crime and misery to society equal to the dramshop, where intoxicating liquors in small quantities, to he drunk at the time, are sold indiscriminately to all parties applying. The statistics of every State show a greater amount of crime and misery attributable to the use of ardent spirits obtained at these retail liquor saloons than to any other source. There is no inherent right in a citizen to sell intoxicating liquors by retail. It is not a privilege of a citizen of the State or of a citizen of the United States.

In Stone, Mississippi (101 U. S. 816), the United States Supreme Court uses this language:

No legislature can bargain away the public health or the public morals. The people themselves cannot do it, much less their servauts. Government is organized with a view to their preservation and can not divest itself of the power to provide for them.

A RUMOR WELL STUCK TO.

When one has seized upon a "current rumor," personally guaranteed its reliability, and proceeded to deposit it as gilt-edge collateral for a statement of fact, he may be pardoned if he lets slip a few whirling words, when his credit is sharply challenged by those who know the truth.

This is the predicament of Zion's Herald, to whose unfortunate misinterpretation of news and rumors from Traverse City allusion has been made in this paper. The recent meeting of the Committee on Methodist Unification produced nothing which could be fairly interpreted as giving encouragement to that special adjustment of the status of the Negro membership of which the Herald has been the ardent and solitary journalistic champion. Hence the surprise and regret with which commissioners have found Zion's Herald asserting that its views had been justified by what had taken place.

This paper would not boast of having "inside" information, though of course we have personal knowledge of the facts. Indeed, our opinlon was, and is, that all sessions ought to be open to the Methodist press—not excepting our enterprising contemporary from the kingdom of the East Wind. Such a rule would have saved the present awkward situation, which enahles those editors to talk who cannot know all the facts, while it padlocks the lips of those who are lnside. As matters now stand, a paper is liable to be misled itself by the scraps of information which its wolverines and ferrets hring to the editor's den, and so to mislead others. It was this which prompted our mild protest, which, falling on the sultry air of Shawmut in dogdays, has struck the Herald as so "decidedly refreshing," and has provoked its characteristic answer.

Passing over the Herald's lecture on How to Edit a Paper, we cannot repress a query as to whether the ethics of congenital journalism forbid an editor to retreat from a position which has become untenahle. Apparently they do, for the Herald still insists that "its readers may rest assured that when we have pretended to give them accurate information, we have had the facts—and the unification question is no exception ,as the well-informed Advocate itself knows."

As to the value of the Herald's guarantee in the present instance, only a single witness need be introduced, Dr. Robert E. Jones, editor of the Southwestern Christian Advocate, who on July 19 printed the following comment on thls part of the Herald's report:

"If Zion's Herald's informer were thoroughly honest in furnishing this news service, he, she or it, as the case may be, would know that the publication of such facts was not the wohle truth and published as it is, makes an entirely different impression as to what was the real attitude on this vital question. This statement is entirely misleading. It has a semblance of fact, but it lacks another very serious item which would altogether change the conclusions of our distinguished contemporary at Boston. Being a member of the sub-Committee on the status of the Negro, as well as a member of the Joint Commission, we know all the facts.

Of course, if the Herald wrote as it did from full knowledge of the facts, its plight is even worse, for it is caught in the act of suppressing an essential part of a report in order to make capital for a losing cause.—New York Christian Advocate.

SOMEWHAT OF A SMOKER.

"In one of the streets of Rotterdam, I was shown the home of the greatest smoker that the world has known. Meinheer Van Klaes, as he was called. consumed, on an average, one hundred and fifty grams of tobacco every day, yet lived till he was ninety-eight years old. His last will and testament was extraordinary. After bequeathing most of his possessions to his relatives, he thus directed how he should be huried: 'I wish that all my friends who are smokers shall be specially invited to my funeral . Each of them shall receive a package of tobacco and two pipes, and they are requested to smoke uninterruptedly during the funeral ceremonies. My body shall be enclosed in a coffin lined with the wood of my old cigar boxes. Besides me in my casket shall he laid my favorite meerschaum, a box of matches, and a package of tobacco. When my body is lowered into the grave, every person present is requested to pass by and cast upon it the ashes from his pipe.' These touching requests. it is said, were faithfully complied with. His friends attended in prodigious numbers; and, at the funeral, the smoke was so dense that a horn had to he blown to enable the mourners to find the door."

The above is from one of Stoddard's Lectures. I commend Van Klaes to the lovers of the weed as being very consistent. At all times he was a lover of smoke.

"Since the world is so full of beauty, light and music, we can but feel that its Creator cares for all these things, and that the more of true beauty, brightness and harmony we can put into our lives, the more we shall he shaping them according to God's plan, and toward their ultimate purpose."

The entrance of this nation in the great war was the signal for the Bell System to place its entire service, unreservedly to the Government.

As our military strength grows, and we become large participants in the great war, the demand of the Government upon our service will continue to increase, and must always be met.

An extraordinary increase in telephone traffic due to the unprecedented commercial and industrial activities incidental to the war will also be adequately provided for.

Like the other resources of the nation, our resources must be conserved, and we appeal to the American Public to assist us in meeting this extraordinary condition by avoiding, as much as possible, waste and extravagant use of the service.

BEN'S WISH.

He was a little city lad
Who came to visit me;
For I live where the fields are green
As far as one can see.

I live where the hens lay eggs,
And where the geese strut by,
And where the sky above is blue,
And where the wild birds fly.

And this is what the laddie saw,
He came and told it me:
"Your hens were rolling in the dirt,
I scared 'em up," said he;

"Because I thought you wouldn't want
Sueh dirty hens around;
But grandpa says it makes hens clean
To wallow on the ground.

"It doesn't make boys clean, I know,"
With rueful face, said Ben.
"They never let me play in dirt;
I wish I were a hen."

RUTH BAXTER'S HIGHER DESTINY.

Adelbert F. Caldwell.

In Ruth Baxter's cozy room in Whipple Hall—already it had beeome the "halfway house" to many a discouraged college fresilman—sat her aunt, Mrs. Rosamond Loeke, mending a rip in the girl's "second best" pair of gloves. It was Mrs. Locke's third vlsit to Huston, sinee her niece had entered college; and Ruth, now a Sophomore, shared with her especial friends the pleasure which her Aunt Rosamond's coming afforded her.

"There, I guess that will hold—a while, at least," and Mrs. Loeke laid the newly mended glove on the pillow bedecked couch beside her. She then leaned over and picked up a spool of silk, whieh had fallen from her lap to the floor as she sat working.

"I wonder, now, if there's anything else I can—"

Mrs. Locke was suddenly interrupted hy a gentle rap on the door outside.

"Come."

"I thought I'd find you alone," smiled Mildred Taylor, one of Ruth's most intimate friends, as she softly elosed the door after her.

"Yes, dear," returned Mrs. Locke, drawing Rutb's "comfort" chair up near her own, and patting her caller into it. "Ruth went down to Essex Street a few minutes ago with a book—perhaps you've read it, 'Imprisoned Opportunities'—for Thelma Randall. Poor girl; she's lately been compelled to give up her teaching on account of sciatic rheumatism."

"I thought I saw Ruth leave the hall."

"Then you didn't wish to see her?"

"No-o," hesitatingly. "But—I wished to see you—about—Ruth. I made up my mind as soon as you came," added Mildred, confidentially, "that I'd speak to you before you left, coneerning a matter I've been thinking about a good deal lately."

Mrs. Loeke looked up inquiringly.

"It's about Ruth's not 'measuring up'—that's what Professor Radcliffe would eall it—to her possibilities, Mrs. Locke. Several of ues girls—Gladys Thornburg and Harriet Martin included—thought that possibly a suggestion from you might influenee Ruth to see how much higher a destiny she eould fill, if she would only realize it, than the one she now holds, and with which she seems perfectly satisfied."

Mrs. Locke nodded encouragingly.

"Perhaps I can illustrate what I mean hy conerete examples," explained Mildred, after a pause. "For one thing, there is no reason why Ruth shouldn't lead her class in scholarship here at Huston, during both her junior and senior years. It would have been an easy matter for her this year, had she so desired. But Ruth shows no ambition to achieve such an honor, either for herself, or for the Alpha Upsilon Rho sorority.

"And it's so—in so many other things. We wanted Ruth to try for a position in the Haydn stringed orchesira, and the evening of the try-outs—it was only last Tuesday, since you came even—Ruth wasn't to be found. As a eonsequence, Lorna Wingrate, a Kappa, got the place. It's an honor we should have had."

"I see," mused Mrs. Locke, quietly.

"Then Ruth has a decided talent for writing. She could easily have won the sophomore editorship on the Index board had she entered the competition. We expected her to contribute a trial editorial—and urged it. She failed to do so, and the place went to Dorothy Canwell.

"Just one other instance," continued Mildred, anxious lest Ruth should return before she had tinished her errand. "Had Ruth taken the interest—she should have—in the sophomore intereollegiate prize speaking contest, the prize wouldn't have gone to a Lawrence Institute girl. She hasn't half the voice and personality that Ruth has.

"Don't you think, now—"

"Possibly," interrupted Mrs. Locke, divining what Mildred was about to say. "Perhaps, dear, one's 'higher destiny' is only relative—after all.

"You have referred to last Tuesday evening, the date that the try-outs for the Haydn stringed orchestra took plaee. Ruth was greatly disappointed in not being present—as she had planned. Just before the supper hour—I was with her at the time—Ruth took a peep into Selma Johnson's room. The poor little freshman was huddled up there over her trigonometry—just a small human bundle of homely discouragement. She hadn't had a mouthful of anything to eat since dinner.

"The mathematics quiz was the following forenoon, and one more failure meant the girl's going home. It was after eleven o'clock that night before Ruth left her; hut Selma passed the trigonometry examination the next day."

"I didn't know—that," was Mildred's slow response.

"The reason why Ruth didn't contribute the editorial for consideration by the Index board," explained Mrs. Loeke, "was because of her substituting, the afternoon she expected to devote to it, for Laura Packard. Possibly she's a stranger to you. Laura had the sixth grade room in the Franklin school here in town. Ruth's teaching for her that Friday afternoon gave Laura an opportunity to go to Hollis City, in order to have an interview with the school board there on Saturday.

"As a result she obtained a hetter position, with a considerable advance in salary, whieh will he of great aid in helping her younger brother through his technical course."

"Ruth never said anytbing about that—to us."

"No, it isn't Ruth's way," replied Mrs. Loeke, in her kindly tone.

"I see," reflected Mildred, glaneing through the window into the gathering twilight.

"All that week," resumed Mrs. Loeke, "Instead of giving her time to the prize speaking preparation, Ruth was privately eoaching little Mrs. Peterson, to enable her to pass a civil service examination.

"I'm afraid Ruth wouldn't want me to speak of these things," and Mrs. Locke arose and turned on the light.

"I—I am glad you have," said Mildred, thoughtfully. "It has changed my views about one's higher restiny—completely."—N. W. Christian Advocate.

GETTING A DRINK AT SEA.

Did you ever wonder how birds thousands of miles out at sea get water when they are thirsty? A certain old sailor used to wonder, too, till one day a squall in the tropics answered the question for him. In the elear sky overhead a black rain cloud suddenly appeared. Then out of an empty space over a hundred sea birds came darting from every direction. They got under the rain cloud, and waited there for about ten minutes, circling round and round, and when the rain came they drank their fill.

In the tropics, where the great sea birds sail thousands of miles from shore, they get their drinking water in that way. They scent a storm a long way, travel perhaps a hundred miles to get under it, and then swallow enough rain-drops to last them till the next storm. Of course, birds on land have plenty of fresh water for their drinks.—The Continent.

ANIMALS IN FIRE.

Most animals are afraid of fire, and will fly from it in terror. To others there is a fascination about a flame, and they will walk into it, even though tortured by the heat.

A horse in a burning stable goes mad with fear, but a dog is as cool in a fire as at any time. He keeps his nose down to the floor, where the air is purest, and sets himself calmly to finding his way out. Cats in fire cry piteously. They hide their faces from the light and crouch in corners. When their rescuer lifts them they are as a rule quite docile and subdued, never biting or scratching.

Birds seem to be hypnotized by fire, and keep perfectly still; even the loquacious parrot in a fire has nothing to say. Cows, like dogs, do not show alarm. They are easy to lead forth and often find their way out themselves.—United Presbyterian.

A FURTHER WORD FROM DR. MUNHALL.

In the Eastern Methodist of July 19th we published the points considered by the Commissions on Methodist Unification, at Traverse City, Mich., and have said nothing since, waiting to see what the official papers would say. So far as I have seen, they have said nothing of vital importance. Of course, the Commissioners had a fine time, socially and spiritually. The matters discussed relate to things to be done after unification is accomplished, if it ever is. Why not get together and then consider how best to adjust matters properly? Else if unification is not brought about, all this time and trouble will be for naught. There are two matters that must be adjusted before unification can he brought about, viz.: the color question and the standards of doctrine. I, for one, believe the Southern Church will not unite with us as long as the Negro retains his membership and ecclesiastical status with us, and we tolerate the faith-wrecking, soul-destroying course of Conference study that has been illegally and outrageously forced upon us. L. W. M.

FROM JOHN WESLEY.

"I beg leave to propose a short, clear and strong argument for the Divine inspiration of the Sacred Scriptures. The Bible must he the invention either of good men or angels, or bad men or angels, or of God. It could not be of good men or angels, for they neither would nor could make a book, and tell lies all the time they were writing it, saying, "Thus saith the Lord," when it was their own invention. It could not be the invention of had men or angels, for they could not make a book which commands all duty, forbids all sin, and condemns their own souls to hell, to all eternity. Therefore the Bible is of Divine inspiration—of God." (Works XI, 478.) "The Writings of the Old and New Testament are the work of God, all that the prophets and holy men of old wrote as they were moved by the Holy Ghost; all Scripture was given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, etc., II Tim. 3:16." (Work V, 136.)

Editorial

THE OFFICIAL ORGAN SPEAKS.

Since the meeting of the Unification Commission at Traverse City, Michigan, Zion's Herald, a privately owned and operated paper, domiciled at Boston, contrary to some of its former utterances, has been speaking as if it were in favor of a compromise concerning the question of the status of the Negro in the proposed unified Church, and has been seeking to make it appear that this plan made considerable headway at the recent sitting of the Joint Commission. As will be seen by referring to the article, "A Rumor Well Stuck To," which we are publishing on another page, the pronouncements of the Herald have drawn upon it the fire of the editors of the Church, North, who participated in the proceedings at Traverse City. And now comes Dr. Joy, the distinguished Editor of the New York Christian Advocate, the chief official organ of the Northern Methodist Church, in his paper of August 16, with the following emphatic deliverance, made under the caption, "Tote Fair":

"For its misrepresentation of the Negro item every editor who was present at the Traverse City meeting of the Joint Commission on Methodist Unification is calling Zion's Herald to account.

"In reply the Herald jauntily reasserts its accuracy and cries, 'We Appeal to the Record!' This is mere pettifoggery. The record of the Commission is a private document and cannot be produced. Would that it might be! If it were published in full, not stopping with the sub-committee report (which Zion's Herald would like to isolate and pervert to its own uses), but including all the papers which were filed with it, and any minutes of the Methodist Episcopal Commission in relation to the same subject, this unseemly newspaper controversy would cease. With the whole truth (not a quarter-truth) before them, the Southern Church could judge for itself whether the representatives of our Church are preparing to send its Negro members into the quarters in order to make the great house more homelike for expected company, and the sensitive black man would not be left in doubt as to whether the Church which has been his best friend for fifty years will urge upon him a plan of reorganization which, under the circumstances, he cannot accept without violating his self-respect, and inflaming that 'race-consciousness' of which there has been so much glib talk among those who ought to dread its ultimate consequences.

"Let no one be diverted from the main issue. It is not whether a sub-committee has recommended this or that course of action. It is whether, by some hocus-pocus with the facts, the Southern Methodists and the Negro Methodists are being led to believe what is not so. That is what is being done by a publication which is supposed to gather, interpret, and herald the news of Zion and its New England suburbs.

"Meeting one of the sanest and most judicially-minded members of the Methodist Episcopal commission in Washington the other day, we propounded this question, apropos of Zion's Herald's magnification of the alleged endorsement of its position:

"'Did the plan for a separate General Conference for the Negro really make any headway at Traverse City?'

"'Why, no!' he answered promptly. 'IT WAS KNOCKED OUT!'

These four words will scarcely be found in the official record, but to the best of the present writer's knowledge and belief they are absolutely in harmony with it."

Dr. Joy is a man who does not speak recklessly, and from the foregoing it seems to be perfectly clear that the Church, South, must consent to have the Negro in the unified Church with all his rights, including membership in the General Conference, or else that there can be no unification. Surely, in the light of this disclosure the time has come to end the unification proceedings, and recognize the fact that it is wisest and best for each Church to continue as a separate organization, maintaining fraternal relations and Christian co-operation, as far as is practicable, with each other. The Northern Methodists obviously feel that there is a principle involved respecting their colored contingent which the sentiment of their section will not allow them to sacrifice, and the Southern Methodists have a conviction equally as strong as to the need of placing the Negroes in a separate organization. It is not good sense to ignore incontrovertible and unchangeable facts.

In making this statement we are not at all out of harmony with the Oklahoma City enactment. Our General Conference did not declare for just any kind of unification, nor for an indefinite agitation of the question. Our Commission has on it a large majority of ardent unionists and they have met their brethren from the North twice; and every one who is informed knows that practically every movement made has been directly away from the plan of the original Joint Commission, endorsed, with one modification, by our General Conference, which was as much the plan of the Church, North, as of the Church, South. Yet the General Official Organ of the Northern Methodists now positively affirms that we must take their colored members with none of their rights abridged, or union cannot be consummated. So, by every token, we think that this irritating and harmful controversy should be stopped, that Southern Methodism may with undistracted mind go forward with the great and widening work to which Providence has manifestly called her.

We write this in no spirit of unkindness to the Church, North, nor to any of our brethren. It now seems to be evident that an earnest effort has been made to unite the two Churches and that it has practically failed so far as the present generation is concerned. What may take place in the unfolding decades of the future, no finite mind can tell.

NOT WORSE THAN IN OTHER TIMES.

A distinguished leader in Southern Methodism lamented to us some time since that when great issues, involving matters of the most vital and far-reaching significance to the Church, are being fought out, there should be so many among us who seem to be concerned only with trivial questions that relate to them personally. We ourself had observed this condition of things and had felt not a little depressed by it; so we were not then in a position to speak to our gifted friend any special words of cheer. But since that occasion, in reading the "History of Walthall's Brigade," by General E. T. Sykes, of Columbus, Miss., one of the publications of the Mississippi Historical Society, we came across a disclosure relating to the stormy days of the Confederacy, from which we extracted some encouragement. It pertained to the difficulties that President Jefferson Davis had to encounter and was made in an excerpt from a masterful speech that the Hon. Benjamin H. Hill delivered before the Georgia branch of the Southern Historical Society, in Atlanta, on February 18, 1874—the address in which he pronounced his matchless eulogy on General Robert E. Lee, which has become an American classic." Referring to Mr. Davis, the eloquent Georgia orator said:

"He was as great in the cabinet as was Lee in the field. He was more resentful in temper, and more aggressive in nature than Lee. His position, too, exposed him to assault from our own people. He had to make all the appointments, and though often made upon the recommendation of others, all the blame of mistakes was charged to him, and mistakes were often charged by disappointed office-seekers and their friends which were not made. He also made recommendations for enactments, and, though these measures, especially the military portion, invariably had the concurrence of Lee (with whom often they originated), the opposition of malcontents was directed at Davis. It was astonishing how men in high position, and supposed to be great, would make war upon the administration for the most trivial personal disappointment. Failures to get places for favorites, of every ordinary character, inspired long harangues against the most important measures, and they were continued and repeated even after those measures became laws. 'Can you believe,' he said to me once, 'that men—statesmen—in a struggle like this, would hazard an injury to the cause because of their personal grievances, even if they were well founded?' 'Certainly,' I replied, 'I not only believe it, but know it. There are men who regard themselves with more devotion than they do the cause. If such men offer you counsel and you do not take it, or ask for appointments, you do not make, however much you may be sustained in such actions by Lee and the Cabinet, and even the Congress, they accept your refusal as questioning their wisdom and as personal war on them.' 'I cannot conceive of such a feeling,' he said. 'I have but one enemy to fight, and that is our common enemy. I may make mistakes, and doubtless I do; but I do the best I can with all the light, at the time, before me.'"

Thus it will be seen that there were those of whom better things were expected who were chiefly concerned for self, while the fate of a nation was trembling in the balance. So, it should not greatly surprise us that there should be some who, while the great interests of the Church are in jeopardy, are apparently chiefly bent upon taking care of their own popularity and future prospects. Human nature has been much the same in all lands and generations. The only hope of uplifting and ennobling it is to be found in the regenerating and transforming power of God, for which there is urgent need within the Church, as well as outside of it. In this, as in many other matters, we do not seem to be either better or worse than were our fathers.

WISE WORDS WELL SPOKEN.

There seems to be springing up among us now a sentiment that in the time of war "the end justifies the means," and that many questionable things are now permissible which would not be tolerated in the time of peace. In our opinion, we need to be on our guard at this point, lest we drift too far from proper paths. The Christian Intelligencer (New York) touches upon this dangerous trend in the following vigorous way:

"We cannot too strongly condemn the prevalent philosophy that somehow answers every objection with the oft repeated sentiment, 'This must be tolerated until after the war.' Farming on the Lord's Day, lottery drawings in aid of commendable charities, ball games after church service on Sabbath with the gate receipts for the Red Cross, and a promiscuous kissing of troops by strangers which makes even war doubly dangerous! Oh, what a phrase to quench the fires of conscience—This will and must end with the terms of peace." What kind of God does this picture to the imagination? Does His law bend like a willow wand when even our own mild enactments become like hardened steel for ordinary traitors? Such ideas will be difficult to eradicate after hostilities have been a thing of the past. The order which Lincoln promulgated during the Civil War was that all labor on the Sabbath be reduced to a minimum, 'in due deference to the Divine will.' 'In God we trust' must be on our coin and such a God should be reverenced. Harvests will wave and the flag reflect the triumph of deserved victory only on condition that 'we do not forget God.'"

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Mr. Hoyt M. Dobbs, Dean of the School of Theology of Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas, reports a gratifying outlook for the next session of that institution.

Rev. A. H. Williams, the pastor, reports a fine meeting at the Main Street Church, Water Valley, Miss. His report reached us too late for this issue of the Advocate, but will appear next week.

Rev. C. A. Battle, of Baton Rouge, La., ran down to New Orleans on business last Friday morning and spent a few hours in the city. He spoke encouragingly of his work at the State Capital.

We are in receipt of a card which reads as follows: "Born to Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Purcell, of Ellisville, Miss., a sweet baby daughter. Both the mother and infant are doing well." We extend congratulations and invoke God's blessings on the little one.

Rev. R. P. Fikes, of Brandon, Miss., writes as follows: "Please announce in the Advocate that Bishop Murrah will dedicate our church at Pelahatchie, Miss., on Sunday, Sept. 2, and that all former pastors of that congregation are invited to be present on that occasion."

In a note to the Advocate office, Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, says: "The prospect for the next session is good. Many of our old students have gone into the Army and Navy; but many inquiries are being made and many catalogues sought by new men."

Rev. T. C. Cooper has arranged to have Rev. J. S. Purcell, of Ellisville, Miss., with him in a series of revival services at Hinton, a rural church, near Ellisville. Brother Purcell possesses in an unusual degree the evangelistic gift and is in much demand among the brethren for holding meetings.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, Manager of the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, Miss., spent last Thursday in New Orleans, and the Editor scarcely needs to say that he enjoyed seeing him. Brother Randolph was looking well and was in fine spirits. He reported things to be in a good condition at the Home.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions to the Advocate, sent in within the past few days: Rev. Paul D. Hardin, Hattiesburg, Miss., 2; Rev. J. E. Williams, Sumrall, Miss., 5; Rev. H. P. Lewis, Madison, Miss., 2.

The Editor, owing to a malarial attack, has not been able to give the attention during the past week that he usually does to the preparation of matter for the Advocate. He had a severe chill a few afternoons ago and fever for a couple of days. At this time he is better, though he has not fully recovered.

Brother James Hand, of Purvis, Miss., who is almost continually helping some deserving cause, has lately given 17,000 feet of lumber to the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, Miss., to be used in repiacing a barn that was burned and in constructing another that is needed for cattle. This generous donation is highly appreciated.

Judge H. H. White, of Alexandria, La., was in the Crescent City last Sunday, having come to spend the day with his sons who are in the Army —one of them being at Camp Nichols, this city, and the other having just returned from Washington, D. C., where he had been engaged in training for service on the campus of the American University.

Rev. W. M. Young, of Amory, Miss., has lately been assisting some of the near-by brethren in revival services. Week before last he was with Rev. A. S. Brisco at Union Church, where they had a good meeting with 9 accessions, and last week he was with Rev. M. L. Ward at Brownfield, where there was a fine interest, resulting in 7 additions to the Church.

Rev. K. W. Dodson is having his usual success as a pastor at Minden, which is one of the choice appointments of the Louisiana Conference. He says: "Our Sunday school broke the record for attendance last Sunday. There had been a gradual increase for months, and on the day mentioned there were more present than ever before in the history of the school."

Our tasteful and attractive church at Forest, Miss., of which Rev. J. G. Galloway is the beloved pastor, was dedicated last Sunday by Bishop W. B. Murrah. The church was beautifully decorated and the music was a special feature of the occasion. Rev. W. L. Linfield, presiding elder of the Newton District, and Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, of Meridian, a former pastor, were present at the service.

We take the following from a note written from the office of the Board of Church Extension, at Louisville, Ky., on August 17: "Mrs. McMurry's mother, who lived with her and Dr. McMurry, died this morning. The funeral will be held in St. Joseph, Mo." Dr. McMurry and his family will have the sympathy of many friends throughout the Church in this great sorrow which has come to them.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, Whitworth's genial President, sent us for this issue of the Advocate an extract from one of Stoddard's lectures giving an account of a truly remarkable smoker. The gifted lecturer could not lift the curtain and tell whether the gentleman in question continued to "smoke" in eternity or not. In reading this excerpt, we could not but wonder how long this user of the weed would have lived if he had let tobacco alone.

Rev. R. A. Sibley, of Escatawpa, Miss., writes: "We have just closed a meeting at the Caswell Springs Church, on the Escatawpa charge. Some of the visible results were a number of conversions, 25 additions to the church on profession of faith and 3 by certificate, and the church membership greatly revived. I was assisted in this meeting by Rev. G. W. Huff, one of our honored superannuates. His preaching was accompanied with the power of the Holy Spirit."

In a letter bringing us 2 subscriptions to the Advocate, Rev. T. B. Winstead, of Burns, Miss., appends the following note concerning his work: "We are still pressing the battle on the Trenton charge and are now in the midst of our meetings. We have recently closed a series of services at Burns, in which I had with me Rev. W. A. Hays, who did some excellent, faithful preaching. The people were delighted with him. God gave us a goodly measure of success, 8 persons uniting with the Church."

We have noted with interest that Judge Percy Bell, of Greenville, Miss., is being spoken of in the secular press as a probable candidate for Governor. Judge Bell, though a young man, served a term as Chancery Judge of his district a few years ago and made an excellent record on the bench. Without disparagement to any other aspirant, we do not hesitate to say that if he should be named as the Chief Executive of Mississippi he would, in our opinion, give a good account of himself in that responsible position. It is not to Judge Bell's discredit that he is a member and an official in our church at Greenville.

A correspondent writes us as follows from Oakdale, Calif.: "Among the many missionaries returning to America on the steamer 'China,' which landed in San Francisco on July 20, 1917, were the following of our own Church who have come home for a year's furlough: Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Smith and baby (Missouri); Miss Wales (Chicago); Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Park and daughter, Miss Margurita (Ga.); Miss Nettie Lambuth (Japan); Miss Mattie Kirkpatrick (Miss.), and Mr. W. K. Nance (China). These have all been doing mission work in Soochow, except Mr. Nance, whose parents are missionaries in Soochow and have sent him to the United States to complete his education."

Rev. J. L. Neill, Sunday School Field Secretary of the Mississippi Conference, has decided to enter the Y. M. C. A. war work, and has tendered his resignation as Sunday School Secretary, to take effect at the close of his series of District Institutes, about September 21. Dr. Tolle, of Biloxi, has been asked to call a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Conference Sunday School Board at the Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Wednesday of this week, to take action concerning Brother Neill's resignation and to make such provision for carrying on the work as may be adjudged necessary. Brother Neill is admirably equipped for the new field of service that he is soon to enter, and the Y. M. C. A. managers have made no mistake in laying hands upon him.

The Bulletin of Emory University for August is before us. It announces the completion of the "J. J. Gray Clinic," which is connected with the Medical Department, as follows: "This admirable out-patient building of the Medical School, named in honor of Mr. J. J. Gray, Jr., of Rockdale, Tenn., whose gift of $50,000 to the University made it possible, is now about completed, and it will be ready for use at the opening of the fall term, on September 17. This clinic is one of the finest of its sort in the United States. Some say there is only one in the United States which is equal to it." It is also stated that in the near futuro a beautiful home will be erected for the nurses who will serve this clinic and the Wesley Memorial Hospital, one man having given $25,000 for this purpose. The Emory School of Medicine, under its present and former names, has graduated 3909 men.

We have learned with sorrow that Dr. and Mrs. U. G. Foote, of this city, lost their babe, only a few days old, by death on Sunday night, Aug. 19. The remains were carried to Missouri for interment. These stricken parents will have the sympathy of many friends in their sore bereavement. May the Heavenly Father comfort and sustain them!

Dr. J. T. Sawyer filled the Algiers Southern Methodist Church pulpit last Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. He reports that the morning congregation was large, and that at night the audience filled the auditorium. He greatly enjoyed both services, the people giving close attention and showing appreciation of his messages. The U. S. Navy and Army were well represented by marines and soldiers, who sang the old hymns with heartiness. The Doctor's morning text was "If children, then heirs, etc.," and the night text was "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might, etc." He says that Rev. Chas. C. Weir is doing a good work, and that the Methodists on this side of the river, at Nashville and the Church Extension headquarters, and elsewhere should all rally to him in his efforts to get the new church needed, that the conditions of growth and opportunities in Algiers may be met.

The following is the schedule of District Sunday School Institutes arranged by Rev. J. L. Neill, the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Field Secretary: Port Gibson District, Fayette, Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 3 and 4; Jackson District, Flora, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 6 and 7; Brookhaven District, Brookhaven, Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 10 and 11; Newton District, Newton, Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 12 and 13; Meridian District, Meridian, First Presbyterian Church, Thursday night, Friday, and Saturday, Sept. 13, 14, 15; Hattiesburg District, Main St. Church, Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 17 and 18; Seashore District, Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 19 and 20. Some of the speakers announced are the following: Mrs. Isaac Sewell, Nashville, Tenn.; Mrs. C. J. Nugent, Louisville, Ky.; Mr. A. L. Dietrich, Meridian, Miss.; Rev. J. L. Neill, and Rev. J. C. Chambers. The presiding elders and District Departmental Superintendents will also participate in these meetings.

OUR FLAG THE SYMBOL OF FREEDOM.

One of the finest stories of our flag that I know of was told some months ago by George Kennan, in the midst of a series of articles in The Outlook upon conditions in Russia. He says that in the summer of 1876, when we were celebrating our centennial, there were over 3000 prisoners in a Russian detention prison who determined, by means of their knock signal, to have a general prison celebration of the Fourth of July. They began a month beforehand by asking all their visiting relatives to bring or send to the prison as many red and blue handkerchiefs, flannel drawers, etc., as they could without exciting suspicion. They also began to buy and hoard cheap tallow candles. These pieces of colored cloth were distributed secretly through the prison by swinging them from window to window and in other ways. Then all the women who were permitted to have needles and thread began to make rude and tiny American flags. Before the first of July almost every prisoner had one small American emblem. Long before early dayhreak on the great centennial day these hundreds of patriotic emblems of liberty began to flutter from every window of the great fortress, while inside the prisoners could be heard faintly singing patriotic melodies or cheering hoarsely for liberty. Of course, the guards, who probably had no idea what it was all about, soon confiscated the flags and silenced the turmoil, but all through the day the new tatters of red, white and blue were furtively hung out to the sunshine. And when night came the glowworn glimmer of a thousand candles shone faintly from the windows across the prison quadrangle.

Mr. Kennan concludes this tear-compelling incident by saying that many of these wretched men and women had Siberia and death before them. "But in their solitude, their loneliness and their misery, they did not forget the American centennial Fourth of July. And the spirit by which they were animated transfigured their pitiful celebration, with its tricolored rags and its paltry bits of candle, and made it infinitely more significant, in the world's history, than all the pomp and ceremony that attend the coronation of a czar."—William Byron Forbush in The Congregationalist.

JACKSON PITCHFORD, who was born near Lexington, Miss., on Sept. 4, 1832, spent a long life in this community and fell on sleep at his home, after much suffering, on July 24, 1917. He was first married to Miss Lizzie Young in 1853, and again to Miss Mary Slater on March 1, 1899, who, with their daughter, Miss Sue, survives him. Brother Pitchford joined the M. E. Church, South, at Lexington, Miss., on Nov. 16, 1890, under the ministry of Rev. J. C. Lowe. A former pastor told me that he received useful service from this church member in many cases where help was needed and the work hard to do. As soon as I knew of his infirmities and old age I visited him and was always cordially received and made to feel that, although he could not attend church, he was interested and wished to help as far as he could. It was interesting to talk with one of so varied and long an experience in human affairs. His mind was alert and followed with concern the stirring national issues of the present time. We shall certainly all miss "Uncle Jack." May the tender mercies of our Heavenly Father keep the sorrowing ones in perfect peace and safety!

JOHN WESLEY OVERTON was born on May 27, 1881, at Potts Camp, Miss. When about twelve years of age he united with the M. E. Church, South. He was a faithful, consistent member, and for a number of years was a steward at Potts Camp. On Dec. 28, 1904, he was very happily married to Miss Emily Collier, daughter of the late W. I. Collier, for long years a faithful member at Pisgah on the Potts Camp Circuit. One sweet little girl of six summers, Loreath, is left to be the comfort and joy of her mother. For the past few years Brother Overton had been a conductor on the Y. & M. V. railroad and made his home in Vicksburg. His life was above reproach, and other railroad men say he was one of the very best men on the road. After three weeks of illness with typhoid fever he died on July 18, 1917. He was patient and resigned to the will of God, and assured his loved ones that he was ready to meet God. The funeral services were conducted by the writer at Fisher's funeral parlors. He was buried at Potts Camp the next afternoon. Besides his wife and child, he leaves one brother, R. C. Overton, and five sisters, Mrs. M. L. Hancock, Mrs. C. F. Taylor, Mrs. J. R. Collier, Miss Madjy Overton, and Miss Susie Overton. May the God of all consolation and good hope give comfort to the dear ones who mourn the loss of this husband, father, and brother!

W. B. Waldrop; therefore, be it

THE PEOPLE'S BARGAIN.

"The annual increase of our wealth is estimated to be fifty billions of dollars. The American people are not asked to give anything to their government, but merely to invest a small percentage of the annual increment of wealth in this country and take in return from their government the strongest security on the face of God's earth; to receive in return for the money lent 3½ per cent per annum, both principal and interest exempted from all taxation except estate or inheritance taxes, and with the further provision that if the government should issue any other bonds during the period of this war at a higher rate of interest the purchaser of a Liberty Loan Bond may turn it in and get a new bond at the higher rate of interest.

"In protecting the credit of the United States government you are protecting your own credit, you are protecting your own business, you are protecting every interest, you have in life and property. In doing that you are rendering a patriotic service in suppiying the sinews of war to your country."—William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury.

From the Field

Clinton, La.

Dear Doctor Meek: We closed the Bluff Creek camp meeting last Sunday night. The meeting was the best that has been held in this camp for years. This is the testimony of those who were tenting on the ground. Several family altars were erected, and many entered into life through Jesus Christ. Brother Young, the Conference evangelist, did the preaching. We were surprised to learn of the death of Brother William Hatcher which occurred on Monday morning, August 13, 1917, at 2:20 o'clock. He ate supper as usual and went to bed, but could not rest because of cramps, or heart trouble, and without a word he passed away. Brother Hatcher was born on June 27, 1839. He joined the M. E. Church, South, about 30 years ago. He was a good citizen and a devoted father . He leaves six children—Jack Hatcher, Will Hatcher, Howard Hatcher, Mrs. K. P. Day, Mrs. D. H. Roddy, and Mrs. Aloen Powers, 48 grandchildren, and 10 great-grandchildren to mourn their loss. May each of these say, The will of the Lord be done!—J. L. Cady, P. C.

Wesson, Miss.

Dear Doctor Meek: We began our revival at New Hope Church, on the Scotland charge, on the second Sunday in July with Rev. A. B. Barry, of Meadville, assisting us. Brother Barry is a good preacher. The people liked him very much. They said that this was the best meeting that had been held at New Hope for years. We went next to Wright's Church. Brother Kleiser, of Monticello, did the preaching to the delight of all present. Some claimed that this was the best preaching that they had ever heard. (This is saying a good deal, for I have been preaching there six months.) Anyhow, we had a good meeting. On July 27 we began our camp meeting at Caseyville, having with us Revs. J. A. Wells, of Oak Ridge, and C. M. Crossley, of Philadelphia. These men gave us some fine sermons. God was with us. One outstanding feature of the meeting was the spirit of union that seemed to prevail throughout the meeting. We had with us several visiting brethren, among whom were Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D., Rev. H. K. McKee, Dr. C. E. Grafton, Rev. Mr. Miller, and Rev. M. F. Ainsworht. There were a number of souls definitely saved. The people claimed that they had the largest attendance that they had ever had. One good thing about the meeting was that during its entire progress chickens, sugar, meat, cakes, pies, apples, peaches, and everything that is good to eat were being sent to the parsonage. Well, to God be all the glory!—W. W. Nelson, P. C.

PALPITATION AND OTHER DISORDERS OF THE HEART.

Weak hearts are exceedingly common. Directly you are conscious of the fact that you have a heart, it means that your heart is not acting normally and that it needs attention.

Every time your heart misses a beat its efficiency is lessened.

Heart trouble, taken in its early stages, may not be difficult to relieve; but the more the treatment is delayed the harder it is to obtain permanent relief. If there is the slightest symptom to show that your heart is weak or diseased you should not delay taking treatment.

Dr. Miles' Heart Treatment has been the popular choice for more than twenty years. It has stood the test of time in a manner that forbids any doubt as to its efficiency. People who praised this remedy twenty years ago still believe in it and are only too glad to state that the trouble has never returned.

Any of these symptoms may indicate heart trouble: Shortness of Breath, Fluttering or Palpitation; Choking Sensation; Irregular Pulse; Weak or Hungry Spells, Swelling of Feet or Ankles, Pain under the Left Shoulder Blade.

If you notice any of these symptoms get a bottle of Dr. Miles' Heart Treatment. You risk nothing, for if the first bottle fails to benefit you, you have only to return the empty bottle to your druggist and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

A MISSIONARY RALLY DAY.

A Rally Day meeting was held by the Aberdeen District ladies at Derma on August 10. The meeting was conducted by the District Secretary, Mrs. Haughton. There were a number of delegates from the surrounding towns. Brother Rook, of Vardaman, read a Scripture lesson and gave a beautiful talk on it. Our presiding elder, Brother Lipscomb, led in prayer. After the congregation had sung that beautiful hymn, "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty," Brother Lipscomb made an inspiring short talk.

Mrs. Keller, of Okolona, was accorded the honor of acting as secretary during the meeting. Mrs. Haughton gave a talk on the work and presented plans for the betterment and enlargement of same.

Organization in unorganized territory, and the work of new auxillaries was then discussed in the open meeting, the discussion being directed by Mrs. Haughton. It was closed by an interesting talk by Brother Lipscomb. Mrs. Shell, of Houston, then gave the names of some prospective places to organize, after which the audience sang, "I'll go where you want me to go."

Mrs. Harbour, of Okolona, read an interesting paper on the "Scope of the work." The song, "Loyalty," was sung, which word is also the motto for the Young People's Auxiliaries. Our Conference First Vice President, Mrs. Baker, made a splendid talk on the Young People's work. She brought out the necessity of leadership, overshadowed by a vision of the Christ.

Mrs. Keller, of Okolona, made a short talk on Mission Study, which was much appreciated. Mrs. Jack, of Houston, gave an interesting talk on the work as conducted in Houston, which was very helpful. "A Bugle Call" was read by Mrs. Hardin, of Derma, which was flavored with patriotism, facts, truths, and suggestions.

Mrs. Haughton and Mrs. Baker spoke of the necessity of prayer circles in every church and expressed the hope that each church would perform this duty.

After a short prayer service the congregation circled around the church and sang "God be With You Till We Meet Again."

A fine picnic lunch was served in the grove, and when we left we had a feeling that we would like to meet soon again with these good people, and we wish them the richest of God's blessings.

Mrs. KELLER,
Okolona, Miss. Secretary.

REV. T. M. BURGESS' DEATH.

Rev. T. M. Burgess, of Amite, La., died very suddenly Monday night at Palmetto church near Walker.

Mr. Burgess was a local preacher of the M. E. Church, South. He was engaged in Sunday school work for the American Sunday School Union. He had spent practically all of his time in organizing and visiting Sunday schools in the Florida Parishes.

He left his home on Friday evening to visit his old home and church near Walker. The occasion that called him to the home church was the dedication of the new church at Palmetto. Mr Burgess was baptized in this church when a lad and was converted here and also was called to the ministry from this church. It was a spot most dear to his heart. The pastor, with the assistance of Rev. H. W. Bowman, the presiding elder of Baton Rouge District, was holding a few days' meeting, and at the same time held the dedicatory service of the new church. Mr. Burgess was to preach Monday night and came prepared to do so. He was jolly all the afternoon and enjoyed life very much. He took his place in the pulpit and read some Scripture and announced his text. He made a few remarks to get the attention of his audience and walked in front of the pulpit as he talked. He fell across the altar dead. It seems that the cause of his death was heart disease. He was taken to the home of his brother, from whence he was carried to the burying-ground on the Amite River about six miles from Denham Springs. The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Alonzo Early, of Amite, who is his pastor. Rev. P. S. Carpenter, pastor of Palmetto Church, assisted in the service.

He is survived by a wife and seven children, two sons, Milton and Jefferson Burgess; five daughters, Mrs. Thos. Cooley, of Amite, Mrs. Ida B. Addison, of Natalbany, and three little girls, Eddie, Tommie and Nellie Burgess. The family received the sad message at a late hour Monday night and left on the early train the following morning for Walker and thence went out to the little church where the funeral and interment took place.—The Amite Times.

OUR EDUCATIONAL WORK.

The statistical review of our educational work, published this week in the Bulletin of the Board of Education, shows that we now have 89 schools, not including the schools in foreign mission fields. Of these, there are: Universities, 2; colleges, Class A, 16; colleges, Class B, 11; colleges, Class C, 2; junior colleges, 24; academies, 29; mission and missionary training schools, 14; classification deferred, 1. The number reported one year ago was 91, the loss of two being in number of academies. These schools have invested in grounds and buildings $14,311,449 (increase for the year, $660,000); in equipment, $1,523,631 (increase, $171,000); endowment, $9,196,224 (increase, $36,000). The student enrollment is 19,736, an increase of about 100. In the universities and A- and B-grade colleges the increase in enrollment was nearly 300.

Loss of Vitality is loss of the principle of life, and is early indicated by failing appetite and diminishing strength and endurance. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the greatest vitalizer—it acts on all the organs and functions, and builds up the whole system.—Adv.

"Brethren, the most important of all knowledge and all wealth is to know that the kingdom of heaven is ours. All else dwindles into insignificant nothings compared with this."

CALOMEL MAKES YOU SICK, UGH!

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Better Than Calomel and Can Not Salivate.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for 50 cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the net day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

PLEASANT HILL (LA.) CIRCUIT.

Dear Doctor Meek: Sometime ago I made mention of our revival at Robeline, but gave no definite account of same. Brothers R. A. Bozeman, E. B. Moll, Mrs. Lipscomb, and I fought the battle there for fourteen days. Bible religion has been fought very bitterly in that little town, so we had a hard fight; but thanks be unto God, who gave us the victory through Jesus Christ our Lord. Brother Bozeman did earnest, clear, spiritual preaching, and Brother Moll preached a few sermons after the same order. Mrs. Lipscomb made a few talks. We prayed and sang and worked and the mourners came to the altar, even if the devil did think he had captured the old "mourners' bench," and quite a goodly number of mourners prayed through. There was old-time rejoicing, commonly called shouting, for the Holy Ghost fell on some of us as at the beginning. More than 30 professed conversion; we baptized two babies, 4 young people, and 1 adult, and received 7 members into our Church. The spiritual life of the faithful little band of Christians was deepened and their faith was made stronger.

During the latter part of July and the first of August Brother Moll and I held a revival at Beulah, under our tabernacle. Brother Moll did the preaching with the exception of one sermon. The Lord honored Brother Moll's labors and earnest preaching. More than 30 were converted, and the Holy Spirit came in great power and we had much shouting. Ten united with our Church, 7 of whom I baptized. On Sunday I baptized one baby, but I saw at once that there were too many babies there for just one infant baptism, so I announced that I would make a ten-minute talk on "Infant Baptism" on Wednesday morning, which I did, and as one result baptized 15 infants. We had a splendid revival and closed out with a great victory. We have two more revivals to hold. Pray for us. Yours fraternally,

T. D. LIPSCOMB.

STUDENTS OPPOSE DANCING.

The customary liberal attitude of the Roman Catholic Church on the matter of amusements has given point to its recent prohibition of dancing under Church auspices. Now another group of Christians with a different intellectual atmosphere protests against immodest dancing and allied practices. This time it is the Student Young Men's Christian Association Conference at Lake Geneva, attended by nine hundred and three students from one hundred and twenty-five colleges, that unanimously adopts the following resolutions:

"Whereas gambling, profanity, dishonesty, immodest dancing and other social excesses, and the use of tobacco and liquor have become a menace to the student life of our universities and colleges and are undermining character and destroying capacity for Christian leadership,

"Resolved: 1. That we, the delegates to this Conference, place ourselves on record as being unqualifiedly opposed to these destructive practices and do hereby pledge ourselves, with the help of God, to the eradication of these evils from the student life of the colleges and universities of the Middle West.

"2. That this Conference appoint through its chairman a committee of fifteen, composed as follows, nine students, two faculty members, two university pastors, and two Association secretaries, to prepare a statement in which the evils of student life shall be enumerated and examples of successful remedial measures be pointed out.

"3. That a copy of this statement be sent to every college president, college dean, Young Men's Christian Association president, Young Men's Christian Association secretary, university pastor, and to every other infinential person interested in improving the character and efficiency of college men, and that this statement he used as a means of initiating a general movement against all pernicious and undermining practices among college men."—Missionary Voice.

"RESPONSIBILITIES OF CHURCHES TO MINISTERS."

The duty of the people to the pastor may be hest expressed in a series of "Dont's."

Don't expect your minister to give you his best unless you give him your best. It isn't in human nature.

Don't expect him to preach good sermons if you don't come to hear them.

Don't expect him to preach good sermons if you never tell him when they are good.

Don't expect him to preach good sermons if you don't give him time to prepare them.

Don't expect every sermon he preaches to be the kind of sermon you like. It takes many kinds of people to make a world, and the sermon you like the least may be the best he has preached—for half a hundred people.

Don't knock your minister. No good ever comes of knocking, and you set a had example.

Don't radiate pessimism and expect your minister to be huoyant with optimism. Flowers thrive only in the sunshine. Don't expect your minister to be over-cheerful when his salary is in arrears.

Don't criticise the dress of the minister's wife when she cannot wear hetter clothes without going into debt.

Don't expect your minister to be hlithe and gay when his salary is not adequate to meet the simple needs of himself and family.

Don't expect a five-thousand dollar efficiency on a five-hundred dollar salary.

Don't forget how trying, how arduous, how difficult and complex the average minister's duties are, and that without your whole-souled co-operation he can never fulfill them efficiently.

Don't forget that the measure of the minister's failure to be successful is usually, if not always, the measure of the church's failure to make success possible—the measure of the church's failure to co-operate.

Don't—finally—try to get out of your minister as much as possible for as little as possible in return. It is not just; it is actually morally wrong.—The Transmitter.

CALOMEL ROBBED OF NAUSEATING QUALITIES.

Medical Virtues Retained and Improved—Unpleasant and Dangerous Qualities Removed—New Tablet Now on Market Under the Name "Calotabs."

The latest triumph of modern pharmacy is a "de-nauseated" calomel tablet known to the drug trade as "Calotabs." Calomel, the most generally useful of all medicines, thus enters upon a wider field of popularity—purified and refined from those objectionable qualities which have heretofore limited its use.

In biliousness, constipation and indigestion, and in a great variety of liver, stomach and kidney troubles calomel was the only successful remedy, but its use was often neglected on account of its sickening qualities. Now it is the easiest and most pleasant of all medicines to take. One tablet on the tongue at bedtime, a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no griping, no nausea, no danger. A good night's sleep and the next morning you are feeling fine, with a clean liver and a big appetite. Eat what you please.

Calotabs are sold only in orlginal, sealed packages of twenty doses for thirty-five cents. Your druggist offers to refund the price as a guarantee that you will be thoroughly delighted with Calotabs.—Adv.

A GREAT MEETING.

We have recently held a great meeting at Adams' Camp Ground. We have there a large tabernacle, the seating capacity of which was well nigh filled on Sunday, the first day of the meeting. I think it was the best meeting by far that we have had since I came to Adams, nearly four years ago. Brother J. Loyd Decell, of McComb City, Miss., did the preaching and it was of a high order. He is master of his subject and holds his audience with a firm grip from start to finish. God has endowed him with the gift of eloquence. We received 12 persons into the church. The membership of the church was greatly revived. God grant that the good work begun may go on through the coming years!

THE MINISTER'S SON.

"Who's Who" shows that one-twelfth of all the men whose biographies appear in it are sons of clergymen. England's "Dictionary of Biography" reveals an even greater preponderance of clerical forebears of noted men.

Sons of clergymen are nearly double the number of sons of lawyers and physicians combined.

Who in American history were the sons of preachers?

Of famous writers there stand Emerson, Holmes, Lowell, Bancroft, Parkman, Sloan, Gilder, and Henry James.

In politics the answer to the roll-call is equally impressive. Sons of ministers include Henry Clay, President Buchanan, President Arthur, Senator Quay, Senator Beveridge, Senator Dolliver, President Wilson, and Former Justice Hughes.

Then there is the immortal Field family, embracing Cyrus W., who laid the first Atlantic cable; David Dudley, the renowned lawyer, and Stephen J., the United States Supreme Court Justice.

And equally renowned is the Beecher family, which includes Henry Ward Beecher, and Mrs. Stowe, author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The father was a preacher.

Agassiz, and Samuel F. Morse, inventor of the telegraph, and Mergenthaler, inventor of the linotype machine, were sons of clergymen.

The list is inexhaustible, and in it blaze such names as Oliver Goldsmith, Linnaeus, the naturalist; Jenner, the father of vacination for smallpox; Ben Jonson, the poet Cowper, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Charles Spurgeon, Lyman Abbott, Addison, and President Grover Cleveland.

Instead of being amiable vagabonds, the sons of clergymen come pretty close to the rank of top-notchers in every field of human progress.—Philadelphia Ledger.

CONCERNING CHAPLAINS.

Dr. John M. Moore, Home Mission Secretary, reports that the Committee on Chaplains of our Church, of which he is the Executive Secretary, has recommended to the Washington committee thirty men for appointment as chaplains in the army, which is the quota assigned our Church. Our quota for chaplains in the navy is nine, and this has been filled. The appointments of chaplains will probably be made in a few days. About one hundred and twenty-five applications for appointment as chaplains were filed with Dr. Moore. The committee was guided in their selections by the law passed by Congress and the standards set by the Washington committee of the Federal Council, which had been asked by the War Department to recommend the men to be appointed.

Constipation

You are apt to think lightly of a slight case of constipation. Did you know that constipation is incipient auto-intoxication or self-poisoning? You cannot be too careful, for constipation without treatment is liable to become the source of far more serious ills. To be entirely healthy and have a clean body, it is necessary to keep the bowels clean and the liver active. When constipated, take Van Lax, for it is the ideal treatment for constipation. Contains no calomel and no habit-forming drugs. Does not gripe or nauseate. It is pleasant in taste and results. Sold everywhere by the best dealers. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

LEMONS BRING OUT THE HIDDEN BEAUTY

Make this lotion for very little cost and just see for yourself.

What girl or woman hasn't heard of lemon juice to remove complexion blemishes; to bleach the skin and to bring out the roses, the freshness and the hidden beauty? But lemon juice alone is acid, therefore irritating, and should be mixed with orchard white this way: Strain through a fine cloth the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing about three ounces of orchard white, then shake well and you have a whole quarter pint of skin complexion lotion at about the cost one usually pays for a small jar of ordinary cold cream. Be sure to strain the lemon juice so no pulp gets into the bottle, then this lotion will remain pure and fresh for months. When applied daily to the face, neck, arms and hands it should help to bleach, clear, smoothen and beautify the skin.

Any druggist will supply three ounces of orchard white at very little cost and the grocer has the lemons.

"I understand the text all right," said a simple-hearted hearer, after service, "but the preacher's explanation was very puzzling."

MESSAGE FROM THE MISSISSIPPI SUPT. OF STUDY AND PUBLICITY.

I do not believe that I am the least bit pessimistic. In fact, a little couplet that I learned when a much younger woman than I am now has helped me to be more optimistic than pessimistic. It is this:

"To everything there is a dark side,
A bright side as well;
And it is for us to say on which Side we will dwell."

I do not intend to grow discouraged, for I have too many blessed promises from my Savior; but I do want to give a few facts and figures that show not altogether the bright side of the work. I would not do this, however, to the discouragement of those who have been faithful to their duties.

The list of study circles furnished me by the district secretaries numher 77; while the Minutes of our last Annual Conference show that we have 133 adult auxiliaries, 39 young people's societies, and 52 juniors. Only a small number of the study circles reported are in the young people's and junior societies, and in the adult auxiliaries are not as many as there should be.

The individual member of the auxiliary is really the Home Base of the work, and unless each woman does her individual duty, not only her work goes undone, hut she retards the work of others and thereby cripples the work.

Of the 77 study circles reported to me by the district secretaries, only 13 sent in a quarterly report the first of July, and of this numher only 7 sent them in time for me to include them in my report to the Council. There is not any reason why we should not lead in this work, and I am in it to do my best; hut if I succeed I must have the co-opcration of every auxiliary. Statistics of the report sent out hy Mrs. Steele of the second quarter's work along this line show that we lead in the use of the Missionary Bulletin, but it shows also that only one society from the Mississippi Conference has signed and sent to her the enrollment card—this was the Yazoo City auxiliary.

If we can lead in one thing, why cannot we lead in another? To do this we must work in unison, for the Council officers are dependent on the Conference officer or the district officers, and they in turn on the auxiliary officers. A failure on the part of any one means that the work is not going forward as it should.

Then to the Superintendent of Study and Publicity I would make one strong plea for the work. Does not the Bible tell us to "Seach the Scriptures," and is there not a positive command for us to "study to show thyself approved unto God a workman that needeth not to he ashamed?"

There are very few people who will put their time, energy, or money into anything they know nothing about. Teach them of the work and the needs and you will find very few who will not be responsive. We need this work for our women, but not alone for them—our young people are crying for leaders.

It has heen truly said that the young people of to-day are the church of tomorrow. As their minds and hearts are trained, and as they grow and develop, so our Church will grow and develop.

"An angel paused in his onward flight,
With a seed of love, of truth and light:
And cried, 'O where shall this seed be sown
That it yield most fruit when grown?'
The Savior heard, and he said as he smiled:
'Plant it for me in the heart of a little child.'"

Let us be more diligent in our work for the children and young people.

Looking beyond these few things in which we have failed, we see the prospects for the future as very promising. Our women, as a whole, are doing good work, and with the assurance of a reward for the faithful we are looking forward to greater things for the mission work—these greater things to be brought about largely through the work of the Study Circle.

Mrs. GEO. H. THOMPSON,
Supt. Study and Publicity.

FACTS ABOUT BIBLE WORK.

At the recent annual meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society, the 113th of its history, it was reported that the work of translation and revision goes forward unchecked, and the Society's versions now contains 504 different languages. During the past year versions have heen puhlished in seven fresh tongues. The issues for the year numher 9,539,235 volumes—a result somewhat short of the previous year's, for it proved impossihle in Central Europe either to produce or import all the editions needed, and, though the depots at Berlin, Vienna, Budapest, Belgrade, and Constantinople still have their doors open, their shelves were emptying.

In trenches and dug-outs, in prison camps, in barrack rooms, and on battleships, the fighting men of all nations have been reading the khaki-hound pocket Testaments and Gospels issued hy the Society. Alarming increases in the cost of production had compelled the Society to expend $150,000 extra merely to produce its editions, and the committee were appealing for an emergency fund which would provide for present liahilities and the claims of the immediate future.—Missionary Revlew.

To the Auxiliary Superintendents of Social Service, W. M. S.

My Dear Friends: Again I am sending a message to you in regard to our Social Service work in Louisiana.

I want to call your attention specially to the September study on "Social Legislation Regarding Industry." These studies and leaflets were sent out to the auxiliaries early in July and the latter part of June and I hope you have given them careful attention. If you need more leaflets I shall he glad to supply them if you will send requests to me at 225 Rich Ave., Mount Vernon, N. Y. The topic for September—"Protection for Wage-Earners through Lahor Legislation"—is a vital one at this time, owing to the greater numher of women in industry, caused hy our men going to war. "A Bugle Call to Methodist Women," a leaflet hy Mrs. MacDonell, in which she outlines the war work of our women, should be read by every Social Service Superintendent in the Missionary Society. Our Council Superintendent, Miss Mabel Howell, also has prepared a leaflet, entitled "Suggestions for Auxiliary Superintendents and the Committees," which I am sure you will find clear and useful in your work. I shall order a supply at once and send the leaflets out as early as possihle. A special hulletin, called "Labor Laws in War Time," is being published by the American Association for Lahor Legislation (131 East 22nd St., N. Y.), because of the urgency of the question.

Lahor laws are a war necessity. Had it not heen for the veto of Gov. Whitman of New York recently, the entire code for the protection of men, women and children in industry in this State would have heen set aside under the plea of war.

The race riots in the North and the migration of Negro laborers from the South are hig labor issues of the day. Let us, then, make this Septemher meeting a vital one in all our auxiliaries.

With an earnest prayer for God's blessing upon you and your work, I am,

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. E. R. KENNEDY,
Supt. of Social Service, La. Conf.

WHY WOMEN WRITE LETTERS

To Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co.

Women who are well often ask "Are the letters which the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. are continually publishing, genuine?" "Are they truthful?" "Why do women write such letters?"

In answer we say that never have we published a fictitious letter or name. Never, knowingly, have we published an untruthful letter, or one without the full and written consent of the woman who wrote it.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such grateful letters to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives, once hurdened with pain and suffering.

It has relieved women from some of the worst forms of female ills, from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, nervousness, weakness, stomach troubles and from the blues.

It is impossible for any woman who is well and who has never suffered to realize how these poor, suffering women feel when restored to health; their keen desire to help other women who are suffering as they did.

Like a Boy at 50 Bubbling Over With Vitality—Taking Iron Did It

Doctor says Nuxated Iron is greatest of all strength builders—Often increases the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous folks 100 per cent. in two weeks' time.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact a young man he really was notwithstanding his age. The secret he said was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 45 he was careworn and nearly all in. Now at 50 after taking Nuxated Iron a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the bouyancy of youth. As I have said a hundred times over, iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak or run down, instead of dosing themselves with habit-forming drugs, stimulants and alcoholic beverages I am convinced that in this way they could ward off disease, preventing it becoming organic in thousands of cases and thereby the lives of thousands might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, kidney, liver, heart trouble and other dangerous maladies. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run-down people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.—E. Sauer, M. D.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr. E. Sauer, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 100 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

The Conceded Standard Among All Mosquito Remedies---Sweet Dreams The Great Double Strength Remedy.

The imitator endeavors to get a mosquito remedy "as good as Sweet Dreams."

The second thinker doesn't accept such remedies, however. The practice of accepting substitutes seems to be going out of fashion anyway.

It's mighty simple to insist on getting genuine Sweet Dreams, then ridding yourself of mosquitoes is simpler still.

There's one thing to remember, always, and that is that Sweet Dreams became the standard the morning the first bottle was made.

And then, too, it's well to remember the name, Sweet Dreams.

Every store, every town.

HARNESSED FOR CHRIST.

By Rev. J. R. Miller.

A man found a wild torrent in the mountain. It could work only waste and ruin as it rushed uncontrolled down the gorge. He built a flume for it, and carried its wild flood in quiet streams down into the valley, where they watered the fields and gardens, gave drink to the thirsty, and turned many a wheel of industry. That was far better than if he had dried up the torrent. It was far better, too, than if he had left it to flow on forever with destructive force. Now it was tamed and made to do good, and make the world richer and more beautiful. That is what God wants to do with the cravings, the desires, the passions, the longings, and all the mighty energies of our nature. They are not to be destroyed. Yet are not to be allowed to work waste and ruin in efforts to find gratification in merely earthly channels, in unbridled license.

That is sin's way. Rather, these great forces in our nature are to come under the yoke of Christ, and are to be led by him into all holy service for God and man.

There would seem to be an incurable variance between the life which men covet for themselves and that which they admire in others; nay, between the lot which they would choose beforehand and that in which they glory afterwards. In prospect, nothing appears so attractive as ease and licensed comfort; in retrospect, nothing so delightful as toil and strenuous service.—J. Martineau.

Editorial

"So darkness in the pathway of man's life
Is but the shadow of God's providence,
By the great Sun of Wisdom cast thereon;
And what is dark below is light in heaven."

Flattery is the schemer's best bait. There are few who are wholly immune from its subtle influence. Jesus was.

* * *

In every field, including that of religious effort, it is the intelligently earnest man who achieves the largest results.

* * *

The ministers who think that the Gospel has lost its power and are seeking substitutes for it are the ones who never really preach it.

* * *

The hunter who never goes to see if his shots bring down the game hasn't much faith in his markmanship. Is this not equally true of the preacher who fires away from his pulpit week after week without ever calling for penitents?

* * *

A contemporary speaks of "the new Christianity" and boasts of its superiority. This is absurd. There has never been but one Christianity, and there never will be. Wesley's bugle call to classic Oxford and all England was to get back to Scriptural Christianity—the Christianity of Christ and the Apostles.

* * *

The world has a better knowledge of right and wrong than often it is willing to admit. While licensing evil and permitting their bestial natures to dominate, men show in numerous ways that their truest convictions are against the immoralities which they sustain, and perhaps patronize. An illustration of this point may be seen in the fact that our Nation, which has long been in partnership with the rum traffic, is now resolutely insisting that there must be no saloons near the camps established for the training of our troops. If prohibition is necessary for the soldier, why is is not necessary for the citizen?

* * *

How brief is human life on earth! All, with rapid, ceaseless tread are marching to the tomb, and none can halt for a moment on this predestined pilgrimage. In this on-moving host are impartially and irrevocably embraced all mankind: the king and the peasant, the millionaire and the pauper, the wise and the ignorant, the saint and the sinner. Almost ere we are aware, we shall have run our little race and our pulseless forms will repose beneath the sod. Should not such a reflection incite us to busy ourselves with the things of real importance—to seek to make our characters pure gold from surface to center, and to do the utmost of true service that we can for God and our fellow-men? The grave is not the end; immediately beyond it, the way that the travelers to eternity must go divides, the two courses leading to vastly different goals. And even in heaven there will doubtless be a difference in rewards. Whither art thou bound, fellow-pilgrim, and what is in store for thee?

GOD'S WONDERFUL PROVIDENCE.

The article appearing on Page 2, entitled the "Infinite Presence," which we have taken from the Memphis Commercial Appeal, is a most suggestive one. It sets forth impressively the wonderful way in which life is propagated in the vegetable world, each kind of plant adopting the expedient that is best adapted to its peculiar nature. There is, so to speak, a special providence that keeps vigil over and cares for every species, safeguarding it from destruction and providing for its perpetnation. How much fuller and richer are the Master's words to us living to-day than they were to those upon whose ears they fell when he uttered them on the mountain-side: "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow."

Nor is God's abounding care less evident in the physical world when it is considered in its relation to man than it is when it is viewed in its relation to tree and shrub and flower. Alfred Russel Wallace, the eminent English scientist, in his informing and thought-provoking volume, "Man's Place in the Universe," points out the many forces and influences that must co-operate to make human life possible on this planet. The size of the earth, its distance from the sun, the obliquity of the ecliptic, its motions, its seasons and days and nights, the proportion of land and water, and the constituent elements of its atmosphere, all enter fundamentally into the calculation. Any one of almost innumerable things if omitted would bring confusion and death, as a single pin or band out place might throw into discord and confusion a vast piece of machinery. For instance, Dr. Wallace says: "Although there is only one part of ammonia to a million of air, yet upon this minute proportion the very existence of the animal world depends, because neither animals nor plants can assimilate the free nitrogen of the air into their tissues." The lengthening of the earth's diameter a thousand or fifteen hundred miles would probably make it uninhabitable for man; and the annihilation of the clouds and lightning would likely produce the same result because of what they do toward filling the atmosphere with the needed gases. Even the dust particles that are swept up twenty-five or thirty miles into the sky have an indispensable part to perform, for without them there would be but little, if any, rain except upon lofty elevations, there would be no reflection of light, the appearance of things about us would be marvelously changed, and the general effect upon plant and animal life would be revolutionary, if not destructive.

But there is no hitch in the intricate and mighty mechanism of nature, and man's physical wants are fully and faithfully supplied. And if God by so many inter-related contrivances cares for us day by day, should we not learn from this the lesson of a more perfect trust in him? But it may be asked if God's providential care is limited entirely to its operations through the laws and instincts of nature. Such certainly is not the teaching of the inspired Revelation, nor do we think that such a view is sonndly philosophic. Laws are God's usual methods, but it is scarcely believable that He who made these laws would permit himself to be unchangeably fettered by them. The Heavenly Father who has builded for his children this magnificent temporal home and who has made all these agencies their ministering servants, will not fail to watch ceaselessly over them and to be mindful of them in all the crises of this life, and in the future into which it may lead them. "All things work together for good to them that love God," and man only (by clashing with the divine purposes) can make of himself a wreck and an outcast.

AN OUTSTANDING DIFFERENCE.

We picked up a few days since in our library a copy of George Sale's translation of the "Alkoran of Mohammed" and read a few of its pages; and, as we were doing so, the thought that was uppermost in our mind was that the efforts of men to write religious books attest the superhuman origin of the Bible. The simple dignity of the Scriptures, the manner in which they deal with things of importance, and the fact that there is no going off a tangent and no excess of details show that they are not merely the products of men. Read, for instance, the opening chapters of Genesis, or the account of the virgin birth of our Lord, and note the clear setting forth of the truth designed to be disclosed and what might be termed the splendid restraint of the writers. As a matter of fact, their silence at times is scarcely less remarkable than the revelations that they make. In dealing with great issues and themes the human tendency is to pour out all one knows concerning them, and this disposition is plainly manifest in the so-called revelations of spurious religions.

And what a difference there is between the miracles of the Bible and those described in the Apocrypha! The former always have some great end in view and are of a character to command respect, while the latter are childish and often grotesque, with little or nothing to follow from them, as when for instance Jesus is represented in his youth as making pigeons of clay and infusing life into them. It does not lie within the power of finite man to counterfeit successfully any phase of the work of Deity.

We have often been interested in volumes written to prove the divinity of Christ, but for us they were not necessary. His own words as recorded in the Gospels were sufficient to convince us that he was God. No human being could ever have made such utterances. Daniel Webster was not wrong when he spoke the words that were subsequently chiseled on his tombstone at Marshfield, Mass.: "The Sermon on the Mount cannot be a merely human production."

Mr. Bryan's challenge, made a few years ago, is pertinent and overwhelming. He said, in substance, this is the most highly civilized and intellectual age in the world's history. If you say that uninspired men wrote the Bible, let us see you call your scientists, philosophers, and literary lights together and have them give us something else in a class with it.

THE ROAD.

Does the road wind uphill all the way?
Yea, to the very end.
Will the day's journey take the whole long day?
From morn to night, my friend.

But is there for the night a resting-place?
A roof for when the slow dark hours begin.
May not the darkness hide it from my face?
You cannot miss that inn.

Shall I meet other wayfarers at night?
Those who have gone before.
Then must I knock, or call when just in sight?
They will not keep you standing at the door.

Shall I find comfort, travel-sore and weak?
Of labor you shall find the sum.
Will there be beds for me and all who seek?
Yea, beds for all who come.

—Christina G. Rossetti.

MOTIVE IN GIVING.

Giving is part of the service of the Master. The giving of time, effort and money are included in every Christian's obligation. The proper and best methods of giving are those for the benefit of our fellow creatures, and should be accompanied, as far as possible, by personal interest and sympathy The objects are numberless, but the motive should be the good of others and not the glorification of self.—John H. Converse.

THE TWO SELVES.

"You need saving from your bad self, but the most subtle is your good self. O God, slay us utterly. There will be no peace of God, no rest of God in the soul until sin is put away. It is religious cant and humbug to talk about rest when you know sin has not been driven out of the soul. It will never be ours until sin is put beneath the feet forever, or nailed to His cross. Then we may expect it, but not until then."

DO RIGHT.

You are not responsible for consequences or results. Do right, and leave the consequences with Him who is truth, and who loves and guards his own. If we do evil that good may come, we take the matter out of his hands into our own. There is an uprightness of speech as well as of action that we should strive to attain. Love the truth, follow the truth, and practice truth in word, thought, and deed.—John B. Gough.

PRAY AND WORK.

It was said that Francis Xavier, the Jesuit missionary, had great power in prayer. Some one watched him to see how he prayed. This person scarcely ever saw him on his knees, for there was no time for this; but as he was busy helping others, he was heard saying over and over again, "Jesus! Jesus! Jesus!" He talked with Christ continually as he worked. Everything he did was done with prayer. Thus may we pray as we work and work as we pray.—Selected.

A PRESENT CHRIST.

The story of the three Babylonish youths is ever being repeated. They were true to the principle, "Be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods," and the form of the king's visage was changed against them. The furnace was heated "seven times more than it was wont to be heated," and the faithful youths were cast into the midst of it; but the fire would not kindle upon them. In the midst of it they walked unscatched —in their coats, their hosen, and their hats. Then the king was astonished, and rose up in haste, and cried, "Did ye not cast three men into the midst of the fire? Lo, there are four, and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God." Nay, the fourth was the Son of God; the same whose promise is sure forever: "Lo, I am with you alway; I will not leave you alone, I will come to you." If we yield to temptation, it is because we refuse his help. For he is not far from every one of us.—David James Burrell.

PRAYING.

Rev. S. J. Davies.

It is the evening for prayer meeting and the ever recurrent thought came to the leader, how may the occasion be used best and what shall be the subject chosen?

When, where, how shall we pray and from this spiritual exercise gain the most and the best?

When? Morning, evening, day and night. Instant, earnest, sincere prayer is the vital breath of eternal life—life hidden with Christ in God. The many witnesses, who have gone before, and with whose faithful examples we are compassed about had stated times for praying. The unwavering faithfulness of these saints crystallized into fixed habits of prayer, which molded and fashioned their characters after the heavenly measure.

Where? The apostle says "everywhere, lifting up holy hands without wrath and doubting?" In a larger sense a child of God should bear his altar of prayer with him. Praying in the home stills the cares of the day, lightens the burdens, uplifts the doubting heart, and brings comfort and peace. The prayerless home is the reproach of the Church to-day. The cottage prayer meeting is the storm center whence many sweeping revivals have marshalled their spiritual forces. The home altar has sent forth men who wrought mightily for God's kingdom in earth and heaven. Moreover, it is the nurturing and cherishing guard and keeper of faith. Pagan Rome with her Lares and Penates should rebuke our faithlessness.

The churches, especially in our populous towns and cities, should be kept open for any who might enter to pray. Protestantism has suffered immeasurable loss in its disregard of the sanctity of its churches. Neither ancient Judaism nor early Christianity were infected with this disregard of the sanctuary. The spirit of reverence must ever accompany the spirit of true worship.

How shall we pray—kneeling, standing, or sitting? The attitude of the soul, it is true, is more than that of the body. Yet this is the tabernacle of the soul, and the attitude of soul is shown by the position of the body. Kneeling and standing are the recognized positions of prayer in the Bible. I know of no instance of any one sitting to pray.

Methodists I fear have grown "knee-weary" in these latter days. Our churches should have convenient kneeling-stools. So frequently there is lack of room in our pews in which to kneel. A modern church is too often an industrial hive, and not a sanctuary in which to worship God. Even the altar rail is often constructed on lines of signal discomfort and inconvenience. Would it not be refreshing to discover a Methodist Church really fitted and prepared for praying?

THE INFINITE PRESENCE.

Summer is slipping away. The gray dusk comes early and the mist of the morning hangs reluctantly in the east.

The infinite presence is felt. The subtle scheme of nature is beginning to unfold. Plant life is slowly drooping. Soon only gaunt stalks will remain, the grim evidence of the departed season.

Yet this seeming lull among the living things of the garden and field does not mean ultimate death. Bare-limbed trees will stand through the long nights of the winter sleep, but the roots will snuggle away from the earthly chill, perennial in their desire to brighten the world with their virgin green of the early months of spring.

The infinite presence can be more keenly observed at this season of the year, when the maternal instinct is felt in the plants and flowers.

Many will die when the first frost comes, but they will have left with an instintive mother love the seed behind to perpetuate the plant life of the future.

It is a wonderful thing, this study of preparedness, as told in the fields, in the woods, in the sun and shade, in crowded cities and in country lanes.

The thistle, whose rich purple plumes of spring have turned white with the weight of days, is nodding in every passing wind, and as the fluttering head nods it sends adrift many tiny argosies that float through space, carrying the seed that nature will plant somewhere and where it will sleep during the winter, only to renew life when the winds of the north no longer blow.

In the plant world every phase or form or function exists as a product of the strain toward inorescence and seed production. The trunks of the forest monarchs are the props of the flower, to raise it high in the air where the sun may reach and ripen, and where the winds may catch the pollen and carry it to waiting mates. Every form of leaf, every shape of growth, every coloration and build of flowers pertain to the one aim and end of existence.

One cannot but feel the infinite presence when we consider the inexhaustible ingenuity, the million-fold devices and the mysterious ways that nature has provided for the distribution of seeds.

Every sort of balloon conceivable has been contrived by ingenious mother trees and cunning mother plants for wafting their babes to far-away nourishing resting-places.

Lafcadia Hearn tells in a picturesque way of the ceiba tree in the West Indies which, bursting its pod like a gun, floats its white-winged seed like a snow storm over a city, and when they settle quickly must the natives clear every one off the roofs, for if a single one lodges it will wreck and crush the house with its prolific roots.

Some of these plant mothers surround their little ones with such impervious shells that they float and drift with the tide and currents for weeks and months and yet retain their life and growth power until washed ashore, perhaps, on some barren island to renew the work of nature, and here once more is the infinite presence to be felt.

Other thoughtful plant mothers, before the frost comes, furnish their baby seed with hairs, with spines, with tough covering, to protect them. They surround them with acid juices and poisons to sting and harrow; husks and hooks and spears to cut and hurt. They ingeniously discover thousands of devices for getting the better of the curious and the hungry, that their life may be continued in the seed that are being sent adrift into the world to grow and multiply.

Darwin found that a clump of dried mud weighing nine grains from the leg of a partridge and which had been kept for three years, contained seeds from which he raised 82 distinct plants.

It is at this season, when nature begins the wonderful distribution of seeds, that a walk through the woods is interesting. The infinite presence is undeniable. The work of preparation among the smallest of growing things—the patient, painstaking, prudent, precautionary work for the perpetuation of plant life that the world may continue in peace and prosperity, furnish a theme for study that seems especially applicable at this period of unrest in the human family.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

A FEW REMARKS.

By Rev. James H. Felts.

"There goes my friend John Henry ——," said the late Senator Edward Carmack on a certain occasion, "who in one particular is like a mule, without ancestry or the hope of posterity." All the vendors of strange nostrums and leaders of sundry movements have not been so fortunately "constructed." Hardly an ism or schism of these days but has a definite if not honorable ancestry; and, alas! begets a motley progeny.

That the Church has made mistakes no well informed man will deny. That she is God's chosen agency, nothing being found to take her place or do her work, is equally true. Even when certain children she has nourished have spurned her as incompetent and gone their way without her guiding hand, it has been to find what Israel found when she demanded a king, THE LEANNESS OF SECOND BEST.

God speaks through orderly channels. He did use an ass to rebuke Baalim, and the jaw-bone of an ass to chastise the Philistines. In practically the same way He may be using Eddyism, Russellism, New Thought, German Kultur, and "the thousand and one fads and fancies that have caught the unwary," to rebuke His people to-day. Certain it is that from the days of the Nicoloaltanes to the Unknown Tongues of egotistical ignoramuses who chase imaginary squirrels and hark like dogs that have "treed" (this in the bounds of our own Conference), all kinds of folks have claimed to voice the thought of God. They have discovered how the Church, so wonderfully blessed through the years, might more truly interpret His will. But He continues to speak and build through orderly channels. Even the child that denied his daddy for a million dollars was soon replaced by a stronger, better, lustier fellow. The isms and schisms come and go—the Church lives on. Excrescences are not fatal. Our chiefest danger is within. Germany has not fought so much of the world for three years by organized force on the battle front alone, but by spies, agitators, disturbers. We are beginning to understand in this country. Men who make a large boast of their patriotism, some of them evidently in our law-making bodies, are rendering definite service to the enemy. So it is, has been, and will continue to be in the Church. Not the Ingersolls, Paines, or Humes will silence her. If death comes, it will come from within.

I am no worshiper at the shrine of our College of Bishops. Just as good men and capable remain in the ranks all their days. But I do respect the men, as a whole, with all my heart who have thus been honored by their brethren. We have a proper tribunal before which they may be tried; we have accepted channels through which they may be criticised; we have designated times and places where they must give account of their stewardship. To organize a kind of secret society, sending out literature or exchanging communications looking ultimately to the uprooting of our whole system of Church government smacks too much of treason, or an itch for the lime-light that the Church has not seen fit to grant. Headquarters should never become the rendezvous of hindquarters. I do not specially "admire" the mule that keeps his head in the trough while trying to kick the daylight out of the man who feeds him. Honorable men of good purpose fight in the open. Safe men select a proper time to do their fighting. When you destroy men's confidence in the integrity of the system under which they work there is nothing left but to find a place elsewhere. Our system has been the envy of the Church world. To attempt to mix the episcopal and the congregational forms of government is to attempt the impossible. We are in the midst of times when our Church ought to render her greatest service to the South and to the world.

Leadership we must have. Here is the measure of our strength. An emasculated leadership is second only to a short-visioned, arrogant leadership that cannot or will not interpret the real life of the Church. Take from our President the power constitutionally granted him and you have a short-haired Sampson. Strip our army of definite and authoritative leadership and you will send against the foe a hunch of white-house militants. Take from our Bishops the authority vested in them and Gulliver is seen again in the hands of the Lilliputians. Our Bishops should interpret our laws, preside over our Conferences, be the final court of appeals in the making of appointments, bring to us the very best thought and working models of the age, and be responsible to the court created by the Church for that definite purpose.

I want our laymen to have a free hand in all the affairs of the Church; but if they are to make my appointments I prefer to figure in them also. The right of choice carries with it the right of rejection. If both laymen and preachers were receiving the appointments made by the Bishops without complaint, without self-seeking, the work of the Church would be better done.

The world is in the crucible. The Church is also being tested. It is not a good time for changes. Better wait till the clouds have blown away and we are working under a clear sky. That a world democracy is the justifiable dream of the hour is the belief of many great leaders. But even that democracy is doomed to failure without a definite, responsible head. We would certainly be as well off, probably better, if every movement looking to serious change in our Church were torpedoed, for a time at least. An ounce of loyalty, coupled with a pound of calvary vision, is our need.

GOD SAVE US FROM FOES WITHOUT AND FRIENDS (?) WITHIN.

Holly Springs, Miss.

WHAT WE HAVE DONE.

It is four months since we declared that war existed between Germany and the United States. Let us consider what we have accomplished during those months toward winning the war.

We have recruited our standing army and our militia forces up to war strength; we have, therefore, about 700,000 soldiers already under arms; those who are not veterans are undergoing the final training that will prepare them for the front.

We have registered all the young men in the third decade of their lives, and drawn nearly 700,000 of them to form a new army, the trainng of which is to begin in a very few weeks.

We have built thirty-two great training camps for the use of our soldiers in as many different parts of the country.

We have given three months or more of special training to between 40,000 and 50,000 young men to fit them to become officers.

We have already sent one division of regular troops to France and more are on the way. It is probable that we shall have 150,000 men on the fighting line before snow falls and between 500,000 and 1,000,000 there by next spring. Our first detachment is already at the front.

We have sent over scores of hospital units, with surgeons, nurses and supplies, and we have dispatched to France, to England and to Russia special corps of foresters, railway workers and engineers, who are helping mightily in their own way behind the battle line.

We have sent across the ocean a squadron of destroyers that have done valuable service in the campaign against the submarines, and we are building and have nearly completed some 500 additional crafts that are especially designed for attacking submarines.

Our navy patrols the Atlantic and is ready for battle duty whenever it is called on.

We have organized the work of building merchant ships; more than four hundred are already under way, and the number will increase as fast as new facilities are provided.

We have appropriated the money for a fleet of 20,000 airships and have begun to train the men who are to be their pilots.

We have established a Council of National Defense, a Purchasing Board and a Commissioner for the Conirol of Food, all patriotic and experienced business men, who are introducing into our military preparations an orderliness and thoroughness such as was never known in any of our previous wars.

We have raised a loan of $2,000,000,000 without difficulty and are ready to absorb another. We have found the money for our own preparations and have lent money in considerable amounts to our allies, as they have needed it.

As a nation we have undertaken the support of the Belgians; we have sent a medical mission to France to help fight tuberculosis, which has become so terrible a plague since the war began; we have sent aid, financial, industrial and political, to Russia.

There is nothing of the glory and glamour of war about this summary of accomplishment. We have won no victories in the field, we have hardly fired our first shot against the enemy. We have had all the foundations to lay, and when we consider how mighty a task lies before us and how utterly unprepared we were for it the labor of laying the foundations seems to us to have been done systematically, carefully, and with reasonable speed. Fortunately, we have had allies who could hold the line while we made ready. But very soon now the period of preparation will be over; America will stand forth, armed at last, and ready to bear its part in the fray. May that part be worthy of the history, the ideals and the might of our country!—The Youth's Companion.

LET THE SCHOOLS BE MAINTAINED.

Mr. Editor:

It is of the greatest importance that the schools of the United States of all kinds and grades—public, private, and parochial—be maintained during the war without any lowering of their standards or falling off in their attendance.

This is necessary both for the protection of our boys and girls against many unusual temptations to delinquencies of various kinds, and that they may have full opportunity for preparation for the work of life and for the duties and responsibilities of citizenship; all of which will require a higher degree of preparation because of the war.

For many reasons there will be need in this country for higher standards in average of ability, knowledge, and virtue, when the boys and girls now in our schools have reached manhood and womanhood than we or any other people have yet attained to.

In the making of public opinion and popular sentiment necessary for the maintenance of standards of efficiency, to keep children in the schools, and to prevent their exploitation in the mills and shops, the churches may do much. I am therefore appealing to all ministers to urge this from their pulpits, and to all superintendents of Sunday schools and all leaders of young peoples' societies to have this matter discussed in their meetings.

To do this is a patriotic duty which should be performed gladly, both for the present defense and for the future welfare of the country.

Yours sincerely,

P. P. CLAXTON,

National Commissioner of Education.

"THE UNIT RULE," FOR OUR BISHOPS.

By J. E. Harrison, D.D.

The expression, "Unit Rule," is infelicitous because it is political in origin and in significance.

When delegates to a political convention are put under the unit rule, it means that the minority in that delegation are to have no rights except to fuss and fume, because the majority, using the unit rule as a big stick, force all their measures through without giving the minority a fair opportunity even to make a reasonable fight.

If that sort of unit rule obtained in the meetings of our bishops, the obstinate objectors would be doing the Church a good service in raising a howl about it and in keeping up the howl until the political unit rule broke. But it seems to me that nothing more is done by our bishops than is done in the General Conference and in our other Conferences, which is a majority rule and not a unit rule.

In the General Conference a report of a committee may be accompanied by a minority report, and a great discussion of the two may be engaged in, but when the General Conference by final vote speaks on the two reports, the voice of the majority of the Conference is the voice of the Conference and holds as good in law with a majority of one as if it had been unanimous, with certain specified exceptions.

The chairman says: "All who favor the minority report, say Aye" and "All opposed, say No." "it is lost." Then, "All who favor the report say Aye," and "All opposed, No." "The report is adopted."

This is as much the unit rule aa is the action of the bishops, if I am rightly informed.

In the meetings of the bishops it certainly must be the right of every bishop to offer a substitute for any paper that is before them for consideration. When one of their number reads the Episcopal address which he has been appointed to write, it certainly is in order for amendments to be suggested and discussed and voted on.

But the paper that is adopted by a majority vote of the bishops present becomes by that vote the action of the College of Bishops, and this result of their joint consideration is all that is necessary to go before the body to whom the paper is presented.

Billy Sunday will hold a meeting in Atlanta, Ga., in November and December of this year.

Bishop Collins Denny will preach at the Second Annual Bible Conference at Ocean Grove, N. J., on September 2.

It is stated that Dr. A. T. Robertson, of the Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, Ky., has helped to train about 4000 young men for the ministry.

The press dispatches, a few days since, announced the death, in Texas, of Dr. W. E. Boggs, who some years ago was a member of the Louisiana Conference.

Bishop Heard, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, in addressing recently an audience of Negroes in Louisiana, told them that their best friends were in the South.

An unannounced donor has given the money to repair the historic St. Louis Cathedral (Roman Catholic), which fronts on Jackson Square, this city. It is reported that the amount of money to be thus expended will approximate $100,000.

The probating of the will of the late Archbishop Blenk, of New Orleans, a few days ago, developed the fact that his estate was worth less than $500. This widely known Roman Catholic prelate obviously did not love money. It was stated that he had borrowed practically the value of a life insurance policy that he had to promote Church work that lay heavily upon his heart.

At Panama, where cross the crowded currents of the world's commerce, the Bible House is now well established in its new building, which bears an illuminated sign inscribed: "American Bible Society. 'Heaven and earth shall pass away; but My words shall never pass away.' The Holy Scriptures in over 500 languages and dialects at less than cost. If we don't have your language, we can get it for you."—New York Christian Advocate.

Rev. R. A. Carter, of the colored Methodist Episcopal Church, has been traveling in the North to see after the interests of his denomination among the colored people who have migrated to that section. He is said to have found a considerable number of members in several Northern cities, and to have bought a church and parsonage in Detroit at a cost of $15,000, to make it possible to care for the communicants who have taken up residence there.

The following dispatch was sent out from Atlanta on Aug. 22: "Recommendations calling for an expenditure of approximately $5,000,000 for the expansion of Emory University were made in a report in a meeting here to-day of selected Methodist laymen from the Southern States east of the Mississippi River. The report was rendered by Bishop Warren A. Candler, Chancellor of the University. A committee was named to aid in a movement to raise the necessary funds, with Mr. L. W. Branch, of Georgia, Chairman. Mr. L. N. Dantzier, of Mississippi, is among its members."

A GENEROUS GIFT TO EMORY UNIVERSITY.

At a meeting of representative laymen of our Church last week in Atlanta Mr. J. A. Ellison, of Hurtsboro, Ala., gave $25,000 to Emory University. The following resolution was adopted by the laymen present:

"Whereas we have heard to-day, during the Laymen's Convention at Emory University, of the generous gift of $25,000 to the University by our highly esteemed brother, Mr. J. A. Ellison, of Hurtsboro, Ala.;

"Resolved, That we express our great appreciation of his liberal deed, and we are encouraged by this munificent donation, coming at this moment, to believe that our University is in the hearts of wise and good men among us and that Brother Ellison's gift will inspire others to like noble acts for its speedy completion."

This life is too short and precious to waste it in bearing that heaviest of all burdens, a grudge. —Van Dyke.

FROM BISHOP HOSS.

My Dear Brother: Early in the spring of the present year, I suffered from a serious physical disablement, which was the cause of much apprehension to my close friends; and I was also detained at home by the sickness of my wife, who in the course of forty-five years has never before interfered for so much as one day with my duties as an itinerant preacher.

At the present time I am happy to say that we are both much improved in health and strength. As far as I can now see, there is no reason why I should not report at the semi-annual meeting of the College of Bishops at Jackson, Tenn., in October, and also preside over the Annual Conferences that have been assigned to me during the month of November. As a matter of course, any man who is approaching seventy years must always be somewhat uncertain as to the length of his future life. But I have found it to be a very unprofitable speculation to indulge in dreams of a speedy dissolution. When the time comes for me to pass away, I hope by the grace of God to be ready for the event; but I do not give myself any serious concern about the probable date of my demise. In the meantime, it will be safer for my brethren in the Virginia and Louisiana Conferences to presume that I will be with them on schedule time. I have pulled through two or three severe spells of sickness in my day, and I think it quite likely that I may still survive several of the brethren who are rather light-heartedly making their preparations to assist at my funeral. Living or dying, I shall continue to be what I have always been since I came to man's estate, an unmixed Methodist preacher, rejoicing in the salvation that we have in Christ Jesus, and hoping for the greater glory that is to be revealed beyond the grave.

Yours very truly,

Muscogee, Oklahoma. E. E. HOSS.

MISSISSIPPI ORPHANAGE WORK DAY.

Saturday, October 13, has been set apart for our annual Work Day, and Sunday, October 14, as Harvest Day. The program for the observance of Harvest Day will appear in the September issue of Our Home, the orphanage paper. We had a considerable DEFICIT again this month. We have had a DEFICIT every month since January; so please don't wait until Work Day to send in offerings, but please observe one Sunday in each month and help us to feed and clothe these nearly two hundred parentless and dependent children.—J. We fear that there are some brethren who when they get to heaven will want to rearrange and reconstruct everything.

We pray that we may never develop into the type of man who can never express a conviction without qualifying it. Possibly this variety "evoluted" from a crawfish, and still have left a backing tendency.

This is a time when every preacher should read (or re-read) a life of Martin Luther. One of the most entertaining biographies of the great reformer is that by the late Rev. Lovick Pierce Winter of our own Church. The price is $1, and it may be had of our Publishing House.

If a brother begins to talk to you about electing delegates to the General Conference with a view to getting some man chosen to some office in the Church, give him a piece of your mind. Delegates should be elected to serve the Church, and not to promote the fancied interests of any man. It ought to be an affront to a servant of Christ to make such a suggestion to him.

Chattanooga disclaims being the headquarters of the new O'Kelleyism, and some correspondents have written us that the literature they are now receiving was mailed in Nashville. We don't blame Chattanooga for wanting to make the city on the Cumberland nurture her own progeny. By the way, is it O'Kelley, or O'Kelly? Bishop McTyeire uses the former spelling, and Dr. Buckley, in his "History of Methodism," uses the latter.

We believe in our form of Episcopacy without any reservations. Individual Bishops have frequently made mistakes; but if our College of Bishops has ever gone wrong, we do not know when or where it was. More than once it has saved the Church in a crisis. We challenge any man to show that our Episcopal College has ever done a single discreditable thing. There have always been clear heads and great hearts in that body. It is our purpose to discuss some questions pertaining to our Episcopacy in the near future.

There are some uses of words to which we cannot but have a dislike. One of them is the use of the word "universe" for world or earth, as when, for instance, one speaks of a person as being the greatest man in the universe. We do not know what is in the universe. We think also that the adjective "infinitely" is too frequently and lightly used. One frequently hears one thing pronounced "infiniteiy" greater than another, when both of them are minutely finite. The dictionaries may permit this practice, but we do not like it. We think that it evinces a lack of proper discrimination.

LET THE CHURCH BE INFORMED.

By the Editor.

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate, of Atlanta, Ga., reprinted last week the editorial of Dr. Joy, of the New York Christian Advocate, in which he affirmed that the plan to place the Negroes in a separate General Conference in the proposed unified Church received "a knock out" at Traverse City, and commented upon it as follows:

The statement issued by the Commission at the close of the session held at Traverse City, declared that nothing more than "tentative agreements" were reached concerning the composition, boundaries, and powers of certain Conferences. It was understood that so much of the report of the "Sub-Committee on Conferences" as brought in sight the Negro question, was postponed until the next meeting and that the specific report or reports (for there were two) on the Status of the Negro was not considered at all.

Now comes the editor of the New York Advocate, and an unnamed member of the Northern Commission, in Washington (possibly Bishop McDowell or Bishop Cranston), saying that the plan for a separate General Conference for the Negro "was knocked out."

How about this? If the whole subject of the Negro was postponed until the next meeting of the Commission, how can it be said that any plan whatsoever was "knocked out?"

We want light. And our people want to know about this matter. Our Annual Conferences ought to be informed about it, if what the New York Christian Advocate says is true.

It is time the proceedings of the meeting at Traverse City were given to the press without reservation or abridgement. The Annual Conferences of our Church, which are soon to meet, will elect delegates to the General Conference which meets in Atlanta next May. They have a right to know the truth, and the whole truth, about this matter, without further delay.

The Northern General Conference does not meet until 1920, but the case is different with our Church. Our Annual Conferences, which are soon to meet, are entitled to full and accurate information before they meet.

If Northern editors and members of the Northern Commission give out in part what was done at Traverse City, there is no reason why members of the Southern Commission should withhold from our people a full statement; and unless the Secretaries of the Joint Commission speedily publish the proceedings of the meeting, we hope some, or all of the Southern Commissioners, will tell us what was and what was not done. Give our people the facts. They have a right to know them, and to know them fully, without further delay.

If the Negro members of the Northern Church are to be given an equal place in the re-united Church with white members, and are to be represented in the General Conference, thereby securing a position of advantage above all other Negro Methodists in the United States, let us know now that such is the plan approved by the Joint Commission. If the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, which our Church organized and is helping, is to be dropped by us and the Negro members of the Northern Church are to be made special claimants upon our benevolence through the Freedmen's Aid Society of the United Church, our people should be informed of the fact in time to allow them to let the General Conference know how they think and feel about the matter.

We do not believe our people will ever consent to a plan to throw off the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church and unite with the Northern Methodists in a plan which erects the Negro members of the Northern Church into a sort of Afro-American aristocracy.

Let them know the facts in the case, and then they will leave no doubt about how they think and feel. They will also make it plain whether they do, or do not, wish Negro delegates to become a balance of power in legislating for white Churches.

With the foregoing strong utterance, we are in hearty accord. The union negotiations have now reached a stage where Southern Methodists, in view of the nearness of our General Conference, are entitled to know fully into what their Commissioners are proposing to lead them. Let the majority and minority reports of the sub-committee on the Status of the Negro in the Unified Church be printed, along with any other facts pertaining to that phase of the issue that are pertinent. (Dr. Joy's editorial clearly states that there are other facts of importance.) Also let the suggested number and boundary lines of the Regional Conferences be made definitely known. There is a report abroad that the liberal wing of our Commission is standing for having the territory of Southern Methodism chopped up into some five segments, instead of adhering to the Oklahoma plan (which was also the plan of the former Joint Commission) of having three white Regional Conferences and letting the South proper be kept together in one of them. LET THE FACTS ABOUT THIS BE GIVEN OUT.

Surely it cannot be that our extreme-unionist brethren who are so confident that the people are overwhelmingly in favor of union are afraid to let the people know what is going on. It is understood that they control our Commission; so let them at once take steps to give the Church proper information concerning these fundamentally vital matters. They have already set the precedent for this in publishing papers that were supposed to be sheltered by the rule of executive sessions. If they could act then, they can certainly find a way to act now if they wish to.

FOR CO-OPERATION, BUT NOT UNION.

Prior to the recent meeting of the British Wesleyan Conference, there was some talk and some discussion in the public prints of effecting closer relations, possibly some form of union, between the Wesleyans and the Established Church of England. As might have been expected, it soon developed that "the two prime obstacles" in the way of merging the two denominations were those which have always been the chief obstructions, namely, "the validity of Methodist ministerial ordinations, and the necessity of confirmation as a condition of receiving communion."

The New York Christian Advocate of August 16 thus sets forth the outcome of this attempt to effect a union of these two religious organizations:

"These pre-conference discussions, and especially the visit of a number of Methodist preachers to the Bishop of London, added zest to the appearance of two Anglican Bishops at the Wesleyan Conference on July 19. The Bishop of Chelmsford (Dr. Watts-Ditchfield) confessed that he was brought up in a pious Methodist home, trained in class by a basketmaker classleader, and found his ideal of the Christian ministry in the 'saintly, ever-loving and ever-beloved Charles Garrett.' In the face of England's spiritual need, he wanted to see English Christendom united, and his heart went back to the Church of his boyhood and he wished the reunion to begin right there. He would rather cut off his right hand than extinguish Methodism by such a merger, but for the nation's sake, for the Church's sake, and for Christ's sake, he besought them to approach the subject not as theologians or ecclesiasts, but upon their knees. He wanted to see the Church of Christ doing the work for which He bled and died.

"The Bishop of London (Dr. Ingram) went no further than his colleague into details, but asked whether 'in this great day of God it was a law of the Medes and Persians that the Church of England and the Wesleyan Church should always be separate.' He wanted to find a way of utilizing the fiery zeal and missionary passion of the Methodists in the Church of England.

"Two days later it was moved 'that the Conference declare its readiness to confer as to the best way to promote more efficient co-operation between the Church of England and the Wesleyan Methodist Church in the furtherance of the Kingdom of Christ.' But trouble was scented in the word 'confer,' and the resolution did not pass until it had been toned down to 'ready at all times to co-operate with the Church of England and all other Evangelical Churches in every endeavor for the furtherance of the Kingdom of Christ'

"And that is all that came of the proposal to close up the gap which is narrower between the children of Wesley and the Church which mothered and step-mothered him, than it is between the Wesleyans and the Free Churches."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL DISTRICT INSTITUTES.

We believe that the program for the Sunday School District Institutes to be held within the seven districts of our Conference from September 3, through the 20th, affords a far-reaching opportunity. The speakers from both far and near are experienced and capable.

The Board is depending upon the attendance and co-operation of each presiding elder, every pastor, and all Sunday school workers.

Those interested in making announcements will please emphasize the fact that the resignation of Rev. J. L. Neill, Field Secretary, does not take effect until after the last Institute has been held. He will be at your Institute to push the work with his usual enthusiasm and ability.

A LIVING APPEAL.

Dr. Bernardo, of London, the great philantropist, was standing at his front door one bitter day, when a ragged urchin came up to him and asked to be admitted to the Orphans' Home. "How do I know what you tell me is true? Have you any friends to speak for you?" asked Dr. Bernardo, assuming a tone of severity. "Friends!" echoed the little fellow—"friends! No, I ain't got no friends. But if these 'ere rags," holding up his tattered garments, "if these 'ere rags won't speak for me, nothing else will."—Christian Intelligencer.

FICKLE CROWDS.

On one day in the week the Jewish rabble wanted to crown the Nazarene, and before the week had ended they cried: "Crucify him, crucify him." Unless popularity is based upon character, the possessor has absolutely no assurance of the morrow. And even though he may have a noble character and is popular to-day, there is no assurance, should duty call him to oppose measures dear to the people, that he will not be crucified to-morrow.—R. V. Hunter, D. D.

The Great Battle

NOTES.

The order adds that the legality of importation of liquors into dry territory in partially wet States, such as Kentucky and Ohio, for instance, will have to be decided by a test case, which will give the courts an opportunity to interpret the law, such test case to be selected by attorneys on both sides from violations of the law reported.—Central Methodist.

A dispatch from Washington regarding the "Bone Dry" law says:

The Department of Justice, through Assistant Attorney General Underwood, today held, in a formal order, that the Reed nonsalary law makes it an offense to import liquor into a dry State, even though the State law may not prohibit such shipment or may even specifically permit such importation.

PROHIBITION IN TENNESSEE.

(In reply to a telegram from the American Issue concerning prohibition in Tennessee, the Governor of the State sent the statement which appears below.)

The benefits of prohibition to Tennessee have been:

Dissolution of partnership between the State and the liquor traffic.

"Our covenant with death is disannulled, and our agreement with hell does not stand." "Drinking" is no longer "according to law."

Closing the saloon has abolished the most degrading of social centers and loafing places, veritable man traps for the weak and the young.

Giving thousands of weak but aspiring men another chance.

Building of better homes and lighting the fires of hope upon the altar of the heart of womanhood.

Giving children a larger opportunity to be better bred, better born, and better reared, the needed and necessary preparedness for rearing a sober citizenship.

Establishing higher standards of public morality. Drunkenness upon highways, street railroads, and other public places, with accompanying profanity and obscenity, has practically disappeared.

A higher civic conscience, a growing sense of responsibility for citizenship among the better classes of our people, and the injection thereby of a new moral force and power into our political life.

"We are laying judgment to the line and righteousness to the plummet." The liquor rings which have controlled our municipal affairs, corrupting judges, suborning juries, plundering treasuries, intimidating citizens, consorting with bootleggers, gamblers, and thieves, are being broken up and destroyed, and better civic conditions are prevailing everywhere.

Spending more money for education, for public roads, for the care of the unfortunate, and for religious causes than ever before.

Building a new empire upon a broader and better foundation, which will make for peace and righteousness.

REV. L. J. JONES.

Lazarus Jackson Jones was born in Atlanta, Ga., on March 24, 1852. He was the seventh child of a family of thirteen children. His father was the Rev. Henry T. Jones who, in the beginning of his ministry, was a member of the Mississippi Conference for a short while, but afterwards joined the Congregational Methodist Church, and till the time of his death, at a ripe old age, was a popular, strong, faithful, and true preacher in that Church. His mother's name was Frances Allen. Before he was a year old his parents moved to Jasper County, Miss., where they spent the remainder of their lives. Here they sent their son to such schools as were available, until he became fairly well equipped for life, measured by the standards of that day.

Brother Jones was a good boy, and I have never heard anyone speak of him as anything but a Christian. It would be hard to imagine otherwise. In his young days a severe spell of sickness left his arm crippled for life, he went with uncertain tread of foot, but leaning heavily upon his Father's strong arm. He was converted when young, and was licensed to preach in the Congregational Methodist Church at about 19 years of age, so far as I can learn, and for more than a decade was a faithful and faithful preacher of the gospel in that Church, which in that section in those days had a number of very able and effective preachers.

In 1891 he was received into the Mississippi Conference at Brookhaven, having come under the direction of Ransom J. Jones, presiding elder of the Meridian District. He tarried among us, till now there are but ten names above his on the chronological roll of our Conference. Brother Jones labored in hard fields; his salary probably never went below $300, and certainly never as high as $500. Yet he kept out of debt, bought and paid for a home, and died owing less than $50. But he was a cheerful, hard worker, and the results of the year's work always told that a faithful, true man of God had been there. It cannot be said, all things considered, that he ever failed in a single year's work during his twenty-three years of labor in active service. His revival services were usually of a very high order—delightful, often being accompanied with great power, and followed with fine results. During two meetings once held, following each other, 105 members were received, which spoke in eloquent terms for the section in which he labored. Conversions and additions to the Church were frequent during his ministry at his regular appointments. He served the following charges: Bethel, 2 years; Winchester, 2 years; Sanderaville, 2 years; Chunky, 4 years, and afterwards was returned there for another year; Fair River, 4 years; Raleigh, 2 years; Walnut Grove, 2 years; Decatur, 2 years; Porterville, 2 years.

At the Conference held at Gulfport, in December, 1904, Rev. W. M. Sullivan, presiding elder, requested that he be placed upon the honor roll of the Conference; but from the day of his superannuation he was active in preaching and holding revival meetings as long as his physical strength would allow, which was up till about two years before his death. During this time a man was saved under his ministry at the age of 83.

On September 15, 1880 he was married to Miss Virginia Husbands, of Clarke County, who was ever to him a true and devoted wife, entering with him gladly into his hardest trials and greatest sufferings, and sharing his highest joys; and who stood by him in his last long illness with an endurance and devotion beautiful to see. Ten children were born, of whom four sons and one daughter are still living, three sons and two daughters having died while young. His wife and two sisters also survive him.

In character Brother Jones was deeply religious; in disposition he was affable; he was tender-hearted, emotional, and might have been called a weeping prophet; but it all sprang out of a deep consciousness of acceptance with God. He had no doubt about that, and wanted others to share it with him. He was ready to accommodate; ready to help the needy; ready, indeed, to do anything that would help somebody, to advance the Kingdom of God, or glorify his Lord. He was a sincere man. His friendly disposition won for him a host of friends, and all speak of him in the highest terms; to them his name is as ointment poured forth, and his memory is honored, and he is loved.

No one would claim that he was a towering preacher; yet he was a good preacher—sound in doctrine, continuous in effort, and I doubt whether we ever had among us a more consecrated, earnest, and sincere preacher. His own consciousness of divine acceptance made it imperative upon him to try to lead others to Christ; and he was a disciple of no modernism. Heaven and hell were to him real; the new birth was essential, and holy living was demanded of a child of God. His message to the writer and to the brethren was, "Tell the people that there must be a genuine repentance for sin, if they are to be saved." He believed in the power of the gospel—its power to heal, its power to rescue, its power to save from sin and death. His first text, "Turn ye to the stronghold, ye prisoners of hope," was indicative of his desire to rescue the perishing, and of his desire to preach a saving gospel to a lost and dying world. And he believed in prayer. Among the earliest recollections of the writer as a child was a sentence of his as he was concluding a service held by his father: "If I go to hell, I will go praying." The Word of God was to him a divine book through and through.

Truly, he was a workman that needeth not to be ashamed. Time would fail to tell of the sermons he preached, the visits he made, the prayers he offered, the members he received, the meetings he held, the conversions he witnessed, the parsonages and churches he built and repaired, the debts on them he paid, the churches he organized. It was his hand that organized and built the first church the little village of Laurel ever had; it was his labors into which that flourishing city and her handsome churches have entered.

But the shadows are now falling far towards the east; the crippled, faithful old servant of God and soldier of the Cross is tired. God laid him upon a bed of affliction and suffering for weeks and months: here he could mediate, he could contemplate, he could catch glimpses, but he could not rest. There remaineth, however, a rest. Friends came and sympathized with his sufferings, and helped. They rejoiced with him as he would peep over into the eternities. Letters and messages of love and sympathy came from all directions; one from a preacher of the gospel in active service in another State telling him of his conversion and call under his preaching after superannuation. Other preachers, converted and called to preach under his ministry, will rise up in that day and call him blessed.

If he was not ready to die, then Christians die without hope. His testimony was, "I am ready to die." It was Wednesday. He thought the brittle cord was breaking, the silver cord being loosed, and said to his wife, "I am dying." Encouraged and assured by her that he was not, he said, "If I don't die this evening, I will die Saturday." Saturday morning came. It was April 28, 1917. The old servant grew weaker and weaker, and as the sun was climbing fast to his zenith, two hours before he reached his meridian splendor, the saint of God reached out his hand and told them goodby, and where to find him; and in full possession of his faculties and consciousness closed his eyes, and bade farewell to the crippled, emaciated form, and laid aside corruption to put on incorruption, mortality, to put on immortality. He was not afraid to cross over, for he was not alone. Beside Jesus, his Savior, he said there was father, and mother, and others of his loved ones who had gone before—they had come to welcome him home.

On Sunday, April 29, he was buried from the Broad Street Church, Hattiesburg. The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. P. D. Hardin, P. H. Howse, and W. A. Terry, his pastor. It was in accord with his own plans. His remains were followed by a large concourse of friends to the City Cemetery, attended by the Masonic fraternity, who tenderly laid his body away, to await the glad trump of the resurrection morn.

If the power to do hard work is not talent, it is the best possible substitute for it. Things don't turn up in this world until somebody turns them up. A pound of pluck is worth a ton of luck. Luck is an ignis fatuus. You may follow it to ruin, but never to success.—Garfield.

CUNNING.

By Edgar Guest.

I'd rather lose than play the cheat.
I'd rather fail than live a lie.
I'd rather suffer in defeat
Than fear to meet another's eye.
I'd rather never win a prize
Than gain the topmost rung of glory
And know I must myself despise
Until death ends my sorry story.

What if another never knew
That I had tricked my way to fame,
And all unseen my hand could do
The cunning little deeds of shame?
The stolen prize would not be sweet,
In pride I could not ever show it;
Men might not know me for a cheat,
But I should ever after know it.

There is no joy in tricky ways.
Who does not justly earn his goal
The price for such a victory pays,
For shame shall torture long his soul.
What if I could, by cunning, claim
The victor's share of fame or pelf,
And hide from all the world my shame!
I could not hide it from myself.

I'd rather fail in every test
Than win success by base deceit;
I'd rather stand upon my best,
Be what it may, than play the cheat.
I'd rather never win men's praise
Nor share the victor's sum of laughter,
Than trade my self-respect for bays,
And hate myself forever after.

THE LEGEND OF THE ROSE.

By Willie Conger Page.

In the center of a garden, where the water from the fountain played and trickled, there grew and flourished a Blush Rose. The soft summer breezes fanned its cheek and whispered loving praises in its ear. The sunbeams kissed its close-tinted petals into a deeper pink. Each night the dew-drops wove for it a diadem to crown its brow. The bees and butterflies hovered near, begging for a taste of sweets, but the Rose only flaunted its head haughtily and refused.

"O, Rose, queen of all flowers," sighed the little violet, that grew at the base of the old sundial, "speak to me; smile on me just once." The morning zephyr carried the message, but the Rose would not deign to reply.

The asters and merigolds, the old fashioned hollyhocks that grew beside the garden wall, pleaded, "Queen Rose, send us a whiff of fragrance before we fade away." The request was borne on the night wind through the silver moonlight, but the Rose only held her head more proudly and swayed over to gaze at her reflected beauty, in the pool of the fountain.

The lady of the manor-house often came to the garden to walk, bringing her two little children. They would linger near the fountain to admire the beautiful Rose, which only made the Rose more scornful.

Summer waned. The annual family were speaking of leaving—there was a hint of cold and frost in the air. But the Blush Rose grew taller and more lovely each day.

Then, one night, there came a wind storm, and uprooted the Rose; it lay with its head on the sodden earth, the gardener came in, and, not seeing the fallen flower, crushed it under his heel.

Having lived a life of selfish leisure, the Blush Rose had made no friends; so it was left alone to sob out its grief. The days passed on; the Rose was almost forgotten, when there stole over the garden, an exquisite fragrance. The crushed Rose was exhaling its sweetest perfume.

It begged the bees and butterflies to come and partake of its honey. It began to help others, to whisper words of encouragement and cheer. Soon all the flowers of the garden loved the crushed Rose, and went to it for comfort and consolation.

So it is with souls. Often it is the bruised and broken spirit that sends out cheer and sweetest sympathy.

THE OWL AS A POLICEMAN.

One day when Mrs. Sparrow returned to her nest she found one of her eggs missing. She set up such a cry that all the birds of the woods came flying to see what was the cause of her excitement.

"Some one has stolen one of my eggs!" cried Mrs. Sparrow.

"You don't suppose Black Crow did it, do you?" asked Mrs. Robin, who had not forgotten her own recent loss.

"No; I'm sure he wouldn't break his promise," answered Mrs. Sparrow.

"Maybe it was Wise Owl. He pretends to sleep all day," suggested Woodpecker.

"Maybe that's a trick of his!" joined in Jenny Wren.

After a great deal of chattering the birds flew to question Wise Owl.

Wise Owl sat nodding at his window. When Woodpecker rapped at his door he opened his eyes. "It's a pity you can't let me sleep!" he cried.

"Some one has stolen Mrs. Sparrow's egg, and we want to know if it was you," chirped Woodpecker, shaking his red topknot.

Wise Owl was so sleepy that his head nodded. The birds, thinking he had answered Woodpecker's question, flew at him.

Wise Owl, fully awakened by their noise, opened his eyes very wide.

"Who, who says I steal!" he shrieked. "I haven't been out of this house since the sun came up."

The birds looked at each other.

"His voice rings true," said Mrs. Sparrow. "We'll look further for the thief." They were about to fly away when Wise Owl called them back.

"I'll tell you what, I'll sleep on a limb near your nest and keep watch while you're away. The fellow knows there are more eggs, so he will return for them," said Wise Owl. Next day Wise Owl nodded with one eye on Mrs. Sparrow's nest.

Soon the twigs under the trees began to crackle, and Wise Owl saw Red Squirrel run up the other side of the tree and out on the limb near the nestful of eggs. He reached in his two red paws and picked up an egg.

Wise Owl gave a screech.

Red Squirrel dropped the egg, but before he could run he was surrounded by a flock of angry birds that threatened his life. Red Squirrel let go the limb and fell to the ground just as Mrs. Sparrow pulled a bilful of red hairs from his tail.

As he hit the ground he hurt his foot and had to hobble away on three feet between the stones of the fence.

"Too bad we didn't get a chance to punish him," exclaimed Mrs. Sparrow, as she displayed the red hairs proudly.

He's punished all right!" said Wise Owl. "He who would harm others generally hurts himself. Red Squirrel will limp for some time on that sprained foot of his," and Wise Owl flew back to his home.

Mrs. Sparrow was so proud of the red hairs that she wove them into her nest, and if you ever happen to climb into that tree you can see them there.

As for Red Squirrel, it taught him a lesson that he never forgot, and he never bothered the birds' nests again.—Times-Picayune.

A MAN'S CHANCES IN WAR.

To some whose sons or brothers or friends are drafted for service in the new National Army the summons to the colors may seem almost like a sentence to death. It is nothing of the sort. Most of the men who will go to war from America will, if figures can be trusted, come back, not only alive, but in better physical condition than they were in when they went. Of course the risk these men will run is greater in war than in times of peace in ordinary civil life; but it is not so great as to cause despondency.

Figures of the losses in war are not easy to obtain, but they are known with sufficient approach to accuracy to enable some general conclusions to be drawn. Babson's Statistical Organization, which issues weekly reports for merchants, bankers, and investors, has gathered statistics that should reassure some whose hearts are now gripped with fear. That organization understands that about one hundred and fifty men out of a thousand are wounded and about sixty men out of every thousand are killed. This is not a high proportion. It is well known that the mortality is less now than at the beginning of the war.

One great cause for losses in wars of other times was disease. This has been very greatly reduced. "Some claim," says the report from Babson's Statistical Organization, "that a man at the front to-day is less liable to disease than if at home working in a city." The report refers to the improvement in handling gas and other hideous forms of attack, and says that "men who are sensible and careful can well protect themselves against these things." The real danger to men, of course, comes during charges. Wounds received at other times are, for the most part, "in the arm and shoulder, which can be easily healed, or in the skull. The skull wounds are naturally serious." Except for the one or more days a month when it is his turn to charge, a man at the front "is, statistically, almost as well off as in the streets of New York."

Opinion as to the duration of the war is, of course, more speculative than conclusions drawn as to risks in war; but Babson's Organization has an opinion on this subject, too, as follows: "We see no reason for Germany to stop until we are actually in Europe with self-supporting bases, prepared to strike hard; but we see every reason why Germany should be anxious to settle with us at that time, before we do strike." If this proves true, whatever the experience of our Regular Army men and of the men of the National Guard may be, the men who are now being drafted may possibly not see much hard fighting, and, even if they do, "statistics are very much in their favor, and conditions are improving."

It would be cruel to arouse false hopes; but it is not a false hope to see a reasonable chance for a safe return on the part of men who are going to fight our battle for democracy and liberty.—The Outlook.

RUSSIAN HOME-LOVE.

Writing some years ago, in The Soul of Russia, Carl Joubert delineated the consuming home-love of the Russian people, which chained them to the soil in spite of tyranny and oppression. He said: "So great is the home-love in Russia, that even the bitterness and injustice of autocracy are suffered in patience, so long as they can be endured 'at home.' It may be hell, but it is home too. No man has ever migrated from Russia who does not long to return to the poverty-stricken village he calls 'home.' Never speak to a Russian of happiness so long as he is debarred from returning to the spot where his father lies buried and where he was born."—Christian Intelligencer.

"God is not in the religion that is not using both hands to lift up men."

The entrance of this nation in the great war was the signal for the Bell System to place its entire service, unreservedly to the Government.

As our military strength grows, and we become large participants in the great war, the demand of the Government upon our service will continue to increase, and must always be met.

An extraordinary increase in telephone traffic due to the unprecedented commercial and industrial activities incidental to the war will also be adequately provided for.

Like the other resources of the nation, our resources must be conserved, and we appeal to the American Public to assist us in meeting this extraordinary condition by avoiding, as much as possible, waste and extravagant use of the service.

Editorial

TO OUR FRIENDS.

For various reasons, this has been a hard summer on the Advocate. The crops of last year over most of its territory were poor and the high cost of living left most of the people with but little money. One of the first things to feel the effect of such a condition is the Church paper. Hence, our receipts have been smaller than usual; yet the expense of the issuance of the paper, because of the unusual price of materials, has been largely increased. And a paper cannot be run on credit—its bills have to be met without delay. The first of September is now close at hand, and the presiding elders are already announcing their final quarterly conferences for the year. The early fall is ordinarily much like the summer with the Advocate; but we hope that, in view of the situation, our friends will not let it be so at the present time. We assure them that we now need their active assistance. Our Publisher is this week making a statement of much interest concerning the circulation of the paper, and we trust that it will be carefully read by every one into whose hands this issue comes. NOW IS THE TIME TO GET BUSY IN A UNITED EFFORT TO PLACE THE CONFERENCE ORGAN IN THE HOMES OF OUR PEOPLE. They need it; the Church needs for them to have it, and the paper needs the patronage. Will you not, dear fellow-worker, immediately lend us a helping hand in this campaign?

AN INADEQUATE EXPLANATION.

In the Nashville Advocate of August 24, Dr. Ivey made the following statement: "The date of the meeting (the next meeting of the Unification Commission) would have been fixed earlier if it had been possible to secure the earlier presence of the Commissioners. The effort, our brethren may be assured, was to fix the date so that the longest possible period might intervene between the meeting and General Conference in May."

This strikes us as a very insufficient explanation for keeping the Church in the dark as to the proceedings of the Unification Commission until practically all the Annual Conferences have been held and about all the delegates elected to the General Conference. As we see it, it was scarcely justifiable to let the convenience of the Commissioners outweigh the rights and interests of the 2,000,000 Methodists of the South—we do not presume to speak for those of the North. If these gentlemen were not willing to sacrifice a little of their time to this great work, we scarcely think that they should have agreed to serve on the Commission.

Moreover, we should like to ask Dr. Ivey why, when they knew, it might delay the consideration of the really difficult questions involved in the unification negotiations—those pertaining to the status of the Negroes and the number and boundaries of the Regional Conferences—valuable time was wasted on trivial things such as the Church Conference, the Quarterly Conference, Missionary Jurisdictions in foreign lands, etc.? Why was not the desirability of getting the important features of the plan before the Church in time for them to be fully considered before the assembling of the General Conference thought of then?

Furthermore, we should like to inquire of the Doctor why, since the Joint Commission ordered that the condensed minutes of its sessions be given to the Churches, nearly two months have elapsed and they have not been published? Has it taken this long to get them in shape?

The fact remains that the Commission has put clean past the Annual Conferences the taking of any definite action on the pivotal questions at issue, so that the members of the approaching General Conference will have to be chosen without matters being at all definitely before the Church. This is most regrettable.

And there are some of us who, in this connection, cannot but remember that when the former Joint Commission matured its report in 1911, though it was printed in the Northern Methodist papers, Dr. Ivey took the position that it should not be published until it had officially gone to our General Conference—some three years off—so the Church did not see it until that body was in session. Will he take that position again? And if it requires two months to get a few condensed minutes ready for publication, how long will it take to get the whole plan ready in case one is agreed upon next February?

The present situation, when clearly analyzed, is not a very reassuring one to those who believe that the masses of Southern Methodism are entitled to be consulted about this momentous issue before there has been too much entanglement and that their voice should govern in its settlement. The Church has been disposed to give the liberal unionists on our Commission, who are known to be directing its proceedings, a fair chance to work out their ideas and show what they desire to have done; but we hardly think that she will be willing to be kept in ignorance until the movement has been carried beyond the reach of her power of correction, without great injury, if she should desire to check or change it.

JOHN WESLEY AND DEMOCRACY.

It is misleading to say that John Wesley believed in autocratic political governments and typed the Methodism of England after them. The polity of English Methodism was a providential development, growing out of Wesley's paternal relation to it, and he left it with a large measure of democracy. Nor did he seek to lord it over American Methodism; on the contrary, the Methodists of the New World of their own accord sought his guidance and government. They did not always perfectly understand each other; but none regarded their great leader as one who wished to build up an ecclesiastical despotism. Wesley's one great mistake (besides his marriage) was his effort to interfere politically in the American revolution. He at first sympathized with the contentions of the colonists, but when he saw war impending, he unfortunately changed his position and endeavored to induce them to submit; but this was not because he was a worshiper at the shrine of autocracy. Such talk is nonsense. We write these lines in simple justice to the mighty man of Epworth, whose heart ever beat in sympathy with the poor and oppressed.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

It has been announced that an aviation camp will be located near Lake Charles, La. We congratulate that progressive city upon having won this distinction.

Dr. John T. Sawyer filled the pulpit of the Felicity Street Church, this city, last Sunday at 11 o'clock a. m. Pastor Brown has been resting for a few days at the Seashore Camp Ground.

A revival meeting is in progress at East McComb, a section of McComb City, Miss., this week. The pastor, Rev. F. B. Ormond, is being assisted by his co-laborer, Rev. J. L. Decell, pastor of Centenary Church.

Dr. Theo. Copeland, of Pine Bluff, Ark., has lately conducted a fine revial at Bloutsville, Ala., which town has the distinction of being his birthplace. Dr. Copeland's hands have been full of work this summer.

Rev. O. S. Lewis assisted his brother, Rev. B. W. Lewis, in a meeting at Cayuga, one of the appointments of the Utica (Miss.) charge, last week. What the outcome of these services was, is not known to us at this time.

Do not fail to read the article entitled, "The Laymen's Convention in Atlanta," on page 13. We are happy to see these leading laymen of our Church getting behind the Emory University movement. Great is to be the future of Emory.

Mr. J. J. Kelly, Jr., a son of Rev. J. J. Kelly, of Zachary, La., is at the Touro Infirmary, this city, where he was operated on for appendicitis a few days ago. His condition is reported to be quite satisfactory. Sister Kelly, his mother, is with him.

Rev. O. P. Armour, our pastor on the Wall Hill (Miss.) Circuit, says: "We are now in the midst of the revival season, and are having really good meetings. All the work prospers here." We are pleased to have this cheering message from Brother Armour.

Miss Myrtle Gearheard, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Q. C. Gearheard, of Donner, La., and a niece of Rev. A. J. Gearheard, underwent a successful operation at the Presbyterian Hospital in this city last Tuesday. Her condition is reported to be most encouraging, and a speedy recovery is predicted.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sunday School Field Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, is keeping busy these hot days. He has averaged only about four days a month at home since May 1. He says: "The work prospers." See Brother Gladney's notes elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate.

The following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not elsewhere been made, have our thanks for two or more subscriptions to the Advocate, sent in within the past few days: Rev. L. E. Alford, Shubuta, Miss., 8 (3 of them new); Rev. L. C. Wilson, Grand Cane, La., 2; Rev. W. S. Henry, Colfax, La., 2; Miss Nyna Pollard, Batesville, Miss., 2.

It grieves us to announce the death at the Touro Infirmary, this city, in the early part of this week, of Miss Mary Towne, an esteemed member of our church at St. Francisville, La. She underwent a very serious operation a few days before her decease, but surgical skill was unable to save her life. Her sister was with her at the time of her demise.

From a recent issue of the Water Valley (Miss.) Progress, we take the following: "The revival meeting finished well at the Main Street Methodist Church of this city. Rev. E. R. Smoot, of Holly Springs, captivated the splendid congregations. Much interest was manifested, and the great good accomplished will, no doubt, be permanent."

Rev. Thomas I. Beck, our pastor at Morgan City, La., is away on a brief vacation. A note from him last week stated that he was resting, hunting, and fishing in the Ozark mountains, of Arkansas, where the days were pleasant and the nights cool. We trust that this respite from his labors will fit him in every respect for the nearing work of the autumn.

We have learned with regret that Mrs. F. A. Grimes, the wife of Rev. F. A. Grimes, of Barlow, Miss., who for several years was a member of the Mississippi Conference, but who is now a superannuate member of the West Texas Conference, is critically ill in the Baptist Hospital at Jackson, Miss. Prayers are requested for her at this time.

We hear excellent reports concerning the work of Rev. W. D. Wendel at Sardis, Miss. Brother Wendel's health is stated to be much better than it was in former years, and he seems to be capitalizing in the Master's service the strength that he has gained. He is a grandson of Bishop Paine, one of the really great men of Mississippi and of Southern Methodism.

Rev. A. T. McIlwain, our gifted young pastor at Glen Allan, Miss., sends us a subscription for the Advocate, and adds in his letter the following note: "We have recently had plenty of rain and the crop prospects through this section are good." Brother McIlwain lives on beautiful Lake Washington, where the work of the Church is prospering under his guiding hand.

Hon. H. H. Elmore, of Lexington, Miss., is being very generally endorsed by the bar for the Circuit Judgship of his district. Mr. Elmore is a young man of superior character and one of the ablest lawyers in Central Mississippi. Without disparaging any other aspirant, we feel that we may, with propriety, say that he would adorn the position for which he is being suggested.

Rev. R. H. Harper, the scholarly pastor of the Parker Memorial Church, New Orleans, reports that the attendance upon public worship this summer has been larger than during any other summer of the four years that he has served that congregation. Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, filicd Brother Harper's pulpit last Sunday morning, delivering a forceful and helpful sermon.

Rev. W. T. Woodward, of Oak Grove, La., was in the Crescent City the latter part of last week, having found it necessary to bring a daughter here for medical treatment. Brother Woodward appeared to be in fine condition physically, and he spoke hopefully of the work in his charge. He is patriotic, and has grown a fine corn crop to help feed the Nation and her allies in the war against Germany.

Rev. C. Wesley Baley, our energetic pastor at Strongs, Miss., writes us as follows: "Enclosed you will find $3 from Mrs. Mamie Moore, of Prairie, Miss.—$1.50 to renew her subscription, and $1.50 to send the paper to some one else for a year." This donation to our "Helping Fund" is much appreciated. It will send the Conference organ into some needy home into which it otherwise would not go.

We have received from Rev. T. B. Cottrell a postal card written from Columbia, Miss., which reads as follows: "My daughter, Josie, was operated on at 8:30 a.m. to-day, August 24, in the Columbia Sanitariuum by Drs. Gordon and Ratliff. I ask for the prayers of the brethren." We deeply sympathize with Brother Cottrell and his family in this time of anxiety, and pray that the stricken one may be speedily restored to health.

We had the pleasure of having as a caller a few days ago Bro. W. D. Little, of Dillville, Miss. Our readers will perhaps recall having read in the Advocate poems from Brother Little's pen several times in the past. He is a man of sound religious views and a cheerful, agreeable gentleman, though he has been considerably afflicted physically within recent years. We were pleased to note, however, that his health now seems to be pretty good.

Rev. L. E. Alford, of Shubuta, Miss., writes: "To-day, August 22, we buried from the Methodist Church Miss Addie Champenois, who (though not the oldest person in town) was the oldest citizen of Shubuta. She had been a member of our church here for 49 years, and a citizen of the community for 57 years. Rev. W. B. Hogg is to be with us in our revival meeting at this place, which will begin on the first Sunday in September and continue at least two weeks."

Rev. C. E. Downer, our popular pastor at Petal, Miss., reports an interesting meeting at Rawles Springs, one of his appointments, in which he had the capable assistance of Rev. H. Mellard, of Purvis, Miss., who is stated to have done some excellent preaching. The services closed last Thursday night, and the results are summed up as follows: "There were 3 accessions by baptism, and the Sunday school was reorganized, with Brother W. P. Meadows as superintendent."

Errata.—The article on "Emory University," by Dr. J. A. Rice, which appeared in our issue of last week, should have been credited to the Nashville Christian Advocate. This omission was inadvertently made.....In a late issue of our paper we referred to our General Conference of 1890 as having been held in Atlanta, when it should have been St. Louis. We were quoting from Dr. Buckley's History of Methodism in which this error is made, and in our haste we did not detect it at the time.

Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, of Yazoo City, Miss., passed through New Orleans last Saturday en route to Donaldsonville, La., where he is this week assisting Rev. P. O. Lowrey, our pastor there, in a series of revival services. Brother Norsworthy was looking well and seemed to be in fine spirits. His health, which was not good in the early part of the year, appears to have been completely restored by the operation that he underwent some months ago. He is now able to work and preach with his former vigor.

Under date of August 26, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, writes us as follows from Mansfield, La., where Rev. A. G. Shankle is pastor: "We have just received a telegram from Brother Shankle, who recently was called to the bedside of his mother who was ill at Commerce, Ga., stating that she died last night at 8:30 o'clock." It is with sorrow that we chronicle this sad occurrence. Brother Shankle will have the sympathy and prayers of many friends in his great bereavement.

We are indebted to the Wesleyan Christian Advocate for the following piece of good news: "A forty thousand dollar contribution for the new Representative Church that we Southern Methodists are now building in Washington, D. C., has just heen secured by Dr. George Sexton. Now if the amounts pledged by the several Annual Conferences and all subscriptions are paid up this magnificent building so sorely needed to represent us at the National Capital may be pushed to completion and paid for."

We were favored Thursday of last week with an appreciated call from Mr. W. S. Holmes, of Baton Rouge, La., the superintendent of the Sunday school of our First Church at the State Capital, and the Lay Leader of the Louisiana Conference. We thought that Brother Holmes' trip to the West had had a beneficial effect and that he was looking unusually well, but he stated that he did not yet feel that he was entirely rid of malaria. We trust that he soon will be; for he is a rare layman and is greatly needed in the active work of the Church.

Rev. B. H. Andrews, our pastor at Gonzales, La., and Miss Josephine Gonzales of that city, were married at the home of the presiding elder of the New Orleans District, this city, on Saturday, August 25, in the presence of several relatives and friends, Rev. W. W. Holmes officiating. The bride is a daughter of Mr. Joseph Gonzales, a leading citizen of his section, and is an accomplished and superior young woman. The groom is a promising young minister, who is highly esteemed wherever he is known. May the pathway of this fine young couple through life be strewn with heaven's choicest blessings!

We were grieved to be apprised of the death of Mrs. A. M. Gill, which occurred in a sanitarium at Newton, Miss., owned by her son, Dr. W. G. Gill, on August 13. The body was interred at Clinton, Miss., on the afternoon of the same day, at which place practically all her life had been spent. She was in the 73d year of her age, and her career has been an active and useful one. Mrs. Gill was the mother of Mrs. W. H. Saunders, of Fernwood, Miss., and Mrs. C. W. Crisler, of Brookhaven. To them, and all others upon whom the shadow of this bereavement has fallen, we extend sympathy, praying that the Heavenly Father may comfort their aching hearts.

President R. E. Bobbitt, of Mansfield College, Mansfield, La., has secured for the session soon to open an impressively capable Faculty—one which will compare favorably with that of any college for young women in this section. He has secured as an asset of the institution Mrs. Lunette Nicholls, a graduate nurse, whose recommendations could scarcely be stronger. The Methodist parents of Louisiana will make no mistake in placing their daughters in Mansfield College. Pastors and Sunday school superintendents are being requested to make public mention of the Faculty of this growing school; and surely it will afford them pleasure to do this.

The following press dispatch was sent to the Memphis Commercial Appeal from Iuka, Miss., on August 22: "The biggest revival ever held in this town came to a close last night. There were 230 conversions, with 70 or more additions to the Methodist Church, and a large number went to each of the other Churches. The services were conducted by Evangelist W. M. McIntosh, of Iuka, and his corps of workers, and were held under a large tent in Spring Park, on the same spot where Sam Jones held a great revival 35 years ago." We know that the heart of our consecrated pastor at Iuka, Rev. L. A. McKeown, was made happy hy this gracious spiritual awakening.

A correspondent sends us the following note of interest: "Miss Mary Leggett, the accomplished daughter of Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, was united in marriage to Dr. C. G. Terrell at the Emory Methodist Church, South, Washington, D. C., on Saturday, August 18, at 2:30 o'clock p. m. Dr. Terrell is from Prentiss, Miss.; after attending Millsaps College, he graduated in medicine, and is now in the Medical Corps of the United States Navy, awaiting orders to go to France. Miss Leggett graduated from Whitworth College, and taught for several years in the public schools of McComb and Meridian, Miss." The Advocate extends congratulations to the bride and groom, and wishes for them a large measure of happiness.

Rev. C. A. Schultz, of Gallman, Miss., writes: "On Thursday, August 16, at 10:30 a.m., at the Methodist parsonage here, Mr. Joshua G. Hennington and Miss Lottie Ervin were happily united in the holy estate of matrimony. After the singing of the beautiful air, "I Will Always Love You as I Do To-day," the ceremony was performed hy the pastor of the Gallman charge, after which the newly wedded ones departed for the bride's home, near Terry, Miss., to spend their honeymoon. The bride belongs to one of the best families in Hinds County, and is a most excellent lady. Mr. Hennington is a resident of Copiah County, in which he is well known, being held in high esteem by all of his acquaintances. The many friends of this superior couple extend to them hearty congratulations."

In forwarding his fourth round of appointments, Rev. H. W. Bowman, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, who is winding up his quadrennium, writes as follows: "I am getting ready to make this round, pack up our things, and to go where I am ordered by the authorities that be. I like the rules, regulations, and all that is connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, except the spirit that prevails in some quarters to try to break down those well tried principles and agencies that have been so blessed of God in the past. The rules and laws of the Church are not grievous to me, any more than the laws of the State, because I have no desire to violate them. The Church found me through her ministry in my sin, led me to Christ for salvation, and, through the channel of the Church, the Holy Spirit witnessed to the fact of my forgiveness, and has since been a constant source of comfort, leading me in my work; therefore, I gladly go to snch fields as the Church may feel that I can best serve."

A REMARKABLE OFFER

HELP THE ADVOCATE!

To the Pastors of Mississippi and Louisiana:

Dear Brethren: We will give you or any member of your congregation a $3 Bible if you will secure 10 new or renewal subscriptions to the New Orleans Advocate by Conference. We will also put your name in gold on the cover. This Bible is one of the best made, and retails at $3.50. It is bound in genuine leather, is a Teacher's Bible, having a concordance and all the usual helps; is printed in large leaded type, and is fit for a queen. In asking persons to subscribe, just tell them that you are trying to get a club of ten subscriptions for the Advocate for the express purpose of getting one of these nice Bibles, and this will help persuade them to subscribe. If you will not yourself undertake the job, please get some winsome lady or tactful layman, to work up the club. The subscription price is $1.50 a year. Ten subscriptions at $1.50 will earn the Bible, and your name will be printed on it in gold letters.

If you fail to get 10 subscriptions, we will give you a $1.75 Bible for seven subscriptions. This Bible is bound in genuine leather also, and is a nice book. We will put your name on the cover in gold.

If you fail to get seven subscriptions, we will give you a copy of Billy Sunday's book, "The Man and His Message," provided you secure 5 subscriptions. This is Billy Sunday's authorized book, is bound in cloth, and has 432 pages.

The Advocate has always been supported by the efforts of the preachers in Louisiana and Mississippi. They have during past years kept the subscription list up to about 7500, but this year we have not received the necessary support. We are about to lose nearly 3000 subscriptions, most of them in arrears to the amount of $1.50 each, and consequently we are compelled to devise some way of stimulating interest.

If you will take this matter up for us, and work this plan, or find some one to work it with your assistance and encouragement, we will retrieve our losses. If you do not do your part, the Conference Organ will suffer.

Will you do it, brother?

Juice of Lemons! How to Make Skin White and Beautiful

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier, by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as sallowness, freckles and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It naturally should help to soften, freshen, bleach and bring out the roses and beauty of any skin. It is wonderful to smoothen rough, red hands.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. Otherwise the obituaries will, without correspondence about them, be edited down to 200 words. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

Dr. G. L. WILLIS departed this life on January 21, 1917. Dr. Willis attached himself to the M. E. Church, South, about forty years ago, and was loyal to his church and pastor until death. He belonged to the Masonic fraternity also for about the same length of time, being a very faithful member of it. He was loved by everybody, being always quiet and peaceable. He left a wife and 4 children to mourn their loss. He was a devoted husband and a faithful and loving father. He was a successful physician in his community for about 40 years. He will be greatly missed, but we believe that our loss is his gain. He has gone to reap a great reward. His body was laid to rest in the Oak Grove Cemetery, to await the resurrection morn. We, who were his friends and dwell in the community in which he lived can only commit the loved ones who have been so sorely bereaved to God, the author and finisher of our faith, who has promised to comfort all who turn unto him in the time of trouble. When He looked across the River of Death he could say, "I will bathe my weary soul in a sea of heavenly rest, and not a wave of trouble shall ever cross my peaceful breast."

A LONG-TIME FRIEND.

A NOTABLE COMMUNICATION.

The American Branch Scripture Gift Mission, 119 South Fourth Street, Philadelphia, is in receipt of the following communication from the President of the United States, intended for the soldiers and sailors of our army and navy:

"The White House,
"Washington, 23 July, 1917.

"The Bible is the word of life. I beg that you will read it and find this out for yourselves—read, not little snatches here and there, but long passages that will really be the road to the heart of it. You will find it full of real men and women not only but also of the things you have wondered about and been troubled about all your life, as men have been always; and the more you read the more it will become plain to you what things are worth while and what are not, what things make men happy—loyalty, right dealing, speaking the truth, readiness to give everything for what they think their duty, and most of all, the wish that they may have the real approval of the Christ, who gave everything for them—and the things that are guaranteed to make men unhappy—selfishness, cowardice, greed and everything that is low and mean. When you have read the Bible you will know that it is the Word of God, because you will have found it the key to your own heart, your own happiness and your own duty.

"(Signed)
"WOODROW WILSON."

BEGINNINGS.

Some lives are diligent, but unproductive, because they are fragmentary. They do not begin and advance—they begin and go 'round and round. They do not anticipate the next thing. The most important question to decide is what to begin at all—to be willing to commit ourselves and say, "I will now make a beginning, and I will adhere to it as long as I live."

Many students graduate, and they drop into the easiest place there is, the nearest place. They never advance, never come to any great result. It was not really a beginning of anything. They might just as well have dropped in anywhere. * * *

We can do no better than take the first words of the Bible, "In the beginning God." There is no getting further back than that. * * * One advantage in beginning with him—in getting as far back as that—is that we shall have no need of change.—Alexander McKenzie.

THE GETHSEMANE OF LIFE.

For every one of us, sooner or later, the Gethsemane of life must come. It may be the Gethsemane of struggle, poverty, and care; it may be the Gethsemane of long and weary sickness; it may the Gethsemane of farewells that wring the heart by the death-beds of those we love; it may be the Gethsemane of remorse and of well-nigh despair for sins that we will not, but which we say we cannot overcome. Well, my brethren, in that Gethsemane—aye, even in that Gethsemane of sin—no angel merely, but Christ himself, who bore the burden of our sins, will, if we seek him, come to comfort us. He will, if, being in an agony, we pray. He can be touched, he is touched, with the feeling of our infirmities. He, too, has trodden the winepress of agony alone; he, too, has lain face downward in the night upon the ground, and the comfort which then came to him he has bequeathed to us—even the comfort, the help, the peace, the recovery, the light, the hope, the faith, the sustaining arm, the healing anodyne of prayer.—Dean Farrar.

MR. WESLEY AND THE MOB.

Mr. Wesley was not unfamiliar with mobs and mob violence, and he never shunned their evidence or resultant demonstration. Under date of March 28, 1753, he tells of his experience at Chester, where in former times he had had some strenuous times, but now states, "The present mayor being a man of courage as well as honesty, will suffer no riot of any kind."

He then tells of his experience on the following Sunday which, in view of the deplorable episode in connection with the attempt of our City Missionary Society to preach the simple gospel on the streets of Chicago may have special interest. Mr. Wesley says in his Journal:

"The house was full of serious hearers at five. In the evening some gay young men made a little disturbance, and a large mob gathered about the door; but in a short time they dispersed of themselves. However, we thought it best to acquaint the mayor with what had passed; on which he ordered the city crier to go down the next evening and proclaim that all rioters should be severely punished; and promised, if need were, to come down himself and read the act of Parliament. But it needed not; after his mind was known, none was so hardy as to make a disturbance."—N. W. Christian Advocate.

"WHAT BEAUTIFUL HAIR!"

Have you ever heard that remark made as some one passed by who had carefully kept hair? Did it not make you envious and did it not make you ashamed of every coarse, stiff or gray Lair in your head? Did it not make you wish that you, too, had kept your hair carefully and could hear similar compliments passed on ou? Don't envy a beautiful head of hair. It is your privilege to have one. The beauty of the hair depends entirely on its care; and its luster depends on the food on which it subsists. Hair must be fed. Every single hair is a distinctly individual living thing and it demands food. Unless you feed it, it is going to be stiff and coarse and void of beauty. Follow the example of the Creoles of Louisiana, who pride themselves on their hair. Get their recipe. It was kept as a race secret for many years but you can get it now by asking our dealer for "La Creole," the natural hair dressing, or by sending one dollar to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

Sunday School

NORTH MISSISSIPPI SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, of Nashville, will take the leading part in district institutes to be held as follows: Lyon, September 20-21; Sardis, 22-23; Coldwater, 24; Holly Springs, 25-26; New Albany, 27-28; Tupelo, 29-30. Miss Kennedy is one of the great teachers of our Church. The class of work she does is the kind we need most in our Conference at this time. We ought to have 500 teachers to attend these institutes.

The first session of the Methodist Training School for Sunday school teachers held at Lake Junaluska, N. C., July 24-August 5, was great in every respect. The faculty was made up of the choicest men and women that could be found on this continent—authors, university professors, and leaders in religious education. The attendance was more than a thousand; 365 did definite study in one or more of the courses for Sunday school workers; 93 received certificates for finishing a prescribed course of study. The spirit of the student body was earnest, serious, reverent. This is but a beginning in the work of teacher-training; but a beginning worthy of any Church. Resolutions were offered asking for a course for pastors and superintendents. Those in charge of the training school agreed to grant the request as soon as possible. It has been recently said, that an army is no stronger than its leaders; the same can be said of the Church. Then we must make more and greater leaders.

North Mississippi had eight to attend this Junaluska Training school; one presiding elder, two pastors, one superintendent, three teachers, and one field secretary. These workers were heard to say time and again, "How we wish every preacher in the Conference could hear these great men."

If you have failed to observe Children's Day you can get ready to observe Rally Day the last Sunday in September, or near that day. The offering can go on the Children's Day fund. The Sunday School Board needs twice the amount of money it is receiving to do the work that is badly needed. The Church that takes care of this generation of children will be the Church in authority in the next generation. We all know this to be true; but we go on in the same old way.

A HARD WAY.

The way of the transgressor is hard; if it is not in one way it is in another; if it is not to-day it will be to-morrow. There isn't any escape from the law, apparently, though men have tried often enough to evade it, and frequently under circumstances that gave great promise of success. But we musn't forget that of all the disasters and tragedy that follows in the wake of wrong-doing the most serious and terrible is that which affects, not a man's body, or his pocket book, or his reputation, but his own soul. The very worst thing that our wrong-doing can entail upon us is to make us a wrong-doer, and burden us with the evil legacy of a sin that has affected our own soul. Other consequences we may to some extent avoid, but it is very difficult, often altogether impossible, to get away from that one. The way of the transgressor is specially hard because his unatoned wrong-doing becomes an evil and troublesome thing in his own life, lowering his own moral tone and making goodness and happiness much less possible.—Christian Guardian.

LUTHER'S FAMOUS HYMN.

As in the great reformation, the quadricentennial of the beginning of which is being celebrated, one colossal figure stands out prominently, so also in the rich storehouse of hymnology which comes out of that same period there is one hymn which stands out as the greatest of them all. That hymn is Luther's battle hymn, "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God." It has been said that Luther accomplished as much for the reformation through his battle hymn as he did through his translation of the Bible. As the "Marseillaise of the Reformation," it has preserved to this day a potent spell over Germany. The music of the hymn, like the words, is Luther's own. A special testimony to his work as a composer appears in a letter from John Walther, who has been credited with the music of this hymn.

The general favor and wide use of this hymn are evidenced by the fact, stated by Dr. Bernard Pick, the greatest living authority on the hymns of Luther, that there are no less than ninety distinct translations of Luther's hymn into English.

It is interesting to note that the singing of the hymn was a true defense for a band of Moravians who were conducting a revival in the house of David Nitschman. The police came to break up the meeting. As the officers entered the congregation began to sing Luther's hymn. The police hesitated and many escaped, among them Nitschman, who later made his way with Wesley to America, landing at Savannah, Georgia. He was the founder of Bethlehem, the Moravian town in Eastern Pennsylvania.

At Protestantism's great battles at Leipzig and Lutzen history tells us that as the soldiers went into battle they sang like a mighty choir Luther's famous hymn.—Western Christian Advocate.

MODERN MARTYRS.

The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions reports the case of sixty Armenian girls and women who were offered the privilege of luxury and ease if they would give up Christianity and accept Islam and liberty. One girl consented. Says the report, "The manner in which the Armenians have met death has made a profound impression upon multitudes of Mohammedans. * * * These facts will be passed from mouth to mouth in Turkey for a generation as a demonstration of the power of Christ to hold his disciples true to Him."—N. W. Christian Advocate.

CALOMEL PURIFIED OF OBJECTIONABLE EFFECTS AT LAST.

Success Crowns Efforts of Pharmaceutical Chemists to Rid Popular Medicine of its Nauseating and Dangerous Qualities—Calotabs the New Name.

A triumph of modern pharmacy that is destined to bless the whole world, from the king on his throne to the humblest laboring man—that is the opinion of druggists who have been watching the sale of the new calomel tablet that is wholly free from the objectionable effects of the old-style calomel.

An occasional purifying of the system and thorough cleansing of the liver are absolutely essential to the maintenance of health, and calomel is the only drug that gives permanent results. Now that the unpleasant effects are entirely removed, the popularity of the new calomel, Calotabs, will be vastly increased. One tablet on the tongue at bedtime, a swallow of water—no taste or unpleasantness of any kind. A good night's sleep and you wake next morning feeling fine, with a clean liver and a hearty appetite. Eat what you please—no danger.

Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages, twenty doses for thirty-five cents. All druggists are authorized to refund the price if you are not thoroughly delighted with Calotabs.—Adv.
